Instead of taking the body ashore and burying it, the health officers pushed it overbord, and for three days it floated about in the harbor. It then disappeared.

THE GROOM CAME NOT.

He Borrowed $250 from His Sweetheart and Disappeared.

JOHNSTON, Pa., Feb. 7.—A private telegram from Huntingdon, says that elaborate and extensive preparations have been going on for some days past for the marriage of Charles Gordon and Miss Mary Kephart of this city, which was to have taken place last night.

Numerous and valuable presents had been received from friends and an extended honeymoon trip had been planned. In the afternoon Gordon secured a loan of $250 from Miss Kephart for the purpose of making further purchases, and without any notice took the first train for the West and has not been heard from since.

He was on a three months' leave of absence from the regular army and it is supposed he has gone to join his command.

Gordon was 22 years of age and Miss Kephart 20. The intended bride is very popular and is almost prostrated by the sudden disappearance of her "soldier boy." Officers are on his track. It is supposed he is heading for Chicago.

Large Bolt Works Destroyed.

READING, Pa., Feb. 7.—The large bolt and nut work of Steinbergh & Son were completely destroyed by fire last night. The fire originated in the forging department, and quickly spread to the adjoining buildings, including the machine shop, threading department, warehouse and office, all of which were burned to the ground. The loss is estimated at from $300,000 to $350,000, with an insurance of probably $250,000. The firm employed 550 men and boys, who will be thrown out of employment. It is probable that the works will be rebuilt at once.

Skating Associations Confer.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Committees from the Canadian Skating Association, the New England Skating Association and the National Amateur Skating Association met in this city for the purpose of preparing a universal skating schedule to govern future skating, which will be adopted by the three associations. Some minor changes were made in the old programme. The lap foot figure was taken out, and several other unimportant features were dropped and new ones added.

Chief Clerk Mullen's Death.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 7.—Chief Clerk of the State prison Edmund Mullen, who was struck by a west-bound train at the Market street crossing at Newark had both of his legs amputated, his body badly crushed and one side of his head was smashed almost to a jelly. He lay for half an hour in the place where he was thrown before being discovered. He was taken to St. Michael's Hospital, where he died three hours later.

WATCHING HER DEAD BODY.

Mr. Potts Believes that His Daughter is Still Alive.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Feb. 7.—This town is thoroughly aroused over the tragic death of Miss Helen Potts, the daughter of Railroad Contractor George H. Potts, who died at the Comstock fashionable boarding school in New York city on Sunday last.

Few people here believe the girl died from the effects of the pills taken, which were prescribed for her by Medical Student Carlyle W. Harris, and are anxious that an autopsy be held.

It is said that the remains of Miss Potts were not buried, although a grave had been prepared for them, but that the body was placed in a vault. This was done under instructions from Coroner Schultze of New York, who had charge of the case. He is said to have telegraphed Mr. Potts not to bury the body, and the latter, accordingly, had it placed in a vault on Wednesday.

Mr. Potts is almost distracted with grief and refuses to believe that his daughter is dead. He has ordered that the casket be left open, and has placed a guard of two men over it, whose duty it is to hourly inspect the remains so that if the girl should awaken her life would be saved. Developments from New York in the matter are anxiously awaited.

THE DYNAMITE EXPLODED.

Several Workmen Injured and a Shanty Blown to Pieces.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 7.—At noon, a gang of stone blasters employed on the New Haven Railroad placed a plede of dynamite on the forge to thaw out while they ate their dinner. Shortly after there was a tremendous explosion, which shattered the shanty and injured all of the men.

The foreman, C. L. Barbour, of Colchester, will lose the sight of both eyes and is badly cut about the head. He may die. Michael Kelly, of Willimantic, was badly injured about the face and head. Daniel Sullivan, of Willimantic, was slightly injured. John Sullivan, No. 2 (so-called), was badly injured about the head and will probably lose an eye. John Sullivan, No. 3 (so-called), of Willimantic, was badly injured about the face and shoulders.

All of the men were deafened by the explosion. They were brought to the hospital in this city.

Developing Niagara Falls.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—The Cataract Construction Company was organized some time ago in New York for the purpose of developing Niagara Falls. Owing to the magnitude and importance of the undertaking an international commission was formed to pass judgment on plans submitted for machinery to be used in directing and transmitting the enormous power. This committee met in London during January and had under consideration plans submitted by representative firms of Europe and America. The Norwalk N. Y. Iron Works submitted a plan for the hydraulic and pneumatic transmission of power and have been awarded the prize of $1,000 for their scheme. This is the only prize awarded to America and is the highest prize in its class.

Four Indians Arraigned.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Feb. 7.—Four Indians, George Snow, Eland Pierce, John Pierce and James Lukes, were arraigned here charged with having attempted to cremate an old Indian named John Jackson. They pleaded not guilty and were admitted to bail. Jackson charges that in October last, the four Indians had left the Cattaraugus Reservation and gone to Salamanca, where they became drunk. On the return to the reservation they stopped at Jackson's house and demanded more liquor. Jackson refused to give them any and they threw him down, poured oil over him and set it afire. Jackson managed to extinguish the flames before he was seriously burned.

A Bill to Recompense the Maimed.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 7.—A bill is now pending in the Legislature to compel coal operators to pay into the treasury of the Commonwealth a cent on every ton of coal mined, for the purpose of creating a fund for the support and maintenance of miners who are maimed in the coal pits, and for the burial of any who may be killed. The Treasurer of the Commonwealth is to pay the money so collected from the operators back to the County Treasurers in counties where coal is mined, and it is to be retained there as a reserve fund.

A New Election Ordered.

PROVIDENCE, R. I. Feb. 7.—The Supreme Court has given its opinion as to the validity of the action of the committee of the Grand Assembly in ordering a new election for Representative in Congress in the Second Congressional district, where there was no election. The opinion sustains the Grand Committee, and the election will be held February 21 next.

It Is an Idle Report.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 7.—Reports of a strike on the Pennsylvania lines west of here in the near future have no foundation.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

The Hight-Hour Bill Now Before the Senate.

A VOTE TO BE TAKEN TO-DAY.

A Setback for Free Silver Coinage in the House.

Democrats to Hold a Caucus on Monday—The President Talks on the Treasury Problem—All Correspondence on the Barrundia Affair Called For—Detectives Pumped Over a Mysterious Case.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—The Senate resumed consideration of the House bill providing for the adjustment of accounts of laborers, workmen and mechanics arising under the Eight-Hour law.

Mr. Ingalls characterized the bill as a paltry, quibbling evasion of the real question at issue. There was no doubt as to the intention of Congress when it passed the Eight-Hour law of 1868. It was a matter of record that, after the issue of President Grant's proclamation in May, 1869, directing the observance of the law, $700,000 had been paid in readjustment between the passage of the act and the issuance of the proclamation. And yet, in obedience to the demands that came to Senators for justice to labor, they were to throw a tub to the whale, a sop to Cerberus, to allow workmen to go to the Court of Claims and ask that court to say what had been the intention of Congress in passing the original Eight-Hour law.

Unanimous consent having been given Mr. Blair withdrew the committee amendment and offered as a substitute for the House bill the one passed by the Senate last Congress. It directs payment of a day's pay for every eight hours work of government employes since June, 1868—when the Eight-Hour law was enacted. The Court of Claims is to adjust the claims on that basis, and no statue of limitation and no receipt for money shall bar the right to recover.

Mr. Dawes moved a substitute for that offered by Mr. Blair. It directs the proper accounting officers of the Treasury to readjust the accounts of government workmen on the basis of eight hours for a day's work, and appropriates the amount necessary for their payment.

It was agreed that the vote should be taken on the bill this afternoon.

Mr. Dawes modified his amendment by striking out the appropriation, and instructing the accounting officers of the Treasury to readjust the accounts and report the result to Congress.

IN HOUSE AND SENATE.

Great Excitement in the House Over an Appeal by Mr. Bland.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—In the Senate, the Naval Appropriation bill was passed. A resolution was adopted calling on the President for the correspondence in reference to the killing of General Barrundia.

Mr. Morgan addressed the Senate in support of the bill to aid in the construction of the Nicaragua Maritime Canal. The balance of the session was occupied in discussion of the eight-hour law, and an agreement was reached that a vote shall be taken this afternoon.

In the House, the Senate bill amending the land forfeiture act of Sept. 29, 1890, was passed. The Postoffice Appropriation bill was reported and placed on the calendar.

The House went into Committee of the Whole on the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill. The pending question was the decision of the Chair upon the point of order raised against Mr. Bland's free coinage amendment. The point of order was sustained and Mr. Bland appealed. Before the vote on the appeal was taken, there was great excitement in the House, and nearly every member arose and anxiously watched the count. The decision of the Chair was sustained, and when the vote of 134 yeas to 127 nays was announced there wrs an outburst of applause on the Republican side. Seven Democrats voted in the affirmative, and 11 Republican in the negative.

The Treasury Problem.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—The President, in talking to a western Senator who called on him in regard to appointing a Secretary of the Treasury, said that at present he did not have the slightest idea of appointing any member of the present Congress to the place. Of late, nearly every prominent Republican Congressman who retires on March 4 has been "mentioned" for the place, and the President has taken this occasion to say that any such aspirants

The Mammoth Mine Explosion.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Feb. 7.—The testimony in the inquest on the victims of the Mammoth mine explosion is finished. The coroner adjourned the case until Saturday, Feb. 14, when the testimony will be discussed, and arguments made by representatives of the H. C. Frick Coke Company and the United Mine Workers. The case will then go to the jury for a verdict.

FLOODING A MINE.

Six Hundred Miners in Enforced Idleness Through Another Disaster.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 7.—Following closely upon the heels of the drowning of the 17 men at Jeanesville and three at Nanticoke, comes another mining disaster, which, although unattended by loss of life, means enforced idleness and consequent privation to 600 or 700 miners in Nanticoke.

A gas feeder in No. 7 lift of No. 4 slope of the Susquehanna Coal Company at that place was ignited by men who were driving new openings. The feeder rapidly increased until the flames spread along the face of the workings, setting fire to the coal and driving the men to the surface. In a short time the inside of the mine was a mass of flames, roaring like a furnace, and threatening total destruction to the entire underground workings. Preparations were made as soon as possible to flood the workings, and a trough 2,700 feet long was thrown down the slope to carry the water into the mine. The trough was soon completed, and a large volume of water is now pouring down the slope. Whether this will extinguish the flames is a question no one can answer as yet.

In any case, the work of flooding the mine, which is a large one, may require months, and in the meantime hundreds of miners will be thrown into idleness at a season of the year when work is most needed.

WAYLAID BY MASKED MEN.

The Mollie Maguires at Work Again in the Coal Regions.

GIRARDVILLE, Pa., Feb. 7.—For several weeks past a number of mine bosses and prominent citizens have received anonymous communications decorated with a coffin, cross-bones and a skull similar to those received during the reign of the Mollie Maguires.

Little or no attention has been paid to these missives, but last night as John Williams, who received a missive of this kind, was on his way from Raven Run to Shenandoah, several masked men waylaid him, and amid a volley of bullets his horse succeeded in carrying him safely over the mountains in the darkness.

Others, who have received like notices, are fearful of meeting a like, or even worse, fate.

Meeting of Bankers.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 7.—The Bankers' Association, of Buffalo, held a meeting for the purpose of considering the Free Coinage bill. A resolution was adopted requesting the Merchants' Exchange to hold a public meeting Monday to take action against the bill. A committee was appointed to draw up resolutions to the public meeting as the expression of the association against the Silver bill. The resolutions were drawn up in the shape of a protest from the association, and were ordered to be forwarded immediately to the House Coinage Committee at Washington.

Senator Ingalls' Speech.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—It is said that Senator Ingalls is busy preparing a long speech which he intends to deliver just before Congress adjourns. It will take a wide range, but just how he will work it into the proceedings of the Senate is not known. It is not likely that any bill will be before the Senate of a nature to afford in itself a good subject for the Kansas orator. However, it will be a speech that will keep people talking for a time, and also one that will aid the Senator in whatever new career he selects.

Big Judgment Against a Firm.

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., Feb. 7.—A judgment was entered against the Taylor Manufacturing Company by the National Bank of Chambersburg for $141,500. The sheriff has taken possession of the shops. Other judgments and suits aggregating $50,000 were also entered. A receiver will be appointed. It is likely that the company will be reorganized and resume business in a short time The works employ over 200 hands.

The Engineer Was Asleep.

WELLAND, Ont., Feb. 7.—A rear end collision occurred on the Michigan Central here at midnight. A freight train standing at the depot was run into by another freight, and seven cars with their contents were wrecked. It is stated that Engineer Warren of the colliding train had been many hours on duty and had fallen asleep at his post. No one was seriously injured.

Big Salary for a Pugilist.

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—A syndicate in this city has arranged to have Pugilist Fitzsimmons go on the road to travel with a combination at $500 a week and all hotel and traveling expenses for himself, wife and child. Fitzsimmons will not appear in a knocking-out box, but simply spar three rounds with each person who will be assigned to appear with him.

Held for Murder.

LANCASTER, Pa., Feb. 7.—John Daly and Felix McCabe and John Dougherty charged with the murder of Henry Derwent at Columbia, were given a hearing here. Daly was positively identified as having struck the blow which killed Derwent and was committed for trial. McCabe was held as accessory to the crime and Dougherty as a witness.

Five Stores Burned.

LEWES, Del., Feb. 7.—A fire at Georgetown, this county, at an early hour destroyed five stores and dwellings. It started in a small grocery and continued until half a block of the business portion of the town was burned. The loss is about $10,000; insurance, $7,000. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Rumors About Express Companies.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 7.—It is rumored that the American Express Company has secured control of the Express Company, which has a strong rival for business in this territory, and that harmony, if not consolidation, will result.

BIG LABOR BATTLE

Seventeen Thousand Men Expected to Strike.

A HARD STRUGGLE PREDICTED.

The Coming Contest Viewed With Great Apprehension.

The Connellsville Coke Miners Go Out on Monday—They Ask for an Advance, but Are Offered a Reduction—The Employers Very Strongly Entrenched and the Result Doubtful.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 7.—Beginning next Monday, the Connellsville coke region is expected to be the scene of what will in many respects be the hardest fought battle between labor and capital in the history of Western Pennsylvania, where contests involving great interests have for a generation been common. On one side will be ranged the coke operators, strong with the profits of a prosperous decade, and headed by the representative of Andrew Carnegie. On the other, will stand 17,000 workmen, compactly organized, and led by men who have the confidence of the miners of the whole country.

The employes demand an increase of wages of 12½ per cent, that scales shall be located at every mine, and that one of their representatives be permitted to stand at these scales to see that just weight is recorded for each car. The operators insist that instead of an advance in wages the workmen shall accept a reduction of 10 per cent, and they decline to discuss the other propositions.

The coming of the contest is viewed with great apprehension. It is likely to be long, because the supply of coke is large and because the operators are willing to suffer a heavy loss if they can break up the Miners' Union. The miners are fairly well supplied with money of their own and will draw on the funds of the United Mine Workers of America when necessary. J. H. Ray, the president of the United Mine Workers, will direct the strike. He is conservative and has striven hard to secure an amicable settlement. But he is a hard fighter, and work once suspended he will be the last man to advise surrender to the operators. The danger lies in the turbulence of the Hungarians, which caused havoc four years ago and which is no less pronounced to-day.

In view of the general understanding that the workmen are willing to withdraw all their demands except that for weigh scales their position is popular in this centre of trade unionism. It is not disputed, however, that the operators are more strongly entrenched than ever before. Therefore no careful man pretends to be able to say where the victory will finally rest.

DYING OF HICCOUGHS.

Miss Alice Woodward's Case a Puzzle to the Physicians.

BIRMINGHAM, Conn., Feb. 7.—The most peculiar case the medical profession of this place ever had to deal with is that of Miss Alice Woodward, of Howe Avenue. She is a bright, intelligent young girl about four years of age, and has always enjoyed the best of health. About a month ago she was taken with a fit of indigestion, which required medical assistance.

Dr. Gould A. Shelton treated her. She seemed to get over this attack, but within a week she was seized with a violent hiccoughing that continued during the entire day. Her family tried all manner of remedies, but no relief came. Dr. Shelton was summoned again and vainly strove to break up the hiccough.

Every remedy known to medical science has been tried without relieving the terrible and regularly recurring spasms of the stomach. For over three weeks Miss Woodward has been suffering from this unusual trouble. The hiccoughs have not stopped once during that time. She is literally hiccoughing her strength and life away, and is now confined to her bed too weak to move around.

It is only a matter of a few days before her death, for the hiccoughs have not shown any likelihood of discontinuing, and the physicians cannot find any remedy for them.

All manner of treatment is being tried, but thus far without success, and it is probable that a physician from New York will be called into the case.

MILES VISITS THE INDIANS.

Redskins, in Full War Paint, Were Made Happy With Cigarettes.

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—Under decidedly peculiar circumstances Gen. Miles paid his first visit yesterday at Fort Sheridan to the Indians he brought from Pine Ridge. With him were two Pullman car loads of young ladies, the friends of Mrs. Kathe rine Corbin, daughter of Assistant Adjt.-Gen. Corbin. The Indian chiefs were aware of the onslaught of pale faces, and were in the full glory of war paint and feathers. They stood in a long row under the oak trees, and Gen. Miles stepped quickly from one to another and shook hands with each. Then the ladies helped in the civilization of the ex-ghost dancers by distributing among the delighted savages an untold quantity of cigarettes.

Short Bull was overcome by visions of feminine loveliness, and the wily old rascal smiled through the yellow ochre that covered his face, and stowed away package after package of cigarettes in the folds of his blanket. Wandering about in a listless manner among the officers was poor Lieut. Casey's stag hound, wistfully glancing around now and then as if looking for his lost master.

Colored Men Want a Cabinet Position.

BOSTON, Feb. 7.—The Boston Courant, the organ of the colored people in this city, contains this week an editorial urging the President to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Secretary Windom by the appointment of a colored man as Secretary of the Treasury. Hon. B. K. Bruce, John M. Langston, ex-Congressman Lynch, Hon. Frederick Douglass and Recorder James M. Townsend are colored men named as amply qualified to fill the position. The editorial says: "Was not the Hon. Benjamin Harrison elected solely by the votes of the black men? It is conceded on all sides that he was. Even the President himself admits it. In view of these indisputable facts, a Cabinet position is not at all too large a gift to bestow upon the faithful colored Republicans who made him the head of the nation."

HE SAYS THEY'RE POLES AND RUSSIANS.

Mr. Boehm Explains Why He Doesn't Attend the Meetings of the Hebrew Society in Plainfield.

A few of the Hebrews in this city are angry over the letter published in THE PRESS of Thursday. They say the letter reflects on one of their number, a prominent business man in Plainfield. It is unsigned, and, after telling about the prosperity of the new Hebrew congregation organized in this aristocratic city, it goes on to give a whack to the members of the Jewish faith who had refused to join them.

"Our aristocratic members"—the letter says—"have withdrawn from us, because, as in all other localities, there are a few who have lived beyond religious times, who deride our customs and do not wish to belong to a congregation for fear that the public might know that they are Jews, which would hurt them in their business."

Then the letter continues that one of these recalcitrant Hebrews was a business man who had run away from Germany to escape military service. Last Summer he went to Europe, but did not dare to enter Germany. He waited outside the line till his father's death, when he collected his share of the estate. When he returned to this country he invested the money in Plainfield property and sent in his resignation to the congregation.

"On Yom Kippur"—the letter says—"he had his opening day, for he keeps a prominent store in Plainfield, and I cite him as an illustration of the text, 'Jeshuran waxed fat and wicked,' for after entering into the fortune of his father, who was known for his exemplary piety, he did not even think it worth while to say a single Kaddish for him."

The "Kaddish" is a prayer which all devout Hebrews say on the death of their parents.

I. H. Boehm told a PRESS representative yesterday that he was undoubtedly the man referred to in the letter. Mr. Boehm keeps a big dry-goods store at No. 7 West Front street. He had gone to Europe in July, 1890. While there his father had died suddenly, and he found himself, to his own surprise, an inheritor of the wealth which the good Israelite had left.

When asked by a reporter if he had said his Kaddish or in other ways honored his father's memory as Hebrews do, Mr. Boehm said he certainly had. He went to church at the Bohemia Temple in New York, he said. As to the charge of desertion, the story was false. He had left Austria, not Germany, when he was seventeen years old, and not till twenty-two years after, when he was no longer liable to military service, had he returned.

He had joined the first Jewish congregation organized in Plainfield, but he had not liked the society and never attended the meetings. He had no interest whatever in the present society, which is the old one reorganized. The whole story about him in the letter in THE PRESS, he said, was untrue. He considered himself far above the majority of those belonging to the Plainfield congregation. Most of them, he said, were a lot of Poles and Russians. As to the statement that the Jewish society here was so flourishing and that 30 and 35 met on the Sabbath in B. Guttman's parlor, he said the room would not hold half that many.

The writer of the letter is Ernest Marx of Leland avenue, this city. His father occupies one of the handsomest residences on East Front street. Father and son have been active in organizing the Hebrew congregation of "Beth Tefilleth Isho Yendel." It is named in memory of the dead wife and mother of the two. Recently stories injurious to the congregation had been circulated. To put an end to them Ernest Marx had written the letter, with the sanction, he said, of the other members. He was secretary of the congregation, and the story he had told, he said, was all true. The man he referred to had tried to injure the church by inducing members to withdraw. He (Marx) had nothing else against him, except that he had failed to fulfill his duties to his deceased parent. Mr. Marx requested THE PRESS reporter to publish his name as the writer of the letter. He said he did not want to conceal anything he did.

Eager for Salvation, But the Door Was Shut.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I had the pleasure of walking about two miles last evening, to attend one of the meetings of the Salvation Army in Reform Hall. When I arrived there, I found to my sorrow that the door was locked, while a party of fifteen or twenty nice-looking young men were waiting to get in. So I thought I would do as the good book says, "Knock and it shall be opened unto you"; but just as I was about to tap, the door opened. A young man who had been waiting then stepped forward and tried to enter as two others made their exit from the hall, but some person that was guarding the door laid violent hands on him who was eager for salvation, and nearly threw him down the steps. So instead of knocking I turned sadly away.

I think it is a very bad plan—especially since fire is liable to break out at any time—to have the door locked during these meetings; and I think it is a very rude man at the door. I should have liked to meet a gentleman at the door that could have told us why we were shut out.

THE ALBION.

$50,000 Has Been Spent on the Park House's Reconstruction.

An announcement to that effect in another column, tells that the reconstructed and refurnished Park House will open Saturday, the 21st inst., under the same management as Hotel Netherwood, and under the new name "Albion."

It is being luxuriously finished and furnished throughout. Every stick and thread of the old fixtures have been torn out and destroyed. Each room is heated with steam and furnished in elegant style. The celebrated Sloane of New York have received the contract for the carpets and shades from top to bottom of the hotel. The parlor floor, on which are also the entrance halls, office and dining rooms, is carpeted throughout in rich velvet. The walls of the whole building are newly decorated and hung with rich papers.

Sanitary plumbing of the most modern and improved style replaces at a great expense that in the former bath and toilet rooms. The dining room has been remodeled, and a buffet and billiard room have been added to other comforts. About $10,000 has been spent on the reconstruction of the house, and $16,000 on the refurnishing. It will be open all the year 'round.

A Travesty on Koch's Lymph.

Next Monday evening Rice's "Surprise Party" will appear at the Stillman Music Hall for one night only in a roaring farce comedy called "Never Better." It is a laughable travesty on the present Dr. Koch lymph mania, and it will prove a panacea for all ills that flesh is heir to.

The lymph used in this satirical skit will raise the head on bald heads, change your mother-in-law's disposition, enable you to pick out the winners in the races, add ten years to your life, and keep the baby quiet. Every lover of genuine fun should take a dose of it. It will be administered with chloroform in three spasms of laughter by 18 of the very best artists in the profession. The ingredients of this wonderful cure for ennui, indigestion, blues and rheumatism, are wit, music, songs, dances, mechanical surprises, beautiful costumes, funny situations, novel scenery, pretty and shapely girls and good comedians. This new and sparkling effort is under the personal supervision of Edward E. Rice, whose name is the synonym of success, and always a guarantee of a first-class entertainment.

They Mourn Their Brother.

WHEREAS, Our Heavenly Father in the infinitude of his mercy has seen fit to transfer from mortality to immortality our beloved brother, Jasper G. Cadmus, therefore

Resolved, That we, members of the Exempt Firemen's Association of the city of Plainfield, N. J., bow in submission to the Divine Will; while we reverence the memory of a most worthy brother, one whose presence was as a genial ray of sunshine, and whose counsels were ever marked with the true nobility of his character; also,

Resolved, That the rooms of our Association be draped in mourning for thirty days, and that a copy of these resolution be presented to the bereaved family, and published in the daily papers.

How Exciting It Must Have Been!

The monthly meeting of the New York Mathematical Society was held last evening in Hamilton Hall, Columbia College. The principal paper was read by Mr. Steinmitz—subject, "Multivalent and univalent involutory correspondences which, in a plane, are determined by a net of curves of the nth order." Discussion ensued in which several members participated, including I. C. Pierson of this city.

A Suggestion for Tableaux.

A very successful tableau-entertainment was recently given in New York, the subjects being taken from illustrations in the current magazines. The idea is a simple one, and if the subjects are well chosen it can be made very interesting.

The Century Company have prepared a list of suitable pictures with suggestions for any one who wishes to get up the entertainment. The will send it free on request.

Roads to be Finished in the Spring.

County Engineer F. A. Dunham, of this city, yesterday made to the Board of Freeholders a report in detail of the condition of the county roads, showing the progress on the unfinished roads. Since his previous report the weather prevented any new work, the only labor done being what was necessary to keep the unfinished roads in shape for travel.

In Newspapers Alone Are They Read.

The place and time to print the public laws is in the newspapers, immediately after they are passed. If it were not for the newspapers the public would not know what bills were introduced in the Legislature, what jobs were sought to be epacted, what laws were put through, what excellent bills were defeated and for what purpose, what crimes were legalized. And yet the State Board of Agriculture wants the laws printed in pamphlet form and not in the papers.

BOROUGH SOLONS IN SESSION.

The North Plainfield Council Accept Magistrate Hardy's Resignation, and Transact Routine Business.

The Borough Council of North Plainfield held their regular meeting for February last night. Mayor Charles Place presided, and Councilmen Emmons, Needham, Sebring and Smalley were present. Councilman Hegeman answered to roll call, but excused himself after the reading of the minutes. Councilman Buckle was absent.

A long list of petitions for sidewalks, street lights and cross walks, from residents in various sections of the borough, were presented and referred to appropriate committees.

The election of George Conover to membership in Warren Engine Company, No. 1, was confirmed.

Borough Magistrate James Hardy, reported profits of $8.75 from his administration of the police department during the month.

Tax Collector H. Newton Spencer reported collections of $1,835.16 for the month of January, making a total of $8,078.29 for the year 1890.

Borough Clerk H. H. Brokaw reported license fees collected to the amount of $189.50, and fines $173.65, making a total of $363.15.

James Hardy resigned the office of Borough Magistrate. The resignation was referred to the Committee on Marshals and Licenses, who subsequently reported in favor of its acceptance. The resignation was then accepted.

Mr. Emmons presented a resolution, which was adopted, establishing Feb. 17 as the date when the registry officers shall begin to canvass for the election of March 10, and Feb. 24 and March 3 as the dates when the registry board shall meet to transfer the names of voters from the canvassing books to the registry list and to revise the registry.

A resolution from Mr. Needham, which was adopted, provided that the Auditing Committee shall audit the books of the Collector and Clerk and report at the next meeting.

At this juncture some excitement was caused in the lobby by the entrance of Horace J. Martin, who was breathless from hurrying up the stairs, and whose arrival stirred the spectators in the lobby, who had been quiescent all the evening, into commotion. As he pressed forward to obtain recognition from the Mayor, the humorous gentlemen gave vent to such hoarse whispers as "Take off your hat!" "Pull down your vest!" and other elegant witticisms tending to indicate that the personal attire of the new arrival was defective, when as a matter of fact it was faultless. While the funny fellows were still sniggling over their own inimitable humor Mr. Martin told the Mayor his errand.

He represented the Township Committee, as Clerk,—he said—and wished to secure for the Committee, from the Council, prompt action concerning a subject of considerable importance. The matter was the division of income and expense between the two bodies. Hitherto the Township and Borough had been in the habit of sharing half and half the income from licenses and the expenditure for Collector's and Assessor's salaries. A new law had been passed governing this matter, and the Committee, which was then in session, desired prompt adjustment of the matter, so as to know on what financial basis it was to work in the future. The matter was referred to the Committee on Finance, which, as there was only one member present, could not report till another meeting night. Mr. Martin was instructed to report to the Committee that the Council would act in the matter at the earliest opportunity.

Mr. Emmons arose for information. He wanted to know why the street lamps in the borough had been left unlighted nights when one couldn't see his hand before his face—was it intentionally done or what?

Mr. Sebring replied that it was due to he ignorance and neglect of the Italians who are employed to light the lamps. They were supposed to use their judgment as to whether a night is going to be light or dark, and to leave the lamps unlighted on light nights. Unfortunately, during the recent moonlight period, there had been storms which had made the nights dark but which had not stirred the Italians into activity. The Italians blamed it on the officials of the company who employed them, the officials said that the Italians alone were at fault, and when one went back to the Italians one could not understand what they said.

Mr. Smalley said that he never had been satisfied with the old street lighting system, but it had n't been any worse the past month than during the last three years.

Mr. Emmons said that he considered the way the Committee on Lights were manipulating things showed a great lack of appreciation of the interests of the people.

Mr. Smalley said that it was all a small matter anyway. The borough would soon have a good electric light, so what was the use of fretting over present unpleasantnesses.

Mayor Place said "Maybe we can stand it a few days longer"; and the Council proceeded with the order of business.

By resolution of Mr. Smalley the sum of $150 was appropriated from the Borough Fund to make a second payment on the bill of J. P. Emmons for the masonry work on the borough lock-up, and $150 as second payment on the bill of J. S. Lunger for carpentry work.

Provision was made for the payment of two notes amounting to $1,200, due Feb. 20 and 23.

The Council adjourned to Feb. 20.

A PLEA FOR THE PEDDLER.

His Poverty and Misery Depicted, and Merchants Accused of Grinding Him Under Their Heel.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Referring to an ordinance now before the Common Council, making the license fees of the peddler $25, I would ask, Is it right to rob the poor? Go to the home of the average peddler, and see where you can wring out of his scanty possessions $25. Want, hardship, exposure, self denial, are there in all their phases; and failure and misery stare him in the face at this dark prospect. Why is this proposed increase of peddler's licenses, of from $5 to $25, suggested? Is it needed by the city of Plainfield? No! according to announcement it is by request of some merchants who seem to have forgotten the Golden Rule, or "Live and Let Live."

Every year adds to the burdens of the poor. What capitalists cannot do, the law-makers seem ready to complete. Is it policy for the city to increase the cost of license to these same poor who are trying to support themselves by an honest vocation? If a $25 license is not enough to kill, then these same greedy merchants will not hesitate to call for an increase, and when all the manhood is crushed out of the poor peddler, and, helpless and discouraged, they become paupers, one cries "shame!"—forgetting where the shame belongs.

As I believe in a Higher Power, so I believe that when men in authority combine with the rich to oppress the poor they are on unsafe ground.

I am not a peddler, nor am I a merchant; but on the side of justice I ask, "Is it right to rob the poor?"

Let us hear from some of our good citizens who can see more in humanity than in the almighty dollar.

A SYMPATHIZER.

Even Our Name is Soon Forgotten When We are Gone.

[From The Sun, New York.]

Job Neale, who died at Plainfield a few days since, was a man with a history. His record from his eighth year to the day of his death shows how one man may overcome all obstacles to success in the path of life which cause thousands to fall and perish by the wayside. Neale came here from England, a small boy, began life by helping a toll keeper on the Hackensack River, then became a clerk, afterward a carpenter, and finally a contractor, and made his home in Jersey City, where he amassed a handsome fortune. He was the inventor of the floating bridge by which passengers pass from the landing to the ferry-boat at any stage of the tide, and was the first to organize a fire company in New Jersey. Of this he was an active member while filling with success the post of a bank President. He was also successful in politics and held the office of Mayor of Plainfield. He spent a busy life, and died with a pen in his hand trying to sign his will.

Once a Mud Hole, Now a Thriving Borough.

A reporter for The Chronicle of Bound Brook has been journeying about among residents of North Plainfield securing interviews in favor of the borough method of government and vainly searching for someone opposed to the system. The Chronicle this week publishes a number of the resulting interviews, as an argument in favor of making Bound Brook a borough. Among those who are quoted are T. S. Armstrong, H. Newton Spencer, Ira F. Riker, L. M. French, Francis H. Gardner and Dr. W. E. Mattison. One of the remarks printed is that the borough government has raised North Plainfield from an obscure little mud hole to a thriving municipality.

Base-Ball News Already.

The Sun says: "J. Livingston, the well-known pitcher of the Ridgewood Club, and W. Gillies, formerly centre fielder of the Crescents of Plainfield, N. J., have not yet signed with any club. Both have good records."

The Somerville Democrat says: "The West Ends have secured Harkins, Bergen, Joe Reilly, Al. Williams, Sam. Mack, Carbonnell and Davenport for this year's team. They are to play six games with the Crescents, two each in July, August and September."

Old Relics.

Abraham Rockafellow, of 39 East Brook avenue, Somerville, and well known in this city, is the possessor of an ancient and valuable musical instrument, which is termed a Columbian Harp, made in the year 1783. He also has a chair that came over the seas from Holland in 1683, and was in possession of the Dunham family. Mr. Rockafellow has some valuable copper coins of ancient dates, also copies of almanacs and other documents published many years ago.

City Court Cases.

Archibald Davis this morning was fined $8 by City Judge Codington for drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

Harry McComas pleaded not guilty to the charge of disturbing the peace at the Grant avenue station, and trial was set for Feb. 10.

Patrick Dooley had no money to pay a fine of $5, so went to jail for ten days. His offense was intoxication.

Plainfield Argument for Either Side.

Mayor Charles Place of North Plainfield told the Bound Brook voters, Monday evening, of the good points of a borough government, and last night William Archibald Coddington of this city spoke before a similar mass meeting from the opposition point of view.

The Widow Denies the Soft Impeachment.

Annie Leesing, the girl who has been receiving objectionable anonymous letters saying bad things of Nicholas Kelly, in a published interview with a reporter said, when asked if she had no suspicion as to where the letters came from: "Nick boarded with a widow once, and I guess she thought he intended to marry her."

The widow referred to told a PRESS reporter to-day that she wanted it distinctly understood that she never had any such aspirations as those credited to her.

"The thought of marrying Nick Kelly never entered my head"—she said.

Admission free, but a collection will be taken for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital.

Another South Plainfield Railroad.

The Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company are buying property along their route from South Plainfield to Staten Island Sound near Sewaren. The road will cross Dark Lane at Metuchen, about one-fourth of a mile from the old Jersey City and Trenton turnpike, and about one mile from the Metuchen post-office.

SUNDAY SERVICES.

Brief notices will be inserted under this head free of expense, but must be delivered at this office not later than eleven o'clock on Saturday morning to insure publication.

Workers' Training Classes will meet at the Y. M. C. A., as usual, to-morrow, at 9:15 A. M.

Captain George D. Morrison will speak at the Mount Pleasant school-house, to-morrow evening.

The Rev. C. L. Goodrich will preach at the Memorial chapel at Washingtonville, to-morrow evening.

Hector W. Cowan of Princeton will address the young men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A., Sunday at 4:15 P. M.

Only one service will be held in the German church to-morrow, at 10:30 A. M. Sunday-school at 2:30 P. M. Weekly meeting Wednesday at 8 o'clock P. M.

All Bible students are invited to hear the interesting course of lectures on Revelations now being given in the meeting room at No. 6 East Front street at 7:45 P. M. each Sunday.

At the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church to-morrow the Rev. Wm. R. Richards, pastor, will conduct services at 10:30 A. M. and 7:30 P. M. All the seats are free at the evening service.

At the First Unitarian church, Second place, the Rev. Hobart Clark, pastor, will preach to-morrow. Service will be held at 10:30 A. M. and 7:30 P. M. Sunday-school will meet at 11:45 A. M.

The masses in St. Mary's church to-morrow will be at 7:30, 8:30, 9:45 and 10:45 A. M. Sunday-school will be held at three o'clock P. M. Vespers will be celebrated at eight o'clock in the evening.

At the Congregational church, the Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor, there will be preaching service to-morrow at 10:30 A. M., Sunday-school at 2:45 P. M., and Christian Endeavor prayer meeting at 4:20 P. M.

Capt. George D. Morrison will give his interesting talk on the subject "Sleep on Now,"—Mark XIV: 41, 42—at the Mt. Pleasant Mission to-morrow evening. An unusually interesting meeting is promised.

To-morrow's services in the First Presbyterian church, at 10:30 A. M. and 7:30 P. M., will be conducted by the pastor, the Rev. K. D. Ketcham. In the evening a praise service will be held. All are welcome.

In the Trinity Reformed church, to-morrow, a special thanksgiving service will be held, morning and evening. The pastor, the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, will preach, and a chorus choir will render the music. All are welcome.

Services in the Park Avenue Baptist church to-morrow will include preaching by the pastor, the Rev. Asa Reed Ditts, at 10:30 A. M., on the subject, "The Blessedness of Strength in God." The Sunday-school will meet at 2:30 P. M. All are welcome, and seats are free.

At the Methodist Episcopal Church to-morrow, the pastor, the Rev. Chas. B. Mitchell, will preach at 10:30 A. M., on the subject—"Is Religion Dying?" The Sunday-school will meet at 2:30 P. M., and the Epworth League at 6:45 P. M. An evening sermon will be delivered at 7:30, by the pastor; subject—"Peace or War: Which?"

At Grace church, Feb. 8, Quinquagesima Sunday, the following services will be held: Early celebration at 7:30 A. M.; morning prayer, litany and sermon at 10:30 A. M.; Sunday-school at 3 P. M.; evening service at 7:45. On Wednesday (Ash Wednesday) there will be early celebration at 7:30 A. M.; morning service at 11 A. M.; evening prayer at 4:30 P. M.

At the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Clinton avenue, the Rev. Dr. Taylor, rector, these services will be held to-morrow: Morning service and sermon by W. J. Knight, of the General Theological Seminary, at eleven o'clock; at three o'clock, Sunday-school and an address to the children. On Ash Wednesday there will be services at eleven o'clock.

A young people's meeting will be held Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, and a mission prayer and conference meeting Friday evening at 8 o'clock. A cordial welcome is extended to all who desire to attend any of these services.

At the Church of the Holy Cross, the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, rector, to-morrow will administer Holy Communion at 9 A. M. The Sunday-school will meet at 9:45 A. M. There will be morning prayer and sermon at 11 A. M., and even song at 4:30 P. M. Ash Wednesday, the service will be held at 11 A. M.; Thursday, at 4 P. M.; Friday, at 7:30 P. M.; Saturday, at 4 P. M.

We shall never cease to indorse Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup; for without it our paper would have been short of reading matter this week; we had a shocking cough and a fearful cold.—(Weekly Union.)

MISTRESS AND SERVANT.

A LADY is engaging a new cook. "Are you sure you don't keep company with any young man?" "Yes, I do, ma'am; but"—in a whisper—"he's an awful small eater."

"BEGORRA," said Bridget, as she opened a bottle of champagne for the first time, "the fool that filled this quart bottle must 'a' put two quarts in instid av wan!"

LADY (to house girl): "You should take a lesson from the cook. You are slovenly, whereas she washes her face three or four times a day." House Girl: "No wonder. The fellow who comes to court her is a chimney sweep."

"MARY ANN," her mistress told her, "before ironing the finer linen always try the heat of the iron on something coarse so as not to scorch the material!" "I don't need to, mum; I hev a nose, and I knows when the linen is scorching by the smell of it, mum."

"WELL, Mrs. Pettigrew, if yez don't raise me wages I shall be obleeged to be afther lavin' yez whin me month is up." "Why, Jane? When you came here you knew scarcely any thing; it was I who taught you." "An' shure, mum, wouldn't I be afther bein' wuth more now, whin I know so much, than whin I didn't know nothin' at all?"

MADAME comes home and finds Minna (the servant) sitting in the kitchen reading a book by the light of two candles. She is very naturally annoyed at the girl's extravagance. "Why, Minna, actually reading novels with two candles burning?" "Not at all, ma'am," was the cool reply, "that's only one candle! I just cut it in two half an hour ago!"

QUEER PEOPLE AND THINGS.

A NEW YORK clothing sign is Taylor, Cutting & Co.

A NEW YORK doctor, startled by a proposal of marriage from a spinster, called in the police and had her arrested.

TWO CITIZENS of Palmyra, Me., have had so many quarrels that a few days ago a contract was drawn up between them that in future they would have nothing to do with each other.

A WOMAN of Hiawatha, Kan., hired a poor woman to wash for her at fifteen cents an hour, and while the washerwoman was at work turned the clock back an hour and a half.

ONE of the latest things in church fairs is a bazar held in Edinburgh, Scotland, for the purpose of raising funds to provide accommodations for ladies who faint during church services.

W. R. GREGORY was sent to jail in Kansas City, Mo., the other day for stealing a "red-hot stove," the oven of which was filled with biscuits. He sold the stove at a second-hand store, biscuits and all, for three dollars.

A NUMBER of New York hotels have special cages for their telephones. It is a room filled with patent double doors and double walls, so that not a sound uttered by the sender of a message can be heard outside the cage.

AN old colored woman living in Atchison used to prepare herself every night for death by dressing in a blue gown, and she was always surprised to find herself alive the next morning. She kept this up until she wore out three or four blue dresses and then she quit.

FEED FOR LIVE STOCK.

THE results of good feed are often credited to the breed.

A CHANGE of food will often give the animals an appetite when every thing else fails.

THERE is no standstill point. An animal either gaining in weight or losing. Keep it increasing. It should be a rule never to allow a pound of flesh once gained to be lost.

COLTS will make a better growth and development if they are given a light feed of ground oats every day. Oats are one of the best foods for the development of bone and muscle.

SOUR apples fed raw to hogs are almost worthless, as the hog does not like them and does not thrive on them; but these same apples frozen and then steamed enough to thaw and partially cook them, become a very useful and desirable food.

CORN and cob ground together make a good food for milch cows. We do not recommend feeding corn-meal alone. The ration should be corn-meal, ground oats and bran in equal quantities. If we were going to feed corn alone we should prefer to have the cob ground with it.

FEED your hogs all the raw potatoes they will eat. If you have none, buy them; they are the best anti-cholera remedy known, also a cure for scurvy. By feeding plenty of potatoes your hogs will be healthy. Feed them potatoes every day, don't feed them once and then stop.

EUROPEAN ROYALTY.

A LOFTY personation of dignity is the Crown Princess of Denmark, who stands six feet three inches in her stockings.

THE late Duke of Bedford owned 86,000 acres of land in Great Britain, including a square mile of London itself.

LORD SALISBURY is said to work fourteen hours a day, writing and reading dispatches. Add to this the time consumed in social duties and he rarely gets more than four or five hours' sleep.

VON MOLTKE has devoted the large sum voted him by the city of Berlin on his 90th birthday to the foundation of the Moltke Branch of the Home for Old People, instituted by William I. and the Empress Augusta.

EX-QUEEN NATALIE announces that she can not bear the continued humiliations to which she is subjected in that country any longer, and that she has determined to leave Servia and live abroad until the King shall come of age.

THE late Earl of Devon, the twelfth of his line, was a most incorrigible spendthrift. When, in 1873, at the age of thirty-six, he made his appearance in the bankruptcy court, his debts reached the extraordinary amount of $3,588,000—the result chiefly of recklessness on the race-track.

Extraordinary Affair in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—A very mysterious affair is puzzling the detectives of this city. At an early hour, the family of the Rev. D. Sunderland were aroused by a noise in the basement of the family residence as of a heavy body falling. Nothing more was heard, and when the servants arose they were horrified to find a large pool of blood on the landing of the stairway leading to the basement, the door knob and walls smeared with blood, and several large pools of blood on the floor of the basement, with a half burned candle. The fastenings of the doors and windows showed no signs of being broken; nor was there any evidence of the presence of strangers in the house. The trail of blood was clearly outlined for some distance down the street, where all trace was lost, although the detectives have been industriously at work ever since. No clue to the mysterious visitation has been discovered.

A Democratic Caucus.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—A call has been issued for a caucus this evening of the Democratic members of the House. The request for the caucus was signed by about 20 Democrats, headed by Bland and Enloe. The call does not state the reason for which the caucus is called, but it is understood that the silver question will be the principal matter discussed, and that there will be a general interchange of views as to the course of procedure for the remainder of the session.

Rhett Released on Bail.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—William B. Rhett, who has been confined in the city prison for some time past charged with abducting and criminally assaulting little newsgirls belonging in New Jersey, was released on bail.

Pennsylvania's Mining Laws.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 7.—The House, without a dissenting vote, passed the bill authorizing the Governor to appoint a commission to revise the mining laws and to inquire into the condition of the various mines.

Chairman of Tammany Hall.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—The Tammany Hall Organization last night elected Thomas F. Gilroy Chairman. He was also elected Chairman of the Executive Committee.

Gladstone and Parnell's Views.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—At the meeting of his followers next Thursday, Mr. McCarthy will read a letter from Mr. Gladstone, setting forth the views of the English statesman on the present Irish imbroglio. After that is done, it is said a meeting of the entire Irish Parliamentary party will be held, when Mr. Parnell will announce the terms on which he surrenders the chairmanship, and state his intentions for the future.

German and English Capital Invested.

BERLIN, Feb. 7.—The formation of the Southwest African Company has been authorized by the Government. It will have a seaboard jurisdiction of 600 miles, together with an enormous freehold territory, a prior right to railway concessions and a vast area of mining rights outside of the freehold grant. A large amount of English capital is invested in the scheme.

ONLY WAIT!

There the spirit, worn and weary
In the daily road of earth,
Finds the pathway long and dreary,
And the burden hard to bear—
Tired of hoping, faint with fearing,
Sighs to rest at Heaven's gate—
Then in tones sweet, soft, yet cheering,
Patience whispers: "Only wait!"
For a brighter day is dawning!
Sunlight beameth with the morning—
Gladness cometh with the morning—
Only wait!

Oh, sad hearts, whose soundless sorrow
Dares not let a murmur fall,
Only wait, and trust the morrow;
God's great heart beats over all.
Only wait, oh, wounded spirit,
By life's heavy cross weighed down;
Thou shalt surely Heaven inherit—
Bear the Cross, and win the Crown.
Win and wear it at the dawning,
In the beauty of the morning—
In the glory of the morning—
Only wait!

Wait and hope! If life distress us,
Joys will be more sweet above,
Where the light of love shall bless us;
Love is Heaven, and Heaven is Love!
Courage, then! His hand will guide us
Gently to that "golden gate"
Where no ill can e'er betide us,
Blest forever—only wait.
Even now the day is dawning;
With the sunlight breaks the morning—
Lovely light of Heaven's morning!
Only wait! Only wait!

WARNED BY A MOUSE.

How It Helped Grace Rivington to Discover an Intruder.

The old manor-house at Barton Bridge, although one of the quaintest and most picturesque houses in this side of the county, was not half so well known as it deserved to be. Cut off from the high-road by a clump of ancient and well-wooded wych-elms, the few travelers who passed by the plantation gates plodded or drove wearily on up the steep hill beyond it, reached the top, admired the view away across the valley of the Bar, and little dreamed of what a curious old mansion lay hidden among the trees.

Its master and owner, John Trowbridge, was an old-fashioned bachelor, who prided himself on three good things—old books, old wine and old friends; and though he had few of the last, and their visits were few and far between, he always boasted that they were "enough for him, and enough was as good as a feast." It was a lonely place, too, ten miles from the county town, and six from the station; while the whole hamlet of Barton consisted of about a score of cottages, all clustered round the tiny church, half a mile down the valley below. The Squire, therefore—as he was everywhere called—when not busy in his library, troubled his head about few things beyond his own domain, lived in a royal sort of cozy comfort on half his income; and gave up most of his time and thoughts to the care of his niece and ward, Miss Grace Rivington, declaring at times she was the plague of his life; and at others, that without her he didn't know what would become of Barton manor. Left an orphan when a mere child, with a fortune of twenty thousand pounds on coming of age, she had grown up at last to be as willful, high-spirited and charming a young lady as could be found in all the county side. In short, she was the old man's pet, and managed by dint of coaxing, flattery and scolding to have her own way, "in things little or big," as John Trowbridge often confessed. His favorite name for her was "the little witch;" "a wee body, but with a mind and a spirit in it big enough and determined enough to manage the most fussy and troublesome horse in the stable, or out of it."

These were the two who sat chatting together one wintry evening in November, on the day of her coming of age, when, contrary to all custom in such cases, and in defiance of his urgent entreaty, she had insisted on having no dinner party and no birthday celebration; but a quiet time "just for us two," she said; "and I can have you all to myself." Dinner was over, the wine and walnuts were on the table, and that was wheeled up to the blazing wood-fire, Graves, the butler, had departed, and at last she could speak freely.

"My dear, dear uncle," she said, "there never, never was, and never will be any thing half so beautiful as the necklace you gave me this morning. I had it in my pocket all dinner-time, and was longing to look at it the whole time. But why did you spend so much money?"

"Why, my dear? Well, because you are such a naughty, ill-tempered, ugly little shrimp; and I determined that people should look at your diamonds to-morrow, if they wouldn't look at you. As to money, child, I only had them reset; they were my mother's fifty years ago, and her, mother's before that—a wedding present from that old Jack Trowbridge whose eyes are now looking down at you from the other side of the room. 'Gentleman Jack,' they used to call him when he came back from India and brought the diamonds with him."

"Look," she said, taking them out of the dainty morocco case—"see, how they shine in the light of the fire! I shall be as grand as a queen to-morrow night at the ball; and in that lovely dress from Paris, O uncle! the very happiest girl in Cornwall! What can I say, what can I do, to thank you—the dearest, goodest, wisest of old uncles?"

"Well, if you won't have any more wine, Miss Grace Rivington, say good-night; be off to bed, and lock up your necklace in a safe place, and keep the key in your own pocket. You'll have a thousand things to do to-morrow; so go now and get your beauty-sleep, that you may look your best at night. Half the women will go crazy at the sight of your necklace and gay feathers; and all the men about your lovely face. But, mind, the first quadrille is for me."

They chatted on for awhile, and she playfully reminded him that only a month before he had utterly refused to have a dance at the manor house, or to let the place be turned upside down for any such nonsense. "And now," she added, "here you are decking me out like a queen, and begging for a quadrille!"

"You're a witch, my dear, neither more nor less, and you know it; and I am an old goose, and I don't know it; so, good-night."

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS.

In less than an hour from that time the diamonds were safely locked up in an old oak cabinet, and the happy owner, like most of the household, sound asleep, and dreaming of all the joys of the coming morrow.

The morrow came, as most to-morrows do, in good season, heavy with clouds at first, but slowly breaking out into sunshine at last. Miss Grace Rivington, after her beauty-sleep, came down radiant to breakfast; and that being over, sent off a special messenger to her special friend Florence, at the Grange, with the following brief note:

"MY DEAR FLORRIE: Come over at once, if only for half an hour, and you shall see the loveliest necklace to be found in Cornwall. I am to wear it to-night. G. M."

It was but a short walk from the Grange to the manor-house, and in less than an hour after the dispatch of the note the two friends were in full talk by the side of a roaring wood fire in Grace's own sanctum, a cozy, snug room, with oak paneling and old oak furniture, which opened out upon the lawn. The two girls were in high spirits; the necklace was duly admired, looked at again and again, carefully put away and locked up; and then came the discussion of dresses, laces and partners, about which last point there was a considerable difference of opinion, as great almost as the difference in the personal appearance of the ladies themselves. In that difference, in fact, lay the strength of the friendship. Florrie was a tall, dark brunette, with an abundance of black hair; a loud, rather masculine voice, and a still more masculine manner, dress and tastes.

"And now, Grace," she said at last, "put away all the fal-lals, and I'll tell you all about yesterday's doings, when you shut yourself up like a hermit, instead of being out in the finest run for the season. There were four of us from the Grange, and about twenty other red-coats besides Charlie Burton and a couple of militia-men; and we went straight away for Barton Edge, a downright spin of fifty minutes without a check. Then we ran him in and killed in the open. Coming back, we found again—another forty minutes; lost him, and then home by the harvest-field, where Jack and I and the two militaries went in for a rat hunt with a couple of terriers."

"Glad you enjoyed it, my dear; but no rats for me; I hate the very sight of one. The mice behind this old wainscot are bad enough, and terrify me out of my wits sometimes. I am actually afraid of them, and uncle won't have a single cat in the place, so that we are fairly overrun with them. Ten to one if I only open the door of the old press out flies a mouse, and away I go as fast as my legs will carry me."

"O, Grace! what a coward; afraid of a mouse! Never mind, dear; with that necklace on to-night you'll carry before you—red-coats and black old stagers and young dandies; they'll all fall in love with that charming little witch of a face of yours. You won't be afraid of them, mice or no mice. I shall stand no chance; but it's time for me to be off; so good-bye, my dear, until eight p. m. I shall come early. I'll go out by the window and cut across the lawn."

It was six o'clock p. m. and Grace Rivington, after an early dinner, had gone up to her own room for the important and laborious work of dressing for her first ball. It had been a fine, calm day for November, the fire of wood had all but died out and the window was still ajar as her friend had left it in the morning. But as it grew darker and colder, and the serious business of the night had to be begun, Grace closed and fastened it, and going to the opposite side of the room sat down in front of a large cheval glass, and, as many a pretty girl has done before, took a calm survey of herself and determined to wear the white dress. As she looked at the glass, into which the flickering fire now and then threw a fitful touch of light, she was suddenly startled by a slight rustling sound behind her, as a mouse dashed out and scampered across the floor, and then turning her head she saw, to her utter horror, a pair of eyes watching her from one corner of the room, among the curtains, where the mouse had sprung out!

For a moment she was utterly paralyzed with dread; and not daring, or able, to move, was about to cry out for help. Luckily for her, the cry was stifled, and then, with a sort of desperate courage, she turned back to her old position, and again looked into the glass, as if nothing had happened. At the very first glance, the two terrible eyes seemed to be still fixed on her from among the dark folds of the curtain; and she shuddered as she looked. It was clearly some scoundrel who had hidden himself there for some plan of robbery, and her life for the moment was in his hands; and all depended on her success or failure in lulling him into a belief that his presence had not been detected.

After a minute of sharp thought, her usual resolute will prevailed; her courage rose and her plan was formed. Without rising from her chair, she drew up to her side a small writing-table, calmly lighted a wax candle, and began writing a series of pretended notes, sealing and addressing each, as if for the post. Over the fourth of these notes she seemed to take much trouble, and, as if not satisfied with it, began to read aloud short bits of it as she went on, with an occasional word of comment: "We depend on your being here, my dear Jennie, in good time to-night, whatever the weather be; and I send this by a special messenger to say that we shall keep you until to-morrow. I have heaps of birthday presents to show you, and the loveliest diamond necklace." As she uttered these last words, she suddenly stopped, and said, as if in a whisper to herself: "Why, what a goose I am! Old Foster the jeweler has never sent back the rings and necklace, though he faithfully promised I should have them in good time this morning. Jane must go for them at once, or I shall not get them in time."

Then, having sealed up and directed the last of her pretended notes, she walked with trembling steps to the bell-rope, pulled it, waited for a moment and next unlocked a drawer and took out her jewel-case. As she did so the door opened and the servant appeared. "Jane," said her mistress, "tell Richard to take this note to the Grange and this to Dr. Forbes' at once. There are no answers, but as he comes back call at Foster, the watchmaker's, with the other note and ask for my rings and necklace which he had to clean. As it's getting late, he had better take the pony. The necklace he can put into this box; Foster has the key." And with these words she handed to the servant her precious jewel-case. In another moment the door was shut and Grace once more alone, with the pair of eyes watching her intently from behind the curtain.

The owner of the eyes had seen and heard all that had happened, and, though slightly puzzled, thought it best not to move as yet; especially as he saw that the young lady was calmly going on with her toilet and had lighted two wax candles.

Meanwhile Jane herself was slightly puzzled, but, being a well-trained servant, obeyed her mistress' orders. "Here, Richard," said she, "Miss Grace says you're to take the pony as sharp as you can and leave these notes at the Grange and at old Forbes; and as you come back call at Foster's for some rings and a necklace that's to go into this case."

In five minutes he was on his way. The three notes he carried with him were duly delivered, and read with amazement by the recipients. The one to Dr. Forbes ran thus:

"MY DEAR DOCTOR: Don't be alarmed though I beg you to come straight to the manor house when you have read this. Say nothing to the servants, but make your way quietly up to the oak room, where I wait your coming. Uncle is away at the magistrates' meeting. Lose not a moment.

"GRACE RIVINGTON."

The second note was this:

"MY DEAREST FLORRIE: A mouse has got into the oak room, and here I am a prisoner; send your two brothers at once to deliver me—at once. Ever your affectionate GRACE."

Foster, the watchmaker, utterly and hopelessly puzzled, read as follows:

"MR. FOSTER: Take the box which the bearer will give you to Barnet, the parish constable; tell him to bring it here to the manor house at once.

G. RIVINGTON."

Old Forbes was the first to recover from his amazement and, after a moment's thought, to hurry down from his surgery and rush out of the house armed with a case of instruments and his biggest stick—without a word to wife or servants, or to himself, but: "What on earth is that witch of a girl up to now?" He ran as hard as he could, and in ten minutes, red-hot and breathless, reached the hall door of the manor house, where he was well known.

"Parker," said he to the astonished footman, "Miss Grace says I am to go straight to her room without being announced. I know my way." Then he walked quietly upstairs and knocked at the door of the oak room, and at once entered.

His patient, with a pale face, and her long hair streaming down over her shoulders, was sitting in a low chair in front of the mirror, the fire had died out into white ashes, and the dim light of the two wax candles left half the room in darkness.

"Grace, what has happened? Are you ill—here, all alone?"

And then came a dead silence, more terrible than any speech. She tried to speak, but for many minutes the effort was vain, and ended in a few broken words. While the agony of suspense and fear lasted, she had bravely kept up her courage; but now with safety had come the reaction. Her nerves, after being strung up to the highest pitch, suddenly collapsed; and the doctor was fairly puzzled. But at last, after a sharp effort, came an intelligible sound, and she stammered out: "Not ill, doctor, not ill; and not alone; he is there behind the curtains!"

Before he could ask: "Who or what is behind the curtains?" out stepped Mr. Sikes, to answer for himself, a common roadside tramp of the lowest order, who that very morning had begged for broken victuals at the kitchen door and been rewarded with beer in honor of the day. "All right, governor," says Sikes; "you needn't make no fuss. I ain't done no harm to the young lady; and the winder bein' open, you see, I only come in to get a rest."

But at this moment there was a sudden and tremendous clatter on the stairs, and in rushed not only the two brothers from the Grange and the parish constable, but the whole troop of terrified servants. In the midst, however, of all the noisy confusion, congratulations and outcries that followed, Silks continued his speech, with the same unblushing impudence as he had begun: "And to think, now, of being took in by that there young gal, a-knowin' all the time that I was behind the curtains, and she ready to drop at a mouse!"

When Grace had reluctantly swallowed a glass of wine, recovered herself enough to tell her brief story and regain her birthday necklace, then arose a fierce discussion as to what was to be done with Mr. Sikes.

"Constable," said the old doctor, "tie that fellow's hands behind him and lock him up in the Clink until the Squire comes home; and first give him a good ducking in the horse-pond."

But then the vagabond altered his tune, and put on such a piteous look, and told such a miserable whining tale of starvation and misery, that Grace's voice prevailed; though he did not escape his taste of the pond.

"Let him go, let him go," she said; "and take him away at once, before the Squire comes back, which he may do at any minute. And now, all my dear, good friends, a thousand thanks to you, every one! But begone, all of you, for the clock has struck seven, and I have to be dressed before eight!"

In spite of all difficulties, however, Miss Grace Rivington, in her white dress and wearing her diamond necklace, was the admiration of all beholders that night at the ball. She danced many dances, and not a few with Charlie Burton, who after his marriage told me this true story.—Chambers' Journal.

A SLIPPERY GRAB.

Four Hunters Struggle Ineffectually to Catch a Grizzly.

One of the most exciting hunts had by Mr. Pacheco, the recently-appointed Minister to Central America, occurred during one summer night off the California seacoast where the seals were in the habit of going. The bears came there for the purpose of capturing and feeding upon the seals. Mr. Pacheco and his riders took a station at the top of a high bluff to wait for the return of the huge grizzly that they had seen go down below to feed. He came back about eleven o'clock, and when he was fairly upon the top of the cliff the four lassos whirled and the bear was caught. They were never more successful in a first effort. The four lassos were thrown as if directed by one hand. Each paw was caught, but the bear was greasy from his seal feeding, and one lasso after another slipped off. Of course in such hunting each rider has two or three lariats in reserve. As the lariats slipped off the bear charged. To protect themselves it was necessary to throw new ropes, and upon the instant. This fight kept up for nearly an hour, when the bear and his hunters both gave up the contest. He was too slippery to be held, but the persistence of the hunters had so daunted his spirit that he was very glad to run off at the last, when the hunters became convinced that it was a hopeless case. Mr. Pacheco has killed many grizzlies. In one instance he had a very narrow escape. This was when he was riding along upon the banks of a dry bed of a stream. The grizzly he was after was thirty feet below him. As a proof of the wonderful agility of this animal, Mr. Pacheco says that this particular bear, without the slightest warning of attack, bounded from the bed of the stream clear and clean to the flank of his horse. It was the sudden bolt of the animal which saved the rider. The other hunters came up in a moment, and in three minutes afterwards the bear that had made such a courageous charge was lying helpless in the nooses of the hunters.—Chicago Tribune.

—The widow of a church beadle died in a village in the Government of Penza, having expressed the desire that her remains be put by those of her husband. When the grave of the latter was opened the coffin was not found. On investigation it was discovered that the peasants of the village had stolen the body of the dead beadle and sunk it in a swamp. There had been a drought in that district last year, and the peasants believed that if they sunk the body of a righteous man in water rain would come. This superstition is prevalent among the common people in that region.

RAN UPON THE ROCKS

Very Close Call for the Steamboat John H. Starin.

TOWED INTO PORT BY FOUR TUGS

The Passengers Taken Off and Sent to New Haven.

The Captain's Coolness Saved the Vessel from Going Down—A Large Hole Cut in Her "Forefoot"—Water Rushes in by Barrelsful While the Passengers Were Ignorant of Their Danger.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—The steamboat John H. Starin, which plies between this city and New Haven, Conn., was towed to Jersey City yesterday afternoon in a sinking condition, after lying since Friday night stranded on the rocks off North Brother's Island.

The steamboat left Pier 18, North river, as usual at 9 o'clock Friday night for New Haven. She was in command of Captain McAllister and was loaded with freight. She carried nine passengers.

It was foggy when she left her pier and she proceeded carefully up the East river. The fog grew thicker and at 9:20 o'clock it was so dense that the lookout could not see ten feet in advance.

Suddenly there was a shock, and the vessel came to a stop.

The captain dropped the lead, and then discovered that he had run on the rocks that abound in the vicinity of North Brother's Island.

All the passengers were asleep at the time, and they did not know of their whereabouts until the following morning, when they awoke expecting to find themselves in New Haven, but were surprised to see that they were high and dry on the rocks.

In the meantime, Captain McAllister had made an investigation of the damage, and discovered a big hole under the forefoot, through which the water was rushing.

The pumps were got to work. The captain did not care to take chances of backing off the rocks, and all Friday night the crew were kept at work pumping out the vessel.

On Saturday morning word was sent to the offices of the Starin Transportation Company in this city, and the steamboat Lenox was sent up Saturday night accompanied by four tugs.

The steamer took the passengers off and carried them to New Haven, while the tugs proceeded to pull the Starin off.

They succeeded after much difficulty, but she made water so fast that in order to keep her from sinking she was grounded in the mud off Riker's Island.

Yesterday morning two more tugs and a lighter were sent up to her. She was towed to this city and to Cosgrove's dry-dock, in Jersey City, where she is laid up.

On the way to the city Starin's pumps and those of the tugs had to be kept going, as the water kept gaining, and once or twice the tugs stopped in order that she would not sink.

BLEW OUT HIS BRAINS.

An Inveterate Cigarette Smoker's Revolting Method of Ending His Life.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 9.—Peter Johnson, 22 years old, committed suicide at the house of a friend on whom he was calling at 11 a. m. in the presence of a four-year-old child.

His method was particularly revolting.

He went into the kitchen, accompanied by the little child, and took a breech loading gun from a rack on the wall. He fished a shell from the pocket of a coat hanging near by, and loaded and cocked the gun. He then tied a rope to the trigger.

Seating himself in a chair he placed the muzzle of the gun in his mouth and pulled the trigger.

The charge of shot tore a frightful hole in his head, and his brains spattered the ceiling.

Johnson was an inveterate cigarette smoker, and it is thought that his mind was affected. He was out of work and despondent.

Rev. Sam Jones' Brother Acquitted.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Feb. 9.—Charlie Jones, brother of Rev. Sam Jones, was acquitted of murder at Cartersville, Ga., the family home of the evangelist when off the road. Some months ago Charlie Jones shot and killed one of the most prominent negroes in the town, and for several days past has been on trial. The jury was out but a short time. It was proven that the negro was advancing on Jones with a knife in his hand.

Railroad Work Suspended.

MEADVILLE, Pa., Feb. 9.—On account of dull times, an order has been published suspending all but local repairs in the New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio railroad car shops in this city and at Kent, O. Another order reduces the working hours in the machine shop from ten to eight hours. One switch engine will be taken off at Meadville, Jamestown and Leavittsburg.

More Victims of Fire Damp.

WILKESBARRE, Feb. 9.—Nat Kane and Charles Kirk, both married men, were killed by an explosion of gas in the new shaft at Simpson & Watkins' mine at Wyoming. William Ross and Luther Michael were fatally injured. The men were engaged in sinking when a feeder in the side of the shaft was ignited from the naked lamp of one of the workmen.

Detailed as Military Instructor.

NORTHFIELD, Vt., Feb. 9.—The War Department has detailed Lieut. Elmore F. Taggart, of the 8th Infantry, U. S. A., as military instructor at Norwich University, vice Lieut. J. McI. Carter, of the 3d Cavalry, ordered to Fort McIntosh, Texas.

RAID ON WIRE TAPPERS.

The Men Escape, but Their Outfit Secured by the Police.

GLOUCESTER, N. J., Feb. 9.—Chief of Police Boyles and Officer Owens, of this city, were informed by a lineman of the Western Union Telegraph Company that the wire leading into the grand stand of the South Jersey Jockey Club had been tapped.

The lineman located the point at an old slaughter house on the premises of John Galena, a saloonkeeper, about a quarter of a mile from the track. On investigation it was found that the connection was made where the wires run over the roof. The old building was entered, but the gang escaped, having some how gotten wind of the raid, though they were in operation a few minutes before the officers arrived. They were seen scaling the fence and making their way toward Westville. The entire outfit was secured by the police, consisting of a new Morse set, wire and battery.

The saloonkeeper, John Galena, on whose premises all this occurred, was regarded with suspicion in the affair. He was sought for, but could not be found, his family saying that they did not where he was. Chief Boyles and officers decided to inspect the premises, and went up stairs and located him in bed. He refused to open the door and it was broken open and Galena arrested. The prisoner will be given a hearing before Mayor Jackson.

RINGLEADERS JAILED.

Discovery of a Society Organized to Avenge Wrongs Done Its Members.

SHENANDOAH, Pa., Feb. 9.—William and George Butsairage, Matt Moldanes and John Laiurnikus, four Polanders, have been committed to the county jail in default of $3,500 bail each, for murderously clubbing and stabbing five of their fellow countrymen, who were instrumental in having a friend of one of the accused sent to jail for assault and highway robbery.

The men named are ringleaders of a society which has for its object the avenging of wrongs done its members, and the payment of all expenses of members who get into trouble before the courts.

The discovery of the society's existence is of great importance. Of late, it has been almost impossible for the Commonwealth to convict Poles charged with crimes, on account of the vast amount of testimony put up in favor of the accused. This kind of testimony is now believed to have been supplied by professional witnesses, members of the society.

NEVER TO LATE TO MARRY.

A Groom of Eighty-four Takes a Bride of Ninety-seven.

SOUTH COLCHESTER, Ont., Feb. 9.—Milton Brown, aged 84 years, of Annerton, will to-morrow lead to the altar a bride in the person of Mrs. Margaret Clickert, aged 97 years.

The groom has buried four wives, and the bride mourns the loss of five husbands. Her last husband died two years ago at the advanced age of 105 years.

The bride and groom elect are colored, and were slaves in Virginia.

A Peddler Worth $8,000.

NEWARK, N. J. Feb. 9.—There was a first-class sensation in this city yesterday. It was caused by the death of an Italian fruit vender named Gerolamo Molinari. He died somewhat suddenly from the effects of cancer in the throat. When Molinari was searched a bankbook was found in his possession showing deposits to his credit of $8,000. He also had $200 and a fine gold watch. He has no relatives in Newark.

An Old Lady Drinks Embalming Fluid.

LANCASTER, Pa., Feb. 9.—Mrs. Margaret Snyder, aged 71, while at a funeral yesterday, became faint and took a drink of what she supposed was whisky. It was the undertaker's embalming fluid, however, and the services of a physician were required. He left her apparently out of danger, but the excitement consequent upon the affair brought on an attack of heart disease, which caused her death in a short time.

Hope for the Imprisoned Miners.

NANTICOKE, Pa., Feb. 9.—Hope exists that Cragle, Riner and Shalarski, the miners imprisoned in No. 3 Slope by last Wednesday's flood may have found safety in the airway that led up to the mountain side, and that they will be able to escape after the water recedes. If they are in the airway it will be possible to pass food to them soon.

Death of an Oil Prince.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Feb. 9.—John McKeown, who came to this country in 1863 without a dollar, died yesterday of asthma at his home here worth at least $6,000,000 and distinguished as the most extensive individual oil-producer in the country. Mr. McKeown was born in County Armagh, Ireland, in 1833.

Miss Smith Will Return.

BOSTON, Feb. 9.—A dispatch from London says that Miss Helen Smith will sail for home on Feb. 19. Her trouble with Mr. French will then be settled quickly.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

The Eight-Hour and Copyright Bills in the Senate.

WORK IN THE HOUSE THIS WEEK.

Considering the Legislative, Indian and Postoffice Appropriation Bills.

Rumors that Consul-General Now Will Succeed Secretary Windom—Mr. Cannon's Name Again Brought In—Senator Voorhees Very Ill—Congressman Phelan's Remains Arrive at the Capital.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—The Senate was called to order this forenoon at 11 o'clock and will continue in session, with the exception of two hours until late at night. The long sittings will give opportunity for disposing of a large amount of business.

Mr. Blair, under authority of notice given Saturday, will, early in the week, move to reconsider the vote by which the Eight-Hour Government Employes' bill was recommitted to the Labor Committee. According to the programme adopted by the Republican caucus, the Copyright bill is next on the order of consideration and it will be disposed of early in the week.

The Naval Appropriations bill and the District of Columbia Appropriations bill will be passed, and the Diplomatic and Consular Appropriations bill will be reported from committee and placed on the calendar, ready for action on it.

It is probable that the Indian Depredations Claims bill and the Nicaragua Canal bill will be acted on the order named, and Senator Paddock believes that he can secure action on the Pure Food bill before the end of the week.

The time of the House during the week will be devoted chiefly to the consideration of the legislative, Indian and postoffice appropriation bills.

HAS NEW BEEN CHOSEN?

Rumors that the Ex-Treasurer Will Succeed Secretary Windom.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Politicians to-day have been eagerly scanning cable dispatches to discover if John C. New, Consul-General to London, has made arrangements for embarkation or has actually sailed for this country.

Their anxiety has been aroused by a report in circulation that the President, within the past three days, has summoned him to Washington. If he boards an ocean racer within the next seven days the chances are 100 to 1 that he will be the next Secretary of the Treasury.

The rumor that Mr. New received a communication from the President, requesting his presence in Washington, has been discussed to-day with great earnestness in political resorts. Private Secretary Halford disclaimed any knowledge of it. He smilingly and good naturedly remarked: "Better say, on investigation in official circles, that you secured no confirmation."

Those who expect to see Mr. New here soon, argue that his coming can have but one object, and that is to enter the President's Cabinet and fill the portfolio made vacant by the death of Secretary Windom.

Will Cannon Get the Portfolio?

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—The report is current here that Representative Cannon is going to be Secretary of the Treasury. Mr. Cannon has not been informed of it as yet, and as a matter of fact the President has not got to the point where a choice can be made. The Illinois Representative, however, is much more of a probability for Secretary Windom's successor than is generally supposed.

Congressman Phelan's Remains.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—The remains of Congressman Phelan of Tennessee were brought here last night from New York and this afternoon will be placed temporarily in a receiving vault in Oak Hill cemetery. Mrs. Phelan, who was very ill at the time of Mr. Phelan's death in Nevada, is expected here in about two weeks time, when she will determine upon the final resting place of her husband's remains—whether here in the Congressional Cemetery or at Memphis.

Senator Voorhees' Illness.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Senator Voorhees is ill from a complication of diseases, rheumatism and heart disease being the most serious. It is not probable that he will be in the Senate for the rest of the session.

The Rumored Extra Session.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Inquiry in official circles here in regard to the reported intention to call an extra session of the Senate March 4, fails to confirm or deny the report.

Money Wanted for Canal Improvements.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 9.—The Canal Union, C. B. Potter president, and others, have conferred with Mr. Thurman, Superintendent of Public Works, and produced a bill which will be introduced in the Legislature next week. It appropriates $500,000 as follows: Erie, $200,000; Oswego, $30,000; Champlain, $140,000; Cayuga and Seneca, $30,000; Black River, $30,000. The amount for the Erie canal will be used partly in lengthening three or four locks and the rest in bottoming out the canal.

A Russian Outrage.

BOSTON, Feb. 9.—One of the greatest outrages ever inflicted upon American citizens by the decree of a foreign power has been the imprisonment of four New England sailors for two years and ten months in a Siberian coal mine. They were captured in Behring Sea by a Russian man-of-war. Captain Morris, the only known survivor, who has just returned, says he worked for days in the mine while chained to the corpse of his companion.

Pennsylvania's Sinking Town.

ASHLAND, Pa., Feb. 9.—The settling of the surface has done fully $35,000 damage to the buildings of this town. The sinking is supposed to be caused by the removal of the pillars of coal in the tunnel colliery which runs under the southern end of the town.

Appointments by Italy's New Premier.

ROME, Feb. 9.—Rudini, the new Premier, has appointed Peltoux Minister of War and Luzzati, Saracci, Morin and others to various departments.

CONFESSED A MURDER.

A Young Insurance Agent Says He Killed His Sweetheart in Pennsylvania.

OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 9.—A young insurance agent, H. M. Rodgers, who came here from Chicago last week attempted suicide yesterday after writing a letter addressed to the United States Mutual Life Insurance of New York, confessing the murder of his sweetheart last summer near Mercer, Pa.

He did not mention names, but admitted having assumed the name by which he was known. When he realized that he would live he made an effort to secure the letter, but the authorities had been apprised and took charge of the confession and made Rogers a prisoner. Mercer authorities have been wired. Rogers is intelligent and of good address.

A Wealthy Farmer's Troubles.

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 9.—Charles Tuttle, an East Hartford farmer, made an arrangement with his wife a few months ago by which he permitted her to go to California with a young man named Samuel Warner. Soon after, Tuttle secured as his housekeeper a married woman whose husband had been absent two or three years, and Tuttle again seemed contented. It seems, however, that Mrs. Tuttle became tired of her young man, and last week she returned to her old home. Tuttle at first declined to see her, but finally she prevailed, and the new housekeeper was set adrift. It was the latter's turn next, and she has brought suit against Tuttle for betrayal. A writ of attachment against his property has just been served. Tuttle is one of the wealthiest farmers in the county. He is at present critically ill with pneumonia.

Death of an Old Engineer.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Feb. 9.—Jacob Myers, one of the oldest locomotive engineers in America, died here yesterday, aged 72. He began running an engine on the Rensselaer & Saratoga Railroad, now the Delaware & Hudson, 46 years ago, and continued uninterruptedly up to last summer. He was known to railroaders all over the country and was a prominent Knight Templar. He has never had an accident during his long term of service.

Says Secretary Blaine Was Mistaken.

OTTAWA, Feb. 9.—Sir Charles Tupper said that he could not understand why Mr. Blaine should deny that he had received Canada's proposal for reciprocity before it was made public. He said he knew it had been handed by Sir Julian Pauncefote to Mr. Blaine, accompanied by a strong expression of approval on behalf of Her Majesty's government. Nor could he understand how it was possible for Mr. Blaine to deny that the initiatory suggestion came from Washington.

Guilty of Murder in the First Degree.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 9.—The jury in the cases of George Runnok, Andrew Todt, and Michael Sobol, the three Hungarians on trial for killing Michael Quinn at the Edgar Thompson Steel Works' riot at Braddock on New Year's Day, brought in a verdict finding the defendants guilty of murder in the first degree. An application for a new trial will be made at once, and if it is refused the case will be taken to the Supreme Court.

The Potters' Troubles.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 9.—The sanitary ware pressers issued a statement in reply to that of the manufacturers in regard to the lockout of the potters. The pressers claim that there has been no advance in prices charged by workmen for making certain goods. They also claim that an increase in wages is not a disadvantage to the employers. The pressers ask that the trouble be settled by arbitration.

Senator Chandler's Rights.

CONCORD, N. H., Feb. 9.—Senator Chandler publicly says he intends to obtain and publish a full statement of the facts connected with the long leases of the Worcester & Nashua and Manchester & Lawrence railroads to the Boston & Maine after the controlling interests therein had been purchased by persons who were directors of the Boston & Maine.

Railroad Business Block.

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., Feb. 9.—The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad is soon to build a business block in this city, 325 feet long, in the rear of the depot. It is to be erected by the railroad company to accommodate New Britain business men, as it will surpass anything in the city.

FOREIGN WAR TALK

Changes in the German Army Indicate Trouble.

STARTLING RUMOR IN LONDON.

Lord Salisbury's Reasons for Not Desiring a General Election.

Terrible Steamboat Disaster Off the Sicily Islands—Eleven Men Drowned—Mr. Harrington Replies to Archbishop Walsh's Circular—An Irish Chief of Police Commits Suicide.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The important changes being made in German army commands by the Emperor William are regarded in European capitals as pointing to the uncertainty of peace, and a startling rumor is current in London that the apparent change of front of the Salisbury government on the question of a general election has not been altogether inspired by domestic politics.

It is said that both Queen Victoria and the German Emperor are anxious that, in the event of a European war, England should be ranged on the side of Germany. They are apprehensive of the course Mr. Gladstone would take if in power, and Lord Salisbury has been impressed with the wisdom of taking no risks.

Sir Edward Malet has had an opportunity, owing to family afflictions which have called him to England, to impress the views of the Emperor upon Lord Salisbury in person without the dangerous intervention of diplomatic communications that would remain afterward to be examined by a Liberal Premier.

The Count von Hatzfeldt, German Ambassador, has also had frequent conferences with Lord Salisbury, and it was soon after the longest of these that the Unionist leaders began to be reticent about the prospects of a general election.

No doubt is entertained in well-informed Liberal circles that should war break out the present government would endeavor to place England in an attitude hostile toward France and Russia.

The Liberal position is that so long as English territory is not encroached upon and English rights are respected, Great Britain has no business with the jealousies and antagonisms of the continent.

THE IRISH TROUBLE.

Timothy Harrington Replies to Archbishop Walsh's Circular.

DUBLIN, Feb. 9.—Several Irish bishops have written to their clergy in the same tone as Archbishop Walsh, warning them against the National League methods of Harrington and Parnell. Harrington has replied to Archbishop Walsh. He says the archbishop misjudged the circular issued in behalf of the League.

The circular, he states, is the same as that issued annually, and he, Harrington, before sending it out informed Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien that, in consequence of the collapse of the American tour, he had determined to ask the League branches to help the evicted tenants.

In conclusion Mr. Harrington earnestly advises Archbishop Walsh not to commit the priests too hastily to a policy that would involve the division of the Irish party into two hostile camps in every parish.

ELEVEN MEN DROWNED.

Terrible Steamboat Disaster Off the Sicily Islands.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—A terrible steamboat disaster is reported from Penzance. The steamer Chiswick, which sailed from Cardiff, Wales, to Saint Nazaire, loaded with coal, struck off the Sicily Islands and sank almost immediately. The captain and ten seamen were drowned. Eight of the crew succeeded in getting on life belts and getting out a lifeboat. The boat, however, overturned, and for seven hours the eight men clung to the overturned boat. They were then rescued by boats from the lightship, and conveyed in a steamer to Penzance.

A Huge Calico Syndicate.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—An attempt is being made here to form a huge ring for the control of the calico printing business. Many of the largest houses are already pledged to the syndicate, and it is anticipated that fully half the producing power of the country will join the ring. The nominal capital will reach at least $25,000,000. The one weak point in the scheme is that Sir John Puleson has the engineering of it. Sir John is an affable old gentleman, but has neither the energy nor the ability to work an immense enterprise of this kind.

Suicide of a Chief of Police.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—A shocking suicide is reported from Galway, Ireland. The Chief of Police of that place killed himself by shooting himself with a revolver, owing to the fact that he was unjustly charged with having been concerned in the recent outrages between the police and the people, in which a number of persons were injured. It is a coincidence of some interest that the former chief, preceding the one who has just committed suicide, ended his life by deliberately taking a dose of poison.

A Railroad Rumor Denied.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 9.—The rumor that the Western New York & Pennsylvania Railroad, or some portion of it, has been leased for a term of years by the Baltimore & Ohio is officially denied. An inquiry at the offices of the former company in this city elicited the information that not only has no such lease been effected but that no negotiations looking toward that end are in progress, and the subject has not been even thought of.

OBSTREPEROUS STORM.

Great Damage from Snow in the Vicinity of Auburn, N. Y.

AUBURN, N. Y., Feb. 9.—A violent snow storm here loaded trees and wires to such an extent that the telegraph and telephone wires began going down in all directions, and large numbers of fruit and shade trees were broken down and ruined. The snow is now frozen solidly to the trees and shows in many places an actual precipitation of 13 inches in circumference.

Great damage has been done to the large orchards in this vicinity, many peach and pear trees having been destroyed. Falling telegraph, telephone and fire alarm wires coming in contact with electric lights and electric railroad wires caused much alarm among pedestrians.

The mayor ordered the electric light and electric railroad dynamos stopped, leaving the city in darkness last night and without railroad facilities.

A broken Western Union telegraph wire in contact with a live electric light wire set the switchboard in the Western Union office on fire, the flames, however, being extinguished with but little damage.

The buildings of the old Sheldon axle works at Wells were being fitted up as a forge when fire broke out about 10 o'clock and, owing to the demoralization of the fire-alarm circuits no alarm could be sent in. The building together with the machinery which was being set up by the forge company, were totally destroyed. Loss, estimated at $10,000.

LINDA JANSEN GONE.

She Has Made Serious Charges Against a Doctor and Mysteriously Disappears.

WOONSOCKET, Mass., Feb. 9.—Where is pretty Linda Jansen? This is the question which agitates the police and prosecuting authorities at Princeton. Linda is a Swedish girl, and a month ago made a serious charge against Dr. E. H. Mausum of that place, which has not yet come to trial.

A strange woman called last Monday night at Mrs. Sophia Nelson, a friend of Linda, and asked her to send for the girl.

When she arrived the two conversed for a long time and left together, the woman ostensibly to take the train at Brooks Station, and the girl to return to Doolittle's, where she was living. Neither has been seen since.

It is believed that the girl has been abducted, and perhaps foully dealt with.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Baron Hirsch has increased by $2,500,000 his gift to aid Hebrew immigrants in America.

Ex-Chief Justice Appleton of Maine died suddenly at Bangor. He was 87 years old.

The differences between the Canadian Pacific Railway and its trainmen have been amicably arranged.

Night Watchman Owen Carroll was killed by an express train near Sing Sing, N. Y. He was walking the tracks.

The extensive railroad shops of the New York, Lake Erie & Western Railroad at Susquehanna, Pa., have been placed on eight hours' time.

Major Henry P. Clare, the wealthy cattle raiser of Fort Thomas, who was reported missing has been located at Ryan's Hotel, Elizabeth, N. J. He is ill.

Ex-Congressman William Gottschalk of Doylestown, Pa., is dead. He was 73 years old, and one of the best known men in that section of Pennsylvania.

While John Heaton, who lived near Pemberton, N. J., was walking on the tracks of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad he was struck and killed by a train.

The workers in the Atlantic Cotton Mills in Lawrence, Mass., have been notified of an increase of wages of from 5 to 10 per cent. There are about 500 weavers employed.

In Penney's hat shop in Methuen, Mass., a cut down in wages has been announced of 25 per cent., with the understanding that the old wages will be restored in the spring.

Businessmen of Sing Sing, N. Y., are trying to raise $12,000 to be given to manufacturers as an inducement to locate in the village. Five thousand dollars has been subscribed.

The Social Democratic Federation has refused to supply money to enable Aveling, the socialist, to stand for the seat in the House of Commons made vacant by the death of Mr. Bradlaugh.

The unemployed workingmen of Berlin are assuming a dangerous attitude. They threaten to hold a mass meeting to protest against the action of the municipal authorities in refusing to start relief works.

Charles Lampe, 22 years old, is missing from his home at Jersey avenue, Jersey City. As he was despondent it is feared that he has committed suicide. He was employed by the Dixon Crucible Company.

The London Board of Trade returns show that during the month of January the imports decreased £4,400,000 and that the exports decreased £1,720,000 as compared with those of the corresponding month last year.

Samuel C. Lust, United States Consul at Belfast, Ireland, has just completed the examination of a number of residents of County Antrim who claim to be related to the late A. T. Stewart, the New York millionaire.

The strike at the Hargreaves mill at Fall River, Mass., has been settled, and the operators have voted to return to work. The basis of settlement is a compromise by which the agent agrees to remove the objectionable cloths from looms within a few days after work has been resumed.

The Watertown Steam Engine Company of Watertown, N. Y., is making an experiment in profit-sharing with its employes. It has just declared a dividend of 2 1-2 per cent. to stockholders and the same to its journeymen employes on the basis of their rate of wages. The experiment will be continued during the current year, the same dividend to be paid to the employes as to the stockholders.

THE DAILY PRESS.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—All the latest novelties in valentines may be had at Harper's, 75 Park avenue.

—The recently confirmed municipal officers were sworn in by the Mayor, Saturday evening.

—Lace, card, satin and comic valentines in large varieties at Harper's, 75 Park avenue.

—120 different persons have been enrolled in the educational classes of the Y. M. C. A., during the last calender year.

—All the members of the Young Men's Auxiliary are urged to attend the meeting at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, to-morrow evening.

—Some policeman has lost his night stick. A reporter found it on the street, and it awaits a claimant at THE PRESS office.

—Wetumpka Lodge, Knights of Honor, has leased the Anchor Lodge rooms and will probably sublet to Easter Lodge, K. of H., the Royal Arcanum, etc.

—The third annual masquerade ball of the Gesang and Turn Verein will be held at their hall on Somerset street, to-night. Grand march begins at nine o'clock.

—To-night, at eight o'clock, in the lecture room of the Trinity Reformed church, the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor hold their weekly prayer meeting. Visitors are always welcome.

—An effort was made last night to blow up the boilers and destroy the buildings of the "Shackleton Works" at Bound Brook. The engineer discovered the plans in time to save his own life and the property. No clew to the perpetrators is yet discovered.

—The MacLennan Royal Concert Company, of Edinburgh, Scotland, will give one of their entertainments of Scottish songs, varied with recitations, violin solos and dancing, in Music Hall on Friday next. The company includes some of Scotland's greatest artists. The quartette composed of Misses Steel and Ross and Messrs. Finlayson and Fleming, is said to be as great as any in this country.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Thomas Worth is lying dangerously ill at his home on Grove street.

Mr. and Mrs. Carmon Parse were in Knoxville, last month, visiting Mr. and Mrs. Honeyman. They subsequently left to go further South because of Mr. Parse's continued and increasing ill health.

Miss Lyons, who has been private secretary to the Corporaton Counsel for sometime, has accepted an offer from the Life publishing company of New York, and will enter upon her new position at once.

Some of the Lucky Ones.

Although so stormy Saturday evening, the attendance at the Crescent League fair was large in number and in heart. The net profits passed the $500 mark and may come within reach of twice that amount. When it is considered that out of 135 members only 60 contributed in anyway to the prosperity of the fair, the result is very creditable. A list has been prepared of those who did not give or spend a cent, which list will be reserved for future reference.

Among the lucky ones were Councilman Seymour Smith who won a chandelier that he immediately presented to the club; Wm. Woodruff won a safety bicycle; Thomas Timbo, a gold watch; John Kenney, a handsome picture, donated by Seymour Marsh and which Mr. Kenney has presented to the club; A. W. Waldron, a camera; B. T. Barnes, a rubber top coat; David Lyon, a rifle and a set of parlor bowling; Fred S. Green, a rifle; Charles Lyman, a pair of trousers; F. R. Stevens, a box of cigars; Charles P. Leggett, Darwin's theory of man; E. P. Thorn, a sachel; R. A. Meeker, a ton of coal; James Hardy, a barrel of flour; J. K. Arnold, an afghan; Will Thiers, a bowling ball; Richard Haven, a toilet set; John Crawford, a silk scarf; Mrs. Charles A. Reed, a sofa pillow; Mrs. Harry Moore, a jewel case; Miss Maltby, a scarf and cushion; and Miss Crane, a jewel case.

Gus Bruno is in the Company.

At Music Hall, this evening, "Never Better" is to be produced by the original Rice's Surprise Party—the largest farce comedy company on the road. Having been for years in active rehearsal, this combination has now become the strongest and best drilled of them all. The high position which this company maintains comes from the care Mr. Rice takes in selecting his artists. No matter how humble or exalted the position may be, he is always careful to get the best.

"Never Better" is designed to show the company at its best in their individual and ingenious novelties, witticisms, catchy songs and dances. The renowned "Carmencita's" rival will do a Spanish dance, and a special feature will be made by the "Bonanza Girls," from 'Frisco, in their unique act. The company will be headed by one of the funniest dialect and character comedians on any stage—Gus Bruno.

Ladies, clean your kid gloves with Mather's glove cleaner; for sale only by Mrs. J. C. Dyer, 38 West Front street All the latest novelties of the season in fine Millinery. Correct styles.

HYMENEAL.

Adams—Corlies.

As THE PRESS has already stated, the wedding of Miss Clara Walton Corlies to Henry Coolidge Adams, at "Roadending," Saturday afternoon, was a most brilliant society event. The home of the bride's mother, where the ceremony took place, was thronged with guests from Plainfield, New York and Brooklyn. The marriage was solemnized in the parlors down stairs. As the bridal party descended the broad staircase the surpliced boy choir of Grace church, under the leadership of W. H. Cock, sang the wedding march. They remained in an alcove adjoining the stair landing throughout the marriage service, and continued singing in low, sweet tones. The effect of the tender, subdued strains of music floating about the place from the hidden voices while the nuptial knot was being tied was very pretty, and was pronounced a charming novelty.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of white satin, with train en regal, and a veil of costly lace. She entered the parlors on the arm of her grandfather, J. H. Wright. Her maid-of-honor was Miss Annie Corlies, who wore white silk covered with lace net. She carried a bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley, a cluster of which was worn as a distinguishing mark by all the members of the family.

The ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Dr. C. H. Parkhurst. The groom is from Scarsdale, N. Y., but the home of himself and bride will be in New York city.

An especially pretty decorative effect was produced in the hall and parlors, during the ceremony and the highly enjoyable reception, by a pleasant glow of light from ornamental lanterns.

The wedding feast was by Maresi, and was superb.

"A LEDDY FROM LONDON."

Insisted on Taking the Officer's Arm, But Fought Like a Tigress When He Took Her Rum Away.

A gray-haired women from over the mountain came to town this morning, bought a supply of groceries, and became intoxicated to a superlative degree.

This afternoon, wet to the skin by the drenching rain, and the basket of groceries on her arm also drenched so that coffee, sugar, butter and baking soda were blended together into one heterogeneous mass, she halted in front of No. 11 Somerset street and treated her friends of the neighborhood to a fourth of July oration in the most approved style. Her maudlin ecstacy finally developed into so much obstreperousness that policeman Flanagan, after vain efforts to subdue the woman's exuberant buoyancy of spirits, found himself compelled to put her under arrest.

"Come, Wilhelmina,"—he said—"let's take a walk."

"Shure, you're a gentale young man, that you are"—she replied.—"I'm a leddy, I am—a leddy from London, but I'm not as good lookin' as yerself."

So charmed was the festive old woman over the beauty and galiantry of the handsome officer that she asked him for a kiss from his ruby lips. He told her that one fond caress from her fair self would give him unwonted happiness, but told her to wait till there was no crowd around. So she contented herself with taking his arm in most stately fashion; and with mincing step, haughty mein, and a happy gleam in her bleared eye, she promenaded down Somerset street and Park avenue, to the police station.

When she found that she was a prisoner, instead of a guest, of the officer, she ceased her smiling reiteration of the words "I am a leddy from London, and am proud to take your arm," and fought like a Trojan.

After a desperate tussle the policeman succeeded in getting the woman inside the station, where, locked in a cell, she screamed and cursed in tremendous fury, and bewailed the sorry fact that she couldn't pull out the hair and scratch out the eyes of "the blaggard blue-coat."

When bereft of her flask of whisky—her last solace—she raved the louder, and transformed herself into a veritable wild-cat.

Finally, from sheer exhaustion, she sank to sleep on the hard cot of her cell, murmuring drowsily, "I'm a leddy from London. Wake me up in time for church. It's Soonday to-morrow."

A Popular Hostelry.

The commodious public-house known as the Somerset Hotel; under the management of its present proprietor, Richard A. Boyce, retains its popularity as a resort for transient and permanent guests. It has lately been renovated and newly furnished; especial attention is devoted to the dining room, which is large and airy, and where is provided an excellent table. Every attention is paid to the wants and conveniences of its patrons, at reasonable rates. With spacious barns and sheds, business men or other parties having horses and carriages to be taken care of, will find Mr. Boyce ready and willing to accommodate them at all times. The Somerset has an interesting advertisement in another column.

"Happy is the man who has his quiver full of them"—of bottles of Salvation Oil, the greatest cure on earth for pain. Price only 25 cents.

Mothers should never fail to keep Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup convenient in order to relieve their little ones of cough speedily and surely. 25 cents.

REJOICING OVER BLESSINGS.

Special Praise and Thanksgiving Services at Trinity Church.

The people of the Trinity Reformed church have for weeks been desirous of appropriately commemorating the recent bountiful bestowal of spiritual blessings on the various religious congregations of Plainfield, and particularly on the congregation of their own church; and this laudable desire found consummation yesterday in special services of praise and thanksgiving to God.

At the morning service the pastor, the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, preached an able discourse on Christian reward, from the text, "They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars for ever and ever"—Daniel XII: 3.

In the evening the pastor drew an earnest lesson, in most eloquent language, from the story of the woman of Samaria at Jacob's well. His text was: "The woman then left her water-pot, and went her way into the city"—St. John IV: 28.

At each service the congregation was large, but especially so in the evening. The sermons of the pastor were full of great power.

The music during the day was rendered by a special chorus choir, composed of Mrs. J. S. Cutter, Mrs. J. C. VanDyke, Miss Eva Bonnell and Miss Etta Krymer, soprano; Miss Fannie Mattison, Miss Lizzie Dunn and Miss Ella Dunn, alto; T. E. Hazell and H. J. Martin, tenor; F. S. Cutter and A. J. Moore, basso.

T. E. Hazell, chairman of the Music Committee, was given high praise for his organization and training of this choir. They sang so well that a general desire was expressed that they might become a permanent feature of the church services.

The following was the musical programme:

MORNING.

Organ—Prelude in "G".....Volckmar
Anthem—TeDeum in "F".....Tours
Anthem—Rejoice Greatly, Oh Daughter of Zion .....Rev. Woodward
Anthem—Benedic Anima Mea.....G. W. Gould
Organ—Priests March from Athalia.....
.....Mendelssohn

EVENING.

Organ—Adagio in "E".....Johnson
Anthem—Jubilate in "C".....Williams
Anthem—Bonum Est.....Potter
Organ—Postlude in "C".....Strang

The efficient organist was A. L. Titsworth.

A substantial thank offering was made at each service.

He, for One, Turned Nobody Away.

J. W. A. Bauersachs, who is frequently the door attendant at Reform Hall, wishes THE PRESS to inform the public that he is not the man who was accused by a correspondent Saturday of roughly ejecting a thirster after salvation from a recent meeting of the Salvation Army at the hall.

An Old Red Stocking for Plainfield.

(From The Summit Record.)

Charles A. Davis, of Bloomfield, who will be remembered by lovers of base-ball as the first-baseman of the old Red Stocking Club, has signed a contract to play this Summer with the Crescents of Plainfield, one of the best clubs in the State.

Police and Burglars Fight.

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 9.—A desperate fight occurred on Price Hill between a couple of policemen and two burglars named George Duncan and L. R. Anderson. The officers went to a house on the Mount Hope road to arrest the men, when the latter opened fire which was returned by the police. Anderson was shot but not seriously wounded. After a furious hand to hand struggle the burglars were secured and locked up.

The Trouble in Chili.

BUENOS AYRES, Feb. 9.—Advices received from Valparaiso say the jails are crowded. Many newspaper men have been arrested. Soldiers are deserting with their arms. The government proposed a loan, but the banks did not favor it. There is great emigration from Valparaiso. The Esmeralda bombarded Tulcahuano, but did not take the town.

Condemned the Cardinal's Views.

PARIS, Feb. 9.—In a Royalist meeting at Nismes, the Count Haussonville condemned Cardinal Lavigerie's doctrine of adhesion to the republic, and said, while he recognized the Cardinal's authority in religious matters he did not recognize it in politics. The Count was applauded.

Healy Will Fight.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The Irish position does not look so hopeful at this moment. Mr. Healy has determined to fight Mr. Parnell, and make another split if the McCarthyites consent to make a compromise with Parnell.

Dropped Dead at the Depot.

HACKETTSTOWN, N. J., Feb. 9.—Isaac S. Dill, treasurer of the Farmers' Insurance Company, and one of the wealthiest and best known citizens of Hackettstown, dropped dead on the depot platform of Manunkachunk. He was about 60 years of age.

CHARGED WITH FORGERY.

A Minister Who Was About to be Married in Trouble.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 9.—The Rev. Peter Cooper, who for many years has preached to the members of the Evangelical Church at Wapwallopen, a small mining town, 18 miles south of here, is in trouble.

He was always looked upon as a model man. About six months ago, he told some of the leading members of his congregation that he thought of marrying. The deacons thought it was one of the best things the minister could do. Last Sunday the engagement of the minister and a highly esteemed young lady of Wilkesbarre was announced. To-day was the day appointed for the wedding. All the arrangements were completed. Two ministers were engaged to tie the knot.

Saturday afternoon, just as the minister was stepping from a Lehigh Valley Railroad train, Policeman McGroarty tapped him on the shoulder and said: "You are my prisoner." The charge was forging two notes for $500. The prisoner dropped his head and said: "A great injustice has been done me. Everything would have been made right in time. I am not guilty, but my future life is a desolate one. I have been robbed of my love." It is understood the marriage engagement has been broken.

$10,000 for Rose Ann's Affections.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 9.—Rose Ann Henderson, aged 60, has sued Alexander Johnston, aged 70, for $10,000 for breach of promise to marry. Johnston, she claims, has transferred his affections to a lady of 50 summers.

WHEN WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

DR. LEWIS BOLDLY PROCLAIMS 'TWAS NOT ON GOOD FRIDAY.

Startling Things Said of Denominational Beliefs, in His Story of "Why I Am a Seventh-Day Baptist"—Able Argument, Convincingly Presented, that Baptism is Immersion, and that Modern Saturday is Sabbath.

The Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, editor of The Outlook, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church of Plainfield, and one of the most prominent men of his denomination in the world, once told a PRESS reporter that he could not be a Baptist without being a Seventh-Day Baptist, and added that if he were to abandon the Seventh-Day feature of his belief he must abandon the Baptist religion altogether. The two faiths—Baptist and Seventh-Day—he held to be inseparable; there was no logical disunion of them. The same argument that settled in one's own mind a steadfastness for Baptist principles, when carried to the end of the whole matter made one a devout Seventh-Day believer; to halt at the end of the Baptist inquiry and the beginning of the Seventh-Day investigation was highly inconsistent.

As Dr. Lewis is a careful and omnivorous reader, and a most thorough student of ancient and modern literature, and old-world relics, tending to throw light on Biblical and Sabbatic problems, his views on Baptist, Seventh-Day, and kindred topics, are especially interesting and valuable; and THE PRESS takes pleasure in republishing for the benefit of local readers the following extracts from a comprehensive article contributed by him to The Press of New York on the subject "Why I Am a Seventh-Day Baptist":

Dr. MacArthur has given the readers of The Press reasons for being a Baptist. Those are mine in common with all Baptists. They were presented with such ability that I do not need to repeat them. One reason, drawn from the history of baptism before the time of Christ, ought to be added. It is this:

Baptismal regeneration is of pagan origin. Water worship was prominent in ancient paganism. It included sacred streams, fountains, water from the clouds, dew, and water made sacred by incantations, spells, exorcism, and added ingredients. Holy water now used in the Roman Catholic churches is a reproduction of that used by pagans. It was believed that sacred water was a safeguard against misfortune and evil, that it produced spiritual purity, and hence insured salvation from sin. It was kept in fonts in the vestibules of pagan temples, and the worshipers were sprinkled with it before entering the more sacred portions of the temple, or undertaking the more sacred duties of worship.

"HOLY" WATER AND SUN WORSHIP IN PAGAN TIMES.

* * * Under the pagan cult water was applied by immersion, by sprinkling, by pouring. Inspiration was sought by drinking it, by sitting over it, etc. These ceremonies were associated with sun worship in several ways, as baptizing at sunrise, and extinguishing a lighted torch in the water when it was being made "holy."

A great truth lay under this mass of pagan rubbish. When Christ came he revealed that truth by His example and in His teachings. Contrasted with pagan baptism, Christian baptism is the outward sign of an inward spiritual cleansing which has already taken place. The form adopted by Christ is the necessary language of the idea; namely, death to sin and resurrection unto righteousness, so that Paul's words to the Romans; "Therefore we are buried with Him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life," are a definition of baptism, both as to its form and to its fundamental meaning.

There were various "forms of baptism" under the pagan system. These various forms were reintroduced, as Christianity was corrupted by paganism, after the middle of the second century, A. D. But the New Testament knows no "forms of baptism." In it

IMMERSION IS BAPTISM.

The act and the thought are identical. The form is the language of the thought. I must be a Baptist because Christ's example and words are authoritative, against all ex post facto "inferences" and efforts to make an exegesis of the New Testament by putting into the text what it does not contain. As a loyal Christian I must abide by the definition of baptism which He gave, especially since the history of Romanized Christianity in the third and subsequent centuries shows the steps by which the pagan doctrine and pagan forms which Christ rejected became a part of what is called "Christian history."

THE BIBLE THE ONLY TRUE GUIDE.

Dr. MacArthur strikes the keynote when he says: "If I take the Bible only as my guide, I must be a Baptist; if I discard it and take the tradition of men I could not consistently stop until I reached Rome. But I am not likely to start on that downward grade. If I were not a Baptist, logically I should have to be a Roman Catholic." That is well said; and because it is true, the Bible, logic and consistency compel me to be a Seventh-Day, i. e., a Sabbath-keeping Baptist. For much more can be said concerning the expulsion of the Sabbath, and the introduction of Sunday, through paganism and unscriptural influences, than can be said concerning the return to the pagan conception of baptism.

CHRIST'S ATTITUDE TOWARD THE SABBATH.

Christ honored and fulfilled each law of the decalogue. He declared that His mission was not to destroy, but to fulfill them. He rejected the false conceptions, the burdensome and unmeaning ceremonies and interpretations which Judaism had heaped upon the Sabbath. His examples and teachings Christianized the Sabbath, as they did all the Ten Commandments. He clarified and strengthened every fundamental truth. He enlarged the conception of right living, and enobled the motives to obedience. But he never hinted at the abrogation of any fundamental law of God's government. * * * There was a Jewish conception of the Sabbath. Christ gave the Christian conception of it. He did not abrogate or change it. As a loyal follower of Christ I must treat the Sabbath as He has shown me, by example and precept. When it ceases to be true that Christ kept the Sabbath and taught His followers thus to do, I can cease to keep it, not until then.

MUST BE A CATHOLIC IF NOT A SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST.

I am a Seventh-Day Baptist because I accept the Bible as the supreme and only rule of faith and practice in matters of religion. Christ rejected the "inferences" and "traditions" which Judaism had added to the plain commandments of the Old Testament. He condemned those who made "the law of God of none effect" through traditions. The same authority compels me to reject the inferences and traditions which have come to us through the perversion of Christianity by paganism. These are easily found by testing existing creeds and practices, by the Revealed Word. There is no middle ground at this point. I must accept "tradition" and "Church authority" and be a Roman Catholic, or remain a Seventh-Day Baptist.

THE SABBATH IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.

I cannot take the space to collate the references to the Sabbath and its observances in the New Testament. The following summary will serve as a guide to any who wish to pursue the case in detail:

1. During the life of Christ the Sabbath was always observed by Him and His followers. He corrected the errors and false notions which were held concerning it, but gave no hint that it was to be abrogated.

2. The book of Acts gives a connected history of the recognition and observance of the Sabbath by the Apostles while they were organizing the churches spoken of in the New Testament. These references extend over a period of eight or nine years, the last of them being at least twenty years after the resurrection of Christ.

3. In all the history of the doings and teachings of the Apostles there is not the remotest reference to the abrogation of the Sabbath.

HAD THERE BEEN ANY CHANGE MADE

or beginning to be made, or any authority for the abrogation of the Sabbath law, the Apostles must have known it. To claim that there was is therefore to charge them with studiously concealing the truth; and, also, with recognizing and calling a day the Sabbath which was not the Sabbath.

4. The latest books of the New Testament, including the Gospel of John, were written about the year 95. In none of these is there any trace of the change of the Sabbath. The Sabbath is mentioned in the New Testament sixty times, and always in its appropriate character. But some will say, "Christ and His Apostles did all this as Jews simply." If this be true, then Christ lived and taught simply of the World. More than this, New Testament history repeatedly states that the Greeks were taught on the Sabbath, the same as the Jews, and in those churches where the Greek element predominated there is no trace of any different teaching or custom on this point. The popular outcry against the Sabbath as "Jewish" savors more of prejudice and ignorance than of consistency and charity. Christ was, as regards nationality, a Jew. So were all the writers of the Old and New Testaments. God has given the World no word of inspiration in the Bible from Gentile pen or Gentile lips. Is the Bible, therefore, "Jewish?" The Sabbath, if possible, is less Jewish than the Bible. It had its beginning long before a Jew was born.

It is God's day, marked by His example and sanctified by His blessing for the race of man; beginning when the race began and can end only when the race shall cease to exist. It tells of pitiable weakness and irreverence to thrust out and stigmatize any part of God's truth as "Jewish," when all of God's promises and all Bible truth have come to us through the Hebrew nation.

SUNDAY IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.

If Sunday was substituted for the Sabbath, by Christ or by His Apostles, the fact must appear in the New Testament. There is no other source of information touching the case. Every reader of that book has all the original facts before him. The popular traditions have no foundation in those facts. These statements can be easily tested by each reader of The Press. That the Sabbath has been thrust out by the majority of the people of the Western world is true, but it is not true that it was done by Christ and His Apostles.

There is no instance of the acceptance of unfounded tradition and illogical efforts at argument more prominent than the association of the observance of Sunday and the change of the Sabbath with the resurrection of Christ. It is entirely unscriptural. The Scriptures never associate Christ's resurrection with the observance of any day, or with the abrogation of the Sabbath.

WHEN WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

A still more startling fact to those who have never questioned the popular tradition is that there is no statement in the Bible that Christ rose on the first day of the week. In the addition to Mark's Gospel, generally admitted to be spurious (Mark XVI: 9-20), an effort is made by punctuating the text to support the popular tradition. But the only fact stated in the genuine Gospels is that, when the sepulchre was visited, it was found empty. In Matthew (XXVIII:1) there is clear evidence that the first visit made to the sepulchre of Christ was made "late on the Sabbath" (which closed at sunset on Saturday), at which time Christ was already risen and gone. The highest authority of our time on New Testament exegesis ("Thayer's Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament," page 471) supports this conclusion. The Revised Version does the same.

"GOOD FRIDAY" A TRADITION.

This indicates two visits to the sepulchre, one "late on the Sabbath" and one early on Sunday morning; but Christ had risen and gone before any one saw the tomb. The popular tradition that the crucifixion was on Friday and the resurrection on Sunday morning grew up during and after the second century, and, although this contradicts Christ's words concerning the time: He should lie in the grave (see Matthew XII: 40) and hence makes Him an impostor, the tradition has been accepted with uncritical credulity by the masses. The crucifixion was on Wednesday, preceding the Passover Sabbath, and not on Friday before the weekly Sabbath.

CHRIST'S EXAMPLE.

The popular tradition assumes that Christ taught His followers to observe Sunday after His resurrection. No one denies that He taught them to observe the Sabbath up to the time of His death. There are two accounts of Christ's appearing and teaching His disciples on the day upon which His resurrection became known to them. * * * It is claimed that this was a meeting of the disciples to commemorate, sabbatically, the resurrection. Observe, first that no such thing is either said or implied in the text. On the contrary, it is distinctly stated that they were secreted, with fastened doors, "for fear of the Jews." But let us look more fully into the doings of that day.

* * * They did not believe in his resurrection until late in the evening. They could not have been together to celebrate an event in which they did not believe. It was to cure this unbelief, to prove his resurrection and not to celebrate it, that Christ came.

NO MENTION OF A SABBATICAL CHANGE.

Had this been a meeting held for the purpose of insituting so radical a change in a practice so widely affecting Christian life, and based upon a fact not until then believed, it is impossible to suppose that no mention would be made of the fact by the risen Saviour who alone had power to make a change. His silence disproves the claim. It is an important fact also, that the best commentators, like Alford, Meyer, Schaff, Lange and Elliott, make no effort to draw from this passage any support for Sunday observance. * * *

EXAMPLE OF APOSTLES CONCERNING SUNDAY.

The history of the doings and teachings of the Apostles is equally devoid of any proof in favor of the popular theory. The Book of Acts covers at least thirty years after the resurrection of Christ, the period during which it is claimed that the change was going on under the direction of the Apostles and the Holy Spirit. Two stubborn facts oppose this claim.

The resurrection of Christ as the proof of his Messiahship is a prominent theme in the sermons which the Apostles preached during this period. This was especially dwelt upon in the sermon of Peter at Pentecost.

Such preaching could not avoid the discussion of the change of the Sabbath, based upon the resurrection, if the change had been then going on. * * *

SUNDAY IN THE EPISTLES.

Turning to the Epistles we find the same almost absolute silence concerning the first day of the week. In all the Epistles there is but one reference to it, and this does not refer to it as the Sabbath, or as commemorative of the resurrection, or as in any way holy or sacred. Had the change been going on, had the first day been pressed upon the attention of the converts, and demands made for its observance, much instruction would have been requisite to bring them to obedience. It is against all logic and all experience to think that such a change could have been made during such times, and nothing be said concerning it. * * *

PAGANISM IN THE CHURCH.

Modern investigations concerning the first two centuries of the Christian era and the centuries which preceded the birth of Christ are developing many important facts, until lately unknown, which demand a rewriting of the post-Apostolic history of Christianity. Greek thought, Greek ethics, Greek philosophy and Greek customs modified Christianity rapidly and fundamentally. Asiatic and Egyptian paganism combined their influence in the tide, which, flowing through Greece and Rome, brought a powerful rush of paganism into the Church. The corruption concerning the Sabbath began through the influence of men like Justin Martyr, who makes the first mention of Sunday observance about the middle of the second century. He was a partially Christianized pagan philosopher who accepted Christianity as an excellent system, but insisted on mingling with it much of the paganism in which he had been educated.

THE FUNDAMENTAL ERROR

touching the Bible and the Sabbath came from ancient Gnosticism, which taught that the Creator of the world, the author of the Old Testament, was an inferior deity, whose work was necessarily imperfect and evil, and hence that the laws of the Old Testament were binding on none but Jews. Justin teaches no Sabbathism in the fullest sense. He says nothing about the sacredness of Sunday, and only describes a morning service on that day without giving any evidence that work was suspended. The prevailing teaching among the leaders of thought in the west, after the middle of the second century, was no lawism and no Sabbathism. On such a platform the Sabbath was gradually driven out, and Sunday, Wednesday, Friday and scores of other pagan festivals baptized with new names came in. * * *

THE PRESENT SUNDAY A COMPROMISE.

The man who has been falsely lauded as the "First Christian Emperor," Constantine the Great, was a notorious murderer (he made the first civil law concerning Sunday in 321 A. D.), who did not submit to baptism until he lay on his death bed, in 337. The denominational ancestors of the Seventh-Day Baptists refused to yield to these pagan corruptions, and Christianity has never been without those who have been unyielding on these points.

English speaking Seventh-Day Baptists bore a prominent part in the discussion of the Sabbath question in England during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. The Puritan theory of the change of the Sabbath by transfer of the Fourth Commandment was a compromise between the truth as taught by Seventh-Day Baptists and the position of the Roman Catholics. Puritanism stopped half way, and as a consequence Sunday is fast reverting to its original holidayism. The pagan residuum is always coming to the surface. Americans call it the "Continental Sabbath." Its real name is the "Pagan Sunday." * * *

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS THE EARLIEST CHRISTIANS.

Protestantism has begun the work of eliminating paganism from Christianity. Much remains to be done. No department contains a greater amount of residuum than the "Sabbath question." Its purification is of supreme moment to the future of Protestantism. Seventh-Day Baptists stand, as they have stood for more than two hundred and fifty years, for such a clarification, according to the word of Jehovah. Historically, Seventh-Day Baptists are not seceders from Roman Catholicism. In every century since the days of Christ there have been Sabbath-keeping Baptists, and the present Seventh-Day Baptists are their lineal descendants. We represent the earliest Christianity. "John," who preached repentance in the wilderness of Judea, was a representative Seventh-Day Baptist. We keep company with him and with Christ, whom he baptized in Jordan.

WOMEN IN VARIOUS PLACES.

IT is said to be a curious fact that all of the girls in Wellesley College who lead their classes are blondes.

THE gamblers of Peru, Ind., have been warned to leave town by a committee of seventy-five women.

THE Sultan of Turkey has conferred upon Mrs. Whitelaw Reid the order of the Shefkat, the highest Turkish decoration that can be given to a woman.

A Mrs. FLETCHER, who died lately in England, was a direct descendant of Joan Hart, Shakespeare's sister, and the owner of the poet's jug and stick. She was a prosperous gun-maker.

A YOUNG lady living near Moosehead lake took to a Bangor (Me.) merchant recently thirty mink skins to have them made into a cape. She said she had trapped every one of them herself.

OLIVE THORNE MILLER has within the past four months posted from her home in Brooklyn no less than twenty thousand printed slips, asking the women of New York not to wear birds on their plumage.

THE Empress Harako of Japan is an enlightened and scholarly woman, who has done much to further the social revolution of the last twenty-five years. Her best friend and ally is the Countess Oyama, who, as Stamatz Tamagowa, was a graduate of Vassar College, and no doubt brought back from the West many a wise notion of domestic life.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

CAMPANINI has the spirits of a boy since his voice has been restored to him by a surgical operation.

FLUTES found in the pyramids of Egypt, played three thousand years after burial, show that the Egyptians had our scale.

A NEW postilion of Longjumeau has been found in a Hungarian coachman. He has a baritone voice, as yet entirely untrained, said to be really great.

EMMA ABBOTT was fond of traveling, and greatly enjoyed a journey by rail, but she disliked riding in carriages. Up to the time of her arrival in Salt Lake City she had met with twelve carriage accidents, and she had a superstition that the thirteenth would prove fatal.

GEORGE WILLIAM WARREN, the well-known organist and composer, says that the writing of church music is largely a labor of love. He began composing over forty years ago, and has published over one hundred works, but the royalties he receives from them form a comparatively small part of his income.

GREAT difficulty is being experienced in the choice of a successor to Rubinstein, whose resignation of the directorship of the St. Petersburg Conservatory takes effect in June next. Several eminent musicians, including Tschaikowski and Auer, have declined, owing to the difficulty Rubinstein found in dealing with the authorities.

WITH BRUSH AND CHISEL.

AN exhibition of Hungarian works of art will be held in Paris in 1892.

SIR FREDERICK LEIGHTON has finished a marble replica of his bronze known as "The Python Slayer." The new statue is to be sent to Mr. Carl Jacobsen, of Copenhagen.

MISS CAMILLA URSO HARRIS, the oldest daughter of Joel Chandler Harris, is about to go to Italy to study art. She is twenty years old and a girl of remarkable beauty and talent.

A LIFE-SIZE statue of the late Emperor Frederick will be unveiled soon in Homburg, the celebrated German resort. The sculptor is Herr Upyness, a pupil of Prof. Reinhold Begas.

THE Pope is having a beautiful piece of mosaic made in the factory of the Vatican for Queen Christine of Spain. The picture represents the Madonna with her child, and is a copy of a Spanish painting.

ALFRED D. ROTHSCHILD has bought from Lord Sackville the well-known portrait of Eliza Ann Linley (Mrs. Sheridan), by Gainsborough. The price is twelve thousand guineas, or at the rate of one hundred and five dollars per square inch.

THE unsold paintings found in Jules Dupre's studio after his death have realized at auction two hundred and nine thousand seven hundred and sixty francs (forty-one thousand dollars). The duc d'Aumale bought for twenty thousand francs his last work, "Returning from Field Labor in an Autumn Sunset." He also obtained for forty thousand francs Corot's painting of "Un Concert," which was sold by the painter to Dupre for seven thousand francs.

WITH TEACHER AND SCHOLAR.

TEACHER (finding out who had hit him with a paper ball)—"You thought that very funny, didn't you?" Alfred—"I would have, if I hadn't been caught."

TEACHER—"Thomas, you may point out to the class a spot upon your map as yet unexplored and unexplained, and of which the world at large as yet is in utter ignorance." Pupil—"Yes, sir. This here ink spot."

WHEN the teacher asked what was the feminine of tailor, a small boy on a front seat in a public school promptly exclaimed "Dress-maker," and was greatly delighted that he was able to get in his answer first.

TEACHER (in grammar school)—"Your lesson to-day is on nouns. Nouns are names of things." Small boy—"Is ghost a noun?" Teacher—"Yes." Small boy—"How can it be? There isn't any such a thing as a ghost."

TEACHER—"Freddy Fangle, you may give the German name of the River Danube." Freddy—"Dunno." Teacher—"Donau! That is right. I am glad you have studied your lesson so well." Freddy is surprised, but keeps still.

"TOMMY," said his mother, "do you think you'll get a prize at school for being good?" "No, ma," said Tommy. "Why not, sir?" asked his father, sternly, laying down his paper. "Because they don't give any," answered Tommy, meekly.

MR. FIGG—"I see all the wood has been sawed and split. Have you been feeding another tramp?" Mrs. Figg—"No. Tommy did it after he came home from school." Mr. Figg—"Oh, did he? I guess I'd better see his teacher to-morrow and find out what he has been up to."

LAW AND LAWYERS.

A ST. LOUIS justice has decided that a young woman is bound to return the gifts of a rejected lover.

AN English court has decided that the chime of bells in the village of Deptford must not be sounded because the noise is offensive to the majority of the property-owners in the vicinity.

A VERY explicit Connecticut statute provides that no man shall kiss a woman against her will, and behind it is a still more rigid old blue law that says a man shan't kiss his wife on the Sabbath.

NEAR Camilla, Ga., there is a justice of the peace who uses the oath to witnesses as follows: "The evidence you shall give in this case shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, and pay all costs, so help you God."

AN Ontario sheriff dropped dead while on the point of hanging a man. The execution proceeded, and now the novel law point is raised whether it was legal or not, or whether the deputy who pulled the fatal rope is technically guilty of murder.

IN the mayor's court at Anthony, Fla., a few days ago a lad for violation of an ordinance was fined two dollars. The court granted the boy's mother the privilege of paying the fine or whipping the lad in open court. She accepted the latter, and the mayor had to check her to prevent an unmerciful whipping.

CURES FOR COLDS.

AMMONIA or menthol can be inhaled for a cold.

A DOSE of quinine will oftentimes break up a cold in the beginning.

A FEW drops of camphor on sugar and dissolved in water is good for a cold.

GET into a perspiration by active exercise, and be very careful and not get chilled immediately afterward.

A SNUFF made of equal parts of powdered loaf sugar and powdered alum can be used for a cold in the head.

TAKING a steam bath and wrapping in a blanket to induce a fine perspiration will oftentimes break up an incipient cold.

SPONGE the body with warm water to which salt has been added, and snuff hot salted water up the nostrils every three hours.

DRINK plenty of flaxseed tea in which are steeped liquorice root and raisins, and lemon slices added to the whole. This is good in slight bronchial affections.

GARGLING the throat with cold water in which mustard has been dissolved in the proportion of a teaspoonful of mustard to a tumbler of water is excellent for a cold.

FOR GIRLS AND BOYS.

HOW DOES HE COME AND GO?

Oh! now does the Sand-man come,
And how does the Sand-man go?
Does he drop from the sky like a cloud at night,
Does he walk through the streets in broad daylight
To visit the high and the low?

Oh! what does the Sand-man do,
And why is the Sand-man here?
Does he carry a sack on his little round back,
While he scatters the sand with a lavish hand
To tell us that sleepy-time's here?

Oh! my dear children, nobody knows
How the Sand-man comes and the Sand-man goes;
For though we may wish very much for the sight,
When the Sand-man comes we shut our eyes tight.

OUR PET PIG.

Not the One That Went to Market, But One Quite as Interesting.

It is not the little pig who only went to market, and let another little pig stay at home, and still another eat all the roast beef. You have heard all about those five pigs ever since your pink toes were first counted, as you count baby's now. The one real little pig this true story is about was smart enough to do all five things herself. And this is how it happened.

We four, and no more, went to ride one day. On the way home, who do you think had come into the buggy, to make five for Fanny to draw? It was this little pig, then hardly larger than your pussy. She had two black spots on her round, white body, but you would not have seen them if you had been riding with her. How she did squeal when the man tried to tie her kicking little legs! So she was first wrapped in an old shawl, that the cords might not hurt her. Dressed in this way, and riding in a buggy, she looked so much like the picture in your book that we all said: "This little pig went to market."

Though her new home was as nice as a pen could be, the little pig did not like it at all. Where were her mother and her brothers and sisters? "I will go and see," said Piggy. She made a very small hole a little larger, and crept through. Away over the hill behind the haystack she trotted, with her little white tail in the air. She was soon out of sight in the tall prairie grass, but I heard her say quite plainly:

"Kwee, kwee, kwee, kwee! I think I can find my way home."

But she could not. I could have told her so myself, if she would have stopped to listen. For Piggy's first buggy ride had been three miles long. However, experience is the surest teacher, even for little pigs.

When it had grown quite dark between haystacks I heard a tired little voice say, sadly:

"Kwee, kwee, kwee! I never can find my way home."

For a long time after this Piggy seemed willing to make the best of it. She was firmly set in her own mind that a well-behaved pig, who never did any harm, should be allowed the freedom of the barn-yard. At last she brought us around to her way of thinking, which saved her the trouble planning out a new way of escape, as she had done every time she was fastened in.

So, when Fanny went to the lake for water, Piggy always trotted behind like a little colt. At night she soon found out a better plan than cuddling alone in the straw. The way I came to know where she slept was this:

A pale little boy, out of breath with running, burst into the dining-room just after I had lighted the lamp. There was a little tremble in his voice when he said:

"Oh! there is something alive in Fanny's manger. I was putting in more hay for her to eat to-night, and I felt it."

He was sure it could not be the pig. But when I asked him if he really thought it was a bear or a wolf or a fox, he grew braver with each laughing shake of the head, and concluded to look again. When he found that it was the pig, after all, she was given another hay blanket for her funny bed under Fanny's nose.

As for all the other pigs in the world, our one all alone seemed to think that they had gone out of it. She certainly could not find them, so "this little pig stayed at home."

This was before she took her second journey. One day a buggy drawn by a black horse passed within Piggy's sight. Never stopping to notice that this horse did not have Fanny's brown nose, Piggy thought: "There goes Fanny. I shall go, too." No dog in the land ever trotted behind a team more faithfully than this funny pig. Two, four, six, eight, ten miles she had followed at the heels of the horse she had mistaken for her friend.

A week later we received a postal card from another town. It said:

DEAR SIR—I am told that it is your pig which followed my buggy from F— last Tuesday. She is safe at my farm, where you can call for her when it is convenient.

There was nothing for it but to make the best of Piggy's blunder, and bring her home again. But, as strange horses looking somewhat like Fanny might pass along at any time, we were obliged to make poor Piggy a prisoner. She minded the loss of her freedom less because of Thanksgiving and Christmas times, when "this little pig had roast beef," or other dainties quite as good, every day. But the time came when she had none. She was even obliged to submit to having her ears of corn counted out for her, because the pile was growing very small.

The little boy who used to care for her had another home now, where there were little twin calves for him to feed. He used to say that little boys were good to keep milk from souring, but Piggy could not see any more of it come into her trough now he was gone. She was once more at liberty, Fanny's strong back having helped her out; but Fanny's next neighbor in the barn was Jersey, the cow. If Piggy ever got into her manger by mistake, she was treated quite rudely.

So, with one trouble and another, we began to feel sorry for the pig, and engaged board for her at a farm.

Once more Piggy trotted behind the buggy to a land of plenty, where we left her with other pigs for company. Perhaps it was because this farmer also kept Guinea fowls, which she heard always singing: "Go back, go back," that we heard her familiar grunt at our door the very next morning. Piggy had found her way home alone from two miles away, and now rests from travels. Though of roast beef "this little pig had none" after she came back to her home, we all felt that some honor belonged to her for her faithful attachment to us all.—Christian Register.

A LITTLE GRAY THIEF.

Where Bertie's Mamma Found Her Little Boy's Lost Composition.

"O mamma, I just don't know what to do! I've thought and thought till my head whirls, and I can't think of one single thing to say," exclaimed Bertie Nelson, as he rushed into his mother's presence one evening after school.

"Why, my son, what do you wish to say, that you are so excited about it?" asked Mrs. Nelson, as she dropped her work to listen to Bertie's complaint.

"Why, you see, mamma, the teacher said we must all write a—a—a composition for next Friday. I've got to write about mice—and now what can I say? There will be a pretty book given to the one who does the best."

"I think you mean a composition, Bertie, and I am sure that will be an easy subject for you. You can make a very interesting story by telling of the little gray thief that steals into mamma's cupboards, trunks and boxes nights, after every thing is still, and nibbles all that is good to eat, and gnaws holes in every thing. You can tell about the frosted birthday cake that was set away on the top pantry-shelf to dry not long ago, and the next morning was found all covered over with tiny tracks, with the pretty candies that spelled a little boy's name all nibbled and dragged out of place. You can tell of the sugary trail across the shelf that enabled us to trace the thief to his den. But the opening was too small to admit us; so we have put a shrewd detective, named Tabby, on his track, and hope soon to report his capture."

Inspired by his mother's words, Bertie produced a very creditable composition for an eight-year-old boy. Folding it carefully, he laid it away in a corner of the book-cupboard, where he often puts things for safe keeping. When Friday came, and he went to get his paper, it was gone. The whole family joined in the search, but it could not be found; and the disappointed little boy had to go to school without it, as there was not time to write another.

A month later, when Mrs. Nelson was cleaning house, she found a very pretty little mouse-nest in the bottom of an old barrel, made of tiny bits of paper and cotton closely packed together. The writing on the strips attracted her attention; and, after carefully matching several pieces, she discovered it to be Bertie's lost composition. There were six tiny mice cozily sleeping in the nest.

"I believe that old mouse stole my composition to build a house for her family just because I wrote about her naughty tricks," said Bertie, as he ran to catch Tabby. "I'll pay her for it now; I'll let Tabby eat up her whole family."—Laura C. Gibbons, in Our Little Men and Women.

PLAYING ESKIMO.

The Sad Fate That Befell the Boy, His Dog and an Odd House.

Ray had often seen the pictures of the homes of the Eskimos, and thought snow-houses must be very nice indeed, so nice that he decided to make one for himself.

"Not to live in all the time, mamma, but just to rest in when I'm tired of playing," he said.

He began with a small ball, and rolled it over and over through the damp snow until it was almost as high as his head.

And papa helped push it along, until he could stand on his tiptoes and not see over the top of it.

Then he began work in earnest with his bright new shovel, and before night the huge snowball was hollowed out and changed into the cunningest snow but you ever saw, with a United States flag stuck into the top of it.

"Course I want folks to know I'm a Yankee, if I am an Eskimo," explained Ray.

He did not like to leave his hut when night came, and traveled to the window many times before he went to bed, to see how it looked in the bright moonlight.

"What if it storms to-morrow, mamma. What'll I do if it storms?" he asked, anxiously.

"Do as real Eskimos do—make the best of it," smiled mamma.

But the sun rose brightly, and, before noon, the water was dripping from the eaves.

Ray begged a candle to keep in his house, and hunted up all of the broken dishes he could.

Then he harnessed dog Snyder into the handsled, and thought he was an Eskimo at last.

Suddenly there was a rumble, a crashing, a smothered scream and a fat yelp.

Mamma ran to the window, and beheld a scene of utter ruin. An avalanche of snow from the roof had buried the beautiful snow hut, Eskimo Ray and dog Snyder from view!

Snyder scratched his way out, and ran for the barn, barking loudly, and was frightened as a small dog could be.

Mamma took the bright new shovel from the snow bank near by, and began to dig for Eskimo Ray. Soon a very astonished and woebegone little face popped up. "Are you hurt, darling?" asked mamma, anxiously.

"No, I aint," he answered, and his lip trembled, "I aint, but—my feelings are!"

Then he crept into mamma's arms, and she comforted him as mammas alone can comfort eight-year-old boys.

"I pity the poor Eskimos, mamma," he said, as he stood by the window that evening. "But I don't want to be one any more."—Youth's Companion.

MEDICATED JOKES.

AN Ottawa, Kan., doctor has sent a bill to a widow for "doctoring your husband until he died."

"THERE goes Dr. Brown, the man that saved my life." "Did he have care of you then?" "No; but when I sent to him in my illness, he advised to send for another physician."

"BY the way, Wings," asked a newly-fledged chiropodist. "I am looking for a good place to set up my practice in. Can you suggest a good district?" "Why, anywhere in the corn belt would do wouldn't it?"

GUEST (who has tried them)—"Why on earth don't you cut down that old apple tree? It's so near the road the boys steal most of 'em, and they are hard, sour things anyway." Dr. Popular (with a quiet smile)—"They pay for them at two shillings a visit."

WORRIED Wife—"Oh, doctor, what has detained you? I sent for you at twelve o'clock; my husband is very low, indeed." Doctor (complacently)—"Yes, I received your call then, but as I had an engagement with another patient in this neighborhood at six o'clock I thought I'd make one job of it and kill two birds with one stone."

MRS. BRISKIE—"Johnny, did the doctor call while I was out?" Little Johnny (stopping his play)—"Yes. He felt my pulse and looked at my tongue, and shook his head, and said it was a very serious case, and he left this prescription and said he would call again before night." Mrs. Briskie—"Gracious me! It wasn't you I sent him to see. It was the baby."

MINERS ON STRIKE

Thirteen Thousand Men Quit Work in the Coke Region.

SERIOUS TROUBLE EXPECTED.

The Introduction of Pinkerton Guards Likely to Lead to Grave Trouble.

The Duration of the Conflict is Merely Conjecture—Operators and Workers Firm in Their Determination to Win. A Yard Boss and His Assistant Unmercifully Beaten by Hungarians.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 10.—The great coke strike has been commenced. No coal has been mined in any of the pits owned by the Frick, Schoonmaker or McClure coke companies since Saturday, and no one but the coke drawers are at work to-day.

Thirteen thousand men are on strike. There will be large additions to that number by Wednesday, and the duration of the conflict is merely conjecture. Operators and workers are equally firm in their determination, and both are alert to prevent a repetition of the depredations of previous strikes.

In the Dunbar district the men are nearly all at work, and some of them will remain at work if permitted to do so. The workers' scale demands an advance of wages of about 18 1-2 per cent., all coal to be weighed instead of measured, and eight hours to constitute a day's work.

The operators have demanded a reduction of 10 per cent. on all classes of labor. The current scale has expired. There are now no negotiations for a settlement pending.

During a drunken fight at Fort Hill Yard Boss Snyder and his assistant were beaten unmercifully by Hungarians. Snyder's assistant was probably fatally injured.

It is reported that W. A. Rayney will attempt to continue work at the plant of 1,500 ovens with the protection of Pinkerton men. Such a move is likely to lead to grave trouble.

MARDI GRAS FESTIVITIES.

His Majesty Rex Received in a Right Royal Way at New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 10.—The steamboat Oliver Bierne, having aboard members of the royal host and carnival court, backed out from the head of Canal street at 11 o'clock, and went down the river to meet His Majesty Rex. When the royal yacht was met, Rex and his retinue were transferred to the Beirne. In passing up the river on her return, a royal salute was fired from the vessels of the White Squadron, which were passed on the way. On landing at Canal street, a procession was formed, consisting of 15 companies of Louisiana troops and the following visiting companies:

Royal Veteran Zouaves, of Elizabeth, N. J.; His Majesty's Imperial Howitzers, Richmond, Va.; King's Own Light Infantry, Detroit, Mich.; Royal Fifth Regiment, Baltimore, Md.; Prince's Junior Hussars, Columbus, O.

Then came His Grace, Joseph A. Shakespeare, Duke of Crescent City, commanding the Royal Citadel; mounted escort of Cnevaliers of the House of Peers; King's Own Royal Guard, mounted; Royal Halberdiers, having charge of His Gracious Majesty, who was in a royal chariot drawn by 12 magnificent steeds. The King appeared in the costume of Phillip II. of Spain. His train, the Royal Court Guard, mounted; treasure servitors, marines from the royal yacht, His Majesty's Council, Dukes of the Realm in carriages, and the Household Guards followed.

When the procession reached the City Hall the mayor presented His Majesty with the keys of the city. At the conclusion of this ceremony the processson moved through the principal streets to the Grand Opera House, were a levee was tendered to all loyal subjects.

Miss Woodward Stops Hiccoughing.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 10.—Miss Alice Woodward, of Shelton, who hiccoughed herself to the point of death despite the efforts of physicians, is now out of danger. In consequence of the publicity given to the peculiar case, remedies have been coming in from all over the country. Many were tried and one has proved effective, and the girl has stopped hiccoughing. This remedy was suggested by Frank W. Mack, of the Associated Press, New York. The remedy is nitrate of amyl, a few drops to be inhaled from a handkerchief.

Table Glass Trust.

FINDLAY, O., Feb. 10.—Five table glass factories in Pittsburg, one in Wheeling, one in Fostoria and one in this city have joined in an application for a charter for a new trust company, which will be known as the United States Glass Company, with a capital of $1,000,000. It is said to be the beginning of the combine which will soon embrace all the table glassware factories in the country.

Mining Litigation Stopped.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 10.—A compromise has been consummated by which litigation between the Sutro Tunnel Company and a number of the most prominent Comstock mines has been settled. The basis of settlement is the payment of the arrears of royalties on the old basis, and from Nov. 1, 1890, 4 per cent on the gold value of the yield of the mines.

A Big Conference Postponed.

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 10.—The conference of Farmers' Alliances, trades unions, Knights of Labor assemblies and reform bodies generally, called for Feb. 11, has been postponed till April, so as to give the various organizations opportunity to elect delegates and instruct them.

PERISHED IN THE STORM.

A Number of Lives Lost in the Western Blizzard.

RAPID CITY, S. D., Feb. 10.—Grant Bay, a young ranchman, started out in the teeth of the blizzard to drive Meta Gray, a school teacher on "Box Elder Divide," from the school to her boarding place, 12 miles distant. They refused to heed the protests of friends.

Ranchers just in from that region report the finding of Bay and Miss Gray frozen in a standing posture and clinging to a wire fence a few miles north of the city.

Reports are circulated that 15 of the Indians bound from Pine Ridge to Fort Keogh perished on Pine Creek. The reports are not confirmed.

OMAHA, Feb. 10.—Specials from various parts of the State show that a number of lives were lost in Nebraska during the blizzard. The wife of Milton Cummings, a farmer near Rushville, who started from the town for her home, was found dead in her buggy within 40 rods of a neighbor's house.

Eddie Chedster and Steve St. Peters, 14-year-old Kearney boys, who had been out hunting, were found frozen to death in a cornfield.

M. L. Lisent, residing three miles north of Chadron, is supposed to be buried under the snow, and searching parties are looking for his body.

THE HAMILTON MYSTERY.

Commissioner Carvalho Will Try to Solve It by Disinterring the Body.

BUTTE CITY, Mon., Feb. 10.—Commissioner David N. Carvalho, who was appointed by Surrogate Ransom, of New York, to go to Montana and Idaho to take testimony as to the death of Robert Ray Hamilton, has arrived here.

Ben Howard, who has the document authorizing Cervalho to act, is expected in a day or two, when he will go to Sargent's ranch, near where the body supposed to be Hamilton's was found, and to Marymere, where it was buried. It is a journey of 160 miles, 100 on horseback and 60 by wagon.

A startling story has been told to Professor Cervalho by a guest of the McDermott Hotel here. It is that while the body found in Snake River was lying at Sargent's ranch two bullet wounds were found, showing that death was not caused by drowning, as alleged. Professor Cervalho does not place much faith in the story, but says he will disinter the body and have it photographed.

CONLEY KNOCKED OUT.

The Ithaca Giant Put to Sleep in the Second Round.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 10.—Billy Woods of Denver and Mike Conley, the Ithaca Giant, fought last night at the Audubon Athletic Association rooms for a purse of $1,000. Woods was seconded by Bob Fitzsimmons and Bob Carroll, while Prof. John Clark and Tom Casey looked after Conley.

In the first round, Conley landed his right on Woods' ribs, after which Woods smashed Conley on the jaw and rattled him; then caught him on the chin with his right and landed him in a heap, when Conley clinched to avoid punishment.

In the second round, Woods gave Conley a hard one on the nose, and followed it with a knockdown. As Conley arose, he received a settler on the jaw and was knocked out.

Burned to Death.

DANBURY, Conn., Feb. 10.—Miss Mary Coffey, a young woman prominent in social circles, was burned to death last night. She was lighting a lamp in her studio when a bottle of benzine near the lamp was fired and the woman's clothes were ablaze in an instant. In her terror she ran into the yard, where her screams attracted the attention of the neighbors, who rolled her in the snow, extinguishing the flames. She was burned about the legs and lower part of the body and inhaled enough of the blaze to cause her death a few hours later.

Bills Passed at Albany.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 10.—In the Assembly the following bills were passed: An act to vote by districts for town officers at Johnstown; in relation to the old Erie canal at the city of Rome; for a ferry at Conesus lake, the only one on the lake; to construct a bridge at the city of Cohoes; for appropriating $45,000 for State asylums for the indigent sane; Myers' automatic ballot machine for towns.

Railroad Yardmen Quit Work.

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 10.—All the yardmen of the Pittsburg & Western Railroad at Newcastle and the night yardmen of the same road in Pittsburg have quit work. The cause of the troubles is the non-payment of a large number of hands for two months' time. It is stated by the road officials that the force is being reorganized and that freight is moving at Pittsburg as usual.

The Mine Fire Nearly Under Control.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 10.—The fire in No. 4 slope of the Susquehanna Coal Company will be extinguished inside of 30 hours. The water is rapidly gaining on the flames, which are in the lowest part of No. 7 shaft.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

A Serious Blow to the Copyright Bill in the Senate.

WORK DONE IN BOTH HOUSES.

The Eight-Hour Measure Shelved by a Close Vote for This Session.

The Sundry Civil Appropriation Bill Passed by the House—Ex-Gov. Foster's Prospects Brighten for the Treasury Portfolio—The Surplus Creeping Up—The Silver Pool Committee Adjourn.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The International Copyright bill got a setback in the Senate. The amendment which the lithographers proposed and sent here was adopted by a vote of 27 to 24.

The lithographic amendment, as it is called, provides that the law shall apply to charts, engravings, musical compositions, lithographs and photographs copyrighted in the United States the same as to copyrighted books—that is, that the work shall be executed in this country.

The friends of the bill opposed this amendment because its adoption at this late day would send it to conference, and cause it again to run the gauntlet of another passage in the House.

But the lithographers were well organized. They had the opponents of the bill in the Senate as a nucleus to begin with, and in addition to these they enlisted the sympathies of such clever debaters as Frye, Hale, McPherson, Ingalls and Manderson, and in this way gradually developed sufficient strength to carry their point.

The bill as amended will probably pass the Senate this afternoon or to-night, although it may be still further amended before final action is taken upon it. If the friends of the original bill make no opposition to the measure in its amended form when it goes to conference it may yet become a law. But if they insist that the conferees shall restore it to its original form, the outlook for its passage is not at all favorable.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

The Senate Buries the Eight Hour Bill for This Session.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The House Copyright bill was taken up in the Senate and discussed at length.

The credentials of H. C. Hasbrouck as a Senator from North Dakota and of D. W. Voorhees as a Senator from Indiana, for the term beginning March 4 next were presented and filed.

The resolution was agreed to calling on the President for copies of correspondence in reference to the importation of certain products of the United States into Brazil.

The Senate refused to consider the vote by which the Eight Hour bill was recommitted. The bill is dead for this session.

In the House the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill was taken up in Committee of the Whole, and after some discussion it was passed.

A resolution was introduced by Mr. Dingley of Maine making it in order to offer as an amendment to an appropriation bill the substance of any bill that has passed the House and been before the Senate for six months and has failed to receive the action of that body. The adoption of this resolution would make it in order to attach the Elections bill to any appropriation bill.

NEW NOT THE MAN

Ex-Governor Foster's Chances for the Treasury Portfolio Improving.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The story published that the President cabled to Consul-General New at London to come home at once is untrue. The following cable message has been received in this city from London: 'United States Consul John C. New, replying to questions as to rumors which connect his name with the portfolio of the Treasury, to-day said: 'I have not received any message from President Harrison, and I know nothing about any proposition to offer me the Treasury portfolio.'"

It may also be stated that the candidacy of ex-Gov. Foster, of Ohio, for that office looks more promising now than ever before.

Expecting Gen. Palmer's Election.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—A special from Springfield, Ill., says that the Democrats expect to elect Gen. Palmer for United States Senator to-day or to-morrow, thinking to accomplish this result with the aid of the votes of Moore and Taubeneck. They believe the Republicans will fail to make any arrangements with Moore and draw him over to them, and Taubeneck is, they think, under pledge to vote for Palmer whenever Moore says the word.

The Surplus Creeping Up.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The surplus in the Treasury is gradually creeping up and is now $30,000,000. As this will be required to meet pension payments the latter part of this month and the first of next month, no bonds in addition to those being daily purchased, 4½ per cents. will be bought.

BEATEN TO DEATH.

A Father's Brutal Cruelty to His Seven-Year-Old Child.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Feb. 10.—Samuel Beekman, colored, was arrested here charged with beating to death his little girl Ruby, aged 7 years. Beekman's wife died two years ago, and the child was taken charge of by his sister, Mrs. Little, of Newark.

A year ago, Beekman married Jennie Wiley, a dissolute white woman, aged 23. He took the child, nine months ago, to his home in Union township, and since then treated her in a most cruel manner. She died on Friday and is still unburied.

County Physician Westcott made an investigation, and gave it as his opinion that the child had been murdered.

Chief Tenny has learned that Beekman and his wife used to beat the child with clubs and a leather belt. Its back and limbs are all cut and bruised from the blows.

The neighbors testified to seeing the brutal punishment done, and also that the child was nearly starved. They gave it food for awhile, but then its stepmother ordered it to bring the food home to her, and if the child did not it was subjected to a beating.

Learning this, they stopped giving it anything. The screams of the child last week, it is said, were pitiful to hear. Chief Tenny was at once notified.

FINISH FIGHT PROPOSED.

McCarthy Would Meet Dixon in a Room With Skin Gloves.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The great featherweight prize fight between Cal McCarthy, of Jersey City, and George Dixon, of Boston, is off so far as the Puritan Athletic Club is concerned, as it is simply impossible to secure a place in New Jersey to pull off the mill without interference.

But McCarthy is, personally, still perfectly willing to meet Dixon at any time and place.

Independent of the purse the Puritan Athletic Club was offering there is a private bet of $2,000 between Joe Early and Tom O'Rourke.

If Dixon is willing to go into a room with 10 men a side and fight for this $4,000, McCarthy will meet him anywhere and fight him for it. But if Dixon and his backers think the amount too small and imagine that McCarthy is afraid to fight, Jimmy Wakely will back him, it is said, for a fight for $4,500 to $5,000 a side, with skin gloves to a finish in a room in the presence of 10 men to a side.

Cal will even go to Boston, if necessary, and fight Dixon in his own house.

MISER AND HERMIT.

Death of an Aged Jerseyman Who Had Hoarded Nearly $40,000.

MAY'S LANDING, N. J., Feb. 10.—Thomas Thomas, a hermit, aged 70 years, residing at Carmanstown, about three miles from this place, died early in the morning, after several months' suffering, from a cancer. He was well known throughout the county, and lived the life of a miser since his wife's death, many years ago, doing his own housework.

The old hermit, it is estimated, was worth nearly $40,000 in money, and he owned several fine houses. He had been known to beg for food in this place, and on election he voted where he got the most money. During the past spring, a fierce fire raged in the woods near his residence and threatened to destroy all his property. Fearing this, he ran into the house and in a few moments returned, carrying a large pan of money, it is stated, all in 20-dollar gold pieces. Five children survive him. He owned considerable real estate in different parts of the county.

Sensational Church Trial.

MATAWAN, N. J., Feb. 10.—A sensational church trial commenced to-day at Keyport. Deacon John W. Tice of the Jacksonville Methodist Church is on trial on a number of charges of improper and indecent conduct. Friends of the accused say the charges are brought against Deacon Tice by members of the church through malice. Tice is over 70 years old, and is a member of the same church from which Rev. Robert Chew was deposed a short time ago for conduct unbecoming a Christian.

Will Draw on the Baron for $2,400,000.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The trustees of the Baron de Hirsch Fund signed the trust deed prepared by the Baron, and decided to draw on the Baron March 1 for $2,400,000 constituting the fund and invest it in this country, the interest to be used in the relief and education of destitute Jewish immigrants and their children. The money is not to be given outright to the beneficiaries, but loaned without interest, and with no security except notes of hand.

Glad that the Congress Has Arrived.

KEYPORT, N. J., Feb. 10.—The merchants of this place who are in the possession of thousands of dollars' worth of time checks, which were issued by the Lorillard Brick Works Company, are quite jubilant, as Assignee Stedler, of the works, is in town for the purpose, it is said, of meeting the merchants, and all those fearing payment of their checks he would take up and give notes for the same.

Trouble Over Baptizing a Vessel.

CHESTER, Pa., Feb. 10.—Another unsuccessful attempt was made to get the Mallory Line steamer Cohocho off the ways at Roach's ship yards. The vessel moved out eight feet more and then refused to budge. It was concluded to block the vessel up again and make a third attempt to baptize it on Saturday next. It is probable that she will have to be pulled off with the aid of tugs.

Statue to the Late Gen. Terry.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 10.—The G. A. R. posts of this city and Hartford will have a resolution introduced in the Legislature in a day or two calling for an appropriation for the erection of a statue to the late Gen. Terry at the capital.

CANADA'S CAMPAIGN

Goldwin Smith Thinks Sir John Will Win.

LIVELY BETTING ON THE RESULT

Government Supporters Predict a Majority of Fifty in the Next Parliament.

England Uneasy Over Brazil's Treaty With the United States—Baron Wissmann After the African Slave Traders. The Czar Sends Back the London Petition—English Notes to Moor.

TORONTO, Feb. 10.—The opinion that the Macdonald government will be re-elected is gaining ground. Even Goldwin Smith realizes that the Liberals' prospects are not hopeful just now. In a letter attacking Sir Charles Tupper for breach of public life in coming to take part in the election campaign, he says:

"The motion for dissolving Parliament this time was that the Conservatives saw such vice in public opinion in favor of reciprocity with the United States as they knew would sweep away the Protectionists within a year. The betting centrally is the best indication of public feeling.

"Both sides are greatly in favor of the return of the Macdonald government, supporters of which are betting on a government majority of 50 in the next Parliament. I heard one bet for a round sum of a government majority of 70."

A small-sized sensation was caused here by the publication of a rumor from the Ottawa correspondent of a local newspaper that he had it from high authority that within the next few days men prominent in political affairs would be arrested on the charge of treason.

Comments of the London Papers.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—The newspapers contain copious comments on the Canadian situation. The Chronicle says: "When Mr. Blaine examines Sir John Macdonald's proposal in the light of his Pan-American scheme and the McKinley act, we fear he will have nothing to say to it."

The Times says: "The American farmers are not anxious to invite competition with the already vast and almost boundless possibilities of Canadian agriculture in their home markets. If political absorption should follow commercial union, as we believe it would, the working of America's constitutional system would be subjected to a severe strain by the difficulty of dealing with the French-Canadian element and the high Roman Catholic claims."

WISSMANN NOT CRAZY.

He Put Several Natives to Death for Selling Slaves.

BERLIN, Feb. 10.—Late advices from Zanzibar show that there is no foundation for the report that Commander Wissmann's mind had become affected.

Baron Wissmann, on his return to the German east coast of Africa, found things in a deplorable condition, and most of what he had accomplished undone. The natives were insolent, and the Arabs were resuming the open traffic in slaves.

He ascertained that the English, while professedly friendly, were spreading false reports among the native tribes as to the power and the intentions of the Germans, and that a widespread impression prevailed that Germany was simply an appendage of Great Britain.

Wissmann took vigorous measures to bring things back to their former standard. He put several of the natives to death, who were captured in the act of selling slaves, and he rebuked the insolence of the native chiefs by compelling them to come before him, and again, in the most submissive manner, declare their allegiance to Germany. He is now engaged in making war upon some tribes that still defy the German authority.

The reports of his insanity he attributes to English officials, who are anxious to see him removed from the coast, in order that they may have some easier man to deal with.

The United States Has the Cash.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Sir James Fergusson, of the Foreign Office, replying to a question in Parliament relating to the American reciprocity treaty with Brazil, and as to whether Great Britain would have equal commercial advantages in Brazil with those bestowed by the treaty on the United States, said that Great Britain had no commercial treaty with Brazil, and could not, therefore, demand the same trading rights as those bestowed by the treaty on the United States.

Socialist Aveling Retires.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Aveling, the Socialist, having failed to make the deposit required by the English law on the part of a candidate for Parliament, has been compelled to retire from the contest at Northampton, his nomination being void. This assures a Liberal victory at Northampton.

The Czar's Cool Snub.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—The Guildhall memorial of citizens of London to the Czar, in favor of more lenient treatment of Russian Jews, was returned to Lord Salisbury from St. Petersburg, without any comment, through De Staal, the Russian ambassador.

Tories Summoned to Meet.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—A general meeting of the leaders of the Conservative party throughout Great Britain, to take place, early in March, has been summoned by Lord Salisbury. The question of the dissolution of Parliament will, it is believed, be then acted upon.

Durrett Has Almost Recovered.

DUBLIN, Feb. 10.—Michael Durrett has almost entirely recovered from his late illness, and will leave in a few days for London.

BURIED FIVE DAYS.

The Imprisoned Miners at Nanticoke Rescued by Brave Comrades.

NANTICOKE, Pa., Feb. 10.—John Riner, Wm. Savage and Michael Sheldank, the miners imprisoned in No. 3 Slope, grand tunnel, on last Wednesday by a deluge of water which broke upon them from an abandoned working, were found alive at 3 a. m. and at 7 o'clock they were carried from the mine to their homes.

They were found by the gang of rescuers at the top of a cross heading. Here they had waited in darkness and gloom, but not without hope, for rescue.

At 2 o'clock George Bendel managed to float upon a raft across the water which yet filled the bottom of the gangway. The imprisoned men heard him and faintly came the cry: "We are up here, all alive and waiting for you."

Bendel took up the joyous shout and sent it across the water in thrilling messages: "They are alive! alive! alive!"

They men were soon reached and later they were out in the sunlight with their comrades hugging them and kissing them like madmen, and welcoming them as the dead come to life again. There have been many touching scenes around the black mouths of the mines hereabouts, but seldom one that moved men's hearts more than did the wild demonstrations over these poor rescued miners.

Milk was given them as nourishment, and they were carried upon the shoulders of their rescuers to their homes. They are the heroes of the day and for a long time to come, until some other great disaster has overshadowed their adventure they will have to tell over and over again the story of those five awful days of darkness and despair.

The physician in attendance says the men must subsist on beef tea for a number of days, and they will be all right in a short time, except, possibly, Riner who is slightly poisoned in the feet from the sulphur water of the mine.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

General W. T. Sherman is seriously ill in New York.

The liabilities of George M. Rice, president of the Worcester, Mass., Steel Works aggregate $623,000.

The Mechanics' Co-operative Bank of Brooklyn, N. Y., has closed its doors and its projectors are missing.

Postmaster Browning of Camden, N. J., asked about 800 Mexican lottery letters addressed to Camden citizens.

T. S. Cuddock & Sons' shoe manufactory at Haverhill, Mass., was damaged by fire to the extent of $15,000.

In the case of Walter Potter, of Potter, Lovell & Co., of Boston, charged with embezzlement, Judge Hardy discharged Mr. Potter.

Edmund J. Ruling, of Saratoga, N. Y., is dead, aged 71. For years he was identified with nearly every newspaper that has been published in that city.

The discovery of petroleum near Lambertville, N. J., causes much excitement, and a company, which has sunk a well 1,900 feet, has found positive evidence of oil.

The report that Stanley was going to give his valuable collection of presents to the Salvation Army to help the poor of London is denied by the explorer's manager.

The mill of the Tibbitt's Manufacturing Company at Locke's Mills, Me., was burned during the morning. Loss $30,000; partly insured. Fifty men are thrown out of employment but the company will rebuild at once.

Resolutions for a constitutional amendment abolishing the poll tax as a prerequisite for voting and providing for biennial elections of State officers and members of the Legislature were reported in the Massachusetts Senate.

Assemblyman Demarest of Nyack, N. Y., makes an emphatic denial of each and every charge that has been made against him. He invites a thorough investigation and declares that he is ready to disprove from the records all the allegations of embezzlement, forgery and fraud.

George L. Hodgdon, of Portsmouth, N. H., counsel for Mrs. Lucy M. Reed, says that he understands that both Murphy and Wood will turn State's evidence and implicate Mrs. Reed, not only in the murder of her husband at North Salem January 22, but in having previous knowledge of the crime. Mrs. Reed is now held as accessory after the fact.

Assaulted by Hungarians.

LANCASTER, Pa., Feb. 10.—Gilpin Reynolds, a farmer of Fulton township, was assaulted by a party of Hungarians at Fox Deposit, and so badly beaten that it is thought he will die.

BY THE WAY.

—The regular meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will be held in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

—A special meeting of the Mission Band will be held in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church to-morrow afternoon at four o'clock, to discuss important business.

—In giving credit to the many contractors who have each done his share towards the beauty and completeness of the Crescent League club-house, mention should be made of J. M. Morrison, who did the painting so tastefully.

—New officers of the Plainfield branch of the order of the Iron Hall will be installed to-night by George D. Fountain, of Jersey City. This order has paid over 45,000 claims amounting to $4,537,043.25.

—The Soldiers' Monument Committee met last Friday evening and still further perfected its plans for soliciting subscriptions. In a few days the committee will issue an appeal to the people, illustrated with a design of the monument and its description.

—An adjourned meeting of the Executive Committee of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union will be held at the Trinity Reformed church, this city, Thursday evening. The committee will be entertained by the social committee of Trinity church.

—To-night in Amphion Hall at eight o'clock, will be held a meeting to organize a lodge of the "Advance Beneficial Order." The meeting will be addressed by F. O. Butler, Supreme President, and W. M. Hook, Department Supreme Organizer.

—A flock of chickens tried to hold possession of the Central Railroad tracks in face of a Blue Imperial express train this morning. When the locomotive reached them they fled for their lives. One of them was caught and held by the cowcatcher, and was carried away, flopping its wings in its death struggles.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Arthur L. Stryker, formerly with P. M. Demarest, has accepted a position with the large wholesale house of H. C. Morse, Jersey City.

Miss Bulkley will read an account of "A Trip Through Greece," at the Unitarian rooms, Second place, to-morrow evening, to which all who may be interested are cordially invited.

Lottie D. Springman, a pupil of the North Plainfield public school, has contributed a pathetic short story entitled "A Mother's Two Prayers" to the New Jersey school composition contest of The World, New York.

The date of the Krehbiel lecture on Wagner's "Meistersinger," at The Casino, is fixed for Thursday, March 19. A list of the patronesses of this event will be published in a few days. The above date is chosen because two days afterward the opera will be given for the last time in New York, at the Metropolitan Opera House.

One of the daintiest of recent full-page magazine illustrations is the frontispiece "An Old-Time Valentine," by George Wharton Edwards of this city, in the February St. Nicholas. Other excellent work by Mr. Edwards is seen in The Century Magazine for January, wherein he enriches Charles Howard Shinn's "Pioneer Spanish Families in Alta California" with numerous illustrations.

Among those who took part in the Mother Goose Party, given by Mrs. C. E. Brooks at her home on Crescent avenue, were Miss Fairbairn and Mr. Worth as "The Dish and the Spoon," Miss McKinney as "Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary," Miss VanBuren as "Little Bopeep," Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Timpson as "Jack and Jill," Miss Walz as "Little Miss Muffett," Katheryn Yates as "The Old Woman who Swept the Sky," Rowland Cox, Jr., as "Old King Cole," and Messrs. Andrew McKinney and John N. Moore as "Simple Simon and the Pieman."

At four o'clock this afternoon, at the home of the bride's parents, 360 East Front street, this city, the wedding took place of Miss Margaret Clendenen Field and William Runyon Stanbery of Scotch Plains. The Rt. Rev. Bishop Scarborough officiated, assisted by the Rev. William Maxwell Reilley. Invitations were sent to only the relatives and intimate friends of both families. Among those who accepted them were Senator Rufus Blodgett, the Hon. H. S. Little and Chancellor Runyon, Mrs. Runyon, and daughter Julia. The Chancellor is an uncle of the groom.

HIS BENEFICIARIES WILL BE LEFT.

Another of Job Male's Heirs Turns Up and Handicaps Still More the Possibility of Fulfilling His Unsigned Will.

A dispatch from Lockport, N. Y., says: Simon Male, laborer, who has for some time been employed here as a driver on a coal delivery wagon, was to-day notified that there is $40,000 awaiting him from the estate of an uncle who died recently at Jersey City. The estate is estimated at $600,000, and there are other heirs in this vicinity.

This man is undoubtedly another of ex-Mayor Male's nephews, but the many who are turning up in Canada, New York, and other States, have already cut down the probable share of each to much less than $40,000.

This number of heirs also precludes any possibility of a mutual agreement that the Male Library, Unitarian church or Y. M. C. A. shall have a cent. As the body of heirs increases, and the share of each decreases, their grasp on every penny will be the tighter. Then it is a question whether the "agreement" of even these immediate heirs is sufficient. Their children must also consent.

SORRY TO SAY GOOD-BYE.

But Mary Had to Leave Town, and Part from the Gentle Policeman, or Go to Jail.

Mary Buckley, the old woman who insisted that she was a "leddy from London" when policeman Patrick Flanagan arrested her for intoxication yesterday afternoon, and who was "proud to take his arm, as he was a rale swate young gintleman," was sober enough this morning when taken before City Judge Codington, and pleaded tearfully that she had done nothing to be punished for. The Court administered a severe lecture, admonishing Mary to keep sober, and save herself from such exposure to the elements and such public disgrace as she had suffered the day before, and gave her one hour to get out of town.

Mary dropped her claim this morning of hailing from London, and said instead that she was a poor working woman who had walked all the way from Matawan.

She told policeman Flanagan, when under arrest yesterday afternoon, that her father used to be a policeman; she knew a gentleman when she saw one, and he was that same kind of a gentleman as her father had been; but when Captain Grant sought to take her flask of rum away she screamed that he was an American and a Yankee pirate, and insisted on his leaving her entirely to Mr. Flanagan's gallantry.

Mary promised to leave town promptly, though she seemed very sad at parting from her generous-hearted blue-coat captor.

DANCED THE VIRGINIA REEL.

But Chose the Wrong Place for Their Fun, and Got in Trouble in Consequence.

For dancing a Virginia reel on the platform at the Grant avenue station of the Jersey Central railway, and accompanying the dance with whistlings and yells that two policeman heard blocks away, six lads, whose ages ranged from fifteen to eighteen, were prisoners before City Judge Codington this morning. It was shown that the boys had been in the habit of utilizing the board flooring at the station as a ball room night after night, causing constant disturbance of the peace and quietness of the neighborhood. All six were adjudged guilty, but on Harry McComus, Joseph Malone, Henry Pugh and Wm. Fry sentence was suspended. James Reed and Robert McComus were fined $2 each.

Delicious Fruit.

THE PRESS acknowledges the receipt of a number of oranges grown in the orange grove of Campbell & Kelly, Round Lake, Crescent City, Fla. Both gentlemen are residents of Plainfield—Harry Campbell and Wm. Kelly—, and it is said by those who have visited their grove that they have one of the finest on the Indian River. The products from their flourishing premises are to be found in the principal stores of Plainfield, which make a specialty of this fruit. The samples (coming from a box without a "specked" one in it) are delicious, and prove that Florida is the orange producing State of the country. The grove alluded to is the one recently visited by townsmen E. P. Thorn and Ellis Campbell.

Want First to Hear from the Crescents.

[From The Sun, New York.]

The Ridgewood Base-Ball Club has reorganized for the season of 1891, with one of the strongest teams in the semi-professional ranks, and would be pleased to arrange games with all clubs in or out of the State giving suitable guarantees, the Crescents of Plainfield, Russell Birdsall and Wards of Port Chester, Stars of Long Island City, Metropolitans of New York, Gorhams, Cuban Giants, Rahways, and Senators preferred.

A New Club of Workingmen.

The Plainfield Workingmen's Athletic Club is a new organization which began existence last Friday night. The present meeting place of the club is at No. 2 Grant avenue. The number of charter members is forty. The club will welcome all desirable parties wishing to join. Physical improvement and social enjoyment are among the objects of the organization.

I SUFFERED from a severe cold in my head for months and could get no relief. Was advised to use Ely's Cream Balm. It has worked like magic in its cure. I am free from my cold after using the Balm one week, and I believe it is the best remedy known.—Samuel J. Harris, wholesale grocer, 110 Front street, New York.

JUST AS PLAINFIELD HEARD IT.

That Immortal Speech of Charley Winfield's Journeys to Foreign Lands.

Everybody in Plainfield knows that distinguished lawyer and orator, Charles H. Winfield. Besides being a brother-in-law of Charles H. Schermerhorn, local manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company, which alone would identify him here, he has appeared before mass-meetings of Plainfield voters time and again. His voice—which is as tremendous as his physique—is familiar to all. The following story of how that voice was found by a friend in Paris, journeying about without its owner, and possessing its own identical roar and power, will be especially appreciated in this locality, particularly since the great tariff speech mentioned in the anecdote had for one of its first audiences an enthusiastic gathering of Plainfield voters. Here is the tale, as told by The Daily Continent of New York:

"Gen. William C. Heppenheimer—who says 'Call me "Billy" if you please, but if you give me my military title remember that I am a General and not a Colonel'—saw a man holding two phonograph eartags up to the side of his face in one of the Park Row cigar stores the other day, and it reminded him of the great phonograph he had listened to at the Exposition in Paris, while he was abroad. Among the other voices that shouted into his receptive ears when he listened to it was that of McCullough, the great tragedian, raving in the mad-house at Philadelphia. 'Nothing could have been more awful'—says the General.—'But while I was there someone incidentally remarked that I was a Jerseyman.

"'"A Jerseyman!"—repeated the man in charge of the talking machine, as he turned a crank.—"Now listen! Whose voice is it you hear?"

"'"And there,"—the General said—"away off in Paris, I heard the voice of Charley Winfield, delivering the great tariff speech with which he entertained the country during the Presidential campaign of 1884. One night when he spoke in Orange they placed the big funnel of a phonograph so that it would catch his voice, and the roll which his enunciation punctured had been sent to the Paris Exposition.'"

The Elkwood.

In another column will be found the announcement of the opening of The Elkwood, which is to take place March 2. J. B. Miller, who will personally superintend this coming popular hotel, has been proprietor for the past eleven years of the well-known Laing's Hotel, of this city, which is a guarantee that as the proprietor of The Elkwood Mr. Miller will cater to the wants of the public in a satisfactory and pleasing manner, as he has heretofore done. All the modern improvements necessary successfully to conduct a first-class hotel will be found in The Elkwood. The cuisine will be second to none in the State.

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

Plainfield's Colored Population Said to be up in Arms Because Babbitt the Rabbit Hunter is Stopped on the Road to Ambition.

The newspapers all over—for want of a genuine matter of importance—are still ringing the changes on the pronunciamento of Messrs. Babbitt and Jones, published exclusively in THE PRESS last week. The Elizabeth Herald says:

Plainfield society is all broken up and is desolated—at least the colored portion of it. Those citizens who make up that element in the fashionable circles of the "Colorado of the East" had, it appears, petitioned Mayor Gilbert to appoint two of their number policemen. He did not accede to the request of the 150 sable voters who signed the petition, wherefore the two would-be policemen indignantly penned a grand remonstrance to his Honor, the concluding paragraphs of which are models of literary composition.

The colored aristocracy of Plainfield, being Republicans, imagined they had a lien on the Republican Mayor. But they were disappointed, and are now kicking on account of the outrageous insult thus offered to their race. Dog catchers, forsooth! Nothing below the dignity of policeman, if you please, "for dis hyar cullud genelman! Keep your dirty dog kitchas for de white trash!"

Another paper says that there are a lot of disgruntled colored men over in Plainfield, N. J. They were all present at the last meeting of the Common Council of that thriving community, and they all wore a preoccupied look. They grasped the railings of their seats firmly and acted as if something was worrying them. Their agony lasted while the town fathers droned through the town business, till suddenly it was announced that Mayor A. L. Gilbert, who is cashier of the New York Market and Fulton National Bank, had sent in his appointments for the year.

Among the others were the appointments of James Babbitt as dog catcher and Israel Jones as his assistant. The Council promptly confirmed the nominations, and the colored gentlemen present stumbled out with wilted looks.

Babbitt had thought a place on the police force would be a very good one for a man of his genius. He got all his friends together accordingly, and a committee of them called on the Mayor and said they represented a hundred and fifty colored citizens. They asked that James be made a regular policeman, and also that Israel Jones, another colored man of mark, be appointed as special policeman.

From policeman to dog catcher was too great a fall. James brooded darkly over his wrongs. He thought for a whole hour, and he then wrote this letter, while anger still rankled in his soul:

To His Honor, Mayor Gilbert:—We, the colored citizens of Plainfield, through a petition of 150 voters, did ask your Honor to appoint James Babbitt as regular policeman and Israel Jones as special policeman for the city. We feel that you have disgraced the colored voters by appointing the above two named gentlemen to the position of dog catchers.

Therefore we most respectfully resign the positions you have so kindly shown to the colored voters. They do not think they have been honorably dealt with according to the petition. Time will tell!

JAMES BABBITT,
ISRAEL JONES.

When Mayor Gilbert read this letter in THE PRESS he did stare, not at the body of the letter, but at the signatures. They were those of James Babbitt and Israel Jones. The interesting question comes up, Were Babbitt and Jones the only colored citizens in Plainfield? If they were, as the language of the letter implied, did they vote for the hundred or more names on the registry lists known to be those of colored men? The point was too palpable for Corporation Counsel Marsh. Mr. Marsh might have got Babbitt and Jones into a first-rate legal snarl over their claim that they were the sum total of the colored citizens of Plainfield. But Mr. Marsh was generous.

He simply said in Mayor Gilbert's defense that as there was no vacancy Babbitt could not be made a regular policeman. As for Israel Jones, it was ungrateful for him to turn back on the Mayor, for he had not only been made dog catcher, but a special policeman, too.

And The Evening Sun contributes this paragraph on the subject:

Alexander L. Gilbert is cashier of the Market and Fulton National Bank of this city and is also Mayor of Plainfield, in which place he lives. He goes home every night with about thirty other commuters in a handsome club car. In Plainfield he is the recipient of much respectful attention. The Mayor is now in a little trouble. At the last election 150 colored men voted solidly for him, and of late they have been looking for their reward. The 150 petitioned the Mayor to appoint James Babbitt a policeman and Israel Jones a special officer. On Monday night the Mayor appointed the two men dog catchers. Twenty-four hours later they informed the mayor that they would not act as dog catchers. They also insinuated that there is trouble ahead.

Welcomed in the South.

The Veteran Zouaves, of Elizabeth, under command of Gen. Madison Drake, have been warmly welcomed and tendered ovations on their visit South, especially at Birmingham, Ala., where they were received in a grand manner by the Confederate Veterans, Birmingham Rifles, Jefferson Volunteers and other military organizations. Last Friday night the northern visitors were banqueted by the above organizations, and among the many toasts offered was the following, by one of Plainfield's former citizens, but now a resident of Birmingham, John T. Lee, which was rapturously received:

"The little State of New Jersey—loyal from her birth, and the home of sympathetic patriots. With open arms and big hearts she is truly a model State for the Union."

I was a sufferer from catarrh for fifteen years, with distressing pain over my eyes. I used Ely's Cream Balm with gratifying results. Am apparently cured.—E. C. Warren, Rutland, Vt.

BOGUS BENEVOLENT SOCIETIES.

New Jersey Likely to Be Rid of a Number of Alleged Fraudulent Organizations.

(From The Daily Continent.)

The thousands of so-called benevolent societies in New Jersey do not like the manner in which Secretary of State Kelsey has put his foot down upon them.

The Secretary says that it is impossible for the societies to do as they promise on their plans of organization. The societies have regularly-employed organizers who visit towns and cities, secure the co-operation of leading citizens, and on the strength of their names form local lodges and chapters. Every member of a lodge is promised that if he pays dues till they amount to so much he will receive back double that amount in a premium or prize.

The organizer explains that so many members are certain to withdraw after paying dues for awhile. These dues are clear profit, to be divided among the members who stick to the lodge. This is beautifully simple, but by means of repeated assessments the organizers are enabled in time to freeze out every member. What is left on their hands in the way of dues and assessments they pocket, saying nothing.

There are numbers of these lodges in Newark, Elizabeth, Jersey City, Plainfield and Trenton. They do not let their names get into the directories. Two organizers have recently been making the round of these cities, and have succeeded in forming lodges in Jersey City and Plainfield.

PROTECTION AGAINST PIRATES.

"One in the Business" Answers "Sympathizer."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—If you will allow me the space, I would like to answer "Sympathizer" on his plea for the peddler. He claims not to be a peddler or merchant. It is entirely unnecessary for him to inform us of that fact, for if he was he would not say that we had forgotten the "Golden Rule"—as he calls it, "live and let live"—for that is the very reason we, the peddlers and merchants of Plainfield, ask the Council to raise the license. The peddlers were the first this season to ask the Merchants' Association to assist them in having it raised for their protection. They, who live here, pay taxes and licenses into the city treasury and spend their money here, ask for protection against the peddler who comes from out of town, pays a small fee of $5, sells any kind of poor goods and has equal rights with the peddler who stays with us the year round and is always ready to supply our wants and give weight and measure. But the tramp peddler comes into a town, gives you short measure at a low price and then leaves. No doubt "Sympathizer" has been caught this way. The next time he wants vegetables or other articles, he goes to a store keeper who has to pay heavy rent, taxes and insurance on his stock, and wagons to call for his order and deliver "Sympathizer's" goods, (who probably lives on money left him by a rich uncle, or by gambling in stock on Wall street and has his goods charged 30, 60, or 90 days so as to save the interest that will accumulate during the three months) and asks the price of the article he wishes. The price is higher, he tells you at once: "Why, I bought them just as good as that from a peddler that happened to come along for so much less," he says, but perhaps forgets to tell you how much short in quantity, and tries to squeeze you down to the dishonest, out-of-town peddler's price, and expects and gets full measure and quality. If he does not, he knows where to find us. During such transactions (if he is one of that kind) he will forget his "Golden Rule" of "live and let live," because it is his own pocket he is working for, and not the poor peddler.

But out of justice to the gentleman who wrote the article in good faith, I must say that I think he looked at the question from but one side. ONE IN THE BUSINESS.

FROM A HUMOROUS POINT OF VIEW.

Ideas that Come to an Observant Citizen, Concerning Peddlers' Licenses, Dog Catchers, and Other Matte.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—When the peddlers' license fee is raised from $5 to $25, "for the protection of the merchants," we may look for great activity among the storekeepers, who will doubtless be compelled to increase their force of clerks, to wait on the throngs crowding their stores to purchase matches, shoe-laces and hair-pins; and the grocers who were on the verge of failure because their kerosene oil trade was ruined by peddlers can again revel in the joys of weighing out teas, coffee, and sugar, and can cry "Hurrah for protection, and down with free trade." America for the Americans! [American Indians excepted.]

Speaking of Americans, when is the time coming when people will vote as Americans? How long are we to hear of "the German vote," "the Irish vote," and "the colored vote"; and when a mayor appoints two colored citizens as dog-catchers is he always to be threatened by the loss of "the colored vote" because he did not term them canine intercepters? Or is he to be threatened with loss of "the German vote" because he does n't eat limberger?—or "the Irish vote" because he does n't order the Irish flag to float on St. Patrick's Day? In my opinion, a man who undertakes to vote as a German, an Irishman, a colored man, or in fact as any kind of a man, save as an American citizen, should be disfranchised. It seems somewhat comical that we should have fallen into the custom of speaking of the descendants of the negro race as "colored" people. Why, an Irishman is colored—when he is green; I am colored myself—when I am blue;—and THE PRESS is colored all the time—because it is read all over. OLIVER TOWN.

AUSTRALIAN BUFFALOES.

Few of the Inhabitants Know of Their Existence.

Although I have been over thirty-seven years in Australia, says a writer in the Brisbane, New-Zealander, it was not until eighteen months ago that I was aware that there was a breed of wild buffaloes in these colonies, and I venture to say that not one per cent. of the inhabitants of Queensland, or even half that number, are aware of the fact. Curiously enough, I have two simultaneous inquiries about them—one from Prof. Wallace, of Edinburgh, and the other from a gentleman in Michigan, U. S. A. I laid myself out to make full inquiries on the subject, and it has occurred to me that the public will be interested to know the result. Mr. B. H. Purcell, who has seen several of them in the far north, and was present at the death of one, gave me a minute description of them, which tallies exactly with what I learned from other sources. Mr. E. Palmer, M. L. A., informs me that one of the islands on the northern coast is fully stocked with them, and isolated bulls from the herd on the mainland occasionally find their way as far east as one of his gulf stations, and that several have reached Mr. Hann's Lawn Hill station. In Dr. Leichhardt's journal of his expedition from Moreton bay to Port Essington, in 1844-5, he mentions that Mr. Roper and the blackboys, "Charley" and "Brown," ran down and shot one thirty miles from Port Essington, and that they were said to be numerous there, and were called by the blacks "anaborro." Leichhardt states that they "are the offspring of the stock which had either strayed from the settlement at Raffles bay or had been left behind when that establishment was broken up. They were originally introduced from the Malay islands. I was struck with the remarkable thickness of their skin (almost an inch), and with the solidity of their bones, which contained little marrow, but that little was extremely savory." Mr. Palmer states that the bull killed on his run weighed almost a ton, was extremely broad and well developed in the fore-quarters, but tapering off in the hind-quarters.

I next directed my inquiries to the museum, and here I was most fortunate in getting information from the man above all others in Queensland most competent to give it—namely, Mr. Spalding, the taxidermist of the museum, who spent many months in the center of their great haunt near Port Darwin. Mr. Spalding showed me the head and horns of one of these buffaloes that made its way eastward in the direction of Charters Towers, and was shot there some two years ago. The horns are most remarkable, being square at the butt and four inches thick. They rise in a semi-circle but incline backward, so that the animals, when they charge, which they do furiously, have to put their heads between their forelegs. The horns are extremely coarse, corrugated, and of a dirty brown color. Mr. Spalding corroborated the statements of Messrs. Palmer and Purcell as to the buffaloes being very numerous—in many thousands—at Port Essington, Raffles bay and Melville island. A man has been engaged for a number of years shooting them and making a handsome income by selling the hides. On account of the extreme thickness of hide they resist an ordinary cartridge, and heavy leaden bullets have to be used. They are what are familiarly known as "mud" buffalo, having very little hair on their bodies, which are of a dirty reddish-brown color.

It may not be generally known that a number of Timor ponies were introduced at Port Essington with the buffaloes. These have also increased to a large herd, and Mr. Spalding describes them as exceedingly handsome little animals.

Asiatic "Black Death."

The pestilence now ravaging a great part of Asiatic Russia bears that name of "Black Death" so familiar for centuries as describing one of the most fearful of those plagues which, appearing at irregular intervals, have devastated the globe. Presumably, says the New York Times, it was this same form of scourge that, starting also from Asia, spread over that continent and Europe about the middle of the fourteenth century, and is reputed to have had millions of victims. It is doubtless also the same that made another widespread and terrible devastation in 1664 and 1665, and of whose ravages in London Defoe gave so vivid an account. There it was oftenest called simply the plague, but the name "Black Death" is derived, as may be remembered, from the blotches accompanying the disease. It is believed that its visitations were made as often as once or twice in a century in ancient times, and it was around Naples as late as 1815. Its re-appearance now in West Siberia is marked by a terrible mortality, which recalls the stories of some of its old-time ravages; but this is largely due, no doubt, to the lack of medical aid in that region.

Curious Census Facts.

It is a curious fact, revealed by the figures of the recent census, that, while there are in the United States three cities of more than 1,000,000 inhabitants each, one of between 800,000 and 900,000, three of between 400,000 and 500,000 each, and nine of between 200,000 and 300,000 each, there is not a single one having between 300,000 and 400,000 inhabitants. In 1860 we had but nine cities with a population of over 100,000 each.

THE WOMAN OF FASHION.

How She Attires Herself for an Afternoon Tea.

Nothing Can Be American in Dress—It Must Be French, Grecian, Scotch or Any Thing But American—Hints in Choosing Colors for Gowns.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

Nothing is American in the lists of fashion plates in either this country or Europe. The gowns are Grecian, French or Egyptian. The favorite designs are Scotch plaids. Irish poplins are much worn for traveling and between seasons slippers are Turkish. Bonnets are French and the tiny toques so much admired are Spanish.

England has long ruled in men's styles and, until recently, Paris designs have been quoted for the women; but now the fashionable lady's wardrobe is a polyglot so far as nationalities are concerned. Turkish slippers, Spanish sandals, Russian coats, Grecian draperies, German laces and Romanesque scarfs are to be found doing duty almost daily in the toilet. And what is more confusing, many different types figure at one and the same time.

One not infrequently sees in a ballroom an American beauty with her hair banged English style and twisted into a psyche knot, a Cleopatra gown upon her slender form and French heeled slippers upon her feet.

Our dress has become like our nationality, somewhat mixed, but the result so long as it has been planned carefully, is not unpleasing.

For tea gowns, velvet has been entirely discarded. A large New York firm, dealing heavily in these goods, could show only one velvet house dress in stock, and the order has been sent out that not another one should be made.

Cashmere and surah make favorite materials, as they drape easily and lend themselves gracefully to long lines and pretty, flowing curves. But, more than all, the neat, pretty French challie is sought as the material most desirable for house dresses. It is inexpensive; yet not sufficiently so to be common, and it has a neat beauty of its own that makes it a favorite. It is more effective when draped in full quantities, with folds of the goods overlapping and overlying each other in full profusion.

Many of the challie tea gowns have fronts shirred at neck and waist and falling full in front, with a loose drapery caught across them. Velvet ribbons are made in bows and fastened at the side of the collar and at each side of the waist shirring. The back may be either fitted in or left to fall in flowing style to match the front.

Invisible fastenings are more than ever the style for securing the waists of gowns. Buttons are entirely out of date except when used in small and quiet forms underneath a lapel or inside a waistcoat.

For women with perfect bust and slender waist, there is a style of walking dress without seams, and shaped to figure. It has a polonaise front and fastens slantwise across the figure from the left shoulder to the right hip, where it is caught by a big buckle. A fancy braiding conceals the place of fastening. To make this waist seem even plainer and smoother by contrast, sleeves, greatly puffed at the top, are set in the smooth, wrinkleless shoulders. The skirt falls plain on the left side, but hangs in loose folds on the right.

In tea gowns there is a fashion for fastening a long court train to the back of the shoulders, permitting it to fall loosely from the gown which, in that case is tight-fitting in the back. Many of the newest ones are made in this way. A large watteau plait is fastened at the shoulders and sweeps in long lines behind the wearer as she walks. The under side of this plait is of satin or surah in a pretty contrasting shade.

In combining colors for house dresses it should always be borne in mind that these gowns will be seen more often by gaslight than by sunlight, and therefore the colors should be such as will illumine well.

Lavender, unless of an exceptionally pale shade, looks prettier and is more becoming if edged with black at neck and wrists. Gray is softer and more tender in hue combined with white, or with gray of a paler shade. Green is unbecoming to all but the fairest, clearest-skinned blondes, yet it may be made a more easily-managed color if combined with rose silk or satin.

Yellow, which is most trying, unless exactly suited to the wearer, is rendered becoming and striking if trimmed with black velvet where the gown comes in juxtaposition with the skin. The Roman combinations of yellow, blue, violet, pink and green may be worn closely allied, if tastefully chosen and arranged. The cider bath robes are excellent examples of this. Combining all colors imaginable they are yet so delicately harmonized that the colors seem as a delicate rainbow exquisite in tint and texture.

Since black has gone out of style for street dresses, it is difficult to find any thing in the line of ready-made black gowns suitable for young women. Dowager dresses can be found in stock and a few frocks for traveling tours, but even these are few and far to seek. A peculiar tint of yellow, that is not an orange, nor an ecru, nor yet an old gold, is gaining in popularity. The tint is a little on the brown and has a reddish cast about it, if we may be pardoned for describing a single tint as being so variegated.

Many of the Scotch plaids combine this color with either red, yellow, or both. With this gown is worn a seal jacket and a black hat with nodding plumes and a big rose with green leaves. On warmer days the seal jacket is discarded for a rough cloth one with braided sleeves and a Medici collar.

Whole capes with long pointed fronts and a Medici collar are made out of ostrich tips. The tips are short and thick and are put on in close clusters so as to completely cover the foundation of the garment, which is generally of heavy satin, thickly wadded. An ostrich tip muff with satin ribbon bow accompanied the feather cape. This is exceedingly stylish and more durable than one would suppose. It can not, however, be exposed to vicissitudes of climate, as a dash of rain or a flurry of snow damages it past recall, unless the long and expensive curling operation is performed.

Mme. Jane Hading is as usual creating a Parisian sensation by her superb dressing on the stage. In "Le Depute Leveaux," now being performed at Paris, she wears a magnificent neglige bordered round the neck with a direct-sire filling in lace quillings. In another scene she wears a full dress dinner gown with a very low pointed bodice cut down at front and back.

A square apron front is outlined by a band of sable extending down each side and across the bottom. Sable bands also border the armholes. On the right side the sable band is carried down from the back of the armhole and is caught up on the left side in a big loop and fastened with a diamond buckle. The long train is of brocaded white and yellow satin to correspond with the rest of the gown, and is lined with brown surah.

Puffings of straw mousseline chiffon are put around the low cut front of the bodice. Short puffed sleeves of the same material extend to the elbow.

Another toilet of Mme. Hading's, which while not a stage gown is a favorite of hers and is frequently chosen when the actress desires to sit for her photograph, is a simple surah gown with rounded neck and a frill of the celebrated Hading ruffling laid flat around it. The waist is a round one, gathered in at the belt. This style of waist does not easily grow old-fashioned, and looks well as long as the photograph is cherished. It is also pretty and graceful for wear on semi-full-dress occasions.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

J. B. COWARD, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., Feb. 3, 1891.

AN ORDINANCE.

To change the grade of certain portions of Plainfield avenue, West Third street, West Fourth street, West Fifth street, West Sixth street and Liberty street.

The inhabitants of the city of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

Section 1. That the grade of Plainfield avenue shall be changed as follows: Beginning at the northwesterly curb line of West Seventh street at the established centre elevation of 35.00 feet above the city base, thence with an ascending grade of 0.40 feet per 100 feet to a crown point, elevation 35.30 feet above city base; said crown point to be distant 158 feet in a southeasterly direction along the northeasterly curb line of Plainfield avenue, from the southeasterly curb line of West Fifth street, thence with a descending grade of 0.39 feet per 100 feet to the established centre grade at a point 25 feet southeasterly from the centre line of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, elevation 30.17 feet above the city base. The curb grade to be 0.50 feet lower than the above described grade line, which is the centre or crown grade of said avenue.

Section 2. That the grade of West Third street be changed as follows: Beginning at the established curb grade at a point distant 400 feet in a southwesterly direction from the southwesterly curb line of Liberty street, elevation 25.09 feet above city base, thence with a descending grade to the northeasterly curb line of Plainfield avenue, elevation at the easterly curb corner 31.28 feet above the city base and on the northerly curb corner 31.16 feet above the city base. The centre grade to be 0.50 feet higher than the above described curb grade.

Section 3. That the grade of West Fourth street shall be changed as follows: Beginning at the established curb grade at the southwesterly curb line of New street at an elevation of 26.84 feet above the city base, thence with an ascending grade to Liberty street, elevation 34 feet above the corner 30.70 feet above the city base, thence with a descending grade to the northeasterly curb line of Plainfield avenue, elevation on the easterly curb corner to be 32.65 feet above the city base. The centre grade to be 0.50 feet higher than the above described curb grade.

Section 4. That the grade of West Fifth street be changed as follows: Beginning at the established curb grade at the southwesterly curb line of Liberty street at an elevation of 36.87 feet above the city base, thence with a descending grade to the northeasterly curb line of Plainfield avenue, elevation on the easterly curb corner to be 34.17 feet and on the northerly curb corner to be 34.01 feet above the city base. The centre grade to be 0.50 feet higher than the above described curb grade.

Section 5. That the grade of West Sixth street be changed as follows: Beginning at the established curb grade at the southwesterly curb line of Liberty street, elevation 37.00 feet above the city base, thence with a descending grade to the northeasterly curb line of Plainfield avenue, elevation on the easterly curb corner to be 34.47 feet and on the northerly curb corner to be 34.31 feet above the city base. The centre grade to be 0.50 feet higher than the above described curb grade.

Section 6. That the grade of Liberty street be changed as follows: Beginning at the established curb grade at the northwesterly curb line of West Fifth street, elevation 36.87 feet above the city base, thence with an ascending grade to West Fourth street, the elevation at each curb corner to be 38.70 feet above the city base, thence with a descending grade to the established grade at the southeasterly curb line of West Third street, the elevation at the easterly curb corner 36.38 feet and at the southerly curb corner 36.18 feet above the city base. The centre grade to be 0.50 feet higher than the above described curb grade.

Section 7. That all ordinances so far as they conflict with this ordinance be and the same are hereby repealed.

Fees $9.90.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE REMEDY

Two Bottles Cured Her. 6

CARROLL, IA., July, 1888.

I was suffering 10 years from shocks in my head, so much so, that at times I didn't expect to recover. I took medicines from many doctors, but didn't get any relief until I took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic. After the second dose relieved me and 2 bottles cured me. S. W. PECK.

Spent a Small Fortune.

124 Mahony City, Schuylkill Co., Pa., May '90.

My son, who is now sixteen years old, had epileptic fits for about four years. I spent a small fortune for doctors and medicine to get him cured, but to no avail until he took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic. It is a year now, since he is perfectly cured, has not had the symptoms of a spell since. I am therefore very thankful for this medicine, and recommend it to all sufferers.

PAT. CAMPBELL.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

SHERIFFS ON GUARD

The Coke Region Highly Excited Over the Strike.

16,000 MEN HAVE QUIT WORK.

The Foreign Element Restless and a Repetition of Former Depredations Feared.

The Effects of the Struggle Already Being Felt—Rainey's Plants Are Protected by Pinkerton Men—Railroad Employes Thrown Out of Employment—Dramatic Scene at the Mine Workers' Convention.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., Feb. 11.—The coke region is terribly excited over the strike. The coal miners of 30 of the works throughout the district, about 16,000 in number, have ceased work.

Big and enthusiastic mass meetings were held at Bradford and Dunbar.

The pumpers have been ordered by the labor leaders to remain at work to prevent the destruction of plants by water. The leaders will continue to address mass meetings at the different works to stir up the strikers.

The employes of W. J. Rainey are the only men who have as yet refused to strike, and their lives are in danger if they do not come out after a reasonable length of time. Rainey's four plants are guarded by 50 Pinkerton detectives and a number of deputy sheriffs.

The strikers are stirred up to a fever heat and a bitter struggle is anticipated. The foreign element is fired up, and a repetition of their former depredations is feared.

The effects of the strike are already being felt. About 150 employes of the Scottdale Railroad will be thrown out of work. The employes of the Baltimore & Ohio will be likewise affected.

THREE GIANT LABOR BODIES.

Dramatic Scene at the United Mine Workers' Convention.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 11.—High above the stage of the city hall, in letters a foot long, hangs the motto, "Eight Hours, Only, Per Day." Everywhere upon the walls of the spacious room are other mottoes having a similar import. They express the sentiments and indicate the future demands of the United Mine Workers of America, whose first annual convention is in session here.

The American Federation, it is known, has selected the giant miners' organization to make the next grand national struggle for eight hours. Thousands of workmen, with an almost perfect organization, and backed by millions of dollars, will be engaged in the battle against aggregated capital.

At this mine workers' annual convention it is expected that much of the preliminary detail of the impending battle will be arranged. For this reason the session is attracting national interest from other than the mining interests. Besides the general officers of the mine workers many distinguished labor leaders are present, among whom are Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation; Secretary-Treasurer Hayes, of the K. of L. General Assembly; A. W. Wright, member of the General Executive Board, K. of L., and editor of the Knights of Labor Journal; Hugh J. Cavanaugh, worthy foreman, K. of L., and Hon. John McBride, Ohio State Commissioner of Labor Statistics.

At the morning session committees on credentials and on rules having been appointed, a committee was sent to escort President Gompers and other distinguished gentlemen to the hall. When he appeared upon the stage a dramatic scene ensued. President John B. Rae of the United Mine Workers stepped forward to the front of the platform, holding in his own the hands of Mr. Gompers of the American Federation and Mr. Wright of the Knights of Labor. The resonant cheers which a moment before had beat against the castellated roof of the vast hall were for a moment hushed into stillness profound. Said President Rae, in tones of triumph and exultation: "These clasped hands are indicative of the true spirit of fraternity of feeling which joins and cements the interests of these three giant labor organizations."

Then again great volumes of pandemoniac sound broke the stillness. Cheer upon cheer from the lusty throats of brawny miners rose to the ceiling, and was echoed back, only to be caught and returned upon an advancing wave of renewed applause.

President Gompers addressed the convention, his remarks treating principally of the eight-hour movement.

Cardinal Simor's Vast Wealth.

VIENNA, Feb. 11.—Hungary is in a state of wonder over the new developments of the vast wealth possessed by the late Cardinal Simor, the Prince Primate of Hungary. The cardinal belonged to an obscure family, began life as a poor boy, and his only income has been from his ecclesiastical offices. Yet he left an estate valued at several millions of florins. The money, under the cardinal's will, goes to the Pope. The cardinal was a peculiar man. Some time before his death he remarked that no one should ever tread upon his heart. In accordance with his wishes his heart was taken out, placed in a silver urn and deposited behind the high altar of the church in the town of Gran.

Glasscock Has Signed.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Jack Glasscock has signed with the New York Baseball Club. This puts an end to the gossip about players refusing to play in the same club with him.

Harry French Suspended.

BOSTON, Feb. 11.—Harry French, the principal in the French-Smith scandal, has been suspended from membership in the South Evangelical Church of West Roxbury.

THE RUMORED DEFICIT.

General Hastings, of Pennsylvania, Vindicated by the Adjutant-General.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 11.—Adjutant-General McClelland said, in reference to the sensational report published that there was a deficit of $90,000 in the Adjutant-General's Department, that there is no deficit that he knows of and he does not believe there is any.

Gen. Hastings, late adjutant-general, after a conference with the Governor and Adjutant-General McClelland, made a statement of the finances of the Adjutant-General's department and completely vindicated himself.

When Gen. Hastings took charge of the office he found a deficiency of over $30,000. This deficiency had been accumulating from one administration to another, not by reason of any loose methods or extravagant expenditures, but because the appropriations for the National Guard were not sufficient for its maintenance.

These facts were laid before Gov. Pattison, and it was decided to ask the Legislature to grant an appropriation to cover the amount of the deficiency.

JAMES REDPATH IS DEAD.

The Well-Known Journalist Dies from the Effects of an Accident.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—After lingering almost a week on a hospital cot, the result of having been knocked down by a street car, James Redpath, the famous Irish Nationalist, journalist, lecturer and vice-president of the Anti-Poverty Society, died at 9 a. m.

Mr. Redpath was born in Berwick-on-Tweed, Scotland, in 1833, and came to this country with his parents in 1846. He became a printer, newspaper correspondent and editor. He was a war correspondent, and afterwards was appointed superintendent of education at Charleston, S. C., where he founded colored schools and an orphan asylum.

He established the Redpath Lyceum Bureau in Boston and was a pronounced abolitionist. He had been associated of late with the North American Review.

CANADA'S STRUGGLE.

Intense Excitement in Montreal Over the Political Fight.

MONTREAL, Feb. 11.—The political fight here is causing intense excitement. Subscriptions are being levied on all manufacturers and corporations, who derive any benefit from the protective tariff, for the Conservative election fund.

Sir John has notified Montreal that he expects $150,000 from that city alone. It is stated that the Canadian Pacific has subscribed $50,000 of this amount.

La Semaine, the religious organ of Cardinal Taschereau, warns the faithful against the unrestricted reciprocity policy of the Liberals, which is only the first step towards annexation. The Roman Catholic clergy generally support Sir John.

Will Not Accept State's Evidence.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Feb. 11.—Attorney-General Bernard stated, in reference to the report that Daniel Murphy and Frank Woods would turn State's evidence in the North Salem murder trial and implicate Mrs. Reed as an accessory before the fact, that there is no likelihood that the State would accept any plea from, or enter into any arrangement with Murphy and Woods, as they were the principals in the actual killing, and the State has enough evidence to secure their conviction.

A Case of Speedy Justice.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Frank Ward, aged 21, who robbed Father Haydon, of Toronto, of a gold watch, was sentenced to State prison for five years. Ward's case was an instance of speedy justice. He was arrested for the crime Monday evening, had a hearing in the police court Tuesday morning, a little later the grand jury indicted him, and in the afternoon the prisoner pleaded guilty in the Court of General Sessions, and in a few minutes was on his way to the State prison.

An English Offer to Sullivan.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—A cable dispatch was received from London by Richard K. Fox, which stated that the Ormonde Club had decided to offer a purse of $10,000 for a 12-round glove contest between Frank P. Slavin and John L. Sullivan. The dispatch also stated that Slavin had signified his willingness to battle for the purse. Sullivan has been notified from here of the Ormonde Club's offer.

Killed by a Falling Chimney.

MAHONOY CITY, Pa., Feb. 11.—Maggie Boyce, aged 10, was instantly killed, and Tillie Cragg, aged 10, and John Young were seriously injured at New Boston by the falling of the chimney on the school house. The building had been burned during the night, and the children were viewing the ruins when the accident occurred.

Drank Ammonia and Died in Agony.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 11.—William Kyle, an old resident, swallowed four ounces of ammonia by mistake for citrate of magnesia and died in great agony. He was 63 years old and the father of 17 children.

THE SILVER RIDDLE

The Situation at Washington Remains Unchanged.

POSITION OF THE PRESIDENT.

He Desires to Give the Present Law at Least a Year's Trial.

Indians Talk Plainly About the Soldiers. The House Passes a Bill Over the President's Veto—Latest About the Treasury Vacancy—How the Several Appropriation Bills Stand.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The situation with regard to silver remains unchanged in the House. No new attempts have been made to take the matter out of the hands of the Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures.

The committee had another meeting during the day, which was attended by all of the members, except Mr. Bland, who charges the committee with the design of smothering the Free Coinage bill, and therefore refuses to attend any more meetings. He sent word that he was busy writing letters, but that at any time the committee would announce its readiness to vote on the question of reporting the bill to the House he would attend. He intended the message to be very severe, but the committee took it good naturedly.

The committee will hold its next meeting this evening at the Riggs House in the rooms of Congressman Vaux. Two delegations will be heard then—one from Philadelphia and the other from New New York, headed by Mr. Hewitt and Carl Schurz. On Thursday morning, at the Capitol, in the conference room of the Committee on Ways and Means, Senator Teller will address the Coinage Committee in favor of free silver. After that there will probably be no more hearings, but it is by no means likely that a vote on the bill will immediately follow.

The President's Position on Silver.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The President stated to no less than two callers that he would not sign any silver bill this session. "The country does not need any such legislation now," he said. "It is satisfied. The present law has been in operation but a few months, and it should have at least one year's time before any change is made."

INDIANS TALK PLAIN.

Hollow Horn Bear Tells Why He Dislikes the Soldiers.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Commissioner Morgan held an informal conference with Hollow-Horn-Bear in reference to a very serious matter. Hollow-Horn-Bear was accompanied by White Ghost and One-To-Play-With.

The Indians charged that while the military had control over the reservations many of the soldiers went through the ceremony of marriage with the squaws, the latter believing that they were doing well by marrying the soldiers.

Hollow-Horn-Bear said that he did not know whether it was desirable to the squaws that the officers allow the soldiers to go off and leave their wives and children dependent upon the Indians for support. "I do not care to do that any longer," he said, "and it is something I know did occur on our reservations, and I know it by experience. Therefore I do not care to have the military near our agencies."

CONGRESSIONAL DOINGS.

The House Passes a Bill Over the President's Veto.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Several bills of minor importance were passed by the Senate.

The House bill to revise the wages of certain employes in the Government printing office was passed, with a substitute providing that all night employes be paid 20 per cent. in addition to the amount paid for day labor.

A message from the President in reference to the Barundia affair was received and referred.

In the House the bill for a public building at Dallas, Tex., which was vetoed by the President, was reported back and passed over the President's veto.

The Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures was granted leave to sit during the sessions of the House, and the Army and Pension Appropriation bills were sent to conference.

The Legislative Appropriation bill was carried into Committee of the Whole and in the general debate Mr. Dalzell, of Pennsylvania, made a long speech in defense of Commander Reiter's position in the Barundia affair, and severely criticised Secretary Tracy for relieving Reiter. Mr. Lodge replied, sustaining the Secretary.

How Appropriation Bills Stand.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The following is the condition of appropriation bills in Congress: The Military Academy, Fortifications, Army and Pension have passed both branches and are in conference. The District of Columbia has passed the House and is ready to report to the Senate. The Naval bill has passed the House and is now before the Senate. The Sundry Civil has passed the House and was referred to the Senate Committee on Appropriations. The Legislative has passed the House and is on its way to the Senate. The Indian, Agricultural and Postal were reported to the House, but were not acted upon. The Deficiency has not yet been reported to the House.

The Treasury Vacancy.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—It is said that the President has had several important interviews with leading men on the question of filling the vacancy in the Treasury and has laid down his principles in regard to the appointment. The following are the President's ideas in regard to the man he wants: First, he must have the confidence of the people; second, he must be known as a financier, and one whose reputation is above reproach and who will not have to make a reputation after he becomes Secretary.

The New Apportionment Law.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The first steps towards putting the new Apportionment Law into operation were taken by the State Department, from which a certified copy of the law was sent to the Governor of each State and Territory in the Union.

Mrs. Custer's Pension Increased.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The bill passed the House increasing to $100 a month the pension of the widow of Gen. Custer.

GEN. SHERMAN VERY ILL.

The Old Soldier Suffering from a Severe Attack of Erysipelas.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—The news that the last surviving general of the war of the rebellion, William Tecumseh Sherman, is in a very precarious condition, will send a thrill through the entire Union.

Several days ago the General contracted a severe cold, and during the past three days has been confined to his bed.

At the first signs of serious illness Dr. C. T. Alexander, one of the army physicians stationed in this city, and Dr. E. G. Janeway, of No. 36 West 40th street, were called in.

They found the patient a pretty sick man, and that erysipelas had fully developed. One of the doctors has been in constant attendance on him since. They take a hopeful view of their patient's case, and say that they will pull him through providing something unexpected does not occur.

When the symptoms of erysipelas were discovered, the General's brother, Senator John Sherman, who was in Washington, was telegraphed for, and last evening he arrived in this city and went at once to his brother's house at 75 West 71st street.

During the day there were many callers at the house to inquire after the General's condition, but were not allowed to see him by order of the physicians.

The Rev. Father John Sherman, the General's son, has been telegraphed for, and is expected to arrive in the city today.

THE RIVER'S BED CHANGED.

The Housatonic Made Unnavigable by the Bursting of the Dam.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 11.—As a result of the bursting of the Housatonic dam at Derby, the whole bed of the river in that section has been changed.

Near Shelton an immense sand bar has been raised directly across the navigable portion of the river, and in places where coal barges could easily float at low tide there is now not more than six feet of water at high tide. Shelton Island, located near the center of the river, has been enlarged several hundred feet by the accumulation of sand and rock washed up by the rush and action of the water. As it is now the river is practically unnavigable.

The Board of Trade of Birmingham will at once communicate with Congressman Wilcox of this district to the end that he plan to get an appropriation of $50,000 through Congress for the purpose of clearing out the river.

SOCIAL CIRCLES EXCITED.

The Stott-Haviland Wedding Did Not Take Place Last Night.

HUDSON, N. Y., Feb. 11.—Great excite prevails in high social circles here over the announcement that the Stott-Haviland wedding, which was to have occurred last night, will not take place.

This wedding has been a matter of great interest in society circles throughout this section of the State because of the social prominence of the contracting parties. The groom-elect is the son of Charles H. Stott, the well-known woolen manufacturer of Stottsdale, near this city, and the bride belongs to a well known family.

When the groom failed to appear at the wedding rehearsal, it was stated that a former attachment had proved too strong at the last moment.

Great Britain Will Not Retaliate.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—In Parliament, Chancellor of the Exchequer Goschen said that the government had no intention of starting a policy of retaliation against the United States for 1 duty to the British trade by the new American tariff, especially as it was hoped that Americans themselves would perceive the mistake of adopting the McKinley bill.

Centenary of John Wesley's Death.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—Methodists throughout the world will be interested to learn that the centenary of John Wesley's death, which took place on March 2, 1791, is to be celebrated by English Methodists. The Duchess of Rutland and other prominent people are showing much interest in the matter.

The Mardi Gras Festivals.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 11.—The features of the Mardi Gras procession were "Visions," illustrated in 10 tableaux; "The Tales of the Genii," in 19 cars, and "Demonology." The parade was superior to that of any previous year.

WRECK ON THE RAIL

Fatal Accident to a D., L. and W. Passenger Train.

TWO PERSONS WERE KILLED.

The Cars Turned Over and the Passengers Badly Shaken Up.

The Accident Caused by a Collision With a Wild-cat Engine—The Express Was Running at a High Rate of Speed—The Occupants of Both Engines Seriously Injured.

GROVELAND, N. Y., Feb. 11.—A west-bound Delaware, Lackawana & Western railroad passenger train was wrecked at 10 o'clock last night. Two persons were killed and several injured.

The accident was caused by the collision of express train No. 8 with wild-cat engine No. 17. The train was going at a high rate of speed when it collided with the engine, just as the latter was moving off from the main track to a switch.

The express engine was thrown to the east side of the track and completely turned over, its tender was on the other side; the wild-cat engine was likewise demolished, and was on the west side of the track. The passengers all received a severe shaking up.

The engineer of the express train, James Powers, was badly crushed and was removed from the wreck in a dying condition. His fireman, Albert Englehart, was fatally injured. James Powers, nephew of the engineer, who was employed on the wildcat train, was injured internally and died within half an hour. The fireman of the wildcat engine, name unknown, was also killed. The engineer was badly hurt, but will probably recover.

WILL BE SENT TO FRANCE.

Michael Bion Released from Jail After Serving Fifteen Months.

WINSTED, Conn., Feb. 11.—In the Superior Court Judge Finn ordered that Michael Bion be released from jail and committed to the care of the French Consul, who had come here from New York to look after the interests of Bion, who is a native of France.

The story of Bion's pursuit of Lyman Dunning, a well-to-do farmer of Litchfield, and his persistent attempts to accomplish his revenge, have been fully told. Bion was arrested some 15 months ago, and held in $5,000 to keep the peace, and in default of bail has been in the Litchfield County jail ever since.

According to the representations of the French Consul in court Bion will start for France next Sunday, and will be under police surveillance all the time he is there. Each day he will have to report to the police, and should he fail to do so he will be arrested and imprisoned.

Deacon Tice Acquitted.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Feb. 11.—Deacon Tice was acquitted of the charges of immorality. Crowds of people tried to get into the church where the hearing was held, but all were denied admittance. Many attempted to overhear the testimony through crevices. Jonathan Culver testified that he saw Tice in a compromising position in the field with Eliza Ann Souder. The jury claimed that Culver was intoxicated at the time he claimed to have seen the alleged intimacy.

New Jersey Secures a Big Revenue.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 11.—Gov. Abbett signed the bill which gives the Riparian Commissioners the right to erect piers and wharves in the low water of the lower New York Bay along the New Jersey front, so that they can be used for commercial purposes and deep water reached. The line must be fixed only after consultation with a Board of Examiners appointed by the Secretary of War. This will give an immense revenue to the State.

Assistant Secretary Wharton Married.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—W. F. Wharton, Assistant-Secretary of State, and Miss Susan Lay were quietly married at the residence of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Hobson, last evening. Only intimate friends of the couple were present at their marriage. Miss Lay is a daughter of Col. Richard Lay, United States Consul-General to Ottawa, and is a niece of Mrs. Vice-President Morton.

The Mother Wrongly Accused.

LYONS, N. Y., Feb. 11.—A great sensation was caused here by the arrest of Mrs. George Archer, an estimable lady, who had just lost her baby, being charged with murdering the child. The Coroner's jury has exonerated the mother, the child having died from natural causes.

The Russian Cruelty Story.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The State Department has not as yet received any information as to the imprisonment of Americans in Russian coal mines, as published in the papers, and no action is contemplated in the absence of official information on the subject.

Bail for Mrs. McGonegal.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Old Dr. Henry McGonegal, the gifted, pretty Anna Goodwin, the cigarette girl, will probably be released on $5,000 bail to-day or to-morrow, pending the disposition of his case by the Court of Appeals.

Secretary Train Dead.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 11.—Abner L. Train, secretary of the State Forestry Commission, died last night at his residence in this city after a brief illness.

Great Strike of Glass Workers Pending.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—A great strike of the glassworkers of Paris and the vicinity is pending. A demand for an increase of wages is the cause of the agitation.

PARNELL NOT SATISFIED.

The Prospects of an Amicable Settlement of the Irish Trouble Grow Darker.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—The prospects of an amicable settlement of the Irish imbroglio grow darker as the time for the proposed final meeting to-morrow draws near. It is not believed that a complete statement can be submitted.

Some of the Healyites intend to demand at the meeting that negotiations be broken off for the reason, they assert, that too much inference is paid to Parnell's position and claims.

The Dublin Irish Times asserts that the differences existing between Parnell and Gladstone are so serious as to be irreconcilable.

Mr. Parnell insists that Sir William Vernon Harcourt, whom he regards as Gladstone's eventual successor, shall be included as acquiescing in the assurances given by the Liberal leaders with regard to a home rule programme. It is stated that Mr. McCarthy has been advised by Sir Vernon Harcourt to decline any further communication with Mr. Parnell, and that in consequence Parnell refuses to retire for a period longer than the present session of Parliament. He also insists upon remaining in control of the Irish party until the next general election.

Mr. Thomas P. Gill has arrived here from Paris and has held conferences with Parnell and Sexton.

Want a Recount in New Hampshire.

CONCORD, N. H., Feb. 11.—Mr. Whitcher of Haverhill, Democrat, has given notice of a bill to provide for the taking of a census of the State and for an appropriation to defray the expenses of the work. Mr. Whitcher alleges that Democratic towns all over the State have been wrongfully estimated in the United States census.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The International Monetary Conference has adjourned until March 2, 1891.

Aunt Peggy Joslin, aged 98 years, the oldest resident at May's Landing, N. J., is dead.

Mr. Romain Cooper, aged 80 years, died suddenly as he was about to vote in the town of Baldwin, N. Y.

The President has nominated James H. Reed to be United States Judge of the Western District of Pennsylvania.

The trial of Francis Lingo for the murder of Mrs. Miller has been definitely fixed for March 4 at Camden, N. J.

The Lewisburg, Pa., Furniture Factory was partially destroyed by fire and John Frye, the watchman, was so badly burned that he died at noon.

O. M. Gray, a freight conductor on the West Shore Railroad, fell between two cars at Coxsers, N. Y., and was killed. He lived at New Durham.

The election fight is being carried on vigorously by both sides in Nova Scotia. The great issue is unrestricted reciprocity with the United States.

Jonathan Spotts, a farmer, 70 years old, of Williamsport, Pa., committed suicide by discharging the contents of an army musket into his mouth.

Mme. Augusta Berg died at the Metropolitan Hotel, in New York, of morphine poisoning, though extraordinary measures were taken to save her life.

Pugilist Jackson says he intends to challenge John L. Sullivan to a mill for the championship, and that the Boston slugger must fight him or surrender the belt.

Gov. Hill has not relinquished his idea of nominating James F. Pierce for Superintendent of Insurance, and the nomination when made will probably be confirmed.

The police board of Buffalo, N. Y., rescinded its action in giving ex-Chief of Police Morin a pension, it having been discovered that a false statement was made about the number of years he served as an officer.

The forty lasters employed in the shoe shop of John Peach at Avon, Mass., have quit work. The trouble started when lasting machines were put in, the union submitting a scale of prices which Mr. Peach declared he could not pay with any profit to himself.

Judge Knowlton of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts has rendered a decision in the case of Bell vs. the Registrars of voters of Lawrence, holding that the payment of a poll tax by a political committee may be accepted by the citizens, and the agency thus ratified; the citizens can legally vote.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—For New England: Slightly cooler, westerly winds, fair weather.

For Eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey: Fair weather, colder, westerly winds, becoming variable, warmer.

For Western New York and Western Pennsylvania: Fair, variable winds, warmer Thursday.

For Eastern New York: Slightly colder westerly winds, fair weather.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—Measles are epidemic in Plainfield. They are said to have started in Bryant school.

—Gavett has 100 dozen Mitchell band goblets, fine quality, which he is closing out at 56 cents a dozen.

—The church bell of Holy Cross church will not be rung while Mr. Worth of Grove street is lying so seriously ill.

—Mayor Gilbert will talk to young men about money and banking at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-morrow evening, at 8 o'clock. Every man in the city is invited.

—The regular business meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held in the rooms on Front street at half-past three o'clock Thursday afternoon.

—The following branches are regularly taught at the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association: Mechanical drawing, short-hand, book-keeping, penmanship, and vocal music.

—A rare bargain is advertised in another column—a gilt-edged mortgage of $10,000 bearing interest at 6 per cent., on property worth $30,000 within 200 yards of the railroad station.

—A special meeting of the Plainfield Bicycle Club will be held Saturday evening, for the election of new members and the transaction of such other business as may come before the meeting.

—The Democratic voters of North Plainfield Township wil meet at the corner of Somerset street and Green Brook road Friday evening, to transact business in connection with the coming election.

—Mrs. George Buche, who lives on West Front street, next door to No. 2's engine-house, lies ill at her home, and would be thankful to any kind-hearted woman for personal attention. She has no one to give her the care she needs.

—Services will be held in St. Mary's church to-night at eight o'clock, and on every Wednesday and Friday evening during Lent at the same hour. On Wednesday evenings (to-night excepted) the sermons will be delivered by visiting clergymen.

—Next Friday evening a company of Scottish concert singers will hold forth at Music Hall. The soloists are Miss Alice Steel, soprano; Miss Edith Ross, contralto; Alex. Finlayson, tenor; and Jas. Fleming, basso. Besides these Jules Guttion, violinist; Chas. Ferguson, humorist and vocalist; Jas. Blaike, organist; and W. MacLennan, champion solo dancer and piper of the world, are to appear and entertain. Seats are now on sale.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

The Rev. T. Logan Murphy will preach to-night at St. Luke's Episcopal church, Roselle.

A phantom party was given by Mrs. Charles B. Corwin, at her home on East Ninth street, last evening.

The Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church of this city, preached the dedicatory sermon at the dedication of the new Baptist church at Junction yesterday.

Because of the serious condition of Thomas Worth, Dr. Janeway of New York was called in consultation yesterday. He expressed entire satisfaction with Dr. Probasco's diagnosis of the case and endorsed his treatment. The patient is very sick with pneumonia and his age is against his recovery though all hope is not surrendered.

Bound Brook a Borough, in Spite of William's Protest.

Despite the fact that William Archibald Coddington issued a printed affidavit and circulated it industriously among the Bound Brook voters, stating that he was opposed to making Bound Brook a borough at this time, the election on the borough question yesterday was in favor of incorporating the town on the Raritan into a borough by a big majority.

The number of ballots cast was 301. Of these 7 were rejected; 175 were for incorporation, and 119 were against.

Ash Wednesday at the Holy Cross.

The musical part of the Ash Wednesday service at the Holy Cross church was very beautifully rendered by the men and boys of the vested choir, under the leadership of W. H. Miner, the new organist and choir master. A sermon on how to observe the lesson of Lent was preached by the rector, the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, and if his instructions be faithfully carried out by church members the holy season will not have been spent in vain. There was a large congregation.

Mt. Ararat Has a Fire.

Ripley Hill, Chauncey B. Ripley's pet property at Westfield, had another advertisement last night, when a barrack filled with hay standing on one of the lots for sale at the crest of the hill caught fire. The hay and barrack were totally consumed, causing a loss of about $200 for Dr. Ripley. The fire made a splendid midnight beacon for the Mt. Ararat villagers.

Ladies, clean your kid gloves with Mather's glove cleaner; for sale only by Mrs. J. C. Dyer, 38 West Front street. All the latest novelties of the season in fine Millinery. Correct styles.

WHO WILL GET THE CHILDREN?

The Aunt Claims the Orphans, But the Knights of Pythias Hold Them Back.

An interesting legal struggle for the possession of the three orphan children of the late John L. Duckworth, of this city, is about to be begun by James Keating, a well-to-do liveryman and general carman of Elizabeth and a member of the Americus Club, against the Plainfield Knights of Pythias and the Plainfield Children's Home. Mr. Keating, who lives at No. 116 South Park street, gave to a reporter yesterday the following history of the case:

About ten years ago his wife's sister, Miss Joanna Powers, married Mr. Duckworth, who was then a young man of Elizabethport. Soon after their marriage they removed to Plainfield, where Duckworth obtained employment in the Potter Press Works. A girl, now aged nine, a boy, aged six, and a girl, aged four, were born. Two years ago Mrs. Duckworth died of consumption. Her husband, who joined the Plainfield branch of the Knights of Pythias, put the little boy in the Children's Home and kept the girls at the house of a Mr. Chamberlain, where he boarded. Later, the eldest girl was taken charge of by a Miss Miller, with whom the young widower kept company, and to whom, it is alleged, he was engaged to be married.

About two weeks ago Duckworth was stricken with pneumonia, and he died after a few days' illness. He was buried Saturday, Jan. 31. At the funeral a dispute arose as to what should be done with the orphans.

"It was said that the father's dying wish was that they should remain where they were"—said Mr. Keating—"but the fact is that Duckworth was carried off so quickly that he had no opportunity to make any provision regarding his children. His step-sister, Mrs. Frederick Casner, of Greenville, offered to take the orphans, but as her means are limited and she has all she can do to support her own family, my wife said she would take the children and rear them. Besides, she is the nearest of kin, and has the best right to their custody. This arrangement at the time seemed satisfactory all round, but a few days afterwards when we went for the children we found they had all been put into the Home by Mr. Chamberlain and the Knights of Pythias, and that we could not get them. I induced Wm. Kreig, of Elizabeth, who belonged to the order in that city, to go with me to Plainfield and explain matters to the Knights, but they did not seem to be disposed to let the children be removed, and as they put them in the Home the authorities of that institution won't surrender the children unless legal steps are taken to compel them to do so. I sent a letter to the Knights, in which I made for my wife a formal demand for the guardianship of the orphans, as we are well able to keep and educate them. My letter was read at the last meeting of the Plainfield branch, but I have not received a reply.

"On behalf of my wife and her sister, Mrs. Murphy, who lives in Greenville, and who is anxious that Mrs. Keating should take charge of the orphans, I shall certainly resort to every legal method to compel the Home to surrender the children. I have consulted Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, and he informs me that my wife has an undoubted right to the custodianship of her young relatives."

Mr. Keating visited Plainfield yesterday afternoon to consult with his lawyer. When Duckworth died he had life insurance of about $100 coming to him, which is being used partly to defray the cost of maintaining his orphans at the Home. When this money is exhausted they will become a burden on the institution, and a point that will likely be raised by Mrs. Keating's lawyer is that the Home will be really benefited financially by turning the children over to their lawful guardian, who can amply demonstrate that her means are sufficient to properly support them. The suit for the children will not only excite much interest among the Knights of Pythias at Elizabeth and Plainfield, but also among the residents of Elizabethport, where Mrs. Keating is well known, being a descendant of one of the oldest families of that section of Elizabeth.

Somerset's Senatorial Contest.

The special committee appointed to consider the contest over the Senatorial seat of W. J. Keys of Somerset county began work yesterday at Trenton, and were in session two hours. It was a private sitting, although nobody would have been refused admittance.

"All we did"—said Senator McDonald, the Chairman, subsequently—"was to take up the evidence handed over to us last night by the President of the Senate. This is quite voluminous, and the examination of it will probably occupy us all this week. By next week we will very likely give the counsel in the case an opportunity to be heard."

The evidence consists of the testimony taken at Somerville, and has already been reported in THE PRESS.

The Juniors Have an Entertainment.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church, held a social gathering yesterday afternoon at four o'clock. The programme consisted of an address by the Rev. Mr. Schenck, recitations by Edgar Sheppard and Horace Martin, and readings by Josie Runyon, George Snedeker, Charles Dolliver and Edgar Sheppard. Refreshments were served. The society hold their regular meeting to-morrow afternoon at four o'clock.

He Gained Four Pounds and Won the Prize.

Last evening after business hours, Arthur M. Griffen celebrated the completion of his stock-taking by giving his employes and a particular friend or two, a banquet in the store. The counters were spread with quantities of good things from a boiler of stewed oysters to a can of iced cream, and the company sat round on nail kegs and seed bags, filling themselves with palatable pleasures and the enjoyment of the good songs and stories contributed by all.

Before the feast everyone present was carefully weighed, the weight marked on a card hung on each one's breast, and all were stood in a row and photographed by flash light. After the feast all were carefully weighed again to decide who had won the prize offered to the one who gained the most. Several were found to be 3 and 3½ pounds heavier, but the one who had gained 4 pounds won.

Mass-Meetings in the Churches Sunday Night.

Two temperance mass-meetings are to be held under the auspices of the Ministers' Association of Plainfield Sunday evening. The Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, the Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham, the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, and the Rev. C. B. Mitchell, will address the meeting in the First Baptist church; and the Rev. W. R. Richards, the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, the Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman, the Rev. Asa Reed Dilts, and the Rev. C. L. Goodrich, will speak at the meeting in the Crescent Avenue church. The other churches will be closed. The pastors will put themselves on record as being opposed to all licensing of bar rooms, but will especially protest against the opening of a new saloon in the Pond Machine Tool Works neighborhood and at The Elkwood, West Second street.

Young Ladies to Give an "Orange Tea."

A novel entertainment will be given by the Young Ladies' Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, to-morrow evening.

At an "orange tea," to be held in the lecture room, Mrs. Zayyah Barakat, a native of Mt. Lebanon, Syria, will lecture on the life and customs of Syria. The lecture will be illustrated by young people dressed to represent the costumes worn in Syria four thousand years ago. The lecture will be from 8 until 9 o'clock. Supper may be had from 6 to 8, and from 9 until 10. Tickets, including supper, will cost 50 cents.

The young ladies of this society are supporting a missionary at work on the Congo, and also one in this country, and the proceeds from the entertainment will be devoted to that object.

Anniversary at the German Church.

To-morrow evening at eight o'clock an anniversary entertainment will be given in the German church under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society. P. Conde will give violin solos. Refreshments will be served. A cordial invitation is extended to all, especially to the church members and to members of the Ladies' Aid Society. No admission will be charged, but a collection will be taken for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital. Those who cannot be present but who wish to give their share to this good purpose are requested to remit either to Mrs. V. Utsinger or to the pastor of the church as soon as possible.

At Last a Reliable City Map.

Not within the past ten years has there been issued a map of this city and the borough that can be depended on, or that in any way fills the great want of one.

But at last, after over a year's labor, the well-known city surveyor and county engineer, F. A. Dunham, has completed a map 4 by 6 feet in dimensions, that is absolutely and entirely reliable. It is up to date and includes Plainfield and North Plainfield. H. C. VanEmburgh and J. F. Hubbard are canvassing for subscribers, and they should sell a thousand at least.

Westfield's Fire Election.

The annual election of the Westfield Fire Department took place last night. John J. Schmidt was re-elected Chief over Isaac Seeley by 16 majority. Isaac Brokaw was chosen First Assistant and Robert Woodruff, Jr., Second Assistant, without opposition.

Every home should be supplied with a with a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup—the great family remedy.

A PROTEST FROM THE PASTORS.

"NO MORE SALOONS!" THEY CRY, "AND LESS PERNICIOUS LEGISLATION."

"Voicing the Sentiment of Plainfield's Godly People", They Demand Curtailment of Liquor-Dealers' Power, and Especially Denounce the Licensing of a Bar Room at The Elkwood.

At the monthly meeting of the Ministers' Association of Plainfield, held Feb. 9, a paper entitled "Some Recent Chapters in the History of the Liquor Traffic", with special reference to New Jersey and Plainfield, was read by the Rev. Cornelius Schenck. Its publication in the city papers was unanimously requested, and its contents were indorsed by the following members of the Association:

D. J. Yerkes, D. D., W. B. Richards, E. M. Rodman, D. D., Asa Reed Dilts, C. L. Goodrich, A. H. Lewis, D. D., Charles B. Mitchell, Edward Love, W. E. Honeyman, K. P. Ketcham, D. D.

The following is the paper:

The liquor power of the country is making history rapidly, and that not of a short kind. In many States of the Union laws have been passed in every way favorable to the saloons. Indeed, statutes generally, referring to the regulation and control of the traffic, are truly in their favor. It is quite impossible under present laws to secure the conviction of a saloon-keeper, though the evidence be general that he is constantly violating the same.

In our neighboring State, New York, a bill was recently introduced into the Legislature having for its object the granting of bar privileges at balls, dances, concerts and socials without limit of time—allowing an all-night carousal. That the frequenters of such places and participants in such amusements should be obliged to quench their thirst, after a certain hour of the night, with water, seemed to them an unnecessary hardship, and an abridgement of their personal liberty. The bill was supported strongly by the proprietors of dance houses and others. It was vigorously opposed by such reformers as Dr. Crosby and Bishop Doane, and by such organizations as the Society for the Suppression of Vice.

In Pennsylvania, our other neighbor, the same power is doing its best either to repeal the Brooks high license law or to render inoperative its salient feature by amendment.

In New Jersey the demands of the saloon upon the Legislature for laws favorable to it exceed in impertinence and anything of previous years. Not satisfied with the purchased privilege of debauching morals, destroying peace and disrupting homes six days in the week, it now lays its hand upon the pearl of days—the Holy Sabbath—, and demands that it surrender one-half of its sacred hours to the service of Satan.

Additionally, it announced that it would be satisfied with nothing less than a general reduction of the license fee to $100, and the repeal of the law which makes Sunday selling equivalent to keeping a disorderly house. We are informed that a powerful lobby are now at work in Trenton seeking to procure the desired legislation.

A few days ago a bill was introduced by an Assemblyman from Union county, allowing, in effect, the social clubs the right to dispense liquors at a minimum fee of $50. The design of the ordinance is to grant drinking privileges to the clubs desiring them, without exacting the fee required of the saloon. It is

A MOST PERNICIOUS BILL.

If passed, it will bring under suspicion all clubs—good and bad. It will multiply the number of private drinking establishments, and make the drinking habit easy to acquire.

The Hudson County Liquor Dealers' Association held their quarterly meeting last Wednesday night in Roche's Hall, Jersey City. The president announced that the State Liquor Dealers' Association had instructed its counsel, Gen. Wm. F. Abbett, son of Governor Abbett, to prepare a bill to be presented to the Legislature, which is intended to take the place of the Werts law. Secretary Hart read a copy of the proposed bill for the benefit of the members. The bill provides for a uniform license fee of $100, throughout the State. It also provides that violators of the Sunday law be fined not over $25 by a police justice. Under the present law saloons that are kept open on Sunday are classed as disorderly houses. The bill was indorsed by the Association, and a committee was appointed to visit Trenton and help secure its passage.

Still another chapter! On the same day of last week, so says The Elizabeth Journal, there was a sharp debate in the Senate over Assembly Bill 25, introduced by the same Assemblyman, Mr. Lane of Union county. The bill provides that after a saloon license has once been granted it shall not be necessary that a new application recommended by freeholders shall be first signed and presented to the excise board, but the filing of a petition for renewal, signed by the applicant, accompanied by a new bond, shall confer power on the excise board to renew such license for a year. We regret to record the fact that the Senator from Union county argued in its favor, and seriously asserted that "the saloon-keeper ought not to be put to the trouble of getting signers each year, any more than doctors, lawyers or dentists should each year be compelled to pass examinations." The bill passed the Senate by the vote of 12 to 9. This action of our Legislature only illustrates in New Jersey politics. It shows that the saloon is becoming more and more intrenched by legal enactments.

Now, what our immediate duty is in view of pending legislation and what steps we should take in the premises, we had not proposed to ourselves to consider. But we would say, however, that we believe something can be done and should be done. Among other things, we should inform our people—the people of our churches—of the demands of the liquor men, and the doings of the Legislature. Many are unaware of what is really transpiring. Information will be one of the means of creating a public sentiment unfavorable to the plots of the saloon. And then connection should be established between our representatives at Trenton and ourselves. The wishes and wants of constituents should be made known by personal approach, private letter or public appeal. Further, remonstrances abundantly signed should be sent to our legislators. If these and other measures fail to accomplish that which we desire, they will at least declare that the Christian ministry and Christian people are not indifferent respecting the matter; and the charge that unconcern means virtual approbation cannot be made against us.

IN OUR OWN CITY

the saloon is not inactive. At the last meeting of the Common Council, held Monday, Feb. 2, an ordinance was introduced and passed to its second reading, allowing saloons the privilege of keeping open house until midnight. The law requiring the saloon-keeper to close his establishment at eleven P. M. is a necessary police regulation and is in the interest of the peace and quiet of the community. To extend the time of closing till twelve is plainly in the interest of the saloon-keeper, the hardened drinker, and the debauchee. It is legislation in favor of a class—and that the worst in the community. It is subversive of the very object of law which, according to Gladstone, is to make it as easy as possible to do right and as hard as possible to do wrong. In the name of all law-abiding and order-loving people we make solemn protest against such

A MONSTROUS PROPOSITION.

At the same meeting of Council, applications for license for the ensuing year were received. While we must express our disapproval of the system, and would be gratified if there should be no renewals, we most earnestly remonstrate against an increase in the number of saloon licenses. The two saloons asked for would work incalculable harm. The one in the centre of a large manufacturing population would absorb the earnings of many of the operatives, would create need and distress in many homes, and would foster vice and crime.

The other, viz., the application of J. B. Miller for a saloon at No. 10 West Second street, in what is known as Amphion Hall, or Hand's building, should not be granted for the reasons that:

1. The wants of the drinking public in this part of the city are already abundantly accommodated. Within a radius of fifty yards there are now four saloons and two hotels. To plant another saloon within the circle would be to burden unfairly a portion of the community already oppressed.

2. The upper floor of Hand's building is occupied almost nightly by one or more of the excellent beneficial societies which abound in our city. They are composed largely of young men who are forming their characters for life. The aim of these associations is the cultivation of frugal and temperate habits.

THE ALLUREMENTS OF A SALOON

in the same building, with the added attractions of pool, billiards and bowling, would constitute a temptation to which young men should not be subjected, and which no City Council should willingly impose.

3. Within seventy-five feet of said building is a Christian church, whose object is the moral and religious improvement of the community. It exists for the purpose of helping men and women to lead honest, honorable, sober, industrious and Christian lives. For thirty years this has been its mission. It has contributed, in common with the other churches of Plainfield, to the real and enduring prosperity of the city. It is now proposed to establish within the cast of a stone an agency which is confessedly just the opposite in aim and effect; to undo and offset if possible, the work of God; to provide a constant menace to goodness; and to offend the refined taste and religious sensibility of Christian people. While we thus record our personal convictions as ministers, we feel that we are expressing, also, the unanimous desire of all godly and good people who have the true welfare of the city at heart.

Bad News for Jersey Dudes.

The small boy and the dudes who smoke cigarettes in New Jersey are now on the ragged edge.

Yesterday Senator Fowler introduced a bill in the Trenton Legislature which prohibits utterly the sale of cigarettes in the State, under a penalty of $20 for each offense. Mr. Fowler does not like the quality of cigarettes smoked by the correspondents in the Senate Chamber. Hence his attack upon their happiness and that of boys and dudes.

There can be no reasonable excuse for neglecting a cough or cold, when one bottle of Hires' Cough Cure for a quarter, to be had anywhere, does the work. Be sure to get what you ask for—Hires' Cough Cure.

Forced to Come to Plainfield to Give Their Concert.

Because of the continuance of gospel meetings in the Methodist church of Westfield, the musical society of that town have no place wherein to give their next concert which is announced on the subscription tickets for to-morrow evening. Consequently the society managers were compelled to come to Plainfield and hire a hall for the purpose.

The Casino has been rented for next Monday evening, when the concert will be given. A special rate of 15 cents has been arranged for excursion fare between the two stations. The tickets are sold by subscription for the season, as is the case with Plainfield's vocal societies. But upon this occasion the Westfield society do not think it courteous to give a concert in this city with the doors closed to Plainfield people. So tickets at one dollar each may be purchased at Reynolds' pharmacy.

The Westfield chorus numbers 125 voices. It is conducted by C. Mortimer Wiske who is equalled by few. The Amphion orchestra of Brooklyn will accompany the vocalists. The soloists will be Anna Mooney Burch, the greatly admired soprano, and Wm. J. Lavin the tenor who is also engaged for the coming concert of the Plainfield Choral Society.

Sign Thy Will Ere the Fleeting Years Are Spent.

[From The Trenton Times.]

Of course make your will, and not only make it but sign it in time. It is folly to think of making it and postponing it, when life is uncertain and death is absolutely sure to come.

The ex-mayor of Plainfield, Job Male, now deceased, did not observe this well-known cautionary rule, and died without completing his will. Says The Press of that city, in giving the particulars, after stating that on his death bed he asked a lawyer to draw his last will and it was presented to him:

"The doctors, recognizing their patient's intense desire to will away his property before his death in the ways he had devised and long intended, did everything possible to prolong his life short of a too daring treatment. But he died before the signing of his name while the lawyer was copying with all human speed the provisions and bequests that the dying man had just dictated to him."

And he died worth half a million, much of which he intended to give to noble charities. Not one cent can now go to the city library he founded and which was to have received a fine bequest, nor to his church.

Don't protract making your will, reader, if you have any property to bequeath.

An Inequality of the Light Question.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—It is my privilege to pay a gas bill and also an electric light bill each month. When the electric light and gas light companies were separate, I was required to pay my bill before the 10th of the month in order to receive 10 per cent. discount on a bill of $3 or more. Now my bills come from the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company, and I have ten days from date of presentation to pay my electric light bill, the same as I have always had from the gas company. Now that one company controls both plants, it is all right to have the same time to pay bills and receive the discount. But here, Mr. PRESS, is what I want to complain about: When my gas bill is $1.25 I can get a discount of 10 per cent., but my electric light bill must be $3 before I can get a like discount. Should not the consumers of electricity have the same advantage as the consumers of gas? A CONSUMER.

Resolutions of Regret.

At a meeting of Ivanhoe Council, No. 1074, American Legion of Honor, held in Plainfield, N. J., February 10, 1891, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, The Supreme Ruler in His allwise providence and unerring wisdom has seen fit to remove from our Council by death our brother and companion, Robert Mitchell;

Resolved, That while we humbly bow in submission to the will of the Divine Master, we also deep deplore the loss of one whose wise counsel as one of our Board of Trustees, and faithful services as a companion of our Order, had endeared him to us as a body;

Resolved, That we tender our sincere sympathy to his family, trusting that in this great trial, they will receive the consolation that comes from above, in sorrow's hour, and the assurance of our brotherly interest in their welfare;

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread in full upon the minutes of the Council; published in the daily papers, and a copy forwarded to the family by the Secretary.

A Sensitive Patron.

"You've got a fellow in there that won't wait on me again, not much," said an irate customer, as he emerged from the dining-room and slapped his check down before the hotel clerk.

"What's the trouble, sir?" asked the clerk.

"I'm not stingy," continued the customer, "and don't mind giving tips, but when a waiter hangs round when a fellow is nearly through eating, and whistles 'Do Not Forget Me,' I think it is about time something was done."

The offer of a twenty-five-cent cigar seemed to wonderfully pacify the enraged customer.—Boston Herald.

THE RUSTY OLD SABER.

A rusty saber hangs up on the wall,
All battered and twisted and eaten by rust.
'Twas new when its owner heard Liberty call,
And nobly his fingers the weapon was thrust;
And many a desperate battle, I ween
This rusty and battered old saber has seen

My little boy asks me again and again
A hundred odd questions—"What good does it do?"
"And why is it rusty?" and "What makes that stain
At the handle?" "What is it worth, Pa, to you?"
The little chap never heard Liberty call,
He hasn't heard Freedom's harsh lesson at all.

I tell him the story—how up through the smoke
Of Malvern Hill's battle the enemy came;
Up! Up to the cannon until the line broke,
Bent, wavered and vanished—scorched out by the flame.
How over the cannon one brave fellow lay,
The saber held tight in his dead hand that day.

My little boy ponders the tale at my knee,
"I wish we had sabers and fighting," he says,
"I wish there were tyrants and men to set free,
And heroes to suffer and fight for a prize.
There isn't a war or a chance to be brave,
Or swords to be carried, or country to save."

Ah! little boy! Never found hero a time,
In all of the ages that history knows,
So filled up as this age with chances sublime
For meeting and conquering deadliest foes.
Not with the old saber can you win your fight,
Your weapon is forged out of justice and right.

For falsehood chains truth and injustice is strong,
And ignorance tramples on Liberty's law,
The country needs men with a hatred for wrong,
A heart without fear and a life without flaw.
And nothing is nobler, my boy, than the fight
That honest boys make to be true to the right.

A CHEAP COAT.

A Little Scheme That Worked Like a Charm.

[Written for This Paper.]

A FEW days ago I saw my friend Ferguson sitting on a bench in Central Park. I took a seat by his side and we conversed about the weather, politics, and also about ten dollars which I had loaned Ferguson some months ago, and which he was to have paid back by three o'clock of the afternoon of the following day. I don't think I would have mentioned the ten dollars to Ferguson if there had not been outward indications in the superior quality of his raiment that led me to believe that his finances had improved sufficiently to stand the strain. Usually Ferguson wears a shabby coat, but on this occasion he wore an elegantly fitting coat of the finest kind of material.

Ferguson seemed to suspect that his coat was the cause of my taking it for granted that he was in flourishing circumstances, for he said: "This is the handsomest coat ever I had, but it only cost seven dollars."

"I'd like to buy a whole suit at that figure," I replied, examining the all-wool texture of the garb.

"I don't think the party who sold me this has any more at that price. It's funny how I came to get it," said Ferguson.

"If you are sure that it is funny, I'd like to hear about it," I replied.

"My wife's brother, a young man from New Jersey, has been paying us a visit. He is a very nice young man, but he is not any too smart. Well, the morning after he arrived he started out to see the sights. While strolling around City Hall he drifted into Baxter street. All at once a man rushed out of a dark little den of a store, picked up my wife's brother just as if he was a clothing-store dummy, and carried him inside. My wife's brother struggled, but in vain. The grip of the man, who was the proprietor of a clothing store, was like that of a candidate in a closely contested election. Thomas, that's the name of my wife's brother, says that it reminded him of a picture he had seen of Jacob wrestling with the angel. The other fellow was Jacob.

"Well, when the man got Thomas inside, two other gentlemen, a clerk and a cashier, took off his coat in the twinkling of an eye, and had a new one on him like a flash. One of the gentlemen said: 'O, ain't he cunning? Don't dot goat fit him shust like de baber on de walls, and all for seven tollars.'

"The coat was made of the very finest kind of cloth and did fit Thomas very nicely. Thomas has an eye for business, even if he is from New Jersey, so the clothiers had no trouble in selling him a twenty-dollar coat for seven dollars, although Thomas owned up that his conscience troubled him for having swindled the clothiers. They took off the coat, wrapped it up in a nice bundle, Thomas put on his old coat and hurried home to us to show us what a bargain he had made; but I wish you had seen his face when he opened the bundle, and instead of the expensive coat he had purchased he held up a shop-worn, frayed-out garment that was not worth two dollars. He took the coat back to the clothiers but they refused to refund the money, alleging that he was trying to swindle them by bringing back a coat they had never sold him.

"I tell you," continued Ferguson, "I was mad, but I made up my mind to get even with those Baxter street men. I have a personal friend named O'Rafferty. I think he may be of Irish descent. We got up a little scheme that worked like a charm. I put on a shabby coat and strolled past that identical store, while O'Rafferty loitered in the neighborhood. Sure enough the proprietor rushed out and grabbed me just like a spider does an unsuspecting fly. They had my old coat off and a real handsome one on me before I could catch my breath. It was a pretty good fit, and I cheerfully paid seven dollars for it. Then they wanted to wrap it up for me, but I said I believed I'd keep it on. The proprietor tried persuasion at first, but, finding me obdurate, he called for reinforcements. The clerk and the cashier came to his rescue, and they all tried to get me to take the coat off. They begin to use force. Just then O'Rafferty came in, and the proprietor turned a couple of summersaults and stood on his head in the corner. While I was pounding the clerk, O'Rafferty got the cashier down and warmed him with the top of a dry-goods box. In the meantime the proprietor recuperated, rushed to the door and called: 'Bolice! bolice!'"

"Did the police come?"

"You bet they did, but O'Rafferty has a pull somehow or other with the police, and the consequence was the police clubbed the entire firm, arrested them, and we went along as witnesses. O'Rafferty, who keeps a saloon and has considerable political influence, was personally acquainted with the justice, whose name was O'Donohue, so the clothiers were fined ten dollars each, and as I had bought the coat I was allowed to keep it. So, you see, it is really a twenty-dollar coat, but you must not suppose, Alex, that I'm flush because I'm wearing fine clothes; but election times are coming, and I've got a promise from O'Rafferty that I am to have a steady job carrying a transparency, and I'll soon have money, and then I'll pay up, so you see the outlook is brighter than it was."

I congratulated Ferguson on his political prospect, and am in hopes that I will have a chance to get my money back.

IT WAS THE WHISTLE.

An Old Lady's Experience with a Steam Engine.

Dr. C. C. Abbott, in "Outings at Odd Times," tells a tragic tale of an adventure which once befell an old lady, "long, long ago." The spot where she lived was almost a wilderness, and was beset with the perils of a new and scantily-settled land.

The now almost-forgotten Camden & Amboy railroad was in operation, but, though scarcely a mile distant, it was as nothing to her. She knew neither what nor where it was. But where the best whortleberries grew, in the back swamp, was knowledge worth her possessing.

Although her cousin Abijah had killed a bear there during the winter, she did not stop to think of that, but one day started for berries where few men would care to follow. With a light heart she gathered and gathered, until at length an ominous shrieking fell upon her ears.

"Could it be another bear?" thought she, and turned her face homeward. Her big basket was not quite full, and there were such loads of fruit within easy reach! This was tantalizing, but all her doubt vanished with the second shriller, more unearthly scream.

The path was no longer plain, nor was she sure-footed. As she pitched recklessly forward the berries were bounced by handfuls from her basket, and finally in despair she threw aside the basket itself.

And still sounded through the swamp the terrible screeching of that angry bear. At last she could see her cottage through the thickly-set trees, but not so plainly the tortuous path. One misstep, and she sank, waist-deep, in the yielding mud of an old well, and there she stood screaming, until her husband came to the rescue.

"Do be still, Hannah," was his first remark, after she had chokingly called his attention to the still audible cries of the bear; "that's only the new-fangled steam-engine whistlin'!"

"And to think," the old lady was wont to remark, on concluding this story, "to think I lost all them beautiful berries!"—Youth's Companion.

A Woman in the Moon.

It may not be generally known, but there is the head of a girl in the moon, says the Atchison Globe. It is a profile, and can be easily discerned when the moon is full. When the moon is in the Eastern sky she is looking north and the head inclines upward. At the top of the yellow orb you will see her hair and a sort of haughty bang which conceals most of her forehead; a little below you will see her eye; then comes her nose (this is rather indistinct), then will be seen the chin, underneath which a very shapely neck curves back, indicating that she is well fed.

THE FIRST GROUSE.

How a Boy Feels When He Shoots His First Bird.

A boy of fourteen, alert, but too full of life to move slowly and cautiously, is walking along an old road in the woods, a road that winds here and there with meanderings that now seem vagrant and purposeless, but once led to the various piles of cordwood and logs, for whose harvesting it was hewn.

Goodly trees have since grown up from saplings that the judicious axe then scorned. Beeches, whose flat branches are shelves of old gold; poplars, turned to towers of brighter metal by the same alchemy of autumn, and hemlocks, pyramids of unchanging green, shadow the leaf-strewn forest floor and its inconspicuous dotting of gray and russet stumps.

How happy the boy is in the freedom of the woods; proud to carry his first own gun as he treads gingerly but somewhat noisily over the fallen leaves and dry twigs, scanning with quick glances the thickets, imagining himself the last Mohican on the war-path, or Natty Bumpo scouting in the primeval wilderness.

Under his breath he tells the confiding chickadees and woodpeckers what undreamed-of danger they would be in from such a brave were he not in pursuit of nobler game.

Then he hears a sudden rustle of the dry leaves, the quit! quit! of a partridge, catches a glimpse of a rapidly-running brown object that on the instant is launched into a flashing thunderous flight.

Impeled by the instinct of the born sportsman he throws the gun to his shoulder, and scarcely with aim, but in the direction of the sound, pulls trigger and fires.

On the instant he is ashamed of his impulsive haste, that fooled him into wasting a precious charge on the inanimate evergreen twigs and sere leaves that come dropping and floating down to his shot, and is thankful that he is the only witness of his own foolishness.

But what is that? Above the patter and rustle of falling leaves comes a dull rebounding thud, followed by the rapid beat upon the leaf-strewn earth. With heart beating as fast he runs toward the sound, afraid to believe his senses, when he sees the noble grouse fluttering out feebly his last gasp.

He can not be sure that it is not all a dream that may vanish in a breath, till he has the bird safe in his hand, and then he is faint with joy. Was there ever such a shot? Would that all the world was here to see, for who can belief it just for the telling.

There never will be another such a bird, nor such a shot, for him. He fires a dozen ineffectual shots at fair marks that day, but the glory of that one shot would atone for twice as many misses, and he need not tell them, only of this, whereof he bears actual proof, though he himself can hardly accept it, till again and again he tests it by admiring look and touch.—Forest and Stream.

ODD OLD WATCHES

Curious and Artistic Ancient Timepieces.

Relics of Royal and Distinguished Personages of a By-Gone Time. Some Odd Specimens of the Watchmaker's Skill.

Some of the earliest watches were made about the beginning of the sixteenth century and were, of course, at that time considered marvels of skill. These first pocket-clocks, says the New York Journal, were made of almost any shape except round and had but one hand and required winding twice a day. Some of them in addition to recording the hour of the day, were perfect almanacs, giving the day of the month, the changes of the moon, the rising and setting of the sun and other items of useful information.

In the time of Queen Elizabeth watches were suspended round the necks of their wearers or attached to bracelets, and for this purpose they were made in the shape of crosses and various other suitable forms. Many of the early time-pieces, however, were much too large and heavy to be worn in this manner, and were, in fact, intended to be placed on private altars, such as were to be found in most of the noble houses of the day.

Some of these watches are in the form of a skull. One of these curious timepieces belonged to Mary Queen of Scots, and which she gave to the fair Mary Seaton, one of her "four Marys." This strange keepsake is ornamented with various figures, each having a particular meaning, and has a good deal of open work at the bottom in order to allow the sounding of the passing hours to be heard, as they are struck upon a silver bell in the interior.

A large number of the earlier watches were of an oval shape, though some resemble those of the present day. The poet Milton's watch—upon the face of which his name in full is engraved thus: Joanni Miltoni, 1631—may be seen in the British Museum as well as two said to belong to Oliver Cromwell. The case of one of these is made of silver, and is ornamented at the top with the protector's initials, "O. C.," and at the bottom is a representation of a curved sword, which, doubtless, is intended to denote that the owner belonged to the army.

There are many old-fashioned time pieces in the same collection. Most of these were made during the seventeenth century, and are in the form of skulls, crosses, bells and various fruits. There, also, is a very curious German book-shaped watch made about the year 1680. It is made of silver and when closed resembles a tiny book with the cover beautifully ornamented, as was the fashion in those days. When opened the face of the watch is disclosed.

Among other peculiar watches in this collection is one that was made in France between the years 1620 and 1630. It is in the form of a dog, resting. A little catch under the forepaws of the dog secures the outer case, and so we are not permitted to have a glimpse at the face of this curious watch.

King George III. was on one occasion presented with a remarkable watch, as a birthday present. It was less than an inch in diameter, weighed no more than a sixpence and repeated the hours, quarters and even the half-quarters. This beautiful time-piece was designed and made by a watch-maker named Arnold; and it is related that the King was so delighted with the gift that he sent in return a note of thanks and a sum of five hundred guineas. It is said that the clever workman was afterward offered more than a thousand pounds by the Emperor of Russia for a duplicate of the little marvel, but he refused to make another even for that large sum of money.

Another very small watch was formerly the property of King George III. It is set in a ring, and the dial, which is about the size of a sixpence, is surrounded with very small diamonds, with a large diamond on each side. It is of exquisite workmanship, and must have cost a large sum of money.

Some curious watches were made many years ago for enabling a person to tell the time during the night by merely feeling the face of the watch. These were called "touch watches," and had only one hand, with raised pins at each hour, so that a person could feel the time at night.

Then there were the curious old-fashioned table watches. These were usually constructed with a kind of dome, and were much larger than the watches in ordinary use, being made especially for use at table.

The Pusher.

The pusher is a table utensil with whose use the majority of bachelors may be unfamiliar, for it is used only by small children. Even the best bred youngster is apt at first to help himself with the tools that nature provided—to push refractory bits of food upon his spoon with his fingers. The pusher has a hatchet like that of a small spoon. Instead of a bowl it has across that end and at right angles with it a little shield-shaped piece of silver with the ends curved slightly forward, so that the food can not slide off at the sides. With a spoon in one hand and a pusher in the other some children can do wonderful things.

Air of School-Rooms.

Recent investigations, says a writer in Science, have shown a smaller number of bacteria in the air of a well-kept sewer than in that of a poorly-ventilated school-room. Yet many a mother would be sadly disturbed if her children should happen to look into the manhole of a sewer, but pays no attention to the condition of the school-room in which they spend a large part of the day.

The "Squaw Man."

The squaw men read of in the reports from the West are white men who have married squaws. It is rarely a case of love or romance, but simply of business on the part of the white man. He wants some one to work for him, and he wants to go six months without changing his shirt.

"MOTHERS, I WARN YOU!"

Watch carefully your daughter's health. When the appetite fails, or there is a growing nervous irritability, extreme lassitude, emaciation, the voice trembles, the step is irresolute, eyelids droop, and expression languid, then devote one hour to a thorough investigation of the cause.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S Vegetable Compound acts promptly in such cases; by its use your daughter will be speedily restored to health. It is the only Positive Cure and Legitimate Remedy for the peculiar weaknesses and ailments of women. Every Druggist sells it as a standard article, or sent by mail, in form of Pills or Lozenges, on receipt of $1.00.

DEAD TO THE WORLD

Kate Drexel Takes Her Final Vows as a Nun To-Day.

A VERY IMPOSING CEREMONY.

She Becomes Superior of a New Order Which Her Money Has Founded.

Archbishop Ryan Receives Her Vows. Cardinal Gibbons Present—The Home of the New Order Will be at Andalusia, Pa.—Teaching the Indian and Negro Will be the Work of the Sisters.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 12.—Only a few intimate friends and several Bishops, priests and sisters were present at the Convent of Mercy in this city this morning when the wealthy Miss Kate Drexel, in religion Sister Katherine, took her final vows.

To-day's ceremony was of double interest, inasmuch as it was the profession of the first sister of the new order, "The Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament," and one who in future will be its Mother Superior, and will devote her life and immense fortune of over $7,000,000 to the moral and intellectual elevation of the Indian and colored races.

The ceremony was a very imposing affair. Archbishop Ryan received the vows, after which Cardinal Gibbons preached a powerful sermon, dwelling on the sacrifices made by the new sister.

Miss Drexel is the daughter of the late Francis A. Drexel of Drexel & Co., the well known bankers of Philadelphia. About two years ago she entered the convent at Pittsburg, and after a year's probation received the white veil and the religious name of Sister Katherine. According to the rules of the order she was placed on probation for another year, leaving her the privilege of returning to the world if she did not feel happy and think herself able to undergo the hardships and mortifications of a religious life.

During her trial Miss Drexel has felt perfectly happy, and has been most exact in the observance of all the rules of the order. About six months ago she conceived the idea of founding an order whose sole work should be the teaching of the Indian and negro. Recently she wrote the rules of the new order and forwarded a copy of the same to Rome, where they met with the approval of the Pope and the College of Cardinals. The mother-house of the new order will be in Andulasia, a few miles outside of Philadelphia. Attached to it will be the Novitiate, where the young sisters will be trained for their future duties in teaching and administering to negroes and Indians. The institution will be called the Elizabeth House, and work will be begun on it next month.

Sister Katherine is now ready to receive a number of young ladies into her new order, and rumor has it that several society belles in this city and Philadelphia will soon renounce the world.

NEW YORKERS PROTEST.

Ex-President Cleveland Strongly Opposed to the Free Coinage of Silver.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—A mass meeting under the auspices of the Reform Club held at Cooper Union last night to protest against the free coinage of silver drew quite a large attendance. Ex-Secretary of the Treasury Fairchild called the meeting to order and introduced E. Ellery Anderson as the chairman of the evening.

It was moved and carried that a committee of 10 be appointed to go to Washington and oppose the measure.

Among the letters of regret read was one from ex-President Cleveland, in which he takes a decided stand against the Free Coinage bill. The letter is as follows:

"I have your note inviting me to attend to-morrow evening the meeting called for the purpose of voicing the position of the business men of our city to the free coinage of silver in the United States.

"I shall not be able to attend and address the meeting as you request, but I am glad that the business interests of New York are at last to be heard on this subject. It surely cannot be necessary for me to make a formal expression of my agreement with those that believe that the greatest peril would be invited by the adoption of the scheme embraced in the measure now pending in Congress for the unlimited coinage of silver at our mints.

"If we have developed an unexpected capacity for the assimilation of a largely increased volume of this currency, and even if we have demonstrated the usefulness of such an increase, other conditions fall far short of insuring us against disaster, if in the present situation we enter upon the dangerous, the reckless experiment of free, unlimited and independent silver coinage."

Ex-Secretary Fairchild, ex-Comptroller Trenholm, Professor Laughlin, of Cornell University, and others spoke against free coinage, and resolutions denouncing the system were passed.

The Great Strike in the Coke Region.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., Feb. 12.—All the miners throughout the coke region are idle, except at W. J. Rainey's works, where work is progressing as usual. Labor leaders claim that the men at these works will join the strikers within 24 hours. At Hogsett, Ferguson & Tyrone's works the drawers are at work, but will quit as soon as the ovens are cooled.

A Large Offer to Mr. Bonner.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 12.—J. S. Coxey, of Kentucky, owner of the Dixiana stud, has decided to make Robert Bonner an offer of $12,000 for the privilege of breeding Maud S. to Acolyte, Mr. Coxey to have the foal. Acolyte was bought for $40,000, and is the sire of the yearling Pilgrim, who showed a 2.20 gait, and whose owner, Col. R. B. Pepper, would not sell him for $30,000.

STARTLING STATEMENT.

The Secretary of the Whisky Trust Arrested on a Serious Charge.

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—Secretary Gibson, of the whisky trust, was arrested at the Grand Pacific Hotel at noon. He is charged with conspiracy to blow up all the distilleries of the country not members of the trust. Federal government officials are said to be pushing the case. He was held in $20,000 bail.

Solicitor-General A. Hart makes the following startling statement: "A short time ago we learned that Mr. Gibson was in correspondence with our gauger, O. S. DeWar. I came on here and DeWar revealed to me the propositions made to him by Gibson. Gibson told him that the trust could not get a foothold in Chicago so long as the Shufelds were located here. The obnoxious distillery must be removed.

"Gibson had a perfectly safe plan, he said. DeWar was to get $10,000 cash and $15,000 later, to introduce into the big spirit tank of the distillery, containing thousands of gallons of high spirits, an infernal machine that was fixed to explode at a certain time. The explosion would fire the spirits and throw the distillery into a mass of flames. DeWar was led to believe that the machine would give him time to get out of the place alive, but it would not do to let him live.

"DeWar was to be killed by the explosion, which was to occur one second after he dropped the machine into the vat. One hundred and fifty people who work in the place day and night would have been killed. The trap was to be sprung before Sunday. Gibson had the infernal machine here. We have it now in our possession."

RIOT AT CLARK'S MILLS.

Exciting Encounter Between Friends of the Striking Spinners and Officers.

HARRISON, N. J., Feb. 12.—The first violent demonstration since the beginning of the strike of the Clark thread factory spinners occurred last night in Passaic avenue.

For several days the imported spinners have been working in the Newark mill and bunking in the Harrison factory, being ferried across the Passaic river every night.

Last evening, when they walked up to the gate, nearly 2,000 persons, mostly women, had assembled and formed a double line across Passaic avenue, through which Walmsley, the detested superintendent, and his following of 20 non-union spinners and a guard of special officers under Detective Gregory had to pass.

The women, many of whom had babies in their arms, jeered the non-union men and began to throw missiles of various kinds. Two of these struck the special officers, and when the party reached the mill gate the specials suddenly turned and with drawn revolvers and uplifted clubs made an onslaught on the crowd, which had closed up.

Blows fell right and left, and several women were struck on the head with clubs. One woman carrying a baby was knocked down. Finally the crowd fell back, and after a scene resembling a riot, quiet was restored.

Feeling is running high, and the women say they will assemble again to-night. Should they do so, more serious trouble may result.

Leaves His Bride to Go to Jail.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Feb. 12.—Hugh Stephenson, jr., aged 19 years, bookkeeper at Rambo & Regar's Knitting Mills, was arrested upon returning from his wedding tour, at 10 a. m., charged with the theft of $1,000 from his employers, accomplished by altering the pay-rolls. On Sunday last Stephenson and Miss Kate Stafford were married at New Brunswick, N. J. Stafford received $7 a week salary and regulary spent $15 a week for livery hire and dissipation. He confessed and was held in default of $1,000 bail.

Fighting the Amalgamated Association.

STEELTON, Pa., Feb. 12.—The officials of the Pennsylvania Steel Works have declared war upon all employes who have any interest in the Amalgamated Steel Association. Eight employes have been notified by the company that their services are no longer needed, because, it is said, of their allegiance to the Amalgamated Association. More dismissals will follow as soon as proof can be obtained against the men.

Must Stand Trial.

NEW [illegible], Feb. 12.—The General Term of the Supreme Court has decided that John Daly, Lucius Appleby and other alleged proprietors of gambling resorts, where Treasurer Wigton, of the Glamorgan Iron Works of Philadelphia lost $80,000, must submit to examination before trial in the action brought by the receiver of the iron company to recover the money lost. This reverses the decision of the lower court.

An Attempt to Bail Out Young.

SOUTHOLD, L. I., Feb. 12.—John D. Young, who shot and killed his coachman, Carl Carlsen, last week, is trying to get out on bail. His counsel, T. M. Griffin, has applied to Judge Bartlett, in Brooklyn, for an order to that effect, and the hearing comes off next Saturday. Young is in the custody of the sheriff.

THE WARRIOR DYING

General Sherman Growing Weaker Every Hour.

PHYSICIANS GIVE UP ALL HOPE.

Fears Expressed that He Will Not Live Through the Day.

It is Simply a Question of How Long the General's Strength Will Hold Out to Continue the Struggle—The President Anxious—Senator Sherman Watching at the Old Soldier's Bedside.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Gen. William T. Sherman is close to death's door. For a time after midnight it was feared that he would not live to see the light of to-day.

The gallant old soldier is heroically battling with the grim warrior who knows not defeat, at times retreating, then advancing with the sublime courage of the leader who wont to conquer, but gradually and inevitably yielding to his enemy's superior prowess. The coign of vantage is never regained. Slowly but surely the victor of many a well fought field is driven back to the last trench. His base of supplies, strength and vitality—is cut off, and annihilation is deferred but for a little while.

Those who love him, his brother, the Senator from Ohio, John Sherman, his daughters, Miss Rachel Sherman, Mrs. A. M. Thackera, of Rosemont, Pa., and Mrs. T. W. Fitch, of Pittsburg, his son, P. Tecumseh Sherman, and his brother-in-law, Gen. Thomas Ewing, of Cincinnati, are at his bedside, watching the struggle.

Three prominent physicians, Drs. A. G. Alexander, Edward G. Janeway and R. H. Green are constantly on hand to extend what aid and comfort they can to the old hero in his last battle.

The Old Death Watch.

The old death watch which stood guard so long and faithfully at General Grant's door was formed again last night and will remain on duty till the end or until the General is pronounced out of danger. Thousands all over the country will pray for the latter event, but there appears to be very little hope that the hero who saved Shiloh and the genius which performed the impossible and marched 2,000 miles to the sea against the prognostications of military men the world over, will do little more than linger for a few hours before he lays down his colors to the enemy who is unconquerable.

Hourly Bulletins Issued.

During the early morning hours the house was besieged with messengers bearing letters of inquiry as to the General's condition. These were answered by his son, P. T. Sherman. From this room hourly bulletins were issued. Senator Sherman, at 10 o'clock in the morning, reported his brother as growing gradually weaker but not unconscious. He lay quietly, but did not speak. This fact led the family to expect death at any moment.

Drs. Janeway and Alexander held a consultation shortly after 10, but did not express any hope as to their patient's ultimate recovery. Dr. Alexander said that while no immediate crisis could be feared, he was afraid that the end was near. The sick man's face was said to be swollen from the effects of the erysipelas. Nourishment in the shape of milk and whisky was administered every hour.

The President is Anxious.

There were a number of callers at the house throughout the forenoon, and many messages of condolence and inquiry were received. President Harrison and Secretary Blaine were among those who sent their sympathy. The President sent three telegrams at different times during the day asking for the latest news of the General's condition. To the last of them Mr. P. T. Sherman replied that his father was in a very critical condition. A telegram was also sent to Gen. Schofield in Washington at the same by young Mr. Sherman: "My father's condition is still critical."

In a Semi-Comatose State.

All the forenoon the General was in a semi-comatose state. Only the immediate members of the family, the physicians and one or two old friends were admitted to his room. It required effort to arouse him, but when he opened his eyes he appeared to recognize those about him. Once or twice he spoke, and his utterances, though mumbled, were intelligent. He realized his critical condition and seemed to be in his right mind.

His Brilliant Career.

General Sherman celebrated his 70th anniversary on the 8th inst. He is the most distinguished soldier of the late war now living. His brilliant career from the time he took charge of the Department of the Cumberland down to the time of his triumphal march to the sea is familiar to all.

Since the close of the war he has been frequently proposed as a candidate for the Presidency by friends in the Republican party, but to all such propositions the grim old warrior has given prompt and emphatic refusals.

Sympathy from the Grand Army.

BOSTON, Feb. 12.—The State Department, Grand Army of the Republic, in annual session here, sent the following dispatch to the daughter of Gen. Sherman:

"The Massachusetts department of the Grand Army of the Republic, in convention assembled, watches with solicitude the condition of the last of the three great leaders of the Union army, and that he may speedily be restored to health is the earnest desire of his comrades."

The Behring Sea Question.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Robert T. Lincoln, the United States Minister, had his first interview with Lord Salisbury since the former's return to this country. The interview lasted a long time, and naturally gave rise to the rumor that the main subjects discussed were those bearing on the Behring Sea question.

Death of Ex-Chief Justice Morton.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Feb. 12.—Marcus Morton, ex-Chief Justice of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, died last evening in Andover of heart failure. He was born in Taunton in April, 1819.

CAUGHT IN SPECULATION.

Bank Cashier Spaulding Disappears and Also Considerable Cash.

BOSTON, Feb. 12.—Harold E. Spaulding, cashier of the First National Bank and treasurer of the North Middlesex Institution for Savings, at Ayer, has disappeared and with him has gone about $20,000 in cash. The story is the old one of a prominent citizen, an active church worker and a trusted official, caught in speculation, and then resorting to thievery to retrieve himself.

The developments, however, have caused the greatest excitement among the residents of Ayer, many of whom are financially interested in one or both of these institutions.

Spaulding was last at the bank Monday night. He remarked then to one of the directors that he understood that they had ordered an investigation. Upon receiving then an affirmative answer he said he had no objection. That same night he wrote a letter to his wife stating that he would not be home that night, and added, "Will explain to-morrow."

Spaulding's flight aroused suspicion and yesterday the doors of the bank were closed and Col. Daniel Needham, formerly national bank examiner, was given charge of the books. the books of the national bank showed cash of $38,000 while that in the safe aggregated only $21,000. Securities and negotiable bonds to the amount of $100,000 were found intact, as were also the securities of the savings bank and no loss is sustained by that institution, unless the books of the depositors have been falsified.

Spaulding's theft, it seems, has been going on for about a year, and his practice must have been to get small sums of cash from time to time. This he covered by a forced balance. Spaulding, it appears, has been dabbling in stock speculations. A letter came to him since his flight, from a Boston bucket shop, asking him to "pony up" on a $1,500 loss and baiting him on to another investment.

The national bank will not suffer seriously from the affair if $18,000 or $20,000 is the extent of the theft. Spaulding's bond was for $30,000 and the bank has a surplus of $11,000. It will be a serious blow to his bondsmen, however.

DENIED BY MR. BLAINE.

He Has Written No Letter to Canada Since He Became Secretary.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Secretary of State Blaine positively denies the truth of the statement telegraphed from Canada to the effect that he had written a letter to the Hon. Wilfred Laurier, saying he would negotiate for reciprocity only with the Liberal party, of which Laurier is the leader. Mr. Blaine said:

"It is without the slightest foundation. I have written no such letter. Indeed, I have not written a letter to anyone in Canada since I became Secretary of State two years ago, and further than that I have written no letter on the subject of reciprocity with Canada beyond the note to Mr. Baker."

BREAD OR WORK.

The Unemployed of Toronto Call on the Mayor to Relieve Their Distress.

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 12.—The unemployed of this city, to the number of 2,500, headed by a drummer and a man bearing a flag on which was the motto "Bread or Work," marched to the City Hall and asked the mayor what the city would do to relieve their distress.

The mayor replied that all the work authorized by the Council was being proceeded with. The gathering then dispersed making vague threats of violence, to renew the demonstration to-morrow.

No Connection With Molly Maguires.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Feb. 12.—The Ancient Order of Hibernians of the anthracite coal regions met here to take action on the contemplated effort to connect the order with the Molly Maguires of old, through the death notices which were recently received by prominent citizens of Girardsville. Resolutions were adopted calling upon Postmaster-General Wanamaker to send his assistance to ferret out the criminals of the sensational correspondence, and offering a reward of $500 for information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of the guilty party.

Tried for Selling Liquor to Boys.

CARLISLE, Pa., Feb. 12.—George Farris, a Hungarian, on trial at Newmansdale, this county, for furnishing liquor to five boys, one of whom died from the effects and another one's life being despaired of, was acquitted.

PARNELL IS MASTER

Another Rupture Between the Irish Factions.

THERE CAN BE NO COMPROMISE.

McCarthy is Discussed and May Retire in Favor of Healy.

Parnell Writes to O'Brien Expressing the Futility of All Attempts at Mediation—He Says He Will Not be Dictated to by Gladstone or the Priests—O'Brien and Dillon to Surrender To-Day.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Mr. Parnell this afternoon makes public the following letter written by him to William O'Brien:

"The last information conveyed to me on our negotiations being of a final character, I conclude that nothing is left to be done on my part but to bring our endeavors to a close. I regret that it has not been rendered possible for me to consider national interests so safeguarded that I could feel that there would be no danger to the cause in my now surrendering the responsibility which has been placed upon me and which I have accepted from the nation and race. I have been ready to act up to the spirit and letter of our understanding to the last moment, and I regret that no course is left but to withdraw from the negotiations. The want of confidence which severs what has existed between us prevents inviting a public judgment, but it is ever remembered I am confident that it will be held that I have done everything in my power consistent with national interests to promote peace and reunion. Although these negotiations have failed, they have not been entirely unsuccessful toward advancing it.

"On this at least you may congratulate yourself. The country has recovered considerably from its painful distraction and panic and the controversy is raised to a plane whereon, unless it sinks again, it can be conducted without national humiliation and discredit, although I regret to have perceived in the last few days the existence in quarters where one might have least expected it a spirit breathing the deadliest hostility to peace. But whatever side true Irishmen take they owe you thanks for your beneficent efforts. I am sure that the country will agree that you have acted throughout in the spirit of a true patriot."

O'Brien and Dillon Will Surrender.

BOULOGNE, Feb. 12.—Dillon says that he and O'Brien will go to England to-day to surrender and begin their six months' imprisonment.

NO IRISH COMPROMISE.

Parnell Says He Will Not be Dictated to by Gladstone or the Priests.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Mr. McCarthy has been notified that Mr. Parnell and his supporters have abandoned all present hope of coming to a satisfactory and honorable understanding with the anti-Parnellites. Therefore nothing is expected to come from the meeting of the McCarthyites to-day.

Mr. McCarthy is disgusted with the situation and it is anticipated that he will virtually, if not nominally, abandon the leadership to Timothy Healy.

McCarthy is said to complain that, while the English Liberals have urged him and his associates to ignore Parnell, they have failed to give any support more tangible than advice, while Parnell appears to have unlimited means at command.

Mr. Parnell, in an interview, says that he will not recede from his position, which has been consistent throughout, and that he will not submit to the dictation of Mr. Gladstone and of the priests. He adds that he does not believe a general election will take place until Parliament has completed its legal existence two years hence.

Passed the Bill Again.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The House of Commons passed to a second reading, by a vote of 202 to 155, the bill permitting a man to marry the sister of his deceased wife. The bill has been passed several times before by the Commons and defeated, through the ecclesiastical opposition, in the Upper House.

Protests Against Bismarck's Attacks.

BERLIN, Feb. 12.—The Deutsches Ingeblatt contains an inspired article, supposed to represent the views of the leaders of the Conservative party. The article vehemently protests against the attacks in the newspaper press, inspired or dictated by Prince Bismarck, on Chancellor von Caprivi.

The Strike at the Docks.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The strike at Cardiff against the dock company continues. The docks are partly in operation, and are able to obtain crews for working. The menacing attitude of the strikers, however, deters non-union labor from offering itself freely.

Elizabeth Fogg's Will Probated.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—The will of Elizabeth Fogg, which gives over $800,000 to charitable and educational institutions, and makes other specific bequests of $340,000, has been presented for probate. Harvard University gets $200,000. Her residuary estate includes $1,000,000 which she reserved from her husband's estate. The will is to be contested.

Sullivan Waiting for a Big Purse.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 12.—John L. Sullivan was shown the dispatch to the effect that Peter Jackson, the colored pugilist, intended to challenge Sullivan. The latter said he did not believe that Jackson would stand up before him in the ring, and that it was doubtful if Jackson could get many backers. Sullivan also said that he would not strip to enter the ring again unless the money consideration is very large.

WENT DOWN NEAR HER PIER.

A British Bark Sinks Taking a Tug With Her.

NEW YORK, Feb 12.—The four-masted bark was capsized at her dock in Jersey shortly after noon. She was being towed into tidewater dock No. 3 of the Standard Oil Company by two tugs. She was unloaded and unballasted. Owing to unexplained carelessness the vessel became unbalanced and capsized. She sank at once, dragging down the tug S. L. Morris which was attached to her. Rowboats at once put out from the shores and rescued the crews of the two vessels.

A Pilot's Graphic Description.

A pilot who witnessed the boats go down tells the following story: "Without a moment's warning the tall masts of the Bruce inclined in toward the shore. She gracefully keeled over until she reached an angle of about forty-five degrees. Chains and other iron work which happened to be on the deck were thrown to the listing side with a rushing, booming noise. In an incredibly short space of time the Bruce was completely over. There was no time to cut the tugs loose, and as the heavy ship rolled over and over and went down she carried one of the little, snorting, puffing boats with her. For half a minute there was a great roaring sound as water and steam met. Then the big ship calmly settled herself on the bottom and became partly righted. The water became smooth again, and her three masts pointed at the sky at an acute angle with the water. It was all over in five minutes."

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Paul Radford has signed to play shortstop with the Boston Red Stocking Baseball Club.

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - - Managing Editor.

By Their Votes Ye Shall Know Them.

Every day THE PRESS publishes communications from both merchant and peddler, regarding the proposed increase of the latter's license fee. The people are much interested in the matter and curious about the outcome. The vote of each councilman will be remembered in the future. Let each therefore be careful that he votes for the greatest good to the greatest number.

BY THE WAY.

—J. M. Harper, 75 Park avenue, can suit you on valentines.

—Mayor Gilbert speaks at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, to-night. Admission free.

—Person's wishing to purchase valentines, should examine the assortment at J. M. Harper's, 75 Park avenue.

—Those valentines at Rand's! That's what all the young folks are talking about. Elegant yet low in price; rich yet not gaudy. The stock is complete and the styles innumerable.

—A rare bargain is advertised in another column—a gilt-edged mortgage of $10,000 bearing interest at 6 per cent., on property worth $30,000 within 200 yards of the railroad station.

—The regular sewing meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society will be held to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, in the Crescent Avenue church parlors. All the ladies of the congration are cordially invited.

—Work on the remodeling of Amphion Hall into the Elkwood has been begun. Jeremiah Manning has charge of the carpentry work, and J. P. Emmons the masonry work. The alteration is under the personal supervision of B. Fosgate, architect.

—Peck's new store will be the finest in town. High ceiling, broad front, deep and wide. But big as it is, it will be stocked full of brand new goods when it opens. Meanwhile he is selling off everything in his old store at a price to get rid of them so there will be nothing left to move.

A Word for the Peddler, Again.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—If you will permit me, I would like briefly to reply to "One in the Business." He shoots in the dark, and seems to be shooting at "Sympathizer" rather than bringing forth any facts touching the case in question. He says "perhaps Sympathizer lives on money left him by a rich uncle, or gambles in stocks in Wall street, or owes retailer 30, 60, or 90 days for goods." This, I repeat, has no bearing on the case or upon myself. I have never received one dollar from any uncle, neither have I ever gambled in stocks in Wall street, or elsewhere, neither do I owe one dollar to any retailer, to my knowledge. He also seems to imply that I do not know the difference between the "Golden Rule" and "Live and Let Live." Whereas if he will read it as printed he may see his mistake; but if he sees such things crooked, why should he not also see, that to benefit the peddler, in his way, we must rob him in order to protect him! He says "that the peddlers were the first this season, to ask the 'Merchants' Association' to assist them in having the license raised for their protection." How many of the peddlers have asked for an increase of license? Do these poor "coal and wood" peddlers request it? Do any of all the poor peddlers in the city, except, perhaps, one or two in the produce business? What about the others?

Was the Bill, that would wipe out peddling in the State of New Jersey, suggested to the Legislature at Trenton a few months since, by his Association, or does he charge that, also, to the peddlers?"

I would advise for the benefit of the "Merchants' Association," that all peddlers wishing the license to remain the same, would forthwith have a remonstrance drawn up, get all the signers they can, and present it to the Common Council before it is too late.

SYMPATHIZER.

Job Male's Heirs Still Turning Up.

A dispatch from Lockport, N. Y., says: "Job Male of Canada is in this city hunting up the heirs of the late Job Male of Plainfield, who left a fortune valued at $700,000. Simeon Male, who lives at 100 Allen street, is said to be one of the heirs; also Charlotte M. Slater, Jennie Woods and George Male, of this city; Thomas H. Male, of Medina; Lucy Richardson, of Warrens Corners, and William Male, of Rochester. The Males of this city are working people in poor circumstances. Simeon Male is a coal-wagon driver, with a large family. When seen, he did not seem very hilarious over his prospective $40,000. Mrs. Slater is a poor woman, and Mrs. Woods is assistant in the woman's department in the county poorhouse. George Male is a painter. The other heirs are also in straitened circumstances."

I FEEL it my duty to say a few words in regard to Ely's Cream Balm, and I do so entirely without solicitation. I have used it more or less half a year, and have found it to be most admirable. I have suffered from catarrh of the worst kind ever since I was a little boy and I never hoped for cure, but Cream Balm seems to do even that. Many of my acquaintances have used it with excellent results.—Oscar Ostrum, 63 Warren avenue, Chicago, Ill.

NO FRANCHISE YET AWHILE.

Another Illustration of the Fact, If You Don't See it in THE PRESS it Isn't So.

Somebody has been enjoying himself filling newspaper correspondents of this city with a ridiculous story to the effect that at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council to be held next Monday night an effort will be made to rush through a franchise granting T. Nevins, representing a Newark company, power to introduce in this city a system of rapid transit operated by trolleys and overhead wires.

It is needless to remark that this is all a fairy tale. When anything of that sort is to happen it will be first told of in these columns. Until then, if you don't see it in THE PRESS it isn't so.

The Council is ready at any meeting to receive and act as they think best for the interests of the people on any and all propositions to build, equip and maintain a street railway in this city. But until Mr. Nevins, or anybody else, gets the necessary consent of property owners for rights of way, and also deposits in cash $2,000 a mile in the State treasury, no franchise will be granted—and possibly not even then. So anyone who attends the Council meeting of next Monday evening with the expectation that an attempt will be made to rush through a railway franchise, will be as foolish as those who have started the ridiculous report.

One out of town paper is fooled by its correspondent in this style: "For a dozen years the more aristocratic of Plainfield's Councilmen have fought bitterly against the introduction of any system of street railroads. They held that the laying of tracks would mar beyond repair the chief beauty of the city streets. They were successful in their warfare until about a year and one-half ago, when Leo Daft, the inventor of the storage-battery system of motive power, was awarded a franchise to lay tracks and establish a railroad. Daft's backing failed to materialize, and the franchise was declared void by default.

"There is no doubt that a franchise will be awarded to Nevins, for the Democrats have the power this year, and they are forcing the Councilmen who ride in carriages to take the 'back seat' upon every important question which arises.

"On Saturday afternoon, January 30, a half dozen Plainfield Councilmen, who are known in this city as the 'Big Six,' went to Newark for the purpose of inspecting the electric car line, which is identical with the system Mr. Nevins proposes to establish in Plainfield. The journey was kept very quiet, and but few persons in Plainfield knew that it had been made.

"Talking to a correspondent, a prominent Democratic Councilman said: 'We are very much pleased with Mr. Nevins's rapid transit system, and regard it as in every way desirable, and I predict that before Fourth of July next street cars will be operatng by Mr. Nevins's company upon Plainfield's streets.'

"As this Councilman is one of those termed the 'Big Six,' the matter is presumably settled already. The Councilman refused to divulge the exact routes proposed for the street car lines, but admitted that there will be several. It is understood from other sources that Mr. Nevins's company will work under the name of the Plainfield Street Railroad Company, a corporation which never was granted a franchise to operate cars, but which obtained from property-owners throughout the city written consent to run through certain streets. There will probably be three routes. The first will start from the North Avenue Railroad Station and will pass through North avenue, Peace street, Broadway, Woodlawn avenue, South avenue, Richmond street, Front street, Peace street to the station. A second route mapped out passes along North avenue west from the station, and follows Park avenue to Sixth street, to Plainfield avenue, to Fourth street, to Grant avenue, to Front street, to Peace street, to the Central Railroad Depot. A third line is to be projected in an easterly direction on Front street towards Fanwood."

A Newark paper says: "The Mr. Nevins referred to is Thomas Nevins, of East Orange, the well-known contractor. A prominent Newark street railroad man said to-day that Mr. Nevins has for some time talked of establishing a street railroad company for Plainfield, but that none of the established Newark companies is back of the present scheme."

Mrs. Wm. Reynell to be Married Again.

The Buffalo Express of a recent date has this announcement: "The marriage of Junius B. Van Duzee, of this city, to Mrs. Eva Reynell will take place in Elizabeth, N. J., on March 5. It will be a family wedding. Mr. Van Duzee has bought the handsome house at No. 616 Niagara street, to which he will bring his bride."

Mrs. Reynell's first husband was William Reynell, of this city, by whom she was treated very shabbily. After his desertion she supported herself as an artist in Elizabeth.

HYMENEAL.

Conley—Maier.

On Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock, the Catholic church of Dunellen was crowded to overflowing. The occasion was the marriage of Miss Kate Maier, eldest daughter of Joseph and Catharine Maier, to Wm. Conley, of Glen Gardner. Miss Conley, sister of the groom, acted in the capacity of bridesmaid, and Jos. Maier, Jr., officiated as best man.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Bogaard. The bride was richly and neatly dressed in one of the latest shades of gray, elaborately trimmed with fine ornaments. A dinner was served to the relatives of the happy couple at the home of the bride, and a most enjoyable day was spent. Early in the evening they took a train for the home of the groom in Glen Gardner, where a reception awaited them. They subsequently left for Washington, D. C., and other interesting points, but will make Dunellen their home. They have the good wishes of a host of friends.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Reynolds of Poughkeepsie has returned home from a visit to Miss Della Storm of North Plainfield.

During a recent extended trip South, the writer met no more nobly built, affable or able man than Julius A. Bonitz, editor and proprietor of the Wilmington, N. C., Messenger. To-day that paper reaches this office with its rules turned and the sad announcement of his sudden death. To Mr. Bonitz Wilmington owed more than to any score of other men. Among the many testimonials of public appreciation presented him were: On his birthday, December 22, 1881, a handsome gold watch and chain, inscribed thus: "Presented to Julius A. Bonitz, by the Citizens of Goldsboro, Dec. 22, 1881, as a recognition of worth and enterprise," and a silver wine set in 1882, "by the 600 children of the Goldsboro Graded School."

Tolerably Tough Country.

I was told the other day of a very poor country. They said two cats could not raise a row on it, and they have to manure it to make brick; and have to soak peas in warm water to make them sprout. A hog leaned up against a potato-patch fence for a rest and fell through. The owner called his dog, but the fool dog was too thin to run, and his master put him on a wheelbarrow and followed the hog, and the dog barked until the hog gave up the ghost, then both were put in the wheelbarrow and dumped outside.—Fayetteville (Ga.) News.

The Professor's Advice

A student, in writing upon some historical subject, had quoted from an eminent author. When the time came for his theme to be criticised, the professor pointed out an error in the construction of a sentence. The student thought to escape the criticism by showing that it was in the portion which he had quoted; but the professor stopped the discussion by saying: "If I were you, I would not quote when I could write better myself."—N. A Domestic Trial.

Young Mrs. B—— is very fond of giving little dinners, and is very anxious that every detail should be flawless. She was entertaining a couple of friends in her favorite way the other night, and the chickens were brought upon the table roasted to a turn. As the host thrust his carver into a joint, a puzzled look spread over his face, which was anxiously observed by his wife. Finally there was no bearing it in silence, and Mr. B—— turned to his better half inquiringly.

Mrs. B. remarked, uneasily: "I can not understand it. Blank has never treated me before like this. His poultry is always to be relied upon. Mary" (turning to the waitress), "did the cook order roasting chickens?"

"Sure and indade she did!"

Mrs. B—— turned to her guests appealingly: "Does your butcher ever do such a thing? Mary, are you sure she said roasters, not fowls?"

"And indade it ought to be sure Oi am, for Oi sez it mesilf. Bridget left the kitchen, mum, and she sez to me, she sez: 'Mary, be sure to order two foine plump roosters,' and it's two foine plump roosters, I axed for."

"And it's two 'foine plump roosters' he brought," said the host.

Mrs. B.'s chagrin could not withstand the outburst of merriment that followed this sally.—Harper's Bazar.

GONE WITH HER PIOUS FRIEND

HOME HAPPINESS OF A TRUSTING HUSBAND WRECKED FOREVER.

Wilson's First Pursuers Were Anonymous "White Caps", But Now He's Sought by a Flesh-and-Blood Man With a Gun.—A Wife's Affections Alienated by a Man With a Big Mustache, Smooth Tongue, and Suave Manners, Who Had Already Blighted Another Woman's Life.

The wife whom Abram Staats has cherished these twenty years has forsaken him for another; the home which the sacred ties of family once made dear to both the husband and his consort has been laid waste by the treachery and wickedness of a pretended friend. An idler has filched from the honest workingman his dearest treasures—wifely affection, home happiness, peace of mind. From a life which though never so homely or humdrum still held these joys just as dear as does many a more favored man, all the sunshine has vanished. Another hearth-stone is devastated; another paradise blighted. The blow is as heavy to the man, the offense is as gross against society, as though one in loftier station were the sufferer. The joys which have been shattered were those which come not alone with the luxuries of wealth and social position. With them, Staats was happy as a king; foully bereft of them, he is most miserable.

The beginning of the married life of Staats was not without that which makes every courtship so charming, every honeymoon so roseate.

A score of summers ago, in the full pride and stalwart vigor of early manhood, he was a merry-hearted lover.

His parents had been well-to-do people, but through unfortunate indorsements of worthless notes his father lost all his property. After his father's failure and death he made his home in New Brunswick, where he owned an ice route. He was his own driver, as his business was comparatively a small one, but he was sufficiently prosperous, and the future was possessed of enough golden brightness, to warrant his

TAKING A WIFE.

Mary Trainor was one of the hundreds who earned their daily bread amid the incessant hum of machinery in New Brunswick's great manufactories. The young ice dealer first saw her as one of the dense throng of operatives pouring forth from the gates of the factory yard, at sound of the deep-voiced gong announcing the end of another day of toil. Her looks pleased him.

SHE HAD A BRIGHT FACE,

a trim girlish figure. She glanced at him demurely, and he cast a broad and honest smile at her in return. She blushed with pleasure, and in the confusion of an excess of maidenly reserve darted around a corner and out of sight.

After that young Staats used to drive his wagon more frequently past the mill, and soon spied out the window where stood Mary's loom, and his manly heart beat stronger and more violently day by day with the gladness that sight of her face and smile brought. From distant nods to familiar greetings was not a long step, and ere the summer was spent to renounce her old life and to begin a new one with Abram.

The wedding was not long in coming. Young hearts were too eager to submit to needless delay. Then came the stern reality. Unforeseen reverses compelled Abram to give up his ice business. Casting about for something to do, he found in Plainfield his opportunity, and in that city began work. But fortune was fickle to the young husband. In a few months he was out of work again, and with and the outlook drear, he took to drink. His wife, heart sore over their troubles, took up the search for work that her dispirited husband had abandoned, and went back to her loom in the mill at New Brunswick. Here she toiled away till Abram found work and stopped drinking again, and then the tide of fortune seemed to change.

A HAPPY HOME

was established in Plainfield by the two, and as the years passed, and children grew up around them, they seemed to grow constantly more secure in their possession of a model abode of domestic tranquillity.

In the course of time, however, appeared the serpent. The name of one Edward Wilson, a neighbor, began to be connected with that of the woman. The breath of scandal was afloat. Gossip at first enlarged the tale, but it presently seemed as though everything that was said must be true.

At first Staats was unconscious of it all. He was to his family, and his days he spent in tireless industry in order that his home might be filled with comforts. Week days he drove a coal delivery wagon for Loomis & Rice, where he is considered a most faithful employe; Sundays he inflated the big organ bellows at the First Baptist church.

But whether the husband was driving his wagon, exposed to all sorts of weather, or whether he was keeping the church organ supplied with power, the despoiler was sure to take advantage of his absence from home, and to proceed craftily in the steady alienation of

THE WIFE'S AFFECTIONS.

Wilson became acquainted with Mrs. Staats at a series of religious meetings conducted by J. B. Cleaver. Wilson had professed a change of heart, and had been dipped in Green brook on a cold day, and was considered to be striving earnestly to lead an upright life. He visited the Staats dwelling several times when Abram was at home, and pretended a warm friendship for the husband, and talked religion to Mrs. Staats, and in every way conducted himself seemingly in a very exemplary manner—for a time.

One day—not many months ago—Wilson received a letter signed

"THE WHITE CAPS",

warning him that the evil of his inner life was being discovered, and that he would better reform while yet there was time, ere the wrath of vengeance should be visited upon him. The publication of the letter in THE PRESS prompted an investigation of Wilson's doings, and some confiding hearts began to find out that there were such things as WOLVES IN SHEEP'S CLOTHING.

But neither Mr. nor Mrs. Staats took warning. Though others reprimanded Wilson for apparent misconduct, and spoke sharply to him of alleged wrong-doing that was hidden, and the whole community began to open its eyes to the matter, Mrs. Staats at her home, and to repose fullest confidence in him, while Mr. Staats remained stolidly blind to all that was going on.

Day after day, night after night,—Staats says—he would reach home just in time to find Wilson leaving. To these visits he did not at first attach any undue importance, as he believed Wilson's assurances that he was his friend.

But presently

became so openly flagrant that even the unsuspicious husband was forced to see things in somewhat their true light, and henceforth he recognized Wilson as something different than merely a seeker after the spiritual light and the friendly counsel, guidance and assistance that he had claimed to be seeking from his constant association with his fellow-member of the religious flock.

Staats found that Wilson had already

and with discovery of this fact he came to the knowledge that the professed friend was striving to wreck his also.

The discord existing between Wilson and his own wife was considerably ventilated in the city courts at intervals after Wilson received the "White Cap" letter. Mrs. Wilson had her recreant lord for drunkenness and abuse. She was a hard-working woman; and he—she said—was shiftless and drunken. He would n't work, but she would n't ask him to do that. He could work or not, just as he liked; and he was always welcome to a home with her as long as she had strength to work. But he must keep his hands off her. He must keep sober. She could stand his idleness, but she

of her and the children.

Several times Wilson was punished by the court for his short-comings in this respect. Each time sentence was pronounced Mrs. Wilson's tender heart would melt, and she would weep, and in the depth of her womanly forgiveness would try to scrape together enough of her hard-earned money to pay the fine, and save from imprisonment the husband who had but for whom she still cherished the affection which he at the altar had promised to reciprocate forever. Pathetic were these incidents, and possessed of dramatic force; and even the stern judge had to sigh in telling Mrs. Wilson that such kindness, such overflowing generosity, was far too good for such a

WORTHLESS, SHIFTLESS HUSBAND.

The more Wilson neglected his own family, the more persistent he seemed to be at the home of Mrs. Staats. So matters progressed till four weeks ago, when the climax came.

It was a very stormy Sunday night, and the attendance at the Baptist church was so small that services were held in the Sunday-school rooms in the basement. Thereby freed from service, Staats to his dwelling in "Church row", New street, and found his wife entertaining Edward Wilson, of Hetfield's row, Arlington avenue.

There burst on him in that moment a full realization of what had been going on all these months when he had heard his name so much whispered about, and when he had had a vague idea that some sort of wrong was being inflicted on him. The revelation of the duplicity that had been practiced sickened him for the instant, made him faint at heart; then he turned on the fellow cringing before him and felled him to the floor. As Wilson lay there groveling at his feet he delivered a speech than which no oratorical effort of Demosthenes was ever more forcible or effective. As he recited his wrongs to the guilty man his rage increased, and he acted as though

IN A TERRIBLE FURY

HE WOULD HAVE STRANGLED HIM.

But the wife—says Staats—,still infatuated with her paramour, interfered in his behalf, and struck her husband, and fought to keep him away from her lover. Then Wilson slunk out of the house.

Next morning Staats went sadly to his daily toil. His heart was heavy, but instead of heaping reproof upon his wife he ignored the past, and bade her good-bye in his accustomed cheery manner. When he returned for his noon-day meal

SHE WAS GONE.

The neighbors told him that Wilson had helped her to pack up and to carry to the train the boxes and bundles of clothing and other necessaries she had taken with her; and both Mrs. Staats and Wilson—says the injured husband—have been missing ever since.

"I have had

since she went away"—said Staats last night.—"I should like to find out where they are stopping, and should like to be able to meet him there"—and his eyes glittered ominously.—"I have always given her a good home, and have been a faithful husband to her in every way. She had no cause to leave me—no cause for her infatuation with that fellow. He had a suave tongue and a big mustache, and first with his smooth talk on religion, but his piety seems to have been more theoretical than practical. He has shamefully violated the hospitality I accorded him as a supposed friend. He has sullied my honor, robbed me of the holy joys of home. Oh, if I had only been less blind I would have discovered him in time, and if I had been half a man I would have before he brought down such disgrace, dishonor, sorrow, upon me. But alas! I was always too easy! And now my own life is blackened, and my daughter, who was married happily, is heart-broken over her mother's faithlessness."

Yesterday a friend of the family hinted to Mr. Staats that a letter postmarked Brooklyn had been received in this city from Mrs. Staats, and suggested in a roundabout way that the alleged elopers had professed repentance and wanted to return.

"Are her joys with him so fleeting!"—said Mr. Staats.—"And does she suppose that

"AFTER ALL THAT HAS HAPPENED

I can restore her to her former place! But if she is without money, in a friendless city, with even him forsaking her, as is by this time likely, what am I to do?—I that promised to love, cherish and protect her till death!"

But later he was told that the story about the letter was not true, and the renewed belief that the missing woman was with her missing lover hardened the lines of sorrow and anger in his face.

"My home is wrecked forever!"—he said.—"And I'm not sure that I wouldn't shoot the betrayer on sight."

A Peddler Speaks His Protest.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Will you please allow me a small space in your worthy paper. The Common Council is about to raise the license on the few peddlers that live in Plainfield from $5.50 to $25.50, at the request of a few local grocers, when those very men that ask for "protection" are defrauding the city by peddling without a license. You can see them any morning in the season start out from their place of business with their wagon loaded up with fruits and vegetables and measures—a complete peddler's outfit—and retail more vegetables than all the peddlers combined. Why are those men permitted to defraud the city thus?

Now, Mr. Editor—being one of those peddlers myself—I do ask, is it right to tax us and let the grocer go, simply because he is fortunate enough to have a store or a pull with the local authorities? If the grocer wants to protect the poor peddler, why doesn't he have the license $25 for non-resident's only? But we don't want the grocers' protection—we can protect ourselves. All we want is license for all and room to sell our goods. If we are to have a high license, let the city ordinance compel all grocers who peddle vegetables from their wagons to take out a license. Why make fish of one and flesh of another?

A PEDDLER.

He Got His When the Owner Wasn't Looking.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I wish to attest to the truthfulness of the remarks in Tuesday's issue, in relation to the delicious fruit from the orange grove of Messrs. Campbell and Kelly, in Florida.

As I was fortunate enough to obtain a large sample (through the kindness of "Mr. Physical Force") of this delicious and honey-flavored fruit; but not from the same box that you speak of, as mine was packed full when it reached No. 141 Central avenue.

The presentation was procured on North avenue, on the morning of Feb. 10, and carefully stored away in T Hall, where of course it was safe when I called for it in the evening.

I would advise Mr. K. in the future to have a higher tail-board to his cart, or another set of eyes, so that he can watch his load, while soliciting customers from his seat in front. S. G. S.

Morgue-Keeper Casey Re-Appointed.

The Union County Court of Common please yesterday appointed morgue-keepers for the county for a term of three years. Patrick Casey was re-appointed for Plainfield.

There can be no reasonable excuse for neglecting a cough or cold, when one bottle of Hires' Cough Cure for a quarter, to be had anywhere, does the work. Be sure to get what you ask for—Hires' Cough Cure.

CHANGING MEXICAN COINS.

Values and Designs Will Probably Be Slightly Altered by the Republic.

General Pacheco, the Mexican Minister of Public Works, has recently submitted to the Mexican Congress a report on the proposed changes in the coinage with a bill to carry them into effect. The report, says the Chicago Herald, says that the design on the Mexican dollar should be much better as a precaution against counterfeiting. The present design was adopted in 1823, and an unsuccessful attempt was made to improve it in 1867. That failure and the report that Asiatic countries would not accept the new coin impelled Congress to re-establish the old design, which was done so completely that the substitute bore the words "ocho [eight] reales" instead of a decimal subdivision, while the fineness of the silver was expressed in "dineros" and "grammes."

In order to improve the current silver dollar "un peso" (one dollar) are to take the place of "ocho reales." Instead of indicating the fineness in "dineros" and "grammes," it will be expressed by a simple decimal number. To do so a slight change will be made in the fineness, which will be 0.903 instead of 0.9277. The present design will be better executed and rendered more artistic.

General Pacheco says that he would like to reform the monetary system of the Republic and put it on a more scientific basis, but he has decided to make only these changes, because the Mexican dollar is not only the basis of the National coinage, but it is also quoted in the principal markets of the world and is current in Asiatic countries and even in some of the Antilles. As regards small currency, it is proposed to coin a new piece—20 cents. The design of the 20, 10 and 5-cent pieces will be similar to that on the dollar. The coining of 50-cent and 25-cent pieces is to be discontinued, as they do not harmonize with the decimal system.

In respect to gold it has been deemed expedient to make some important changes. General Pacheco says: "In the first place it is proposed to raise the fineness from .875 to .900, the former grade being an exception for which there is no warrant. In the next place this would place the two metals in the ratio of 1 to 15½, which is the legal ratio in several nations. Besides, this would lessen the depreciation of silver, which now stands in the ratio of 1 to 16¾."

In the interest of silver no smaller gold piece than $5 is to be coined. The design of the gold coin is to be improved and altered. On the obverse it will resemble the silver coin, but on the reverse will be the bust of Hidalgo, in order that no one may mistake a gold coin for a silver one.

Copper coins will bear on the obverse the National arms, as on the silver dollar. The executive is to be empowered to use bronze instead of pure copper, as it wears better and is not likely to be melted down for use in the arts.

The bill which General Pacheco has prepared declares that the monetary unit shall be the silver dollar, .903 fine and 27.073 grammes in weight—that is, as at present. The executive is given ample authority to carry the bill into effect.

HOW TALLEYRAND WAS LAMED.

The Vexed Question Settled by Talleyrand Himself.

The cause of Talleyrand's lameness has long been a matter of dispute. During the fifty-two years which have elapsed since his death, his deformity has been accounted for in all manner of ways.

Some stories have it that the defect was congenial; others that it was occasioned by an accident which befell him in his infancy. The most curious explanation of all is that offered by a writer in the Quarterly Review. "To quote the very words of our informant, an eminently distinguished official," says this writer, "Talleyrand's Vienna colleague, Baron Wessenberg, told me years ago that his lameness was owing to the carelessness of his nurse, who laid him down in a field while she flirted with her sweetheart, and on coming back to her charge found some pigs dining on the infant's legs. I am sure that Wessenberg told me this as an established fact, and I am all but sure that his authority was Talleyrand himself."

In the extracts from his memoirs, published in the Century, Talleyrand himself settles this controversy. "At the age of four," says he, "I accidentally fell from the top of a cupboard and dislocated my foot. The woman to whose care I was intrusted only informed my family of this several months afterward. * * * The dislocation of my foot had been neglected too long to be remedied; even my other foot, having to bear alone the whole weight of my body, had grown weaker, and thus I remained lame for life. That accident," he adds, "had a great influence over my whole life."

One would suppose that a consciousness of his own deformity would have made him more lenient to the defects of others. That this was not the case is illustrated in his reply to a questioner whose misfortune it was to be cross-eyed.

Meeting Talleyrand as the great statesman was leaving a council where there had been great wrangling and confusion, this person called out to him:

"Well, M. de Talleyrand, how are things looking?"

"Like your eyes, sir," was the cutting reply.

Society Out West.

"There are," said the drummer, "some persons who seem to think that the people of the far West, however enterprising and hospitable they may be, live in a rough-and-ready sort of style. Of course, the fact is that people of refined tastes like to be civilized wherever they are, and in these days of quick communication the people at all established centers of population live in about the same manner throughout the country. One would be likely to find as many men in dress suits at an evening social entertainment in a Montana or a Texas city as he would at any similar entertainment in an Eastern city."

Sale of the Seney Pictures.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—The first evening's sale of the Seney collection of pictures held at the Madison Square Garden last night brought $116,070. Ninety-nine pictures were sold and brought what were considered but moderate prices. The purchasers were from various parts of the country and one or two were from abroad.

A Belle Accused of Stealing.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 12.—The trial of Miss Lou E. Gardner, the Orange belle, who is charged with the larceny of goods from Stern Bros., of New York, takes place in this city this afternoon. The case is watched with interest by society circles in New York, Brooklyn and Orange, in which Miss Gardner was well acquainted.

Redpath's Body to be Cremated.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—James Redpath's body was removed at 12 o'clock to-day from his late residence to Fresh Pond Crematory, where it will be incinerated. Dr. McGlynn conducted religious services at the house before the removal of the body.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Feb. 12.—The New York State Grand Council, Royal Templars of Temperance, is holding its annual convention here. The 248 delegates represent 248 Councils. The State membership is 13,421. Twenty-nine new Councils were admitted during the year. The annual reports indicate prosperity and growth.

Dixon and McCarthy Will Fight.

BOSTON, Feb. 12.—Jere Dinn telegraphs that the fight between McCarthy and Dixon will come off at the Hudson County Athletic Club's quarters in Jersey City on Feb. 20. McCarthy, his manager says, has agreed to fight under the same conditions as previously arranged. Dixon has again gone into training.

A Wealthy Butcher Murdered.

DOVER, N. J., Feb. 12.—Henry M. Hedden, a wealthy butcher, was found murdered early in the morning on the Middle Valley road, two miles from here. He was known to have had a large amount of money on his person.

Montreal Curlers Defeat Albany.

MONTREAL, Feb. 12.—Albany and Montreal curlers played an international match here for the [illegible] Caledonia Rink. Montreal won by 13 points.

A Disastrous Year Among Miners.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 12.—The official statistics of loss of life and limb in the third anthracite coal mining district for the year 1890 show that this was the most disastrous in the history of the region. One hundred men were killed, fifty-five of whom left widows, with a total of seventy-six orphans.

The Acker Bill Passed.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 12.—The Acker bill appropriating $454,000 to carry out the provisions of the State Care of Insane act passed the Assembly by a vote of 90 to 28.

MARION'S MONEY.

Furnish the Parlor or Help Dave Was the Question.

ALL, I dunno, Silas."

"Nuther do I, 'Lizy."

Silas Barney, or Uncle Si, as he was commonly known, spread out on his checkered overalled knee a pair of knotted hands, and thoughtfully contemplated them, while a couple of half grown chickens ventured to crane their necks over the yellow door-stool in vain quest of stray crumbs. Crumbs were unknown to Mrs. Barney's floors, and so were, usually, chickens; but for once something lay so heavy on her mind that she quite forgot to meet them with the broom.

"I'm sure I dunno, Silas."

"Dave was alwus a good boy to us, mother," Uncle Si offered this suggestion rather timidly, with an upward glance at his wife.

"So he was, Silas, so he was," assented Mrs. Barney. "I don't find no fault with him's fur's that's concerned, but—"

Uncle Silas did not urge her to complete the sentence. He knew what she meant, and knew that it was Gospel truth, too; Dave was too happy-go-lucky, too careless, too confidential in other people's plans to ever succeed—but still. Uncle Silas sighed heavily as he smoothed the calico band around the crown of his palm leaf hat, with a hand that slightly trembled. Dave had always been his favorite in spite of his free, easy temperament, and he knew the boy was good-hearted; too good-hearted in fact, for his own good

"We can't do it, Silas."

"Don't, don't say that, 'Lizy," he said, tremulously. "Poor Dave, who knows but this scheme may turn out well? I'm sure we ought to help him."

"I don't know why we ought," answered Mrs. Barney, rather sharply. "He's never done nothin' for us, and he's twenty-four now. 'Twixt us all we managed to educate him, hopin' he might earn his own livin' after we'd gin him all we could. But after he's been an' got married, we've had to send him money an' keep sendin' him, an' alwus shall's fur's I can see."

"I'm sure I hate to say it's bad as you do, Silas," she said, in a softer tone, "but we can't do it. We ain't got no money of our own. It's all Marion's, and it's a shame for her to have to put it all out for him, when she works so hard for every cent."

"That's a fact, 'Lizy," assented poor Uncle Si. "But jest think of Dave, mother. I don't s'pose I oughter, but I can't help thinkin' of how he looked that mornin' ten year ago, when he went out inter the barnyard where I was workin' afore goin' to school, all dressed up so neat and his blue eyes shinin', an' the sun a gildin' his yeller curls into gold.

"'Father,' says he, 'jest you wait till I get growed up, an' you sha'n't work the way you have to now,' said he. 'I'll pay the mortgage off'n the farm, an' dress mother like a queen. Jest you wait,' said he."

"I know it, Silas," said Mrs. Barney. "Dear little feller, he was awful good hearted, but Marion paid the mortgage after all, an' she's the one, instead of Dave, that supports us. The fact is, Dave aint got the stick to him. But he used to be a sweet child, with the best heart in the world."

"An' I guess he ain't lost any of it yet, either," said Uncle Si. "His letter sounds jest like him, jest so hopeful and chipper; but as you say, he ain't got the stick to him—still."

"Well," she said.

"Well," echoed Uncle Si, with a pitiful look of entreaty in his eyes. He always left every thing for mother to decide, and her word was law, so he listened eagerly for a verdict. Dave did not take out of kin for his weak temperament.

"WALL, I DUNNO, SILAS."

"Marion's coming," Mrs. Barney said. "Suppose we leave it to her, Silas?"

"S'posen we do, 'Lizy," Uncle Si answered, a ring of pleasure in his voice. There was a foot-fall on the plank walk leading to the kitchen door, and soon a tall, rather slender woman darkened the sunny entrance. She was a woman of perhaps thirty, with a kind, pleasant, if rather plain face, with dark hair and eyes.

"Well, thank goodness school is done!" she said, hanging her shade hat over the door. "Mr. Brockton was in this afternoon, and says we are to have two months' vacation on account of repairs. I am to call around to-morrow for my pay; and can't we go to the village to order the furniture, Monday, pa?"

Uncle Si looked up appealingly into Mrs. Barney's face, but he caught not a ray of hope there, so he said, in a hopeless kind of way, with a deep sigh:

"I dunno, Marion. I guess not.

Dolly's lame, an' haym,' an' other things kind of prevent—I got a letter from Dave, Marion."

"From Dave?" Marion queried. "And what did he write?"

Uncle Silas sighed again and began to nervously plait the table-cloth.

"He—he said," faltered Uncle Si, in his usual weak way, "he said he's engaged in a lawsuit agin some of his wife's folks, tryin' to establish a claim to a fortune that's hers by rights. You know he spoke about it in his last letter, an' he says that if he succeeds he will be independently rich, and the law is in his favor now, an' all he wants is—is—"

"Money, as usual," said Marion with a bitter laugh. "How much?"

"Fifty dollars."

There was an ominous pause, during which poor Uncle Si dared not look up; finally he timidly ventured:

"'Tis hard, Marion, but he seems to think this scheme is sure to turn out well."

"Poor Dave," sighed Mrs. Barney. "Hadn't you better read the letter, Marion?"

"Yes, yes, read it and judge for yourself," urged Uncle Si, getting up and fumbling about the tall eight-day clock in the corner.

"Lemme see, yes, that's it," and after adjusting his specks and spelling out the address he handed the letter to

"JUST READ THAT, MARION."

Marion. She took it without a word and read it to the end. It was frankly written in Dave's honest way, clearly stating the case and asking for fifty dollars.

"I hate mortally to ask you," he wrote in one place, "and I wouldn't if I thought there was no chance of my ever paying you, but I assure you, father, that the plan can not fail to turn out in our favor if I have the funds to carry me through. It promises ten thousand dollars to us, and then, father, I'll pay it back with the twenty-five dollars beside, and princely interest on both. I know you won't refuse me, father, so send as soon as possible. Your loving son,

"DAVE."

There was a look of mute questioning in poor Uncle Si's eyes as she returned the epistle, but she did not answer it, only took down a pail of feed for the hens, and, tying on her sun-hat, went out, and the subject was dropped until after supper, when she herself revived it.

"What do you think about it, mother," she asked. "Ought I to give the money to Dave? You know how shabby the parlor is."

Mrs. Barney was deep in the china closet and did not answer at first, but, when she did, her voice was rather shaky.

"I dunno, Marion," she said. "Do just as you like; the money is yourn an' Dave ain't got no right to it beyond the claim of flesh and blood. You've worked hard for it, an' the parlor's shabby, I know. Poor Dave!"

Marion knew just what her mother thought. The claim of his sunny blue eyes and frank nature was more to them all than the claim of justice. Uncle Si was looking at her, and she heard him murmur, as he took a pine stick from the wood-box and went out doors to whittle:

"Poor Dave, he's a good boy."

"I'll decide to-morrow," she said, shortly, thinking of the long cherished parlor suite, then of her brother, with his inability to "stick," but love conquered. "I'll do without for another year," she whispered to herself, brushing away a tear. "Dave shall have it this time as he did before, and may he succeed!"

She said nothing, however, until she came back next day from her journey after her school money, just fifty-four dollars, then she placed a letter in Uncle Si's hand.

"Read it," she said, quietly. "And if you can, take it to town this afternoon."

Uncle Si laboriously spelled out the few lines, while his hand trembled so he could hardly hold the paper.

"DEAR BROTHER DAVE—Inclosed are the fifty dollars desired. I hope it is enough. Let us know how the case terminates.

"Yours as ever, MARION BARNEY."

"God bless you, Marion," ejaculated Uncle Si, letting the paper flutter to the floor, while he clasped her hand. "It's a great sacrifice to you, child, but the good Lord will reward you, and Dave will not be ungrateful. Yes, I'll go to the village this very afternoon; never mind Dolly's lameness, nor the hayin' either."

The old claw-legged parlor furniture, with its hair-cloth upholstering, was refurbished and the worn carpet and green window shades mended, while the picture of Dave, in a new frame, smiled serenely down from the mantel, entirely unconscious of the darned and patched furniture.

One day Uncle Si came down from the village, his face all aglow with pleasure, and his eyes shining as if youth had been renewed.

"Read that!" he cried, tossing a letter into Marion's lap. "Just read that, Marion."

Dave's plan had succeeded, strange to tell, and inclosed was a check for one hundred dollars, "principal and compound interest, with a little besides."

"There, Marion, there," cried Uncle Si, fairly dancing in his glee. "What'd I say? An' now ain't you glad you sent the money to Dave? The parlor can be furnished now, an' you won't have to teach school no longer. Oh, Marion, ain't the Lord good?"

But Marion only smiled. It was all the answer she could make just then.—Mittie R. Towle, in The Home.

SKILLFUL CHICKEN STEALING.

A Species of Robbery Quite Prevalent at the National Capital.

"Yes, this is a good season of the year for chicken thieves," echoed Detective Flock the other day, when a Washington Star reporter spoke to him about that class of criminals. "But," he added, "there haven't been so many cases of chicken stealing lately as there used to be. Reports of that particular sort of stealing are few and far between. Now and then, however, three or four jobs are done in as many nights, and then nothing is heard from the chicken man for a long time. This is just the time of the year for them to operate, but this year there seems to be a scarcity of such thieves or else chickens are not so plentiful. Those who are called chicken thieves do not confine themselves to robbing chicken houses, but they steal all sorts of fowls, turkeys, ducks or chickens. And, strange to say, this class of offenders confine their stealing chiefly to fowls. Seldom do they steal other articles, and very few of them, indeed, are all-round thieves.

"How do they manage to rob a house of all its fowls without making noise enough to rouse the owner of the fowls?" the reporter inquired.

"Easy enough," was the reply. "To use their language, they 'charm' the fowls before they attempt to leave the premises with them, even if their heads have to be taken off. The thieves who are classed among the good ones, or those who thoroughly understand their business, seldom take away a live chicken unless the number captured is very small. Sometimes," continued the detective, "the thieves use sulphur to strangle the fowls with, and it acts like a charm. They use a box of blue-headed matches which they dampen and rub against their hand so that the fumes of sulphur that arise get into the lungs of the fowls and prevent them from crowing or cackling or giving any alarm whatever. Then the burglar stretches in his arm and collects his fowls one by one.

"Everybody," said the detective, "can't steal chickens. There seems to be some peculiar qualifications necessary to make a man an expert at the business. An expert thief knows well the necessity of always keeping a pot of scalding water on the stove at home, so that when he returns with the plunder he can get the feathers off them and prepare them for market as soon as possible. Then he knows that the means of identification have been destroyed. Often when such a robbery has been committed early in the morning the chickens are on a bench in the market before they are cold.

"Many a night on my tour through the city I have smelled smoke from burning feathers and been satisfied the feathers were picked from stolen fowls and were being burned to destroy their value as evidence."

A BORN COURTIER.

Royal Compliment to the Late Emperor William by a Tiny Subject.

During a stay of Emperor William I., of Germany, at a fashionable watering place in Ems, that monarch paid a visit to a large orphan asylum and school that was under Government patronage. The presence of so distinguished a personage created quite a sensation in the establishment, says the Chicago Herald.

After listening with much interest to the recitations of several of the classes his Majesty called to him a bright flaxen-haired little girl of five or six years of age, and lifting her into his lap said:

"Now, my little fraulein, let me see how well you have been taught. To what kingdom does this belong?" And taking out of his pocket an orange, he held it up to her.

The little girl hesitated for a moment, and, looking timidly up to the Emperor's face, replied:

"To the vegetable kingdom."

"Very good, my little fraulein; and now to what kingdom does this belong?" And he drew out of his pocket a gold piece and placed it on the orange.

Again the little girl hesitated, but soon replied:

"To the mineral kingdom."

"Better and better," said the Emperor.

"Now look at me and say to me to what kingdom I belong."

At this question there was an ominous silence among the teachers and visitors who were listening with much interest to the royal catechism. Could she make any other reply than "To the animal kingdom?"

The little girl hesitated long, as if perplexed as to what answer she would give. Was the Emperor an animal? Her eyes sought those of her teacher and her schoolmates. Then she looked up into the eyes of the aged Emperor, and with a half startled, frightened look, as if she were evading the question, replied: "To the Kingdom of Heaven."

A Level-Headed King.

The uncomplimentary terms applied to journalists recently by Emperor William recall by contrast the words used by King Humbert, of Italy, in speaking of the members of that profession. At one of the court balls in the palace at Rome the King summoned a number of editors to his side. After referring with expressions of admiration to the important work done by the press, and to the difficult and powerful work of the editors, he added: "Gentlemen, I have often said that I should wish to be a journalist were I not a King."

The Machinery in Man.

A man has with him a working pump called his heart, a working bellows called his lungs, a working vat called his stomach, a working condenser called his brain, and a working evaporator called his skin, all of which must be at work whether he will or not. The heart is expending over his body day by day one hundred and twenty-two footstons of work. He will go on lifting so many millions of tons in so many years: if he meet with no accident, the time will come when his last stroke will be finished and he will die.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

CARROLL, Ia., July, 1889.

I was suffering 10 years from shocks in my head, so much so, that at times I didn't expect to recover. I took medicines from many doctors, but didn't get any relief until I took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, the second dose relieved me and 2 bottles cured me. H. W. PECK.

Spent a Small Fortune.

124 Mahony City, Schuylkill Co., Pa., May, '90.

My son, who is now sixteen years old, had epileptic fits for about four years. I spent a small fortune for doctors and medicine to get him cured, but to no avail until he took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic. It is a year now, since he is perfectly cured, has not had the symptoms of a spell since. I am therefore very thankful for this medicine, and recommend it to all sufferers.

PAT. CAMPBELL.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

THEY GO TO PRISON

O'Brien and Dillon Leave London This Morning.

MANY DETECTIVES WITH THEM.

The Exiles Will be Taken to Ireland and Placed in Clonmel Jail.

They Receive the Greetings of Their Friends at Scotland Yard—No Demonstration of Any Kind Over the Arrest—All Present Were Quiet and Orderly—Courteous Treatment by the Police.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—Dillon and O'Brien, accompanied by several Scotland Yard detectives, left here this morning for Ireland, and the two exiles will soon be behind the bars in Clonmel jail, serving their six months' sentence.

At half-past six last night the Folkestone train, by which Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien were traveling under an escort of police, arrived at Charing Cross Railway station. Col. John P. Nolan, M. P.; John O'Connor, M. P., and a crowd of friends who had been notified of the arrest were waiting at the station, and as the train came to a standstill at the platform they besieged the carriage which contained the two Members of Parliament who were in custody. The most cordial greetings were exchanged between the prisoners and their friends, all parties being courteously treated by the police.

Inspector Littlechild, of Scotland Yard, who was in charge of the police escort, after a pause sufficient to allow Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien to receive the greetings of their friends, escorted his prisoners to a carriage which was in waiting near the platform, and they were driven to Scotland Yard.

During the time Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien were held in custody at Scotland Yard Mr. Parnell, Mr. Thomas Sexton, Sir Thomas Esmonde and Sir Henry Roscoe called there to see the two prisoners.

There was no demonstration of any description made by the crowd of people who had assembled to witness the departure of the Irish members of Parliament. All present were silent and orderly.

IN MEMORY OF LINCOLN.

Hannibal Hamblin Delivers an Address in New York.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—The fifth annual dinner of the Republican Club, commemorative of of the 82d anniversary of Abraham Lincoln, at Delmonico's last night, was held in some sense under a shadow, as it was feared the festivities might at any moment be terminated by the announcement of the death of Gen. Sherman. Those in charge were kept informed of his condition and it had been arranged that a speech would be made in his honor in case of death and the proceedings end.

The speech of the evening was that of Hannibal Hamlin to the second toast, "The Surviving Standard Bearer of 1860." He received an enthusiastic reception.

He said he came to do homage to one of the greatest men the world had ever known, leaving his home at the hazard of his health. He came to pay a tribute to Abraham Lincoln. He was not an educated but a learned man. The world was the school from which he graduated; his professors, the men he met and from whom he learned his humanity. The gem of a speech he made at Gettysburg will stand as a rich product in literature for all time.

The speaker continuing, said: "I am young in Republicanism, though old in years, but I am grieved at the action of some of our Congressmen. They cast a shadow over my later days. I am grieved at the dishonesty and degradation of some of our Senators."

He hoped the club would co-operate with him to secure the passage of a law to make the birthday of Lincoln a national holiday similar to that of Washington. In a low voice he concluded:

"Remember, I can see the boys in blue as they march in their solitary beats in eternal camping ground, and I can hear their voices telling us to do by Lincoln as they would do had God changed, in His inscrutable wisdom, our relative positions."

Congressman Mason, of Illinois, who sat next to Mr. Hamlin, said that he and Senator Higgins, of Delaware, who was also present, had decided to introduce a bill in Congress at once to make Lincoln's birthday a national holiday.

Rev. H. L. Wayland, of Philadelphia, delivered an interesting address on the toast, "Abraham Lincoln."

Ben All Haggin Seriously Ill.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Ben All Haggin, the well known horseman, who has been very ill since the first of the year, and who was recently reported as out of danger, is growing worse. This morning it was said that he had passed a bad night, and that the doctors had doubts of his recovery.

Killed by a Cave-in.

EASTON, Pa., Feb. 13.—Edward Werkheiser and his team were instantly killed in Williams Township by a cave-in of the road over an ore mine. The body of the unfortunate driver has not yet been recovered. The hole is 20 feet in diameter.

Woman's National Council to Meet.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—The first triennial meeting of the Woman's National Council of the United States will be held in Albaugh's Opera House, on February 22, 23, 24 and 25.

Watterson Wrote the Letter.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 13.—Henry Watterson acknowledges that he wrote the now famous letter to Gov. Hill and stands by it.

TERRIFIC EXPLOSION.

Twenty-one Bodies Taken Out of the Ruins at Quebec.

QUEBEC, Feb. 13.—Intense excitement prevails here over the explosion at the Quebec Worsted Company's factory.

The list of dead now reaches 21 and the number of injured is estimated at 40.

The works where the explosion occurred are situated at Hare Point on the northeastern outskirts of the city, and cover a large area and employ more hands than any other manufacturing establishment in the city. They had been closed down for two weeks, while the boilers were being overhauled and refitted. Operations were to have been resumed and about 500 of the operatives were on hand, but owing to some cause the machinery was not started and they were dismissed. Most of them went back to their homes, but many remained about the building, a number keeping in the vicinity of the engine room for the sake of the warmth.

The explosion came without a moment's warning. The report was heard all over the city, and an enormous crowd soon gathered at the scene of the ruin. The work of rescue began at once, the fire brigade being summoned to assist.

The following bodies have been recovered and identified:

John Lamontaine,	Arthur Tweedle,
Alex. Martineau,	F. Villeuve,
Emile Boule,	Edward Morrison,
Miss Mercier,	Gustav Blondin,
Joseph Francois,	Arthur Rousseau
Joseph Dufresne,	Peter Clement,
Henri la Liberte,	Pierre Giroux,
Joseph McHand,	William Lee,
William Forest,	James Stiles.

It is believed there are other bodies still in the ruins. The work of rescue was continued all day.

M'KINLEY'S SPEECH.

He Replies to Ex-President Cleveland's Remarks at Columbus.

TOLEDO, O., Feb. 13.—At the Lincoln commemoration exercises last evening Mr. McKinley began his speech with a reference to Mr. Cleveland's remarks at the Thurman banquet. "It is worth something," said Mr. McKinley, "in the discussion of economic questions, to have an avowal from our political opponents of the real meaning and effect of their economic theories.

"It is always well in political controversy to understand one another. It was therefore gratifying to the friends of protection to have that eminent Democratic leader from the State of New York make open confession of the purposes which he and his associates aim to accomplish.

"Assigned to respond to the inspiring sentiment, 'American Citizenship,' he made 'cheapness' the theme of his discourse and counted it among the highest aspirations of American life. His avowal is only that which protectionists have always claimed to be the inevitable tendency of his tariff policy, which exalts cheap goods from abroad above good wages at home."

No Agreement in Connecticut.

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 13.—After passing Mr. Greene's resolution offering to unite with the Senate in referring all the disputed points of law in the controversy to the Judges of the Supreme Court, the House took a recess until Wednesday next at 1:30 p. m. As the Senate adjourned without acting on the House resolution declaring the election of Staub as Comptroller he is not yet considered qualified by the General Assembly, and on those grounds he was refused permission to enter his office.

No Tidings of Superintendent Evans.

PATERSON, N. J., Feb. 13.—Business and social circles in Paterson are much disturbed over the disappearance of William W. Evans, superintendent of the Grant Locomotive Works. Mr. Evans disappeared two weeks ago. Not a word has been heard from him since, either by his family, his business firm or his friends. He had several thousand dollars on his person when last seen.

The President to Visit the South.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 13.—William Youngblood, member of the Republican National Committee for Alabama, is authority for the statement that immediately after the adjournment of Congress President Harrison, Postmaster-General Wannamaker and other members of the Cabinet will make a tour of the Southern States.

Senator Quay in Seclusion.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Senator Quay has not been at the Capitol for two days. It is believed that he is working on the speech that he is booked to deliver in the Senate before the adjournment, in which he expects to vindicate himself of all the personal and political charges preferred against him by the newspapers.

He Forged Balance Sheets.

AYER, Mass., Feb. 13.—President Hartwell, of the North Middlesex Institution for Savings, said this morning that the deficit occasioned by Spaulding's transactions will reach at least $35,000. The examination shows that Spaulding has been for some time practicing a forged balance system in the accounts of both the First National Bank and the Savings Institution.

FIGHTING FOR LIFE

Gen. Sherman Rallies After All Hope Was Abandoned.

HIS REMARKABLE WILL POWER.

The Physicians Hold Frequent Consultations, but Report No Improvement.

It is Believed that the Old Warrior is Sinking and the End is Near—A Catholic Clergyman Administers the Last Rites—How the Day Passed in the Sick Chamber—Many Callers at the House.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Daybreak brought a decided change for the worse in Gen. Sherman's condition.

For three hours after midnight the loving keepers of the dreary vigil had noticed that the pulsations of the heart had gradually grown weaker and the patient had sunk into a lethargy from which nothing could arouse him. His vitality seemed about exhausted, and his life apparently was oozing away.

Later a new danger was made manifest. Mucus collected upon the lungs, which Gen. Sherman did not have the power to relieve himself of, and there was danger of his choking to death. At times he started up and tried to rise, but his limbs refused their office. The physicians sought in every way to relieve him, but it seemed in vain, and matters were at a desperate stage.

Before the House.

Without the house a solitary policeman paced up and down, telling each inquirer that hope had almost fled. Sturdy working men with their tin buckets paused to ask after the General, and ladies and gentlemen in fine carriages rode up to the curb and sent in their cards or went in themselves to ask personally how went the tide of battle.

Two Sisters of Charity entered the house and remained there long, praying for the dying chieftain and administering to his sorrowing daughters. Many of those who came out of the house brought eyes that were red with weeping.

Face to Face With Death.

Eleven o'clock, and the tide at its lowest ebb. Gen. Sherman was dying, the doctors said. All hope was gone. He had been unconscious some time. His lungs were full. His face was purple. His breath came in short, quick gasps. Mucus rattled in his throat. The dew of death gathered on his wrinkled forehead as fast as it could be wiped away. Finis seemed written on the seamed face. Only the will remained unconquered.

The weeping family gathered about the bedside. The gentle Rachel had her arms about her father. The Senator stood leaning on the head board looking into the face of his elder brother. Young Mr. Barrett, the private secretary, who had been hastily summoned from his vacation, and the grizzled friend, Gen. Tom Ewing, were weeping a little apart. Doctors Janeway and Green bent over the knotted form fighting stubbornly for Time.

A messenger had been despatched post haste for one of the two priests at the nearby church of the Blessed Sacrament, and Father Byrnes responded. And then before this little company the most solemn service of the Church of Rome was administered, and Gen. Sherman was annointed with the holy oil.

But the old soldier had not yet surrendered. Again he rallied his forces mightily, and the fortunes of war were again in his favor.

A sudden fit of coughing freed his lungs of a large quantity of mucus. He was given some whisky and milk, followed by distilled water, and the effect was astonishing. The doctors who had sent out bulletins to the effect that he could not live another hour are now putting forth promising bulletins.

Dr. Janeway, when he left the house, said that nothing but the marvellous vitality of Gen. Sherman kept him alive. It was will power.

In answer to the question of a reporter the Doctor said: "There is no material change in the condition of Gen. Sherman. There is no improvement and he may be said to be holding his own. That he is not better was to be expected; that he is not worse gives room for hope."

"Give Me a Hand, Tom."

At 10 o'clock last night the General recovered from a semi-delirium and insisted upon rising from his bed. He seemed to know those about him, and to Gen. Ewing he hoarsely whispered:

"Give me a hand, Tom, and put me on my feet."

It was thought best to humor him and he was supported in his walk across the sick chamber to his easy chair. He could not stand up, however, and was brought back to bed.

Many Callers.

Many people called upon the General and left cards of condolence. Among them were Col. Killian Van Rensalaer, Mr. and Mrs. Britton Richards, Col. Whitney, President Scott of the Coffee Exchange, E. T. Nelles, Walter Damrosch and B. H. Fields.

His Son Sets Sail.

A cablegram was received from Father Thomas Ewing Sherman, stating that he had set sail yesterday on the Majestic from Liverpool, in the hope that he would reach New York before his father died.

Wiring the President.

Every half hour a bulletin of General Sherman's condition is sent to President Harrison.

Grand Army Election.

BOSTON, Feb. 13.—Arthur A. Smith, of Colerains, was elected commander of the Massachusetts Department, G. A. R. James K. Churchill, of Worcester, was elected senior vice-commander.

THE FAMOUS GENERAL'S CAREER

A Review of the Life and Military Services of William Tecumseh Sherman.

With the death of Gen. Sherman passes away the most distinguished figure in the nation.

Not only was he its greatest surviving general, but he enjoyed, it is safe to say, both the glory of a war hero, the affection and respect of his countrymen more generally than any man now living. The secret of this was no doubt, partly that, apparently without political ambition, he never allowed partisanship to divide the country's admiration nor engaged in rivalries that not infrequently have tarnished military honors brushed with the strife of politicians.

Serene in his old age, he rested gracefully on his laurels and the country was never tired of renewing its recognition of his heroship.

There are few generals, besides, of any time who have had a single, so brilliant achievement in their career, to awaken the enthusiasm of their countrymen and impress their name on history, as the march to the sea. That stroke of generalship, celebrated in a song, has given his name a peculiar glory.

William Tecumseh Sherman was born on a farm at Lancaster, Ohio, February 8, 1820; he was of the Connecticut Shermans. His father was a lawyer and judge of the Supreme Court. General Sherman was the sixth of a family of 11 children, his brother, Senator John Sherman, being the eighth. General Sherman was a direct descendant of Samuel and Rev. John Sherman, brothers, who came to this country from England in 1634, accompanied by their cousin, Captain John Sherman, from whom Roger Sherman, signer of the Declaration of Independence, traced his descent.

As his father's death young Sherman being then but 9 years old, was adopted by Thomas Ewing, and attended school in Lancaster until 1836, when he received an appointment to a cadetship at West Point. He graduated from the military academy in 1840, standing sixth in a class of forty-two.

His Commission as a Lieutenant.

On July 1, 1840, he received his commission as a second lieutenant in the Third artillery and was sent to Florida, where the last embers of the Indian war still smouldered. On November 30, 1841, he was a first lieutenant and given command of a small detachment at Picolata. In 1843 he was stationed at Fort Morgan, Mobile Point, Ala., and later at Fort Morris, Charleston harbor, where he remained until 1846.

His Marriage to Miss Ewing.

Returning to Washington in 1850, he married Miss Ellen Boyle Ewing, daughter of the Secretary of the Interior, and soon after he was made a captain in the Commissary Department. Three years later he resigned from the army, which then had so little promise, and became manager of the San Francisco branch of the bank of Lucas, Turner & Co., of St. Louis. On the closing of this branch in 1857 he became for a time an agent in New York of the same banking house.

Next with his brother-in-law, he formed at Leavenworth the law partnership of Sherman & Ewing. His succeeding venture, which followed rapidly, was as superintendent of the Louisiana State Military Academy at Alexandria, an occupation broken up by the secession of that State. One more experiment remained in a record which recalls the various changes Grant was simultaneously undergoing in civil life. Sherman became, early in 1861, president of the Fifth Street Railroad in St. Louis. Then at last war opened to him his great career.

His Opportunity for Service.

The civil war gave Sherman the opportunity of distinguished service, and placed him in the first rank of living generals. His first commission was that of colonel of a regiment of infantry. At the first battle of Bull Run he commanded a brigade of volunteers, and was made brigadier-general of volunteers.

In the battle of Shiloh Gen. Sherman was wounded in the hand. Shortly after the advance upon and siege of Corinth followed, resulting in the evacuation of the place. On Gen. Grant's appointment to the command of the Army of Tennessee Gen. Sherman was ordered to Memphis to put it in a state of defence.

Attempts to Capture Vicksburg.

The western armies had advanced to the line of the Memphis and Charleston Railroad. The next step was to capture Vicksburg and open the Mississippi to navigation. Vicksburg was strongly defended and covered by an army behind the Tallahatchie. Grant moved direct from Grand Junction via Holly Springs, McPherson from Corinth and Sherman from Memphis to Wyatt, forcing a retreat of the Confederate army to Grenada behind the Talahatchie. Grant then ordered Sherman back to Memphis with one of his brigades to organize a force of fresh troops and come down the Mississippi under the escort of Admiral Porter's gunboat fleet to capture Vicksburg. On Dec. 26 a landing was effected at Johnstown's Landing, 12 miles up the Yazoo, and separated from the opposite bluffs by almost impassable swamps and bayous. Nevertheless, an attempt was made to take the position by assault, but failed. The evacuation of the enemy at Holly Springs, which put an end to Grant's plan of operation, and other unfavorable circumstances determined Sherman's withdrawal to Milliken's Bend.

Vicksburg Captured.

At the same time General McClernand arrived to take command of the expedition by order of President Lincoln and the army of the Tennessee was reorganized into the 13th, 15th, 16th and 17th corps, of which Sherman had command of the 15th. Sherman bore a conspicuous part in the campaign which followed and in the siege operations which resulted in the surrender of Vicksburg on July 4, 1863. Sherman was at once ordered to pursue Johnston, who retreated hastily from his position near the Big Black on receiving the news of the surrender.

Johnston escaped and Sherman, after destroying the railroads in all directions, fell back to the west of the Big Black, where he lay until summoned on Sept. 22 to the relief of Rosecrans's beleaguered army at Chattanooga. Meanwhile he had been made brigadier-general in the regular army, to take effect from July 4. He proceeded to Memphis, whence he marched eastward, repairing the railroad as he went, until he received instructions on Oct. 27, to hasten on to Chattanooga from Gen. Grant, who had succeeded Rosecrans at that place.

Wins the Day at Missionary Ridge.

On Nov. 23 his command was in position, he himself having surveyed the situation in advance of its arrival, and on the following day carried the north end of Missionary Ridge, which position he strongly fortified during the night.

On the 24th, beginning at sunrise, he engaged Bragg's right with such success that the latter so weakened his centre to strengthen his right that Thomas carried the centre in the afternoon, and determined the event of the engagement. By moonlight Bragg's army was in full retreat. Sherman and Hooker pursued the routed army. Sherman turned back on the 29th to take command of the force for the relief of Burnside, besieged at Knoxville. He marched rapidly, the last 84 miles being made in three days. Longstreet was forced to raise his siege and withdraw his army into Virginia.

Goes Into Winter Quarters.

Gen. Sherman then returned to Chattanooga and ordered his command into winter quarters. Toward the end of January, 1864, he returned to Memphis and Vicksburg, and on Feb. 2 he moved on Meridian, the chief point of supply of the confederate army, and cut off communication with it by destroying the railroads in every direction and their property. On March 2 Grant had been made lieutenant-general, and on the 12th he assumed command of all the armies of the United States with the purpose of conducting in person the campaign of the Army of the Potomac.

The Division of the Mississippi.

On March 17 he assigned Gen. Sherman to the command of the Division of the Mississippi, comprising the Departments of the Ohio, the Tennessee, the Cumberland and the Arkansas, the entire southwestern region, with temporary headquarters at Nashville. On Feb. 19 Sherman had received the thanks of Congress for his services in the Chattanooga campaign. Assuming his new command about the middle of March, Sherman began his organization with the view to the spring campaign, which was to be opened against Atlanta, Ga., simultaneously with Grant's campaign against Richmond.

The Advance on Atlanta.

On March 7 he set out from the winter quarters about Chattanooga. Johnston's army, numbering nearly 50,000, was lying about Dalton, ready to oppose him. His force consisted of the armies of the Cumberland, the Tennessee and the Ohio, in all about 99,000 strong. Gen. Johnston's force was increased to about 62,000, strongly placed behind entrenchments and natural obstacles. After coming up with Johnston at Dalton, on May 7, Sherman forced his retreat step by step, at the expense of several fierce battles, until the confederate army took a strong position on the Kenesaw mountains, with its flanks connected so as to cover Marietta. Both armies fought from behind log parapets. Until June 27, when Sherman ordered an attack on the fortified lines, but did not succeed in breaking through. By moving McPherson's army toward the Chattahoochee he compelled Johnston to retire to another entrenched position on the northwest bank of the river, whence he fell back on Atlanta as Sherman began to cross the river.

The Fight for Atlanta Begun.

On July 17 the direct attack on Atlanta was begun. Gen. John B. Hood, who had succeeded Johnston, pursued a more aggressive policy, and sorties from the city resulted in a number of engagements around Atlanta, in which the Federal troops were uniformly successful. Finally Sherman moved with five of his corps, one being left on the north on the Chattahoochie, on the enemy's remaining railroad available for the enemy, and defeated Hood at Jonesboro, occupying the line of supply. On Sept. 1 the enemy evacuated. Sherman's loss since leaving Chattanooga amounted to 31,687 men. Hood moved to Nashville, where he was disastrously defeated by Gen. Thomas, sent thither by Sherman in consequence of Hood's movement.

The March to the Sea.

Leaving Thomas to defend Tennessee against Hood, Sherman ran back all his unnecessary supplies to Chattanooga, broke up the railroad, destroyed Atlanta, and cutting the telegraph behind him started on Nov. 13 on his triumphant march to the sea.

Dec. 10 he was before Savannah, having marched 300 miles in 24 days through the heart of Georgia, enjoying the plenty of the land which the season afforded. The defensive works that covered Savannah and blocked Savannah River were taken by assault, and communications were opened with the fleet which furnished ample supplies to the army.

Savannah a Christmas Gift.

In a note to President Lincoln on the evacuation of the city, he wrote: "I beg to present you as a Christmas gift the city of Savannah, with 150 heavy guns, plenty of ammunition and 25,000 bales of cotton." On Aug. 12 he had been appointed major-general of the United States army and on Jan. 10 he received the thanks of Congress for his triumphal march. In February Sherman left Savannah, making his way through the Salkehatchie swamp, flanked Charleston, compelled its evacuation, and entered Columbia on the 17th. He joined Gen. Schofield, who had gone north by steamer and rail, at Goldsboro, as planned, on March 24. Leaving his troops there, Sherman visited President Lincoln and Gen. Grant at City Point.

Lee and Johnston Surrender.

Lee's surrender on April 10 was followed on the 12th by a flag of truce sent to Sherman from Gen. Johnston. Correspondence and interviews followed and the result was a draught of conditions of surrender. The proposed basis of agreement included in the terms of capitulation all the confederate troops remaining in the field as well as Johnston's army. President Lincoln's assassination occurred at this time.

His Army Reviewed at Washington.

Preliminary to the disbandment of the National armies the army of the Potomac and Gen. Sherman's army passed in review in Washington before President Johnson, his cabinet and Gen. Grant, the former on May 23 and the latter on May 24. General Sherman issued a special field order taking leave of his troops on May 30. From June 27, 1865, to March 3, 1869, he held the command of the military division of the Mississippi, with headquarters at St. Louis, embracing the departments of Ohio, Missouri and Kansas.

Succeeds Grant as General.

On Grant's appointment to the generalship of the army on July 25, 1866, Sherman was made lieutenant-general, and when Grant became president Sherman succeeded him as general. In 1871-2 he made a tour of Europe for professional purposes, and was everywhere received with great honors. On February 9, 1884, he was, at his own request, placed on the retired list, with full pay and emoluments, and was succeeded by Gen. Sheridan. He received the degree of LL.D. from Harvard, Yale, Princeton and Dartmouth colleges.

The Original Morey Dead.

NASHUA, N. H., Feb. 13.—Samuel Morey, who sprang into notoriety during the Garfield-Hancock campaign of 1880, died in this city yesterday. He was well known in Grand Army circles. In 1880 he was arrested in connection with the forged Morey letter, and was confined for several weeks in the Ludlow Street Jail in New York.

The Big Miners' Strike Coming.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 13—The United Mine Workers' Convention unanimously adopted a resolution to demand the eight-hour system on May 1, and to strike if it is not granted. It looks now as if the biggest miners' strike ever known will surely take place.

Gen. Miles' Action Not Sustained.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—The conduct of Col. J. W. Forsythe at the Wounded Knee fight is sustained by the President and Secretary Proctor and the Colonel has been restored to his command. This action is contrary to the advice of General Miles.

Jay Gould is All Right.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—George Gould, when he read the report of his father's illness, at once telegraphed for information. He received the following reply from Waynesboro, Ga.: "Your telegram received. I am all right. Jay Gould."

Failure of an Old Clothing Firm.

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 13.—The firm of Noah Walker & Co., one of the oldest clothing establishments in the United States, made a deed of trust during the day for the benefit of their creditors. The trustees filed a bond for $125,000. The firm has two branch houses, one in Washington and one in Petersburg, Va.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Stadler Wine bill was defeated in New York Assembly.

Premier Stambuloff has determined to expel all Nihilists from Bulgaria.

Senor Eldwayen, Governor of the Bank of Spain, has tendered his resignation.

Cornelius O'Brien of Boston has just been arrested, making the sixth person alleged to have been concerned in the death of Patrick Curran, who, an autopsy showed was murdered in South Boston.

At the monthly meeting of the Spinners' Association at Fall River, Mass., Senator Howard was empowered to go to Newark, N. J., and attempt a settlement of the difficulties at Clark's Thread Mills.

Careful investigation of the affairs of the Adjutant-General's office at Harrisburg, Pa., show Gen. Hastings' administration to have been a most creditable one. The statement of the balances as given out show a larger balance in favor of the General than was at first reported.

The committee of the Board of Trade of Lynn, Mass., appointed at the request of the Mayor of that city to investigate and ascertain if it were possible to bring the locked-out morocco dressers and the manufacturers together to arrange for some satisfactory settlement of the trouble, reported that the committee has seen both sides in the controversy and finds it impossible to do anything.

More Bills Against the Delamaters.

MEADVILLE, Pa., Feb. 13.—Two more true bills against the members of the late banking firm of Delamater & Co. were returned by the grand jury. It is expected that more will be found before the work of the jury is finished.

In the Struggle for Possession of John Duckworth's Children They Steal a Clever March.

The members of Unity Lodge, Knights of Pythias, have let no grass grow under their feet since James Keating announced that he would resort to every legal method to compel the Plainfield Children's Home to surrender John Duckworth's orphans to his custody; and yesterday they secured, with the legal assistance of Messrs. Jackson and Codington, the appointment of Amos Andrews of the Potter Press Works as guardian. Surrogate A. T. Huff of Somerset made this selection at the joint solicitation of the lodge and of Duckworth's sister. Duckworth's three children are now in the care of Mr. Andrews, and he has placed them all in the Children's Home until they can be disposed of as Duckworth himself desired.

Many people have wondered why there should be a contest in this case. The whole trouble arose over the matter of religion. Duckworth was a Protestant, and a worshiper at Hope chapel. His wife was a Roman Catholic, and after her death her sister, Mrs. Keating of Elizabeth, tried to persuade the widower to let her have the children. Duckworth saw that her object was to educate them in the Roman faith, and refused to part with them. Repeatedly before his death he told what disposition he wished made of his children. He distinctly stated that he did not want his wife's sister to have the children. He said he had no doubt the children would be well treated at the home of the Keatings, as they were good people; but he did not want them to become Roman Catholics.

His fellow-Knights, thus knowing his wishes, are trying to fulfill them, and through the guardian who has been selected they will find such homes for the little ones as the dead father desired. The Knights feel that they have intrenched their position with every legal requirement, especially since their action is indorsed by Duckworth's sister, a married woman of Orange, who, they hold, has as much right to dictate what shall be done with Duckworth's offspring as has Mrs. Duckworth's sister.

The next step for the Keatings to take—if they take any—is to secure the removal of the guardian appointed, but to do that they must show good grounds for his removal; and since he was appointed in the legal way and is satisfactory to the Knights and to Duckworth's sister and other members of the family the Knights fear nothing on that point. The actual appointment of a guardian was accomplished while the Keatings were endeavoring to have themselves made guardians.

HIGHWAYMEN STOP A BUTCHER.

But Mr. Guttredge's Spirited Horse Dashes Through Their Midst.

Five tough-looking tramps held up Jas. Guttredge, the Netherwood butcher, last evening. He was on his way home from Westfield, just before dark, when the highwaymen stepped into the middle of the road and ordered him to throw up his hands.

Guttredge is a brave fellow, and under ordinary circumstances would have tackled two or three with pleasure. But last evening he had considerable money in his possession, and nothing with which to protect himself against five, except his hands.

He never lost his presence of mind for moment. Raising his whip he suddenly brought it down with a sharp cut across the flanks of his spirited horse. The animal sprang forward in pain and fear, and dashed the highwaymen to the right and left of the road.

Guttredge heard their curses as he flew by, but he had no time even to look back and see what came of them. His horse was running away, and he only succeeded in quieting the animal when he reached home.

JOB MALE'S HEIRS.

The Nephew Namesake of the Dead Ex-Mayor Seeking an Amicable Settlement of the Estate.

Another dispatch from Lockport, N. Y., on the subject of Job Male's heirs, says: "J. C. Male and John Heiser, of Jersey City, are still investigating the claims of Job Male's heirs in this city. Job S. Male, the nephew, is in Canada, canvassing among the heirs of the dead ex-Mayor with the idea of obtaining their consent to the probate of the unsigned will. He will visit all of them, and until their consent or emphatic dissent is obtained no attempt will be made to settle the estate."

Making Hay While the Sun Shines.

A call is to be issued next Sunday, in the churches in this city and throughout the State, for signatures to a remonstrance to be sent to the Legislature, against race track legislation of any kind whatever. A call of this kind is expected to be met with responses in such numbers as completely to overwhelm the Legislature, and show to the members that the people of the State of New Jersey are opposed to these evil institutions. The local pastors hope that Plainfield will send the longest list of names of any city in the State, in proportion to its size. It is thought best to make this effort now, and not wait till some bill threatens, because activity now is aggressive, and is an evidence of what can be done if any race-track bill is introduced.

PAST COMMANDER RANDOLPH PRESIDES.

Half-a-Thousand of New Jersey's Heroes Gather at a "Camp-Fire."

Five hundred veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic, sat down to a banquet at which ex-Mayor Randolph of this city presided, in Masonic Hall, Trenton, last evening. It was both an inspiring and an affecting sight. The walls were decorated with swords and muskets, over which hung the ensigns of liberty, and in the centre of the hall stood a stand upon which two swords were crossed, and above these symbols of war lay that of peace—the Holy Bible.

The occasion was the "Camp Fire" of the 24th annual encampment of the Department of New Jersey G. A. R. The tables were loaded with many luxuries besides the conventional "army fare." The host of battle scared soldiers gathered at the boards, ate their fill of the beans and corned-beef of the greater delicacies provided. Then they lighted their hundreds of pipes, pushed their chairs back, and thoroughly enjoyed Toast-Master L. V. F. Randolph's opening speech.

The latter occupied the place of honor at the head of the immense room, with the band at his back. He could be seen and heard by everybody, and retained their attention and interest in the proceedings until their close at midnight, by his eloquent and humorous introductions of the several speakers.

Commander-in-Chief Veazey, Gov. Abbett and Major Skirm, who were expected, did not arrive. Department Commander Matthews responded to the toast "Dep't N. J., G. A. R." Charles Burrows, "Old Comrades;" F. D. Cole, "'61 and '91;" Qr. M. Gen. Donnelly, "The Militia and the G. A. R.;" Capt. E. C. Stahl, "Early Piety;" Major Henry W. Sawyer, "Prison Life;" Dep't Chap. C. E. Hill, "The Army Chaplain;" Jr. Dep't Com. J. M. Atwood, "Our Camp-fire Committee."

DROWNED BACK OF NETHERWOOD.

Thomas Bailey Meets a Violent Death, as Did His Wife.

As he was climbing over a fence on his way home Sunday night, Thomas Bailey, 60 years of age, fell in the brook and was drowned. He was an old resident of that part of Plainfield's neighborhood known as Two Bridges, just back of Short Hills on the road to Rahway.

His body was not found until Tuesday, when a search was made to discover the cause of his absence. He was coming through Ash Swamp when he met his fate. The body lay in the water just below Pumpkin Patch bridge.

Five years ago Bailey's wife pulled a lighted lamp over on her and she was burned to death. The couple lived at that time in one of the Frazee Lee houses. It was said that she was intoxicated at the time, and it is rumored that Bailey himself might have been slightly so last Sunday night.

Bound Brook's Borough Battle.

The quiet-loving villagers of Bound Brook breathe easier since the settlement of the long battle over the question of borough or no borough. No heads were broken, but while the fight lasted it was bitter. The farmers and storekeepers were afraid of increased taxes, but the New York business men who make the village their home laughed at the idea. The New York men thought they had captured the town when they imported Mayor Charles Place to tell how North Plainfield as a borough had risen from a mud hole to a city. But the farmers got another man the next night to tell how badly off North Plainfield was.

On the day of the election fifty-four more solid citizens than were necessary cast their ballots for the borough. Among them was George La Monte of Nassau street, New York, and President of the Bound Brook First National Bank. Mr La Monte intends to deed the Washington camp grounds, behind Bound Brook, to the borough as a park.

An Excellent Entertainment, and a Good Purse for the Hospital.

The annual entertainment given yesterday under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the German Reformed church was a success in every respect. The entertainers of the evening did their best, and the large audience was highly pleased, and made to feel entirely at home.

Recitations were given by the Misses Moeller, Bell and Tomaschefski, by the Messrs. A. Wolff, Henry Haurand, J. H. Carney, and by the Masters Johnny Voehl and Alfred Koechli. P. Conde delighted the audience with fine violin solos, accompained by Mrs. Buckly on the organ. During the evening Miss Alice Smith also rendered choice music at the organ. Refreshments were served by the ladies of the Aid Society. The collection, for the benefit of the Muhlenberg Hospital, was $28.

It is Only an Unauthorized List.

The article which appeared in THE PRESS of Feb., 9, stating "that only 60 out of 135 members of the Crescent League had contributed in any way to the Crescent League fair, and that a list had been prepared of those who did not give or spend a cent, which list would be preserved for future reference," was not authorized by the Fair Committee, the Board of Trustees, or the League.

THE DIRECT TAX BILL.

A Petition Asking for a Special Order Giving Time to Its Consideration.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—A petition signed by 106 Republicans and 53 Democrats, members of the House, was handed to Speaker Reed by Representative Caswell, of Wisconsin, asking the Committee on Rules to report a special order giving time for the consideration of the Direct Tax bill.

This bill, which provides for repayment to the States of certain direct taxes levied during the war, was passed by the Senate at the last session, and was favorably reported by the House Judiciary Committee.

The Republican managers in the House are opposed to the consideration of this measure, because they say the finances of the country will not justify the expenditure of $17,000,000 for this purpose at this time. Nearly all the Ohio members are very much in favor of it, and urge Major McKinley to report it, for the reason that Ohio will get a million and a half and needs it badly. Pennsylvania has $1,700,000 in the bill, and these large amounts are temptations to push the bill to the utmost.

It is not probable that the Committee on Rules will report the desired special order.

CLARK'S MILLS MOBBED.

Stones Came Thick and Fast and the Detectives Drew Their Revolvers.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 12.—Nearly every window in the Clark thread mills was smashed by stones thrown by a howling mob of men and women strikers last night. Chief of Police Turnbull tried with his men to pacify the crowd, but the effort was hopeless. The people kept surging nearer and nearer the buildings, and State Chief of Detectives Gregory and 50 special officers played a hose on the crowd though the mill windows. Then the mob hurled stones.

The special detectives drew their revolvers, but it had no effect on the people. The stones came thick and fast, and several officers were struck. At 11 o'clock the crowd withdrew, with shouts and curses, and serious trouble is expected to-day.

THE MAYOR'S ADVICE TO YOUNG MEN.

Wise Words from a Banker of Experience —When There Were No Millionaires There Were No Tramps.

A large body of young men gathered at the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association, last evening, to listen to a very interesting talk on "Money and Banking" by Mayor Alexander Gilbert, who was introduced by President Murray as the first President the local Y. M. C. A. had ever had. The audience was one of the finest ever seen in Plainfield. The Mayor's remarks were in part as follows:

The Chinese, centuries ago, used a money composed of clay and stamped with the seal of the government. The amount of this money was absolutely and rigidly fixed by law. There was just enough to supply the needs of business, and peace and happiness was the result. A certain emperor thought to make himself rich by issuing a large amount of this clay money. The issue was made, but of course the value of the money declined because the market was glutted with it, and there was ruin and distress in the country.

I can remember the time when the notes issued by the national banks would not be taken as legal tender. During the years 1862-78 the paper was not payable in anything excepting the security that was behind the nation's banks. Outside of the country they were worth nothing. The silver dollar is really worth but 81 or 82 cents, yet one gets a dollar's worth of merchandise with it. Take silver dollars outside of the country and one has no silver dollars; he has only so much silver which he will have to sell at its intrinsic value, and will lose a heavy per cent. on every dollar.

Since the earliest period, since the discovery of gold and silver, the leading commercial nations of the world have always had gold and silver to represent money. These metals are adapted to the purpose of ornamentation; they are neither too hard nor too soft.

There has been a large increase in the production of silver during the last 40 years. There are about $7,000,000,000 dollars' worth of gold and silver in existence.

Before banks were formed people stowed their money away in safe places where they could get at it when they needed it. When the banks came into existence, however, all this money was brought out and put into the banks, because they were safe places to keep money. Union is strength, and the money thus brought together and consolidated wielded a greater influence than the money that was scattered here and there, in chests, old shoes, bags, etc. The men in charge of the money conceived the idea of loaning this money and getting interest on it. Business men found that they could borrow money, and they did so, and started railroads and canals and built up towns and cities. In fact, the prosperity of the land is due in great measure to the banks of the country. The banking interest is the great interest underlying the happiness of the world. It is estimated that every hour in the years 1860-80 added $250,000 to the wealth of the country.

The Bank of England discontinued the issue of silver about 1816. The reason given was because the convenience of His Majesty's subjects demanded it. Why is it, then, that the United States seems desirous of using silver and making silver the legal tender in opposition to the tendency of the leading commercial nations of the world? This is why:—In 1862 the United States was in need of money, and this led to the issue of paper currency. The Western farmers were greatly benefited by this, and today their sons think that by the coinage of silver the era of prosperity will again come to the farmer.

Some years ago, when the United States was about to begin payment in gold, of the promises to pay of the paper money they had issued, many thought that a panic would be the result, and the government hesitated to commence specie payment. One day Horace Greeley said in the New York Tribune: "The way to resume is to resume." The officials finally set the 1st of January, 1879, as the day on which they would resume payment. Everybody in the financial world looked anxiously forward to the 1st of January. The day came and went, and the telegraph sent no word of panic anywhere. No notes were presented for redemption. It was at Horace Greeley had said, when the people became convinced that the gold was really there and would be paid on demand, they did not want it.

I have passed through many panics, but the one of last year was the most severe.

It is said that Washington was the richest man in the country of his time. His fortune was estimated at from $400,000 to $800,000 dollars. Think of it, not a millionaire in the country! The same authority adds that there was not a tramp in the country.

How may a bank make money and not lose it? I remember when I was quite a young man, an old gentleman came one day into the bank and asked to see the cashier. I replied that I was the cashier, and he asked my age. I told him that I was twenty-four. He said, "You are holding a responsible position, and I want to give you just one word of advice." I want to repeat that advice to every young man in the room. It is this: "Never do anything, either directly or indirectly, that you would be ashamed to have somebody ask you to explain."

I would like to tell you how to have a bank of your own. It is merely by establishing as your principle that of never borrowing, never running in debt, always saving. Those who save when they are young never regret it when they grow old.

WHERE SHALL THE HACKS STAND?

A Friend of the Traveling Public, and of the Workingman, Protests Against a Change.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—It is sincerely hoped that for the sake of the public you will use your pen and columns in opposing the proposed amendment to the hack ordinance recently introduced by Councilman Hetfield, and which will come up for its third reading and final passage at the next meeting of the Common Council.

The proposed new ordinance seeks not only to drive out of a legitimate business a class of men who strive to make an honest living, but will to a great extent discommode the traveling public. The ordinance attempts to drive away from a convenient place the hackmen who now already are regulated sufficiently to keep them within the proper distance from infringing on the rights of vehicles and persons, and proposes to make them stand some distance from the railway station. Persons who may in storm and rain as well as in sunshine be obliged to employ a carriage, stage or hack, desire them within a convenient distance, and to compel them to walk in the rain or snow a greater distance than they now are obliged to do, would in itself be a great objection. Why is the ordinance introduced? Are not the hackmen already under sufficient control of police regulation? Will any person derive any special benefit in having them a greater distance from the station? Wherein will it be better for the public to have them crowded in a still narrower place? That portion of the street on which they now stand was widened for their specific purpose. Why seek to make the change? Where will the advantage come in? Surely, these questions should well and thoroughly be answered before the change is made. In the interest of the traveling public, in the interest of all that is fair and just, in the interest of the men who are seeking to earn a honest livelihood, let the Common Council not pass this ordinance unless it can be shown wherein any special advantage will be derived by the proposed change. INTERESTED.

[The proposed change in the ordinance will not inconvenience the people in the least, but will rid them of a nuisance. Only the hacks are to be moved out of the way. The hackmen will be permitted as usual to solicit customers at the very doors of the station. "Persons" will not be compelled to walk another step in rain or snow, to get a hack. They need only raise a finger, and a dozen vehicles will drive up to where they stand. The amendment to the ordinance will drive no man out of business, nor even interfere with his trade. It is a just and proper change in the law. THE PRESS hopes "for the sake of the public," it will pass. The "Big 6" may be trusted to vote for it—and we are curious to see if all of the others will vote against it as usual just because of that fact.—ED.]

The News of the Pastors' Activity Spreading.

[From The Elizabeth Journal.]

The Ministers' Association of Plainfield held a meeting last Monday, and took strong grounds against the licensing of certain places in that city. They also indorsed and had published a paper entitled "Some recent chapters in the history of the liquor traffic," which overhauled the liquor legislation thus far enacted by the present Legislature, and laid particular stress on the power of the saloon as shown by the enactment of Assembly Bill 25, introduced by Mr. Lane and defended by Mr. Marsh, the bill which makes the renewal of licenses cheap and easy. With reference to this the ministers say:

"We regret to record the fact that the Senator from Union county argued in its favor, and solemnly asserted 'that the saloon-keeper ought not to be put to the trouble of getting signers each year, any more than doctors, lawyers or dentists should each year be compelled to pass examinations'."

Van Nest's Pardon.

[From The New York World.]

In the issue of THE WORLD of Dec. 13, 1890, referring to "Union County Convicts," it appears that an injustice was done to Lewis Van Nest, of Plainfield, touching the reasons for his pardon by the New Jersey Board of Pardons. Van Nest was sentenced from Union County about Nov. 27, 1887, for arson. He protested his innocence at the time, and it is said that J. M. Jackson, who was sentenced for the same offense and has since died in prison, claimed that he alone was guilty. Lewis Van Nest was pardoned Dec. 31, 1889. The ground of the petition was pardon for innocence. The petition was numerously signed by citizens of Plainfield.

A Plea for Horses on Ferry-Boats.

Secretary E. S. Edwards, of the New Jersey Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, has appealed to the Central New Jersey and other railway companies operating ferries along the Hudson River to arrange better facilities for the comfort of horses that are carried to and from New York on the boats. He says that many of the horses are made to suffer great discomfort by being driven on the boats steaming hot after their exertions on the streets, and being compelled to stand in the strong draught without sufficient covering. He suggests as a remedy that a large canvas curtain which could be rolled up and down should be placed at each end of the wagon way.

THE LOCAL LICENSE QUESTION.

Exception Taken to the Ministers' Appeal, and an All-or-None Policy Demanded.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I would like to make some reply to the article published in your paper of Wednesday evening, in reference to the distribution of licenses; and should like to have my say concerning the objections therein raised to the proposed additions to the already numerous saloons in this the prototype of New York. The objections raised against the two extra saloons are of no material value unless advanced in opposition to them all as a body. The stand taken by the Ministers' Association is one that can not be controverted, and one that must be recognized as meritorious; and yet when taken and applied to one or two isolated cases is of no intrinsic worth; for that which is applicable to the one must be advanced with equal forcibleness against all.

Among the important questions now so soon to be brought before our City Fathers, and passed on by them, is one of momentous worth—a question that demands the earnest, thoughtful consideration of each ward representative as well as those elected by the city at large. It is a question of the most vital importance to two bodies of Plainfield's citizens. The first, and by far the largest and most important of these, is the legal voters of the city. The second is the body of taxpayers. All of these are most deeply interested in the disposition of the license question. They are the ones on whom will fall the burden of raising the money that may be necessary to meet the needs of the city and supply the treasury with money usually contributed by the licensee fee.

The point and question at issue itself can be met and disposed of in only one way: either it must be Yes, or it must be No. There ought to be no half-way business about it. The subject calls for a decided affirmative, or a positive negative. If the former, then there can be in justice no possible discrimination used between the saloon on Grant avenue or the one nearest Peace street. To make any such distinction would be an exercise of an arbitrary and dictative power, and as such would probably cause dispute on the grounds of illegality and the fostering and protection of a few. The applicants for license have had their petitions duly attested to, and in every case have conformed to the law. They are exercising their franchise as citizens of this country in choosing for themselves the way and manner in which they will make a living, and such choice may not be directed or governed by a body of men who may decide among themselves who shall or shall not carry on such or such a business, or who may select and designate out of a number of applicants a few who may not carry on the liquor business although conducted in conformity to the laws and ordinances governing such traffic. Such a decision on the part of the selectmen would tend to create and form a monopoly of the liquor trade and to throw the sale and control of such into the hands of the favored few. Such an act certainly is one that the courts would have a chance to pass on should a refused applicant so appeal.

What would the citizens of Plainfield think or say were the licenses for hacks granted to only a few of those applying, or those for hucksters granted to only a few of the favored ones, to the entire exclusion of all others? And yet here is a group of respectable men in another line of life whose needs must be discriminated against! If licenses are to be granted, let all receive them who may apply and pay the necessary fee, or let each and every applicant have recorded against him an unanimous No!

And yet to refuse the license altogether leaves the city with empty treasury, and the evil of intemperance still existing in the saloons already established in North Plainfield. Although the cause as far as the city of Plainfield is concerned could thus be removed, the resultant evil would still exist in the allurements thrown out by the knowledge that the wants of the drunkard can be readily supplied by a little journey over the line where all the cravings for drink could readily be gratified and our fair city suffer. Until cooperation on the part of North Plainfield can be secured by us, and all saloons closed instead of a few, we shall have to labor under the miserable results of intemperance. So let the Council when it decides, decide for all or none! N.

Resolved, That the Council be Requested to Refuse All.

At the regular weekly meeting of the Plainfield Reform Club on Thursday evening, 12th inst., the following preambles and resolution were adopted unanimously:

Whereas The City of Plainfield comprises a community abundantly able financially to provide all the money necessary to their local Government, decently and honorably, without selling liquor licenses to either hotels or saloons, and

Whereas The sale of intoxicating liquors is a recognized and objectionable curse to any community, entailing upon it vice, misery and poverty, which cost more than the amount of money "rum" selling licenses supply, and

Whereas A $700 license fee is resulting in a steady increase in the number, and no improvement in the character, of places licensed, thus failing to justify itself as a high license fee, therefore

Resolved By the Plainfield Reform Club that our City Council be and hereby are requested to refuse all applications for licenses to sell intoxicating liquors during 1891.

The Friends Against All Licenses.

TO THE PLAINFIELD COMMON COUNCIL: The Quarterly Meeting Temperance Committee of the religious Society of Friends, at a meeting held in the Peace Street Meeting House, on the 12th inst., were united in respectfully asking you, in the exercise of the discretionary authority by law vested in you, to grant no licenses for the sale of intoxicating beverages in the city of Plainfield.

We respectfully represent:

1. That, as abundantly demonstrated by experience, and by enlightened science, alcoholic beverages are in no sense a necessity, and that they are a prolific source of disease, pauperism, vice and crime.

2. That the official records of Plainfield's police department, and its organized charitable and relief associations, show that a very large percentage of its arrests, and of the charitable relief extended, by public taxation and private benevolence, are made necessary by its legalized liquor saloons.

3. That the ruin of one man or woman, the imperilling of a single human soul through strong drink, is of vastly greater moment than the receipt of a few thousand dollars of public revenue.

4. That the "high license" fee of $750 fails, as shown by the increased number of license applications now pending before you, to act as a restrictive measure; while under its operation the fair and beautiful city of Plainfield has come more than ever in its history under bondage to the baneful and corrupting saloon influence.

5. That the voluntary continuance by you of the legalized liquor traffic in the municipality, the direction of the affairs of which for the time being is under your control, will do very much to neutralize the good influence of its churches and Sabbath schools, and of its various mission and benevolent organizations for practical Christian work.

6. That we therefore earnestly pray that, as official guardians of the public prosperity, in the interest of sobriety, of economy, of the young and of all classes, of the purity and sanctity of the homes of the city, and of its material and spiritual welfare, you, as Councilmen, will grant no license to the liquor traffic, fitly denounced by a distinguished and honored Senator in the Senate of the United States as "the gigantic crime of crimes" in this age and country."

A Judicious Irish Bull.

The following anecdote of a minor light of the Irish bench, though not precisely a "bull," pure and simple, belongs more or less to that fertile family. A wife had suffered untold cruelties at the hands of a barbarous husband, and in self-defense she "took the law of him;" but just before the trial she relented, and told the judge she wished to leave the punishment and the case to God.

"I regret, my good woman," replied the great official, "that we can not do that; the case is far too important."—London World.

A FRAGMENT OFFERING.

I [illegible] one among the lilies,
The roses in the air
Were kindlier than the thoughtless tongue
Of the world's thoroughfare.

I heard no ring of Mammon's bells,
Thro' all the scented air,
No jargon of the tiresome crowd
Assailed me anywhere.

A grander than St. Peter's dome
Shone brilliant overhead!
I stood alone a worshiper
In the city of the dead.

Alone? Another followed me,
So pure she looked, and brave,
And laid her fragrant offering
Upon a new-made grave.

'Twas thus the Scottish poet knelt
To kiss the wild flowers' bloom,
I know the pathos that he felt
Beside the silent tomb.

To be remembered, so I thought,
Is nevermore to die,
In floral language thus is taught
Our immortality!

Oft by the graves of those we love,
Our sorrows find release,
In precious promise from above:
"In Me ye shall have peace."

My tears fell—an unspoken prayer—
Upon the fresh green sod,
And there I laid my cross of care
To walk alone with God!

—Arthur L. Jenks, in Jury.

WON BY A PLOT.

Why Minnie Married the Man Chosen by Her Father.

"It is so perfectly unreasonable of you, papa," pouted Minnie McAlster, only and petted daughter of Lawyer McAlster, and pretty and willful as a pet kitten; "so perfectly unreasonable, and it is so impudent of that fellow to write and ask you for my hand before I have set eyes on him."

"But you have set your eyes on him many a time," interrupted her father.

"Oh, yes," with a toss of the dainty head, "when he was in his first jacket, and I in pinafores. I know all about that. Because we were two pretty children, and pleasant playmates, our stupid fathers said: 'Let us pledge our children to each other.' And now, after twelve years, when I am seventeen and he twenty-one, the impudent creature coolly desires me to be true to that nonsensical trash, and writes to ask a renewal of your consent."

"Which he certainly has."

"But which it will do him no good to obtain," continued Minnie; "for I say positively I will not see him, nor speak to him, nor glance at him if he comes here. If you write and tell him to come, I will run away to Rockwood, anyhow, and take vocal lessons. I know I have musical genius, if it were properly cultivated; and there is a splendid professor at Rockwood who has a large class in training. I want to join it, and I shall go away next week if you consent; but if you let that horrid, impudent, insolent Walter Graham come here to look after my fortune (for that is what he wants), I shall go without your consent."

"My dear," said Lawyer McAlster, coolly, viewing his irate daughter with twinkling eyes, "let me correct one error you have fallen into. Walter Graham is worth three times what I am at this moment. His father's whole property is in his hands, and he is wealthy. So I hardly think he is looking with covetous eyes upon your few thousands. No; he remembers you as a most sweet child, and, being of a somewhat romantic turn of mind, he thinks it would be pleasant to follow out the wishes of his father and yours and renew the pledge made by them. However, if he could see you at this moment he would think you any thing but a sweet girl."

"Then I wish you would call in an artist and have my picture taken on the spot to send him."

"But I would rather not, for remember I desire you to see and at least treat this young man as the poet says we treat Vice, the monster—first endure, then pity, then embrace."

"Oh, yes," pouted Minnie, "you lawyers think there is nothing in life but bargain and sale. You would have me coolly pledge myself to this fellow because you think he would be a good match, and you would make a regular dry law affair of it, without any love or wooing in it."

"You are in error again," interrupted her father. "I would make a law affair of it by having you permit this 'fellow,' as you call him, to go to court and allow him to make his plea. I don't ask you to promise your hand to him till he has done this—but you refuse even to see him."

"Yes, I do refuse to see him, and there is an end of it. I am not going to be won in this matter-of-fact way. I am going to fall in love without meaning to, and be fallen in love with in some unexpected, romantic way and have it all like a story-book."

Mr. McAlster smiled.

"You will doubtless fall in love with that professor over at Rockwood," he said.

"Ah, no—he is old and gray. I shall meet my fate in some unlooked-for manner, when I least expect to, I suppose. But will you let me go to Rockwood?"

"I will think about it. I would rather you should take lessons here, and if I can get a good instructor to come here I suppose you will be just as well pleased, will you not?"

"Yes—if you keep Walter Graham away."

At the end of a week Mr. McAlster informed Minnie that he had secured her an instructor for her voice.

"I wrote to a friend," he said, "a musical gentleman of my acquaintance, and he has secured an excellent teacher, who will be here some time next week. He will make his home with us and will devote his whole time to you. I will pay him well for it, and you will progress much faster than you would at Rockwood. I want you to study hard and apply yourself strictly to your music. I shall pester you no more about Walter Graham, for I have written to him how you feel upon the subject, and now that Prof. Bangemwell is coming you need worry no more about that 'fellow's annoying you.'"

"Prof. Bangemwell!" repeated Minnie. "What a name! I know he is old, and tall, and thin, and wears green spectacles, and will be as cross as a bear, but I don't care so long as I can take lessons in singing, if he is an ogre."

Prof. Bangemwell looked any thing but an ogre as he stood in the parlor an hour after his arrival, and was presented to Miss Minnie, his pupil, who had just come in from a walk. He was tall, as she had said, but not old, being certainly not over twenty-five, and not thin, for he had the splendid figure of an Adonis, and his dark, magnetic eyes were not covered by green goggles, and the sweet smile that parted the handsome lips under the long black mustache proclaimed him any thing but "cross."

"Why, Prof. Bangemwell is perfectly splendid, papa," Minnie cried, after an hour's conversation with the professor, finding herself alone with her father. "He is just as handsome as he can be; and oh! what eyes. And he is so agreeable! I know we shall get on splendidly."

"There, there, that will do," said her father, frowning. "I would advise you not to rhapsodize over a common professor of music. He wasn't brought here to play the agreeable, but to teach you music."

Minnie pouted, and thought her father "awfully cross," and went back to the professor. He wanted to hear her voice, and so she sat down at the piano, and he stood very near and gave her suggestions about her position and told her how to draw in her breath and how to economize it; and then, when she sang a passage, he told her where she failed, and sang it for her, that she might understand it better. His voice was a splendid, soaring tenor, and it just lifted Minnie up to the "seventh heaven" to hear him sing. They were full two hours at their first lesson, and then Minnie played and sang some simple airs, and the professor joined in the chorus. So they whiled away another hour; and then Minnie went to her flowers, and the professor soon joined her in the garden, and proved himself as learned in botany as music.

"A magnificent man," Minnie said that night in her room. "I have heard and read of such men, but never saw one before;" and all that night long she dreamed of handsome, dark-eyed Prof. Bangemwell.

That was only the beginning. Prof. Bangemwell not only taught Minnie music and botany, but love. It was useless for her to try and conceal it. Her father frowned, her mother chided, and Minnie told them both "how foolish it was to accuse her of such nonsense," but at length she did not try to conceal her passion for the handsome professor.

"Yes, I do love him," she cried one day when they were warning her not to allow herself to fall in love with a poor music-teacher. "I do love him, and he loves me, and I am not ashamed to confess it. I would rather die than give him up, too, if he is a poor music-teacher."

Her father groaned.

"Wild, insane child," he said. "I will go and discharge the fortune-hunter immediately," and away he went in a rage, leaving Minnie in tears.

Half an hour later Prof. Bangemwell, dejected and sad, came to Minnie.

"Darling," he said, "I have been turned adrift by your stern father. I must leave the house to-night and forever. Can you give me up or will you go with me? I am a poor man, but I will work for you, slave for you, if you will be mine."

She clung to him weeping.

"I will go," she said, "to the utter most parts of the earth with you."

"And you will leave all—father, mother, home, luxury?"

"Yes, gladly, if by so doing I can be yours forever."

He drew her closely to his breast and kissed her tenderly.

"Then, little one, if you love me so truly, you can forgive me for a little deception, I am sure. I have been playing a part, Minnie."

"Then, who—what—" she began. "I don't understand."

"Then I must explain. I am Walter Graham."

She sprang from his arms in wonder and amazement.

"Walter Graham!" she repeated.

"Yes, Walter Graham. Your father wrote to me how utterly you scorned my suit. I had not and could not forget my childish fancy for you. Through all the years I have been in foreign lands I have remembered you and hoped you would not forget the pledge made by our fathers. But I found you had forgotten and refused to see me. Then your father wrote, asking me if I could not play the part of a music-teacher for a time and suiting the case as it stood. Fortunately I had received a thorough musical education in Germany, which enabled me to play my part well. I did not need to disguise, as there was no danger of your recognizing me, and your father and mother were in the secret. I came, saw and conquered. Won't you forgive me?"

She crept into his arms.

"Why, I suppose I shall have to," she said, "for I love you so, I could not be angry with you."

Just then her father came in.

"So ho!" he cried, "you have concluded to accept that horrid, impudent, insolent fellow after all, Minnie? Well, well, I am glad that things have ended so happily. Take her, Prof. Bangemwell, and if you find her half as good a wife as she has been a daughter, in spite of her caprices, you will never repent having taught music, I know."—N. Y. Evening World.

Knew the Judge's Failing.

He stepped jauntily out of the patrol wagon when it stopped in front of the station house, and inquired: "Is there more than one police judge in this town?"

"No," was the reply.

"Then there ain't much choice as to where you get tried, is there?" He mused: "Is this one of the kind that likes to tell funny stories?"

"I guess so. What do you want to know for?"

"Well, Cap, I'll tell you; if you can only get the judge to tell a funny story and then laugh at it yourself right hearty like, it means a light sentence sure."

BUILDING A LIBRARY.

No Royal Road to One Which Will Be of Real Service.

As there is no royal road to learning, so there is no royal road to that outward and visible sign of it which consists in shelves well filled with books, says a writer in Kate Field's Washington. The man who wants a library can not get it ready made. He may, it is true, buy a collection of books fairly well fitted to the average mind, but it will be about as satisfactory as the ready-made coat fitted to the average body. It will fail to meet his individual eccentricities.

Nor can the ideal library be gathered in a hurry. Nothing is more helpful to the tone and quality of a library than such a moderate degree of poverty as will limit purchases at first to the absolutely essential. In the buying of books, as in the buying of pictures, real discrimination comes only through actual experience, and it is very unfortunate to have too many bought at a low grade of development; but, on the other hand, no man should wait to begin his library until his taste is fully formed, or it will lack many books which he would gladly have there, but which would not run the gauntlet of his mature judgment.

A very common error in buying books is to start with cheap editions under the erroneous impression that later on they may be replaced by good ones. Unfortunately, the mind of the book lover will not assent to this plan, however strong his will. The book he takes up to read is invariably the old and shabby one, and the other becomes only a splendid bit of decoration, to please the eye of the visitor. Your pet literature always tastes best from the page on which you originally read it; so, when you buy a book of which you are likely to become fond, it should be in a good enough form to keep. At least, paper and print should be so respectable that a new binding will be all the change necessary. With the habitual student the sense of location is very highly developed. In his own library he finds things by their position on the page, and can turn at once to any given passage in a familiar author. But put him in a room full of strange editions, and this laboriously acquired sixth sense becomes utterly useless.

The taste for fine bindings is a liking apart from the love of books for what they contain, but it is by no means an ignoble tendency, and adds vastly to the esthetic effect of a well-chosen library. The housing and care of books, too, is a subject not beneath the notice of even the profoundest student.

INEXPENSIVE BENEVOLENCE.

The Method a Wise Man Used with Circulators of Subscription Papers.

I was in the office of a Chicago real-estate and loan agent the other day, says a writer in the New York Sun, and had scarcely got seated when a woman was admitted, and asked him for a subscription to some charity.

"With the greatest of pleasure, ma'am," he replied, and producing a check-book he filled out a check for $10. She thanked him very sweetly as she withdrew, and it was only five minutes after when a man entered and asked for a contribution to some poor children's fund.

"Certainly—only too glad," replied the agent, and he wrote out another check for $10.

After we had been interrupted four times, and he had cheerfully written four checks I said to him:

"You certainly deserve the title of a philanthropist."

"Well, perhaps."

"But I notice that you ask no questions and take every thing for granted. Have you no fear of being swindled?"

"None whatever."

"Well, the people of Chicago must be an honest crowd."

"Oh, it isn't that, my dear sir. Let me—"

Here a lady entered and asked for a contribution to assist in giving a free excursion to a Sunday-school, and he wrote out a check for $15 and waved her out, and continued:

"Let me explain. All these checks are worthless, as they are drawn on a bank where I have no funds. I do it to save time. All these callers come prepared to argue and explain and contend, and each one of them would sit for half an hour. By giving these checks I secure a great reputation around the block as a philanthropist and a well-heeled man, and it costs me nothing. When—"

Here he paused to fill out a check for $20 for the establishment of a sailors' bethel, and then finished:

"When the checks are presented they are found to be worthless, and those holding them either get mad or see the joke. In either case they never return, nor do they give me away. Try it, my boy. Saves time, money and gab; and it won't be a month before you'll be satisfied that you are doing charity a better service than if you were handing out the cold cash."

Some of Both.

Medical scientists can not agree as to whether the man who commits suicide is insane or idiotic, says the Detroit Free Press, and there is a prospect of reaching a verdict which will end with "some of both." It is a fact that out of every fifty suicides only two or three can be accounted for by any reasonable excuses on the part of the living.

A Tough Squaw.

At the San Carlos agency an Apache bet a bottle of whisky that his wife could carry two hundred pounds of flour half a mile without resting. She was a light, slim woman, but she added fifteen pounds to the load and ten rods to the distance and won the whisky for her liege lord. It unnecessary to say that she got none of it.

Evaporation of the Nile.

A peculiar feature of the river Nile is that from its junction with the Atbora, for a distance of more than 1,500 miles to the sea, there are no affluents. This fact, together with the burning sand and the hot sun of the desert, causes the most of the stream to evaporate, leaving but a small body of water to flow into the sea.

ATTACKED BY A MOB

Six Thousand Excited Rioters at Kearny, N. J.

STONE THROWING A FEATURE.

Sheriff's Deputies Compelled to Beat a Hasty Retreat to Clarks' Mills.

A Mill Superintendent Escapes by Drawing a Revolver—Several Non-Union Workmen Injured—Senator Howard in Charge of the Strike—Rumor of a Settlement of the Trouble To-day.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 14.—A bigger mob than on any of the two previous nights gathered in Passaic avenue, Kearny, last night in front of Clarks' Thread Mills, No. 1 and 2. There were the same yells and shouts and the remaining windows in the front of the buildings were merrily pelted with stones, a girl was hurt by a blow from a stone and one of the mill superintendents was mobbed in his cab, and would have fared badly had he not drawn his revolver. The "specials" who ventured outside were attacked and had to flee back as fast as they could to save themselves.

At 6 o'clock last night the crowd began to swell in Kearny and a close estimate put the number at 6,000.

From 6 to 7 o'clock the crowd amused itself by breaking windows, and once, when three deputies showed their faces at the windows, there was a perfect shower of stones thrown at them.

At 7:30 o'clock nine of the sheriff's deputies emerged from the mill with their clubs swinging by their sides, and, amid the hisses and howls of the mob, walked a block to Latham street, and thence to Grant avenue, at the rear of the mills. There they were met by a crowd of 200 and mobbed. Believing their legs safer than the use of their clubs, they beat a hasty retreat, and were admitted to the mills through a rear door.

A cab containing Superintendent Adam Groll was mobbed near the mill at 9 o'clock, and several stones were thrown at his head. By displaying a revolver he escaped injury.

Several of the non-union workmen are said to be laid up in the barracks between the mills, with severe cuts inflicted with stones by the rioters. A physician is in constant attendance.

It is said the Township Committee of Kearny last night urged the sheriff's deputies to leave the mill and clear the street, but they refused.

It had been rumored that the Fourth Regiment, N. G., S. N. J., of Jersey City would be at the mills last night, and there was great excitement, but the sightseers were disappointed in their expectations of seeing the mob shot into and mowed down.

Senator Robert Howard of Fall River, a representative of the National Spinners' Union, has taken charge of the strike and says there may be a settlement to-day. It is rumored that Superintendent Walmsley will be discharged.

LONDON'S LATEST TRAGEDY.

The Police Confident that They Will Capture "Jack the Ripper."

LONDON, Feb. 14.—Col. Sir Edward Bradford has at last the opportunity to prove the wisdom of Home Secretary Matthews in appointing him commissioner of metropolitan police. The police and public profess to be confident that he will unearth the murderer of "Carroty Nell," and public opinion is equally confident that the murderer is "Jack the Ripper," who came nearer being arrested red-handed than ever before. Experts who have studied the former crimes of "Jack the Ripper" say there is no doubt that this latest murder must be added to the list of that wretch's enormities.

Like the others this woman belonged to the unfortunate class, and like them she was not of the vilest grade in that class. Another similarity is in the location of the crime, which was committed in a place comparatively public, and yet screened from immediate observation.

The unfortunate women of Whitechapel, who had got over the terrors created by the murders of some time ago, are again fear-stricken, and gather in groups to discuss the latest tragedy, and wonder who will be the next victim.

The location of the tragedy is near the city boundary, in the vicinity of the docks, and viler in some respects than the scenes of the Ripper's former crimes, being resorted to by men and women who do not care to seek accommodation in lodgings. For this reason, had not the officer actually stumbled over the body, the Ripper might have returned to his horrible work after the policeman had passed, and the officer's statement indicated that the murderer was in waiting in the darkness with this object, when frightened into retreat by the officer's detection of the body.

Constable Thompson is the most unhappy man in London to-day, as he feels that he had the most noted criminal of the age within his grasp. The inquest is being held to-day. Meantime the police are scouring the city for suspicious characters, and Sir Edward Bradford has spent all day in his office directing the operations.

The Kaiser Talks About Bismarck.

BERLIN, Feb. 14.—At the Parliamentary dinner given by Chancellor Caprivi to members of the Reichstag, the Kaiser, who was present as the leading guest, discussed the labor question with Herrs Windhorst, Schmidt and Count Preysing. The Kaiser expressed the opinion that the attacks of Prince Bismarck on the government's policy were directed against himself.

Shot Dead By a Native.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—Mayor Nixon, Lieutenant Jameson and two Sepoy, were recently shot dead by a native of the Shan States who was running amuck.

THE COPYRIGHT BILL.

The Sherman Amendment Adopted by the Close Vote of 25 to 24.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The Senate again wrestled with the Copyright bill. Fearing further delay would prove fatal to the passage of the measure Senator Platt, notwithstanding the absence of Senator Sherman, thought it best to resume consideration of the Chilcan's amendment, which provides that foreign books copyrighted in the United States shall be subject to tariff duties.

Although Senators Platt, Morrill and others vigorously opposed it on the ground that the fundamental idea of copyright was the exclusive right to vend and the prohibition of importation from foreign countries and also that the proposed change would transfer the business of book printing entirely to Germany, where printers are not paid half as much as they are in the United States, the amendment was adopted by the close vote of 25 to 24.

Senator Platt is exceedingly apprehensive now that the bill, loaded down as it is with the Sherman and the lithographic amendments, may become waterlogged and sink in the House. He is hopeful, however, that a final vote can be reached before other changes threatened are executed.

ELOPERS CAUGHT.

A Married Woman and Her Young Lover Come to Grief.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 14.—On the arrival of the Lackawanna train from the East early in the morning, Mrs. Annie M. Husted, aged 30, and Orlando W. Briggs, aged 20, a runaway couple from Poughkeepsie, were arrested on a telegram which charged them with grand larceny. The couple said they were on their way to Oakland, Cal, where Mrs. Husted's father resides. Mrs. Husted told officers that her husband had been very unkind to her and her home life was very unpleasant, and that was why she left home. They were locked up to await arrival of an officer with a warrant.

Six Men Badly Injured.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Feb. 14.—Shortly after the noonday hour a scaffolding at the building Nos. 47 and 49 Newark avenue, which is in course of erection, came down with a crash and carried with it six men who were at work upon it. The six men were badly injured and one of them will probably die. The names are: Thomas Connors, probably fatally injured; James McLaughlin, Robert McClare, Michael Gibbon, H. Whalen and Frank Mahone, were painfully, though not seriously hurt.

An Escaped Prisoner Captured.

EASTON, Pa., Feb. 14.—Edward Nelbert who escaped from jail here last October, while serving a six years sentence for burglary, was captured last night in Phillipsburg, N. J., and returned to prison. Since his escape he has been committing burglaries in various parts of New Jersey, and when captured had goods worth about $300 in his possession. He attempted to shoot his captors and to escape by leaping headfirst through a window.

The Whiskey Trust Sensation.

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.—Sensational developments are expected in the case of the Whiskey Trust, whose secretary, Mr. Gibson, of Peoria, was arrested in this city Wednesday on the charge of attempting to bribe Special Gauger T. S. Dewar to blow up Schufeldt's distillery. U. S. District Attorney Milchrist said: "I think we'll have something interesting to give out in a few hours." It is reported that State's Attorney Longenecker is investigating.

For a State Census in '95.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 14.—Senator Vedder introduced a concurrent resolution for an amendment to the State Constitution calling for an enumeration of inhabitants of the State in 1895 to be carried out under State supervision, the Legislature using that census as a basis for apportionment. Every 200,000 inhabitants are to comprise a Senatorial section and every 50,000 of these an Assembly district.

Refused to Answer the Committee.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—At the meeting of the Assembly Special Census Committee during the morning, Mr. Murray, Superintendent of the Census was called to the stand and refused to answer the questions put to him by the committee. He gave as reasons for his refusal that he had been so instructed by his superior officer Superintendent Porter to remain silent.

The Irish Factions Meet.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—The McCarthy committee on organization had a long session last evening discussing plans. Mr. Parnell has called a meeting of his supporters for Monday morning before the discussion of Mr. Morley's motion censuring the government for the Tipperary prosecutions.

Mysterious Shooting Affair.

LYNN, Mass., Feb. 14.—D. H. Roberts, aged 50 years, was struck in the back by a bullet shortly after noon while standing on the street. No one knows where the bullet came from. Mr. Roberts was taken to the hospital unconscious, and it is thought will not live.

A NAVAL HERO GONE

Sudden Death in Washington of Admiral Porter.

THE SUMMONS NOT UNEXPECTED

President Harrison Recounts His Brilliant Record in His Country's Service.

News Items from the National Capital. Gossip About the Vacant Cabinet Chair—The Torrey Bankruptcy Bill. The Republican House Caucus Postponed—Vote on the Copyright Bill.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The capital is shocked by the announcement of the sudden death of Admiral David D. Porter. The old sailor had been in failing health for some time, but since he recovered from the attack two months ago, which threatened to carry him off, it has not been thought that he was in any immediate danger.

The old naval warrior had been suffering from fatty degeneration of the heart for a long time. Within the last week or so, however, he has been in fair condition, and the end was not expected. Dr. Wales, the family physician attending Admiral Porter, was hastily summoned to his bedside early in the morning, but the Admiral was dead before he arrived.

All of the members of the family were at home at the time of the Admiral's death.

The President's Message to Congress.

The President sent a feeling message of sympathy to the family. He subsequently sent a message to Congress notifying that body of the death, and issued an executive order closing the executive departments on the day of the funeral, and directing that the flags on all public buildings be placed at half-mast on that occasion.

The following is the President's message to Congress:

"The Admiral of the Navy, David Dixon Porter, died at his residence in the city of Washington this morning at 8:15 o'clock, in the 78th year of his age. He entered the naval service as a midshipman February 2, 1829, and had been since continuously in service having been made admiral August 15, 1870.

"He was the son of Commodore David Porter, one of the greatest of our naval commanders. His service during the civil war was conspicuously brilliant and successful, and his death ends a very high and honorable career. His countrymen will sincerely mourn his loss, while they cherish with grateful pride the memory of his deeds.

"To officers of the navy his life will continue to yield inspiration and encouragement."

Secretary Tracy issued a general order announcing Admiral Porter's death to the navy and closing the department on the day of the funeral. The remains will be interred at Arlington.

The funeral will be held at 2 p. m. on Tuesday with the highest military honors. The honorary pallbearers will be: Vice-President Morton, Gen. Schofield, Senators Henderson, McPherson and Hawley, Representative Bontelle, Rear Admirals Rogers, Almy, Howell, Crosby and Stevens, and Gov. Pattison of Pennsylvania.

The death of Admiral Porter creates no vacancy that can be filled by promotion, the rank of Admiral, like that of General of the Army, having been created by Congress especially for Admiral Porter, and it expires with his death.

Diplomatic Appropriation Bill.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The Diplomatic and Consular Appropriation bill, reported to the Senate from the Committee on Appropriations by Mr. Hale, contains only two items in addition to those in the House bill. These provide that Mexico shall be a first-class mission, and raises the salary of the Minister from $12,000 to $17,500, and divides Central America into two distinct missions, Guatemala and Honduras in one and Nicaragua, Costa Rica and San Salvador in the other, the Minister of each to receive a salary of $10,000 a year.

The New York Tunnel Bay Act Signed.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The President has signed the act for the construction of a tunnel under the waters of the Bay of New York, between Staten Island and Long Island.

ACCUSED OF IDOL WORSHIP.

A Providence Pastor on Trial for Paying Homage to Hindoo God's.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 14.—A curious church scandal is to be brought out here through the trial of the Rev. Felix Morgan of the Church of Jesus Christ for heresy.

He is accused of having fitted up in an upper room of his house a heathen sanctuary, in which are several disreputable and heterodox looking idols, to which he pays homage.

The affair is being kept very secret, and the inquiry is being conducted in an upper room at No. 275 High street. There are several other interesting features to the case, a young lady member of his congregation being mixed up in the affair. It is supposed that he has become a convert to Buddhism.

The judges of the Ecclesiastic Court are the Revs. Dr. Gowen and Griffiths of Kentland, Ohio, and the Rev. Lorenzo Powell of Lamoine, Ia.

ANOTHER CARDINAL.

A Report that Archbishop Williams of Boston will Receive the Beretta.

BOSTON, Feb. 14.—By Monday next in all probability, Archbishop Williams will by Papal decree be made a cardinal of the Roman Catholic Church. That day marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of this well-known churchman's services in his present rank.

He has called his council to meet on that day, and the object of the meeting is probably to elect a successor. Archbishops Healy, of Portland, and Ryan of Providence, and Vicar-General Byrne of this city, are the most prominent candidates for the position.

Judgments Against a Railroad.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., Feb. 14.—In the Supreme Court Miriam E. Garter was awarded a verdict for $5,000 against the New York Central Railroad for injuries received in getting off a train at Middleport about a year ago. Mary Dick was awarded a verdict of $4,500 against the New York Central for the loss of her husband, who was killed at La Salle a year ago. So far this term of court judgments to the amount of nearly $14,000 have been rendered against the New York Central.

An Old Man Horribly Mangled.

GLOUCESTER, N. J., Feb. 14.—William Thompson, aged 77 years, residing on Charles street, was horribly mangled in the Gloucester Iron Works, by a 6-inch pipe flask falling on him, weighing about 700 pounds. Thompson was taken to the hospital, where he died soon after. The deceased was employed to attend to the fires in the ovens which dried the moulds, and was down in a pit 12 feet deep when the flask toppled over on him.

The Colored People's Candidate.

BOSTON, Feb. 14.—The colored people of Massachusetts have determined to ask President Harrison to appoint Hon. Julius C. Chappelle to the vacant United States marshalship of this district. Mr. Chappelle has served four terms in the Massachusetts House of Representatives, was an alternate to the Chicago convention that nominated President Harrison, and for several years has been a member of the Republican State Committee.

An Evangelist Injured.

TROY, N. Y., Feb. 14.—H. O. Wills, the evangelist, while speaking last night at the Mechanicsville Opera House stepped on a board which had been placed over the footlights. The end had not been properly secured and Mr. Wills was thrown from the stage to the floor, fracturing three ribs, bruising his shoulder and straining his wrist. The accident caused much excitement, several women fainting.

Joining the Coke Strikers.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., Feb. 14.—A big mass meeting of cokers and miners was held here last night. This morning 600 employes of W. J. Rainey quit work at the Paull and Fort Hill Works and joined the strikers' ranks. It is expected that the men at Moyer works will join the movement to-night. Deputy sheriffs and Pinkerton guards are protecting Rainey's works from threatened raids.

Murdered Her Infant.

RIDGEWOOD, N. J., Feb. 14.—This village is excited over the finding of a dead male child which had been buried in a newspaper under the Mastin foot-bridge, which crosses Hohokus Creek. The coroner claims to have the name of a farmer's wife who is thought to have borne and then strangled the child.

Gave Largely to Charities.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 14.—The will of the late Ellen M. Phillips, of this city, who died February 2d, has been admitted to probate. She bequeaths $118,000 to various charities, mostly Hebrew, in sums ranging from $1,000 to $15,000, including $5,000 to the Jewish Theological Seminary of New York.

Accident on the Central.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—The Chatham mail train from the Grand Central depot was derailed near South Dover and several persons were injured. The engine, mail car and smoker were ditched. The road was blocked for two hours.

The Manitoba Speaker Dead.

WINNIPEG, Man., Feb. 14.—The Hon. William Ritearm, Speaker of the Manitoba Legislature, died at his residence yesterday morning from the effects of a paralytic stroke received some months ago.

Close Grand Army Contest.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 14.—J. R. Mullikin of Lincoln Post, No. 11, of Newark, was elected Department Commander of the New Jersey Department, G. A. R., beating Col. J. Sawyer of Cape May by 12 votes. National Department Commander Vesey was present and delivered an address on pensions.

The Actual Figures from the Official Reports on Baking Powders.

	Carbonic Acid Gas, (Leavening power.) Cleveland's Superior, (pure cream of tartar powder.)	Next Highest, (ammoniated powder.)
Ohio Food Commission	12.80	*11.80
N. J. Dairy Com. (average)	13.54	*13.31
Canadian Government Report	12.57	*11.35
U. S. Government Report	12.58	*12.74
Average:	12.87	*12.30

Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder Highest.

Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder is by these Official Reports four and one-half per cent. stronger than the highest ammoniated baking powder; fifteen per cent. stronger than the next highest pure cream of tartar powder; and forty-two per cent. stronger than the highest alum powder.

*The powder next to Cleveland's in strength was found to contain Ammonia. Ammonia and alum powders, no matter what their strength, are to be avoided, as their continued use will injure the health.

GEN. SHERMAN'S RELIGION.

A Letter from His Brother, the Senator, About Rev. Mr. Esperia.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—A report published in the New York Times reflecting on the conduct of the members of Gen. Sherman's family in calling in a priest to administer the extreme unction, has called forth a great many comments in connection with the religious belief entertained by the General and his family. There is no doubt that the ceremony was performed on Thursday about 11 o'clock in the forenoon. It was so stated by a priest, admitted by the son, P. T. Sherman, and the General's son-in-law, Mr. Fitch, affirmed the report. A confirmation is also found in a letter written by Senator Sherman to the Times, as follows.

"A paragraph in your paper this morning gives a very erroneous view of an incident in Gen. Sherman's sick chamber, which wounds the sensitive feelings of his children now in deep distress, which under the circumstances, I deem it proper to correct.

In our reporter instances that advantage was taken of the temporary absence to introduce a Catholic priest into General Sherman's chamber to administer the rite of extreme unction to the sick man, in the nature of a claim that he was a Catholic. It is well known that his family have been reared by their mother, a devout Catholic, in her faith, and now cling to it. It is equally well known that Gen. Sherman and myself as well as all my mother's children are, by inheritance, education and conviction, Christians, but not Catholics, and this has been openly avowed on all proper occasions by Gen. Sherman; but he is too good a Christian and humane a man to deny to his children the consolation of their religion.

He was insensible at the time and apparently at the very point of death, but if he had been well and in the full exercise of his faculties, he would not have denied to them the consolation of the prayers and religious observances for the father of any class or denomination of Christian priest or preachers. Certainly if I had been present I would, at the request of the family, have assented to and reverently shared in an appeal to the Almighty for the life here and hereafter of my brother whether called a lawyer or extreme unction, and whether uttered by a priest or a preacher, or any other good man who believed what he spoke and had an honest faith in his creed.

I hear that your reporter uttered a threat to obtain information, which I cannot believe you would for a moment tolerate. We all need charity for our frailties, but I cannot feel some for any one who would wound those already in distress."

To Signal His Son.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—The great esteem in which Gen. Sherman is held was evidenced yesterday by the concerted action of the great trans-Atlantic steamship companies, who agreed to have all outgoing vessels, which might possibly meet the Majestic, signal her the condition of the General. It is of the Majestic that the Rev. Thomas Ewing Sherman, the General's son, sailed for this port, and the agents recognizing how deep must be his anxiety have given the above orders. By day the international code of flag signalling will be used and by night the flash colored lights will convey the intelligence.

Behring Sea Question.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—The News this morning says: "It is reported in Ministerial circles that the Behring Sea negotiations promise a favorable conclusion."

Wool Scourers Fail.

PATERSON, N. J., Feb. 14.—W. H. Oliver & Co., wool scourers, have failed. Their embarrassment was due to the foreclosing of two mortgages of $1,000 each, held by Leed & Denver of New York. The plant will be sold next Wednesday.

Committed Twenty-eight Times.

MAY'S LANDING, N. J., Feb. 14.—Emma Brown of Atlantic City, better known as the Jersey Lily, has been committed to the county jail again on the disorderly act for 90 days. This makes the 28th time she has been committed here. Her husband came with her.

Election Claims Reported Adversely.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The House Committee on Claims reported adversely on all claims for money spent by the contestants and contestees in election cases in excess of the $2,000 allowed by law. There were thirty-four of these claims amounting to more than $100,000, all of this Congress.

SPAULDING ADMITS IT ALL.

Two Letters Received from the Missing Bank Cashier.

AYER, Mass., Feb. 14.—Missing Cashier Spaulding has been heard from. During the evening President Hartwell found the following letter under his door, with no postmark:

"MR. HARTWELL—You are no doubt afraid lest the Savings Bank's funds have been stolen. Such is not the case so far as I know. * * * I had no idea or desire to rob either bank or individual, for had I wanted to I could have taken many thousands of dollars from the Savings Bank as well as from individuals."

This statement by Treasurer Spaulding as to the condition of the savings bank is verified by the report of the commissioners, who say that no inaccuracies have been found in the accounts of the institution as yet.

The absconding cashier also sent a lengthy letter, the substance of which is that Spaulding writes that he has been speculating about four years; that he used first his own money entirely; then borrowed money from his friends, until finally his transactions becoming more and more extensive he began to use the funds of the bank, mostly in small sums.

He further says that he has no money with him at all; that what is gone is lost in speculation and that he realized nothing from it.

This letter is postmarked "Boston, 11 a. m." and was received here by D. H. Flanders with President Hartwell's letter inclosed.

Bank Examiner Gatchell has almost concluded his work and he said that he would make the final report on Monday, on which date the National Bank would probably resume. The deficit is about $24,000.

Mr. O'Connor is Aggrieved.

SPOKANE FALLS, Feb. 14.—T. P. O'Connor, who is here on a brief visit, was asked for some expression regarding the reported failure of negotiations between the Irish leaders. "I have learned of the breakdown of the negotiations and of the arrest of Mr. Dillon and O'Brien with profound discouragement. The breakdown is more lamentable if it has come, as Mr. O'Brien insists, from a mere contest of words and phrases. I don't hope to contribute anything toward repairing the situation, but I will make my return earlier than I anticipated. I expect to be in England four weeks from now."

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The United Brethren Church at West Catasauqua, Pa., was burned last night.

Francis Butler, wholesale dealer in potatoes and farm produce, New York, has assigned.

Carl Horwitz, a lawyer in Chicago, was cowhided on the street by his wife while in company with an unknown woman.

The weavers at the Cornell Mill at Fall River, Mass., are on strike. A refusal for a demand for more pay was the cause.

David Fox, the only survivor of the Nottingham, Pa., mine explosion of a year ago, was killed last evening by a blast.

Jesse Proctor and Frederick Young were hanged at Dover, Del., at 1:53 p. m. for the murder of Stephen Lindsey in August, 1890.

The Donaldson line of Glasgow steamers having conceded the demands of their seamen and firemen for higher wages, the threatened strike has been averted and their vessels will sail as usual.

T. J. Davis, who claims to be the illegitimate son of the late millionaire Davis of Helena, Mont., denies the report that he has compromised his claim to a share in his father's estate for $100,000.

The strike at Miller & Foster's shoe factory, at Haverhill, Mass., which has been in progress for two weeks, has been satisfactorily settled with the International Shoemakers' Union. The operatives will return to work Monday.

The large saw mill of the Canton Lumber Company at Canton, St. Lawrence County, N. Y., has been destroyed by fire. Loss $45,000; insurance, $20,000. Fifty-five men are thrown out of employment by the fire.

The Vacant Cabinet Chair.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Senator Pierce states that the President is seriously considering the appointment of Thomas Lowry of Minneapolis as the successor to the late Secretary Windom. Mr. Lowry was incidentally mentioned as a candidate by some of the Northwestern Senators several days ago, but at that time it was not thought the President regarded him favorably. Now there is a strong pressure in his favor. Mr. Lowry is a fifteen millionaire.

—The Board of Directors of the Plainfield Building and Loan Association will meet in Jackson & Codington's office next Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

—At the request of the Scottish citizens of Plainfield, Miss Edith Ross will sing at Music Hall this evening the selection "Gloomy Winter's Noo Awa."

—James Donovan was to-day fined by Judge Codington $4 for stealing a ride on a coal train. John McAllen received a ten days' sentence for drunkenness.

—That big carpet "ad" of Edsall's is conspicuous in our columns again to-day, so that "he who runs may read". It is of special interest to all who are in need of carpets.

—The Westfield Leader, one of the excellent newspapers of the State which finds THE PRESS a source of constant news, and one of the papers honorable enough to credit what it copies, arises with the sage remark "It takes THE PRESS of Plainfield to dig out the facts connected with its own immediate surroundings."

—Pursuant to call in THE PRESS, a large number of Democratic voters met in Blatt's Hall, corner Green Brook road and Somerset street, last evening, and formed an organization. The Hon. John Vetterlein was elected chairman, and Chas. P. Lyman secretary. A call for a Democratic primary to nominate borough and township officers will be made at an early day.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. Newton P. Drake has begun an action in court in an effort to compel her husband to take her back and support her.

Joseph Symons, a former resident of Plainfield, was a welcome visitor at THE PRESS office to-day. He now resides at Brandon, Vt.

We received a call yesterday from the Rev. E. F. See, General Secretary of the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Y. M. C. A. He is a cousin of Councilman Wm. G. E. See, of East Front street.

The Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham preached in the Seventh-Day Baptist church this morning, the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis having been summoned away by the death of his only grandchild.

Mrs. Eliz Coles celebrated her ninetieth birthday anniversary last week Friday evening, when she entertained a happy party of friends at the home of her daughter, Mrs. P. M. Demarest, on Craig place.

News of the death of Mrs. Albert Maxson, daughter of the late Thos. F. Randolph of this city, comes from Westerly, R. I. Mrs. Maxson was a sister of Thos. Randolph, Jr., of Madison avenue, and of Miss Randolph, the North Plainfield public school teacher.

Mrs. J. K. Barney, National Superintendent of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union for the department of prisons, jails, police stations, alms-houses and asylums, will address the County School of Methods to be held in the Crescent Avenue church, March 17. The Union has decided to keep her two days, and further announcements will be made.

The excellent verbatim report of Mayor Gilbert's address before the Young Men's Christian Association Thursday night, from which abstracts were published in THE PRESS last evening, was made by William F. Moore, who took up the study of short-hand in the Y. M. C. A. classes about fourteen months ago. Mr. Moore does good, reliable work at both short hand reporting and type-writing.

Thomas Worth, whose dangerous illness was first told of in these columns, died at his home on Grove street at eleven o'clock last evening, aged 57 years. The cause of death was pneumonia. He was one of the oldest residents of Plainfield, and built the second house erected on Grove street. He had been a harness maker on Somerset street for at least thirty-five years—over thirty of them in the shop he occupied at the time he was taken ill. He leaves a wife, a daughter and three sons. One of the latter has been quite ill during his father's sickness.

Plainfield Women Capture All the High Offices.

At yesterday's session, in Trenton, of the State Department of the Women's Relief Corps, G. A. R., the following were installed among other officers: Department President, Jennie D. Smith of Plainfield; Treasurer, Mary Morse of Plainfield; Secretary, Hannah Westphal of Plainfield.

THE EXODUS OF THE HARDY FAMILY.

Borough Residents Indulge in Gossip Over the Departure of the Former Magistrate.

James Hardy has gone. He left town yesterday morning, and took his wife and little daughter with him.

These facts seem ordinary enough, and to those who believe that the right to migrate hither and thither is a inalienable privilege possessed by every American citizen there is usually nothing of special interest in the mere statement that a man has changed his place of residence; but when such astounding news is announced as the fact that James Hardy has vanished from North Plainfield, and when the people realize that there is gone from their midst the man who was a Justice-of-the-Peace, who was Magistrate of the Borough's Police Department, who was continually, whether justly or unjustly, running up against the finger of suspicion, scorn, reproach.—then a thrill of intense excitement stirs the people, and the tongue of gossip is given loosest rein.

The facts of Hardy's exodus are easily recited. He himself, and his family, left town in broad daylight, by train. His household effects were removed later. Some of them had been sold to Tunis J. Carey, to whose place they were taken. Others, including a piano, were conveyed to the home of Dr. D. C. Adams, on Grove street, in satisfaction of a mortgage for money owed. One load was carted to Fanwood, where it was marked and put on board a freight car. The goods were addressed to Frank B. Cone, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., and are now out of the State.

This was all the property that Hardy took with him; it was all he had to take. The house which he occupied is to-day entirely devoid of furnishings; the floors and walls are bare.

All sorts of stories are of course afloat concerning the departure, which was to Hardy's neighbors sudden and unexpected, but the statement of Charles A. Reed, who was his counsel, puts a somewhat favorable light on his actions.

HIS COUNSEL'S STORY.

"Mr. Hardy has been unfortunate"—said Mr. Reed.—"When he first came to Plainfield, about four years ago, he worked as foreman for R. V. Saums, but as he was a pushing, energetic, enterprising man he soon was able to start in business for himself. He deserves great credit for being a hard worker, a good manager and for developing a big business. But he got his hands too full. He undertook more contracts than he could fulfill. Had he kept only two or three contracts under way he could have got along nicely. But with twelve or fifteen buildings under construction he was not able to give to the work the personal supervision demanded, and through the neglect of workmen who were left to themselves his work got behind, payments were refused because the work was not kept up to the contracts, for lack of this anticipated money he got behind in his own payments to his workmen and for building supplies he had bought on time, and eventually he failed. Just at the time when he needed health the most he was taken sick, and lay on his back a month. When he recovered he found his business gone to the dogs, but with the help of A. D. Cook & Bro., who were his largest creditors, he managed to make some payments, and drifted along for a time in the vain hope that fortune would turn. When he found that assignment was unavoidable he turned over his property to the Cooks, feeling that since they had stood by him when others had deserted him he ought to do his best to stand by them and make their losses as light as possible.

"People were very ready to criticize his motives, and from that time on public feeling was greatly against him, and his every action became a subject of gossip.

"Of late—without business, without friends—he has lived from hand to mouth, and he and his family have frequently been without even the necessities of life. They have gone hungry day after day, have had to dispose of their furniture piecemeal, in order to keep away absolute starvation. He had no longer any show to make a living here, and could do nothing but go away.

"He has taken with him nothing that belonged to any creditors. The law allows him $200 worth of personal property, but he did not take even that. He sold what property he had, and paid what bills he could; the goods that were taken away were owned by Mrs. Hardy, and were paid for out of her own pocket with money which she received from her father.

"Mr. Hardy's departure will doubtless cause a great gap in borough store-lounging circles. His very mysterious daylight disappearance [this in a tone of much sarcasm] will afford the gossips some food for talk, but his daily actions, which have for months been the subject of so much inquiry and criticism, will be no longer visible. What will the contingent of barrel-head and cracker-box sitters do!

"Concerning Mr. Hardy's administration of his judicial offices in the borough, which was grossly criticized, I have to say that I never knew a more careful and efficient justice-of-the-peace, and I am satisfied that his handling of Borough Magistrate matters was honest, straightforward and satisfactory in every respect. His accounts with the borough were all right." As Mr. Reed is the Borough Counselor, he ought to know.

There are those, however, who say freely that Hardy has left behind him debts of all sorts, many of them newly contracted, and those people will not be satisfied that Hardy is altogether honest until he has settled down to work in new fields, lived economically, saved money, and repaid what he owes.

Whether he is likely to do such a creditable thing as that may be judged somewhat from an examination of his past record. In this connection a story is told that does not savor altogether of probity of character for the central figure of the tale.

WAS "FRANK WOOD" HARDY'S ALIAS?

About four years ago a man who had for some time been living in Henderson, North Carolina, under the name of Frank Wood, left town suddenly, leaving unpaid bills behind amounting, it was estimated, to $8,000. Wood has ever since been a fugitive from this mass of debt, and the efforts which the Henderson people for months put forth to find him were unavailing. A short time ago there came to Plainfield a young man named G. H. Macon, a Southerner, who has since been with George E. Williams at the Crescent Pharmacy. One of the first persons he met in Plainfield was Mrs. James Hardy, and later he met Mr. Hardy too. He recognized them instantly, he says, as the Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wood whom he had known in Henderson. The identification is positive and complete, he states. Wood was a contractor and builder, and his methods of getting into debt in Henderson were the same as Hardy's in North Plainfield. He is absolutely certain that Mr. and Mrs. Hardy and Mr. and Mrs. Wood are the same. Wood traded frequently at the store in Henderson where he worked, and his was one of the firms left with a debit mark against the absconder.

It may be stated in Mrs. Hardy's favor that she won the esteem and good will of the entire community. She is spoken of by the neighbors as a sweet-mannered lady, and her child was also beloved. For Hardy so much spirit of popularity is not shown.

Counselor Reed says that the average loss to Hardy's creditors at the time of the failure was but about ten per cent. of the amount of business they had done for him, making a total loss of about $19,000 on the $190,000 worth of business conducted by him.

When spoken to about the Frank Wood story Mr. Reed said:

"The tale may be true. I know nothing about it. Hardy came to Plainfield from the South, but from what part I do not know. I only know that he lived there in the pine belt for the benefit of his wife's health. I always understood from him, though, that he worked for day's wages, and so never had an opportunity to contract heavy debts."

PLAINFIELD MEN WILL SPEAK.

Interesting Doings at the Coming State Convention.

The twenty-second annual convention of the Young Men's Christian Associations of New Jersey will be held at Trenton from February 26 to March 1. Much effort has been made to make this the most interesting and profitable gathering of the kind ever held in the State. More than forty experienced men, some of them from Plainfield, are expected to give addresses, read papers and lead meetings and conferences.

Work among college and railroad men and work among boys will receive marked attention. There will be parlor conferences for presidents and directors, district committee men, railroad delegates, college delegates, boys' work and Bible students. Concise reports will be given of the work of all the Associations and of State and district work.

The following are some of the speakers who will address the convention: The Rev. Dr. Merritt Hulburd and W. C. Douglas, of Philadelphia; Theodore Voorhees, General Superintendent N. Y. C. & H. R. railroad, New York; General Wager Swayne, William Blaikie and Prof. Jasper T. Goodwin, of New York; Prof. Francis A. Wilber, of Rutgers College; the well-known A. A. Stagg and J. Naismith, of Springfield Training School; S. A. Taggart, Secretary of the International Committee, and a host of other prominent workers. Entertainment will be given free to all properly accredited delegates and to two young men from any one church or educational institution where there is no Association. Also to delegations of railroad men from points where there should be but are no railroad Associations, and to pastors. Any of above desiring to attend can secure the proper credentials and programmes from the State Secretary, David F. More, 419 Main street, Orange, N. J.

TAKEN TO THE ASYLUM.

Incorrigible "Bertie" Drake at Last Put Under Restraint.

Young Andrew Boardman Drake, son of Thompson B. Drake of Duer street, North Plainfield, was recently released from the State Reform School at Jamesburg, where he had been placed because of his incorrigibility. A night or two ago he was abusing his father and mother when Newton Drake interfered. The young man then attacked Newton, severely bruised his eye, and injured his hand. Because of this and repeated outbursts of temper and frenzy, he was to-day taken to the State Insane Asylum at Trenton for treatment.

Much sympathy is expressed for the parents and family of the boy.

RESTORING THE TELEPHONE SERVICE.

Thanks to Manager Runyon, Plainfield's Local Troubles Are Nearly Ended But Out-of-Town Connection is Not to be Had in Many Days.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In the belief that a good number of your readers will be interested therein, I hand you for publication letters just received from responsible officers of the telephone company which operates our local system. I rent three sets of instruments, and, because of the nature of my business and because of special conditions, the use of these instruments has become very important to me. Having come to depend on the wires, and having squared my business methods thereto in some degree, I am now—as are many others—seriously inconvenienced by being deprived of their use. Growing somewhat impatient at the seeming slowness of the work of repair in our town, I recently addressed a note of inquiry to the Jersey City office, and another to the Brooklyn office, of the company. I have been gratified by the promptness and courtesy of the replies from both offices; and, since I have heard no little complaint from subscribers, it has seemed to me that—in a simple way—it might be a public service, and an act of justice, as well, to print these letters of explanation. Some of us may not have fully appreciated the greatness of the destruction worked upon the wires, and, even though corporations have no souls, their members are human enough to be hurt by unjust complaints. And yet it remains to be said: First, that it is three weeks since the storm; second, that all electric wires ought (when possible) to be underground; third, that no more poles ought to be allowed on our streets; in particular, no poles for the proposed trolley system.

H. P. REYNOLDS.

Plainfield, N. J., Saturday, Feb. 14.

THE N. Y. & N. J. TEL. CO.,
259 WASHINGTON ST.
JERSEY CITY, Feb. 11, 1891.

H. P. Reynolds, Esq., Plainfield, N. J.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of Feb. 10 is at hand. In reply we can only assure you that we have spared no effort to place our service in shape again and expect to make a fair rebate for the time you have been deprived of the use of your telephone.

Trusting you will not yet awhile join the "growlers", I am

Yours truly,
H. G. MCCULLY,
Superintendent.

N. Y. & N. J. TELEPHONE CO.
16 SMITH STREET.
BROOKLYN, N. Y., Feb. 11, 1891.

H. P. Reynolds, Esq., Park and North avenues, Plainfield, N. J.

MY DEAR SIR:—It gives me pleasure to reply to yours of the 10th that you may understand the difficulties under which we are laboring. The storm of January 24-25 broke down our poles and wires all over the New Jersey territory. When we began to measure the damage on the following day we found that 90 per cent. of our subscribers in New Jersey were without service. The first two or three days we could only send out scouting parties to clear the streets of the wreck of poles and wires and to ascertain exactly the extent and character of the destruction so that we might avoid damage to the public and make our plans for repairs. In Newark and Jersey City our largest pole lines, carrying trunk lines and subscribers' wires, went down, and while we have been doing all in our power to restore the service, and employing all the competent men we can find, we have up to-day only 250 subscribers out of 850 working in Jersey City, and 150 out of 1,100 working in Newark. From this you will see that towns like Plainfield have not suffered half so much as the larger cities, and the repairs have been made with equal celerity. It will be many days before we can restore the service to what it was before the storm, but I hope that Manager Runyon at Plainfield will be able to get your wires in order within a few days. It will be impossible for us to send him any help from the general office for a week.

Very truly yours,
W. D. SARGENT,
Vice Pres't and Gen'l Man'gr.

Songs and Singers Unequaled.

There has never been an evening in Music Hall so flooded with melody as last night. Among the audience were many members of the Plainfield Choral Society and the Melopoia, who were unanimous and emphatic in their praise of the Royal Edinburgh Concert company.

This opinion was shared by everyone present, and all expressed a sincere desire to hear the company again. Consequently they have been persuaded to remain another night and repeat the concert this evening. THE PRESS desires herewith personally to indorse the company as unsurpassed in its line, and to tell the people that if they do not attend the concert of to-night they will miss an opportunity that will never come to them again as long as they live, of hearing Scotland's songs—the sweetest melodies in the wide, wide world—sung beyond compare.

Appreciation.

(From The Westfield Standard.)

The Plainfield Press has been kind enough to give a very friendly notice of the Westfield Musical Society Concert to be given, under somewhat peculiar circumstances, in the Casino at Plainfield, next Monday evening. In the name of the Society we thank the Plainfield Press.

A GROCER FREES HIS MIND.

Hot Shot for Both "Peddler" and "Sympathizer", on the Peddlers' License Question.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Will you kindly allow me space in the columns of your paper to reply to the one who signs himself "Peddler" in Thursday's issue of THE PRESS?

First, I should like to state that when a petition was presented to the Common Council by a committee appointed by the Grocers' Protective Association—which is composed of merchants in every line of business in our city—asking that the license fee be raised from $5 to $25 for hawkers and peddlers, it was found that an amendment had already been prepared by a member or members of said Council, which said amendment is now before the Council, and which in itself is, I think, sufficient to show that those whom we have elected to govern our city and look out for the interests of its citizens are doing so.

The petition which we presented was signed only by members of our association, but we can present one with the signatures of ninety-nine per cent. of the business men of our city, and of a majority of the peddlers who reside here; but that is unnecessary.

To Mr. Peddler I would say, in reference to the peddling vegetable grocers, that I acknowledge that there are some doing business in the way you state—who have no more right to do the fruit and vegetable business in the manner they are doing and have been doing in the past without a license than you or any other person, be he resident or non-resident,—and if you make complaint to the proper city official they will be compelled to take out a license, pay a fine, or suffer whatever other penalty the City Judge may inflict as prescribed under present ordinances.

Now, Mr. Editor, if you will further permit me, I should like to ask if the man who does not owe one dollar to any retailer (and if he is on our black-list he does not, for when a man's name once gets there he is not in a position to owe anyone) is the same man who it is my impression is paid to write in this case under the signature of "Sympathizer." To what bill he refers as having been presented to the Legislature at Trenton a few months ago by our association that would wipe out peddling in the State of New Jersey I do not know. It is news to me that any such bill was presented or suggested as he states, and especially by our association. There was, however, a bill presented by the Retail Merchants' Association of the State of New Jersey in reference to peddling which became a law on March 31, 1890. I beg to suggest to "Sympathizer" that if the Merchants' Association want any advice from him for their benefit in the future they will request it. There is a term sometimes applied to proffered services, the same as is said of ancient fish, which might be applied to him, should he advise for their benefit as he did in yesterday's issue of THE PRESS.

GROCER.

Krehbiel and His Patronesses.

As already first told of exclusively in THE PRESS, arrangements have been perfected for a lecture in The Casino, Thursday evening, March 19, by H. E. Krehbiel, the world-renowned authority and musical critic of the New York Tribune.

He will translate, interpret and illustrate the opera of the Mastersingers of Nuremberg, Wagner's only comedy, yet one faithful to classical conceptions. It deals with the manners and follies of the common people, and aims to chastise them with a smile. Its specific purpose is to celebrate the triumph of natural poetic impulse, stimulated by communion with nature, over pedantic formalism.

Mr. Krehbiel will be assisted in his interpretation by Mr. Venino, and is indorsed by the following patrons, from whom tickets may be obtained:

Mrs. Charles E. Brooks	Mrs. Charles McCutchen
" Martin I. Cooley	" Edward C. Perkins
" Rowland Cox	" Charles Potter, Jr.,
" Geo. W. Edwards	Miss Isabel Tweedy
" John Erskine	Mrs. J. Evarts Tracy
" Howard Fleming	" Henry P. Talmadge
" Stephen A. Giana	" O. T. Waring
" Alexander Gilbert	" Charles Wadsworth
" Charles Hyde	" Wm. B. Wadsworth
" B. A. Hegeman, Jr.,	" E. C. Woltmann
Miss E. E. Kenyon	" G. W. VanBoskerck
Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers	Mr. H. O. Newman
" C. de Medina	" Charles Schipper

The Unsigned Will May Be Probated.

A New York paper in writing again of Job Male's unsigned will that THE PRESS told of while it was yet a secret buried deep in the breasts of those who were present at the death bed, says that Counselor C. A. Marsh of this city could not confirm the report of the discovery of another nephew of the ex-Mayor in Lockport, N. Y., named Simon Male.

Mr. Marsh denies this to a PRESS reporter. He says that he has long known of the existence of Simon Male. But Mr. Marsh deplores an newspaper discussion of the case. He says every word printed makes an amicable settlement more difficult, though it is still probable, Mr. Marsh thinks, that Mr. Male's intentions as expressed to those who were present at his house just preceding his death will be carried out. The amount of the estate has not yet been ascertained, but it will be about as THE PRESS stated, less than $500,000.

A Candle in a Boy's Hands Causes a Blaze.

A bale of waste in the store of A. M. Griffen took fire from a lighted candle handled by a boy, this morning, and only with great difficulty was a serious fire prevented.

BURNED TO THE GROUND AGAIN.

Barns, Stables and Live Stock Consumed by a Midnight Fire.

The barns and stables on the Nicholas Gisser estate at Netherwood, on South avenue, just beyond the railway station, alongside the track, were again destroyed by fire last night. The buildings were all new, having been rebuilt on the ruins of those burned two years ago. The cause is again attributed to locomotive sparks.

The alarm was sounded at about quarter-past one o'clock. No. 1 Engine, Hook and Ladder Truck No. 1, and Alert Hose Carriage were taken to the scene of the fire, and were put to good service in saving the Gisser dwelling, which was smoking hot, and which had a narrow escape from destruction.

As at the previous fire, considerable live stock was burned. This time seven cows and one calf were burned to death. Two horses, two cows and one calf were rescued. Wagons, harness and other portable property was saved, but the buildings and most of their contents were consumed.

Chief Doane did not press Engine No. 2 into service, but kept it in town so that Plainfield would not be left unprotected.

The location of the fire is just beyond the city limits.

A FAVORED BOROUGH.

Great Rejoicing at Dunellen Over Post-Office Service Improvement.

Beginning Monday, March 2, Dunellen will enjoy the luxury of a letter-carrier service. In September of last year Congress appropriated $10,000 for the purpose of ascertaining the feasibility of extending the letter-carrier service to post-offices of the fourth class. Postmaster J. H. Harold, of Dunellen, immediately applied to the Department at Washington for the privilege of having his office included in the list of experimental stations. The application was favorably received, and Postmaster Harold has appointed William H. Jacobs, a veteran of the rebellion, to deliver the mails to the inhabitants within the borough limits. Several enthusiastic citizens of Dunellen, when they heard the news yesterday, promptly contributed enough money to fit Carrier Jacobs out with a spanking new regulation uniform in honor of the event.

Since the commencement of Postmaster Harold's term of office, one and one-half years ago, the service there has grown from two mails a day, to New York, to four. Dunellen has also been made a money-order office. Lock-boxes have been introduced in the post-office; and a letter-box, for the convenience of the patrons of the office, has been placed at the railroad station. Another box will now be placed on the corner of Centre and Main streets, in front of Mr. Vance's residence, from which collections will be made daily. One delivery will be made every morning, at present, beginning at about half-past eight. Dunellen is greatly elated over her latest acquisition, and hopes are entertained that the service will eventually be made permanent.

Novel Literary Work.

There is in New York a unique literary organization known as The New York Story Club. It is made up of the lovers and tellers of good stories who have gathered a great number of romances. The Story Club has decided, from the large store of interesting complete stories that it has collected, to make up and issue monthly a group of them; and under the name of Romance the first number of this new story magazine has appeared—the number for February. It is prettily printed, with a tasteful illuminated cover, and it contains twenty complete stories of love, war, adventure, horror, and humor, by such writers as Robert Louis Stevenson, Kipling, Daudet, Hawthorne, Richepin, M. Quad, Charles Michelson and a dozen more. The motto of the club seems to be "In the good-fellowship of romance", and the stories are full of life and movement. The underlying idea of the collection is a protest against long stories, dull stories, and maudlin stories. Romance will be published monthly for The New York Story Club by C. A. Watson, Fourteenth street and Fifth avenue, New York; 25 cents a copy, $3 a year.

Excitement in Washington Park.

A runaway occurred on Rockview avenue this morning. A black mare, belonging to a Somerset street butcher, was left without being fastened while the driver called for an order. The high wind prevailing blew the blanket off the horse, frightening it and it dashed at full speed through Rockview avenue. Turning into Sycamore, the animal was captured by a man who saw it coming and held it until the breathless driver arrived.

Death of an Old-Time Hatter.

James Perrine, who was one of Plainfield's old-time hatters when the hat shops here were famous, received another stroke of paralysis at his home at Westfield Thursday night, and died at three o'clock Friday morning. The funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon, the Rev. Wesley Martin officiating. Mr. Perrine was first stricken two years ago and has ever since been confined to his house.

Ladies, clean your kid gloves with Mather's glove cleaner; for sale only by Mrs. J. C. Dyer, 38 West Front street. All the latest novelties of the season in fine Millinery. Correct styles.

There can be no reasonable excuse for neglecting a cough or cold, when one bottle of Hires' Cough Cure for a quarter, to be had anywhere, does the work. Be sure to get what you ask for—Hires' Cough Cure.

Indorsing the Ministers' Opposition.

(From The Elizabeth Journal.)

The Plainfield ministers hit the Lane club-license bill a resounding thwack. They say in their circular:

"It is a pernicious bill. If passed it will bring under suspicion all clubs, good and bad. It will multiply the number of private drinking establishments and make the drinking habit easy to acquire."

And pernicious it certainly is. It not only opens secluded drinking bars, but it simply saves these clubs $150 to $300 each year. There is not a single good that this bill can accomplish.

The doctors are very much displeased over a competitor who is gradually stealing their best practice; we mean Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

PSALM LXI.*

Hear thou, O God, my mournful plaint,
And to my humble prayer attend.
When overwhelmed my heart grows faint,
To Thee I'll call from earth's far end—
Oh, lead me, as for help I flee,
Unto the rock too high for me.

Since Thou my refuge oft has been,
When fierce the storm against me rose;
My tower of strength and peace serene,
Secure against my wrathful foes,
I'll ever in Thy home abide,
And 'neath Thy sheltering wings will hide.

For Thou hast heard my vows and prayer,
And in Thy grace hast made my own
The heritage Thou dost prepare
For those who fear Thy name alone.
Days to the King Thou will increase;
Nor shall His years through ages cease.

He shall forevermore abide
Enthroned, O God, at Thy right hand:
Mercy and truth do Thou provide,
And bid as guards around Him stand:
So will I praise Thy name for aye,
And thus my vows will daily pay.

FOOD FOR THE SOUL.

The Word of God Is the Source of a Needful Supply.

When the Apostle John in his second epistle says: "Behold, I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth," there seems to be a suggested analogy between bodily and spiritual health, such as may properly be considered in respect to means of promoting health of body and health of soul. Evidently the first requisite in promoting bodily health is a sufficient supply of suitable food. Unquestionably, health of body is greatly affected by the quality and quantity of food; and what is thus true in relation to the body is equally true as to the soul. An adequate amount of a proper kind of spiritual nutriment is needful in order to securing the best condition of the soul, which like the body, must be kept from famishing or perishing for want of ailment, or on account of noxious diet.

The Word of God is the great source of this needful supply, affording as it does appropriate food for the soul in all the various stages and conditions of spiritual life. The great Teacher has said: "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." The soul has its necessities in regard to nutrition, as well as the body, nor can the one, any more than the other, do without constant nourishment. Both alike must be supplied with nutriment, and undoubtedly the best sustenance of the soul is furnished by the revealed truth of God contained in the Holy Scriptures. Thus Job said: "I have esteemed the words of His mouth more than my necessary food." No more could he dispense with that Word than with his daily bread. Dr. Wayland wrote of himself during a period of feeble health: "Blessed be God, I am able to read His Word with increasing interest, and to entertain a more constant hold of eternal life."

The Apostle Paul teaches that in the spiritual life, as in the physical life, milk is adapted to babes, and strong meat to matured men, and both the milk and the meat are found in the Word of God, from which the renewed soul must derive its "necessary food." Without this soul-food there can be no soul-health, if, indeed, there can be any soul-life. Spiritual health can no more be secured without the Word of God than natural health can be secured without food for the body. Not more certainly will the body famish and become sickly without its required food than will the soul starve and sicken without the sustenance found only in the Word of God. Every healthy soul must be better fed than any soul can be in the neglect of this essential means of being in the most desirable of all health. To neglect the Bible, therefore, is to imperil the soul. Surely, there should be no occasion for saying, as has been said: "In days gone by, the Bible occupied that position which God and our soul's destinies demanded; when at home—abroad—on the Sabbath—in the week—it stood foremost; when the hoary—the middle-aged—the child—reverenced its pages and treasured its precepts. But a change has come over us. Religious books, periodicals and papers cluster around; and the Bible has given place, and lies splendidly bound on the table, or dust-covered on the obscure shelf; an ornament or an encumbrance alike unused."

All who healthily prosper in soul must make much of the Bible, and undervalue it no more than did the converted Tahitians when France took possession of their island; they, hurrying to the mountains, left their Bibles with the missionaries until they should come back, to save them as fugitives from carrying them so far; but ere long they came back, in the face of danger, to say that they could not live without their Bibles, and must have them, whatever might befall them as captives. Their valuation of the Bible should be more common, and there should be a greater number of those who so regard it they could not do without it as they value their highest welfare. This Book of books should be read much, and only read less because it can not be read more. Lord Bacon tells of a certain Bishop who used to bathe regularly twice every day, and on being asked why he bathed thus often replied: "Because I can not conveniently do it three times." So, those who love the Scriptures as affording them necessary spiritual nutriment, if asked why they read the Bible so often should be able honestly to reply: "Because we can not find time to read it oftener."—Watchman.

EACH PLACE THE WORST.

A Lesson Against Covetousness for Envious Young Christians to Learn.

A witty but somewhat cynical philosopher once announced his intention of founding a "Discontented Club," of which the constitution and by-laws should be as follows: "Anywhere but where I am; any thing but what I have; and, the best is good enough for me."

A great many of us would be well qualified for membership in such a club, though we might shrink nominating ourselves. Nothing is more general than the feeling that my trials are peculiarly sharp, my life is exceptionally cramped and thwarted, my lot in some ways a little bit harder than any body else's.

We are specially apt to fall into this very mischievous fallacy in connection with our religious experiences. Few young Christians that have not said to themselves: "If I didn't have just these influences about me, or just these obstacles to overcome; if I didn't lack just these qualities; if I only had the abilities and opportunities of such an one; what a consistent and useful member of the church I should be, what a beautiful life I could live." Indeed, young Christians sometimes carry this sort of thing so far that they torment themselves with the idea of changing somehow their natural situation and course in life for the purpose of serving the Lord more acceptably.

If we could only shift our angle of vision when we are brooding and moping in this morbid fashion we should, like as not, discover that the very persons in whose places we are idly wishing ourselves are fancying how much they would like to be in our places. What we need to remember is that God has put us where we are, and that the service He seeks from us is that which we can render precisely there. The thing we have to do is always the hardest thing. Something else, which we don't have to do, always looks easier. The way to show our Christian purpose, and pluck, and heroism, is to take right hold and do the most and the best we can in the circumstances in which we find ourselves.

The "all things" we can do "through Christ which strengtheneth us" doesn't mean all sorts of romantic, and impossible, and conspicuous performances; it means all things, no matter how commonplace or irksome, that belong to our lives as they are, and make up right, pure, just, kind conduct day by day. If we fail in these things don't let us talk about noble discontent and aspirations after grander service. Let us call a spade a spade, and say honestly that it is laziness and shirking. Instead of fancying we are like some great missionary or martyr, let us recognize rather our likeness to the "pious" darky who stopped in his work and surveying his cotton patch, soliloquized thus: "De cotton grows so slow, and de weeds grows so fast, and de sun am so hot, and de redbugs so plenty, dat I feels like I had a call fum de Lawd to go to preachin'."—N. Y. Examiner.

STIMULATE CHRISTIAN WORK.

A Careful Perusal of the Best Literature will Make all More Spiritually Minded.

Not enough do Christian people consider the relation of their reading to their religious life. There is little thought given to either what may be helpful or detrimental. There can be no doubt that the Scriptures receive little of that careful, meditative perusal which is essential to spiritual benefit, and the average church member gives no proper regard to the literature which may tend to make him more spiritually minded and stimulate him to Christian work. We believe there is nothing more helpful to intelligent Christian people to promote piety and zeal than the lives of the saints of the present century. As to other books, how many church members sit down to a studied, earnest reading of any work which is devoted to the history of any modern mission or to any treatise which presents the argument for any phase of Christian doctrine? A five-cent pamphlet may have been skimmed, but who that reads these lines, except here and there a minister, give any one solid book a thoroughly thoughtful reading in all the year? In some instances the prescribed course of a Chautauqua circle may have been followed, but does any one believe that the bulk of church members give themselves to profitable reading?

There is no doubt that in this age the novel has often been made the vehicle for much useful instruction and to aid great reforms. Sometimes shams and hypocrisies have been reached by the sarcastic showing up of a story where an essay would have failed to effect good. Nevertheless there are many church members whose lives are being frittered away by novel reading. We believe that if in every household we could secure the perusal of books devoted to Christian biography and enterprise, we should see a marked advance in spirituality and consecration.—Christian Inquirer.

CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA.

An Italian Professor Who Says Pineapple Is a Remedy.

Another possible triumph of medical science over disease is suggested by a paper read before the Detroit Medical Association recently on "Alimentation in Therapeutics," in which was announced an important discovery by Signor Vincente Marcano, of Venezuela, in regard to the pineapple. According to Signor Marcano there is in the common pineapple a ferment or principle, similar to pepsin, of such remarkable strength that the juice of a single pineapple will digest ten pounds of beef. If this proves true a new and important agent in the treatment of dyspepsia has been discovered.

As nearly all diseases are directly influenced by the degree in which food can be assimilated, and as millions of people have imperfect digestion, the possibilities of this discovery are almost limitless, if it proves to be as represented. But even more striking was the further announcement in the same paper, written by a practical chemist, that the juice of the pineapple is a very active solvent of the membrane formed in diphtheria. The pineapple is a wholesome fruit without regard to these striking features ascribed to it, and experiments upon the lines suggested will be easy and safe.

Delicious Cranberry Sauce.

To make a novel and delicious dessert cook one quart of cranberries in one and one-half cups of cold water; when soft add two cups of white sugar; strain through a colander. Select a handsome, deep dish; put a layer of the cranberry in the bottom; peel and slice enough bananas for a layer over the cranberry; then alternate layers until the dish is half full. Make a maringue with the whites of four eggs, allowing more sugar than usual; beat the eggs separately until very stiff, then add sugar and beat again; fill the dish up full to rounding over with the meringue; set in oven two or three minutes to brown; cool, and just before ready to serve cut another banana in slices and lay in a circle on outer edge, then another row inside. With a spoon dip a little cranberry juice on each.

THE French are a reading and writing people. Parisians send each year 83,000,000 letters, 13,000,000 postal cards and 85,000,000 newspapers.

THERE are twenty-five Social Democratic dailies in Germany, fourteen semi-weeklies, ten weeklies, three comic illustrated papers and one "Scientific Review." Most of these fifty-three publications have appeared since the expiration of the repressive laws on last October 1.

ESPIONAGE IN FRANCE.

The Spy System as Observed by a Visitor in Paris.

A City Which Swarms with Police and Their Emissaries Who Are Constantly Watching and Dogging the Footsteps of Foreigners and Strangers.

The Third Republic is no freer than were any previous French regimes, says a writer in the Philadelphia Times, from this deep taint of what the French call mouchardise. Never before at any period of France's history has the reign of spydom been so widespread and absolute in Paris as now. There has been latterly much discussion in the world's press of the extraordinary degree to which official espionage obtains in Russia, and very interesting details have been forthcoming on the subject. I am now in a position to affirm that in Paris—I do not say throughout the whole of France—the meshes of the detective net are woven even more closely round the entire population than has ever been the case in St. Petersburg. Evidence of this fact might easily be found in the secret history of the Boulangist conspiracy. From first to last every detail of this movement was known to the police, more than three-fourths of the Boulangists themselves being informers.

The instant you arrive at a Paris station you are in the midst of spies. You are driven to a hotel in a cab. In half an hour the cabman will furnish the police with any particulars he may have been able to gather concerning your position, destination, business, etc. Arrived at your hotel, you become the object of scrutiny, as close as it is secret, on the part of divers persons, who, though attached to the place in the capacity of manager or cashier, or even porter or "boots," are in reality enrolled soldiers of the great detective army. And here I may mention a special characteristic of the French detective system—its faculty of recruiting adherents in all classes of society. French spies, for the most part, are not simple spies and nothing more. They have a trade or occupation of their own, to which they seem wholly and solely devoted, while yet assiduously pursuing sub rosa their spying.

The unsuspecting stranger in Paris has dinner at his hotel served by a waiter who, as a matter of course, is in the pay of the police, and will subsequently report to them what conversation he overhears during the meal. He then sallies forth, primed with a glass or two of fine champagne, for an evening's amusement of the true Parisian sort. First, he repairs to one of the brilliant boulevard play-houses. A few stalls away from him sits a gentlemanly-looking man, with steady, observant eyes, who glances now and again at our friend in such a way as to make the latter think: "I wonder where I've seen that man before?" He never has seen him before, but it doesn't enter his head for a moment to suspect the man of being what he really is—a police spy.

The play over, there is just time for half an hour's stroll under the horse-chestnuts in the Jardin de Paris. Here nine-tenths of the attendants are either spies or scamps, or may, indeed, be both at once, for French police authorities are not very squeamish in choosing their instruments, and seem to have a sort of preference for scoundrels over others. Their theory runs that the greater villain a man is the better spy he will make; moreover, the most efficacious means of keeping a man under spy surveillance is to have him become a spy himself, for spies spy upon each other quite as much as on the rest of mankind.

But our foreigner finishes up the evening by turning into the Cafe Americaine for supper, where he has for next-door neighbor a seductive young woman, with whom he enters into conversation. She has a sweet smile, which displays two rows of glittering teeth, and puts many questions to him concerning France and the French. Naturally enough, our visitor imagines this is all done out of that bright, easy, Gallic politeness he admires so much, for how is he to know that every word he has said in reply will come to the ear of the police not later than the following afternoon?

If our friend be fond of sport he will soon be finding his way to the race-course near the capital and into the baccarat clubs with which Paris abounds, and here he will be hourly in contact with police spies in greater numbers than there are racers on the course or cards in the pack. And so the game goes on in every sphere of Paris life and society.

A Dog Goes to the Almshouse.

Wide Awake is responsible for the following: A family in Salem, Mass., owned a dog that had become quite old and troublesome. He was cross, and would take the best place in the room and no one could make him leave it willingly. At last grandma, much troubled, said: "Sir, this dog is so troublesome we must send him away." The dog got up and looked at her in sorrow and went out of the room. In a few days they heard that this dog, whom everybody knew, had gone to the poor-house, where the town's poor people were taken care of, and stranger still, on Saturdays, when many of the inmates went to see friends, this dog also went home to see "sir" and "ma'am," stayed awhile and then went back again and lived there ever after.

England's Pensioners.

There are a number of notables who are enjoying a pension for judicial services in England. The Earl of Selborne and Lord Herschell receive each five thousand pounds a year as ex-Lord Chancellors, but sit with the Lord Chancellor and the lords of appeal in ordinary for judicial business. Lord Blackburn, many years a judge of the Queen's Bench division and for eleven years a lord of appeal, enjoys an allowance of three thousand seven hundred and fifty pounds. The pension usually granted to a puisne judge on retirement after not less than fifteen years' service is three thousand five hundred pounds.

A NATION MOURNING

Universal Sorrow Over the Death of Gen. Sherman.

TO HAVE A SOLDIER'S BURIAL.

Over 12,000 Grand Army Men to Attend the Obsequies in New York.

THE BODY WILL NOT LIE IN STATE.

St. Louis Citizens Preparing to Receive the Distinguished Dead.

The Cortege to Start on Thursday Afternoon—President Harrison and Ex-Presidents Hayes and Cleveland to Have Positions in the Procession—The Body Covered With an American Flag and Guarded by Regular Soldiers—Over Three Thousand Messages of Sympathy Sent to the Bereaved Family.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—Under the starry folds of the flag he loved so well the honored form of General Sherman lay at rest in the plain but pleasant chamber where he died.

It was a rest well earned. Ripe in his years and full sheathed in his honors, the rancors of the past faded out by the kindly hand of time and the comradeship and friendship of the men whom he had once waged fierce but honest warfare with. He had lived a life plethoric with the best blessing that attend humanity and died honored and mourned by the millions of the reunited nation.

An unstained name, a deathless fame, a vault into the great unknown after a silent and heroic battle with disease that added to the lustre of his renown, who could die more happily than William Tecumseh Sherman, the man who with prophetic eye saw death coming afar off and blanched not at the dreadful apparition? Let the drums be muffled and the flags float low, but let the hearts of the American people rejoice that they can claim such men as he, last but not least of the war's great triumvirate.

Mourning on All Sides.

The city fluttered with the emblems of patriotic mourning as it has not done since the other great adopted citizen, General Grant stacked his arms and lay down to die invincible.

It was not the public buildings merely that hung out the colors at half mast, but thousands of private residences on the wealthy avenues, thousands of humble tenements in the squalid streets added their colors to the symbolic grief. Across the street from the four-storied house which yesterday became the shrine for hordes of the inhabitants two silken banners bordered with crape hung down. On the house itself the sombre drapings of the doorbell were the only tokens that this was the place toward which the nation's eyes were turned.

The dead man's family indulged in no ostentatious grief. They permitted no curious eyes to look upon the dead, and old comrades and the idly curious were alike barred from the chamber where the body lay.

Tributes from Everywhere.

Callers came and left their cards all day long, and there were enough of these to fill a bushel basket. The telegraph wires brought messages of sympathy from far and near, from Europe and California and Mexico and South America, as well as from the nation's capital and all sections of the country until they numbered upward of three thousand.

In the General's office in the basement the son and sons-in-law, assisted by Private Secretary Barrett, one of the sincerest mourners, passed a busy day reading and assorting the messages and picking out a few of the more important ones for the use of the press.

Placing the Body in the Casket.

The body will be put in the casket tomorrow and no one but the family and immediate friends will be permitted to look upon the remains. The casket is of oak covered with black cloth and lined with white satin. The handles are plain silver bars, and on the lid is a plain silver plate on which is inscribed the name William Tecumseh Sherman, and the date of his birth and death. While being transferred from here to St. Louis the casket will be placed in a polished oak box with silver trimmings.

The body of the General still lies in the room in which he died and is covered with an American flag. Father Taylor called at the house in the afternoon.

Major Hoyt Sherman, a brother of the dead General, arrived at the Fifth Avenue Hotel last night. Major Sherman lives in Des Moines, Iowa, but was in New Orleans at the Mardi Gras carnival when he learned of his brother's illness. He came on at once. In appearance he resembles General Sherman very much.

Gen. Nelson A. Miles also arrived at the Fifth Avenue Hotel last night, having come on from Chicago to attend the funeral. He will accompany the remains to St. Louis.

Many public buildings and stores in this city are draped in mourning and the number will be increased largely within the next two days.

A Military Funeral.

NEW YORK Feb. 16.—The preliminary arrangements for the funeral of the late General have been made. At 11 a. m. Generals Slocum, Howard and Butterfield and Lieutenant Treat, aide-de-camp to General Howard, met at the Sherman residence and consulted with the members of the family about the matter.

It was determined that the funeral cortege should form at 1 o'clock on Thursday next, at the house in West 71st street, and move promptly at 2 o'clock in order to get the train in season. The funeral service proper will be held in St. Louis.

The funeral procession in this city will be made up as follows: The regular army escort will be under command of Colonel Langdon of the First Artillery. It will consist of all the infantry battalions in the vicinity of New York. The cavalry will consist of a troop of regulars and troop A of the National Guard.

The body will be borne on a caisson. An escort of honor from Lafayette Post, G. A. R., will surround the caisson and the pall bearers, who will be in carriages.

Following them will come the family and friends in carriages. Then the President and Vice-President of the United States, ex-Presidents Hayes and Cleveland, delegations from the United States Senate and House of Representatives, the Governor of the State of New York and the mayor of the city.

The military part of the procession will follow the carriages in this order:

The Loyal Legion,
G. A. R. Posts,
Corps of Cadets,
National Guard, S. N. Y.,
Delegations from Civil Societies,
Citizens.

The line of march to the Desbrosses street ferry has not been decided upon yet. The G. A. R. Posts will be under command of Gen. Floyd Clarkson and the National Guard under Gen. Louis Fitzgerald.

General Howard has designated Gen. Daniel Butterfield as Marshal in charge of the column.

Veterans of the 7th Regiment and those of other regiments will be assigned to positions at the ferry to receive the cortege on its arrival there. At the New Jersey end of the ferry will be stationed posts of veterans from that State.

G. A. R. posts along the route who desire to pay honor to the remains will be notified in season.

The pallbearers will be: Gen. J. M. Schofield, Gen. O. O. Howard, Rear-Admiral D. L. Braine, Rear-Admiral L. A. Kimberly, Gen. Thomas L. Casey, Gen. J. C. Kelton, Prof. H. L. Kelton, Prof. H. L. Kendrick, Gen. Johnston, Gen. H. W. Slocum, Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, Gen. L. M. Dodge, Gen. J. M. Corse, Gen. Wager Swayne and Gen. L. L. Woodford.

General Clarkson expects to have 10,000 men in line from New York and Brooklyn and 2,500 from New Jersey.

Generals Howard and Slocum were asked by the family to take entire charge of the funeral and accompany the body to St. Louis. The interment will be in Calvary Cemetery in that city.

The funeral in St. Louis will be strictly military in character.

Mayor Grant's secretary, on behalf of the mayor, offered the use of the City Hall to the family as a place for the body to lie in state in, but the offer was declined.

On account of the expressed wish of General Sherman, it was decided not to comply with the request of President Harrison that the body be taken to Washington and there lie in state for a day. It will not lie in state anywhere.

SORROW IN ST. LOUIS.

Arrangements Being Made to Receive the Body of the Dead General.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 16.—Mayor Noonan issued the following proclamation to-day:

"For many years Gen. Sherman was a resident of St. Louis, and here his body is to be buried. He was one of the foremost men of his time and his life is written in the history of his country. The intelligence of his death will be received in St. Louis with abundant sorrow and emotion. The flags on the public buildings will be displayed at half-mast until the day of the funeral and on that day all public offices will be closed."

The following telegram has been received by Ransom Post, G. A. R.:

NEW YORK, Feb. 15, 1891.

Ransom Post:—The family was glad to accept offer of escort on arrival of remains of Gen. Sherman at St. Louis. Send a delegation of not to exceed four to meet cortege at Indianapolis. Gen. Howard and Gen. Slocum have by request provided for everything from here to St. Louis. Probably leave New York Thursday evening. J. J. Howard.

It is thought that the funeral in this city will take place on Saturday next. The Merchants' Exchange Executive Committee have decided to close the exchange on that day. No definite arrangements can be made for the funeral until the committee here is advised from New York. Should the funeral occur on Sunday it is thought it will be the largest one ever held in a western city.

PENNSYLVANIA'S ACTION.

Governor Pattison's Order to the National Guard.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 16.—The following order has been issued from National Guard Headquarters here:

"Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman, U. S. A., retired, was born in Lancaster, Ohio, February 8, 1820; he died in New York city February 14, 1891. Through all the years of his active life from July, 1840, when he graduated at West Point Military Academy until his death, his one ambition was to serve his country.

"He distinguished himself in the Indian war in Florida, the Mexican war and during the war of the rebellion, in all the grades from second lieutenant to general in command of the army. Always in advance in military ideas, movement and action, his march to the sea fittingly crowned his matchless military career.

"Such honors as can be rendered by regiments and companies on the day of the burial will be observed. Officers will wear the usual badge of mourning for 30 days from date of this order.

"By order of Robert E. Pattison, Governor and Commander-in-Chief; William H. McClelland, Adjutant-General."

General Miles' Tribute.

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—Gen. Miles was profoundly grieved at the news of Gen. Sherman's death. "And so he has departed," the General said, "the last of the chain of great men—Lincoln, Grant, Thomas and Meade—statesmen and soldiers. Sherman will be classed in history among such soldiers as Wellington and Napoleon and among such patriots as Washington and others."

Beloved at the Capital.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—In no city of America is General Sherman's memory so deeply revered as here. The citizens of the capital, among whom he enjoyed a wide acquaintance, venerated the old hero and sought constant opportunities of testifying it. The President is much distressed over the General's death.

Veterans Honor His Memory.

JOHNSTOWN, N. Y., Feb. 16.—At a largely attended meeting of the Sons of Veterans' Association of Northwestern New York, held in Amsterdam, resolutions of respect for the memory of General Sherman were adopted. The badge of the association will be decorated in mourning for 30 days.

Gov. Bulkeley Will Issue an Order.

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 16.—Gov. Bulkeley will issue an order to-day from the Adjutant-General's office regarding the death of General Sherman. He will send a communication to the Legislature when it meets again next Wednesday.

THE MAMMOTH MINE VERDICT.

The Coroner's Jury Give Their Opinion of the Cause of the Explosion.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Feb. 16.—The jury in the Mammoth mine explosion case after a short deliberation rendered the following verdict:

"It is our opinion that the cause of the Mammoth mine explosion, occurring on Jan. 27, 1891, was carburated-hydrogen which had accumulated in the lower bed or dip of the mine. No evidence exists to show the condition of the mine at that time, or that ever any gas had existed in the mine at any time to any considerable extent prior to the explosion. We find all machinery about said mine in good condition and working order.

"While we find that the H. C. Frick Coke Company has not been guilty of any neglect in providing for the care and comfort of its underground employes, we protest against the employment of fire bosses and mine bosses in any mine who are addicted to the use of liquor. We also believe that there should be an amendment to the mining laws of the State against the working of any mine under water level with any flame or open light, but to compel the lighting of same by electricity or safety lamps.

"We also recommend that no person be permitted to enter any mine now operated in this State or hereafter opened out except those whose names or numbers shall be kept in a registry at the entry of the mines."

THE ADMIRAL'S FUNERAL.

It Will Take Place To-morrow—The Burial Will be at Arlington.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Admiral Porter's body will be laid beside that of Gen. Sheridan at Arlington to-morrow. The ceremonies are intended to be the most imposing seen in Washington since the death of "Little Phil."

Services are to be held at the Admiral's late home, beginning at 2 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Douglass of St. John's is to officiate. The President and his Cabinet, as well as all the army and navy officers available, will participate.

The naval regulations require for the funeral of an Admiral a complement of 5,000. It is doubtful, however, if that number of marines and regulars can be concentrated here quickly enough. Those stationed in the barracks at Washington, Annapolis and Fortress Monroe, together with Grand Army posts and the District National Guard, will constitute the military and naval contingents. Eight sailors from the receiving ship Dale constitute a guard for the body until it is consigned to the tomb. Mrs. Porter has been showered with telegrams of condolence.

The Astor-Willing Wedding.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 16.—Three thousand guests have been invited to the Astor-Willing wedding, which takes place to-morrow at the residence of the bride's parents on South Broad street. Local feeling and family pride enter into the matter, and the affair is intended to equal in proportions the Paul-Astor wedding here, and not to be excelled in splendor by the Wilson-Astor nuptials in New York. The cost of the floral decorations alone has been placed at $30,000, which does not seem excessive where thousands of roses costing $2 or more apiece and orchids costing $10 a spray will be used in a single room.

THE COPYRIGHT BILL IN DANGER.

Explanation of the Senate's Action in Rejecting the Amendments.

More Reciprocity Mystery—The State Department and Senators Know Nothing of a Newfoundland Treaty—Miss Clara Barton Accepts the Presidency of the National Chatauqua at Glen Echo

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—The Senate will continue during the week on the programme arranged by the Republican caucus, although there is a probability that the Copyright bill, the pending measure, will be laid aside and the Diplomatic and Consular Appropriation bill taken up.

Senator Hale has given notice that he will ask the Senate to take up his bill if the Copyright bill is not speedily disposed of, and it is likely that he will make a motion accordingly this afternoon, and with the chances in favor of it being adopted. The Diplomatic bill can be disposed of without any delay, once it is before the Senate; and the Sundry Civil bill, now in the hands of the Appropriations Committee, will be reported during the week and may be passed in a day or two thereafter.

The order of business also includes the Indian Depredations Claim bill and the Nicaragua Canal bill, and it is probable that some discussion will take place on these measures before the end of the week, with a chance that one of them may be finally acted on.

The time of the House during the week will be spent in the consideration of the Indian, Agriculture and Postoffice Appropriations bill. As soon as these measures have been disposed of, the Subsidy Shipping bill will be taken up and disposed of, although it is not at all likely that it will be reached this week.

THE COPYRIGHT BILL.

Explanation of the Action of the Senate in Rejecting Its Own Amendments.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—The action of the Senate regarding the Copyright bill was rather singular. After adopting three amendments to the bill in Committee of the Whole, the Senate rejected all three in a lump, thus leaving the bill clean and unamended, just as before the long debate on it began.

The explanation for this singular performance is found in the fact that one set of Senators desired one amendment, another set another amendment, and a third set still another, but no one of the amendments was acceptable to the entire opposition; hence, when it came to a test vote, all three were knocked out.

It does not follow that the bill is in any better shape for passage than before. Senators Platt and Hawley and other friends of the bill in the Senate say that they do not derive any particular encouragement from the defeat of the amendments. They say that the opposition can and will probably go ahead and offer further amendments, which will make the situation as unfavorable as before. It is understood that the Democrats will make an attempt this week to kill the bill outright.

A MYSTERIOUS DISPATCH.

Senators Ignorant About a Reciprocity Treaty With New Foundland.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—The State Department is in the dark as to the meaning of the St. Johns, New Foundland, dispatch about a reciprocity treaty having been agreed upon between the United States and New Foundland.

Assistant Secretary Adee says the State Department has jurisdiction to make reciprocity treaties in such cases only when the conditions prescribed in the McKinley bill exist, and those conditions, as far as he is informed, do not exist as to New Foundland. "I simply know," he added, "nothing about the matter."

If Secretary Blaine has concluded any reciprocity treaty with New Foundland he has not informed the Senate of the fact. The matter has never been brought to the attention of the Senate in executive session, and several Senators to whom the dispatch from St. Johns was shown say that they know nothing about such an agreement.

Miss Barton Accepts the Presidency.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Miss Clara Barton, of "Red Cross" fame, has accepted the presidency and become the active head of the Woman's Executive Committee of the National Chatauqua of Glen Echo, at Washington. Miss Barton takes a deep interest in the great movement, and in a letter accepting the presidency predicts a glorious future for the National Chatauqua of Glen Echo, at Washington, the acknowledged home of literature, learning and art in this country.

Arrested for Malpractice.

BOSTON, Feb. 16.—Dr. Lafosse was arrested last night charged with having performed a criminal operation upon Mrs. Maud Currier, who died at her home in East Boston early yesterday morning. John B. Currier, husband of the deceased woman, was also arrested as an accessory before the fact. Mrs. Currier was 29 years old and had four children. The accused will be arraigned this afternoon.

Fought With a Broken Wrist.

HAZLETON, Pa., Feb. 16.—In a barn near this city John McHale and Larry Gibson of Shenandoah fought for a $100 purse. In the fifth round McHale broke his wrist but continued fighting for six rounds more, when his seconds were compelled to throw up the sponge.

THE WHISKEY PLOT.

Gibson Purchased Fifty Pounds of Dynamite to Blow Up the Distillery.

PEORIA, Ill., Feb. 16.—Startling revelations in the conspiracy of George J. Gibson to blow up the Shufeldt distilleries have just come to light. It is now known that Gibson bought 50 pounds of dynamite from A. H. Barkwait some time ago and the druggists from whom the conspirator obtained the ingredients of the deadly fluid found in his satchel in Chicago have been discovered.

Gibson bought the different constituents separately and mixed them himself. The stuff was made of six parts of sulphate of carbon and 94 parts of phosphorous. He purchased these chemicals three weeks ago.

There is no doubt that Gibson has fled as he has not been seen since Thursday and the members of the Whiskey Trust no longer deny that he has gone. They say that he has got out of the way because he was afraid he would have to face additional charges and that his bail would be largely increased. Detectives are here looking up the data in regard to the conspiracy and it is probable they will also endeavor to find out which way Mr. Gibson has gone and who were helping him in his attempt to destroy the distillery.

TRAINING FOR FIGHTS.

Kilrain, Godfrey, La Blanche and Mike Mitchell Getting Into Fix.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 16.—The proposed contests in the California Athletic Club between Young Mitchell and George La Blanche, who fight on Feb. 20, and Jake Kilrain and George Godfrey, are beginning to attract considerable attention. La Blanche is training at Dexter Cottage, Sausalito, where he trained to fight Mike Lucie and Jack Dempsey.

Young Mitchell is training at Alameda. Godfrey is training at Joe Dixon's, on the San Leandro road, Peter Jackson's old training quarters, and where Jack McAuliffe trained to fight Jimmy Carroll for $13,000 and the lightweight championship of the world.

Kilrain has the finest training quarters in the world. He is located at Seal Rock House, at the extreme west of Golden Gate Park. It was Joe McAuliffe's, the Mission boy's, training quarters, when he was preparing to fight Jack Killen. Kilrain has a splendid gymnasium and the ocean for bathing. Muldoon and Rooter are training Kilrain. There has been no favorite selected for the Kilrain and Godfrey match, but Young Mitchell is the favorite in the La Blanche contest.

THEIR DEAD RULER.

Mourning in Honolulu Over Kalakaua—Liliuokalani Succeeds to the Throne.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 16.—The Australian steamship Alameda arrived at noon, bringing news from Honolulu.

The funeral of King Kalakaua was to take place to-day.

The cruiser Charleston, bearing the King's remains, arrived at Honolulu Jan. 29. The Hawaiian and American flags at half mast told the sad truth.

The Hon. Samuel Parker carried the news of the King's death to the palace.

Decorations made to welcome the King were quickly covered with black. All business was suspended.

The King's body was landed at 5 o'clock and carried to the palace, where it was placed in the throne room and covered with ancient feathered robes and rare native cloaks.

At a meeting of the Privy Council the Princess Regent took the oath to maintain the constitution of the country.

A Unique Tour Around the World.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—A young American, I. I. Murphy, son of Councilman J. Murphy, of Brooklyn, is over here making arrangements for a unique tour around the world. He will leave New York about the middle of April in a 27-foot American life-saving yacht and will visit all the principal ports of the British Isles, France, Spain, the Italian peninsula, and the coast towns of the Mediterranean; thence across the Black Sea to Odessa, and through the Suez Canal and the Indian Ocean to China and Japan, and across the Pacific to San Francisco. Murphy will take with him one of Edison's phonographs and several hundred cylinders, and he intends to transfer to wax the voices of various peoples he will visit, especially those of savages. He will also stop at Pitcairn Island to bring back with him, in a phonograph the story of the mutineers of the Bounty as related by their descendants. He intends to complete his journey in time for the World's Fair in Chicago, where his boat and phonographic records will be exhibited. Only two sailors will accompany him on the cruise.

Robbed of Her Husband's Love.

POINT PLEASANT, N. J., Feb. 16.—Miss Alice Brewer, a charming young girl, is charged by Mrs. Hannah Sherman with alienating her husband's affections. The wife has brought suit for an absolute divorce and named the young lady as co-respondent. The parties are residents of Herbertsville, this county, and both families are well connected.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The election for President in Brazil, it is reported, will take place at an early date.

A bill consenting amnesty to political refugees will soon be introduced into the Spanish Cortes by the government.

France has formally accepted the invitation of the Government of the United States to be represented at the world's Fair.

Gov. Russell, of Massachusetts, has written a letter to Mr. Cleveland congratulating him on his letter against the free coinage of silver.

More Trouble in Buenos Ayres.

BUENOS AYRES, Feb. 16.—Owing to rumors of a fresh revolutionary plot the government has placed all the troops under arms. The streets are patrolled by cavalry.

A SHOCKING MURDER

Edward McMullen Kills His Wife With a Hot Poker.

HE WAS CRAZED BY WHISKEY.

The Woman's Body Mutilated in a Horrible Manner.

The Murderer Arrested and Confesses His Crime—When the News of the Fiendish Deed Spread a Feeling of Rage Was Manifest in the Vicinity. Threats of Lynching Made.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 16.—The village of Shermerville, five miles from this city, was the scene of a horrible murder about midnight.

Edward McMullen killed his wife with a red-hot poker, wounding and mutilating her in a shocking manner. McMullen is about 50 years of age and so was his wife. They had been drunk all day, as was their custom after pay day.

In the evening they were alone in the house and were heard by their neighbors quarrelling. No attention was paid to this, but about midnight shrieks were heard coming from the house which were soon followed by groans.

Soon after McMullen came running out of the house shouting and cursing like one insane.

Burned and Mutilated.

When the neighbors ventured in they found the woman lying on the floor with every particle of clothing torn from her body, which was burned and mutilated in a horrible manner.

McMullen had evidently taken a red hot poker, beaten her on the head and thrust it into her body and pressed it into her flesh in dozens of places.

Justice of the Peace Scanlon was aroused and a constable was sent in search of McMullen. He found him lying in a drunken stupor on the road about half a mile from his house.

The Murderer Arrested.

When aroused and told that his wife was dead he said: "I know it; didn't I kill her myself?"

He was brought to this city and lodged in the county jail. The crime is the outcome of almost lifelong drunkenness. Not only have McMullen and the murdered woman been drunkards for years, but their children have inherited the vice.

Two years ago, in the same house, their only daughter, a girl of 20 years, was burned to death with her infant child while lying in a bed in a drunken stupor, while her father and mother were in the next room in the same condition.

When the news of the awful deed spread through the vicinity a feeling of horror and rage soon became manifest. The house was surrounded by curious crowds, but no idle spectators were admitted.

Threats of lynching were heard, but no attempt was made to carry them into execution.

BIG HOSPITAL BURNED.

Over 200 Patients and Several Nuns Safely Removed.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 16.—A night watchman at St. Mary's Hospital discovered the eastern wing of the building to be on fire at 20 minutes past 11 o'clock last night. A general alarm was sent out and the fire department responded promptly. As there were 250 patients, 19 nuns and a number of employes in the building, there was great excitement.

The east wing was totally destroyed, and the entire building was practically ruined before the firemen gained control of the flames. Frank A. Jaynes, foreman of Hose No. 1, was hit on the head by a falling cornice. He was removed to the City Hospital. His injuries will probably prove fatal. All the inmates of the hospital were safely removed to the adjacent buildings and houses.

Yesterday was the golden jubilee of Mother Hieronymo, who has just completed her 50th year as a professed nun, and who founded the hospital. The occasion was to have been celebrated with much ceremony to-day.

Collision in a Fog.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 16.—A dense fog prevented the engineer of the South bound Columbus, Hocking Valley & Toledo passenger train seeing the target lights last night, and he dashed at full speed into a freight train standing across the track at the Scioto Valley crossing seven miles south of here. The passenger engine struck the cab of the Scioto Valley train, which had the right of way, while backing slightly through it. Engineer Charles Bothwell of Portsmouth and two brothers named Johnson of this city were probably fatally injured, and Mrs. Robert McClure of Reynoldsburg, O., was badly cut but will recover. The wife and three daughters of Congressman Grosvenor were on the train but escaped with slight bruises.

A Gift to Yale Divinity School.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 16.—The announcement is made that Morris K. Jessup of New York has given $51,000 in government bonds to the Yale Divinity School. The gift is made in memory of Mr. Jessup's father, Charles Jessup, who graduated from the college in 1814, and it will be known as the "Charles Jessup Fund."

Bishop Doane Preached to Berlin.

BERLIN, Feb. 16.—The American Bishop Doane preached twice yesterday in St. George's. The Empress Frederick and the Princess Margaret were present in the evening.

Hotel Destroyed by Fire.

MT. CARMEL, Pa., Feb. 14.—The Valley House was burned last night. All of the inmates escaped without injury. The loss is $15,000.

THE DAILY PRESS.

BY THE WAY.

—Frank Conshee to-day paid a fine of $5 to Judge Codington for drunkenness.

—The Woman's Union Prayer Meeting will be held in Vincent chapel, this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

—A mock Congress will be conducted by H. R. Munger's class at Hope chapel Wednesday evening.

—The Westfield Musical Society will give its second concert of the season, in The Casino this evening, beginning at 8:15 o'clock.

—The North Plainfield Township Committee completed auditing the books of Tax Collector H. Newton Spencer this morning, and found them correct.

—Lawrence Fahr will be tried at three o'clock to-morrow afternoon, before Judge Codington on the charge of using indecent and abusive language to Sigmund Frucht.

—Many of the papers received at the Plainfield post-office yesterday were soaked with water, and smelt strong of smoke. They had passed through the post-office fire in New York.

—The Warren Mission Boys' Society will meet to-night to re-organize with a senior and a junior department. As it will be an important meeting, all the members are urged to be present.

—The high-water mark of attendance desired to be reached at Hope chapel was set some time ago at 300. Yesterday this mark was passed, 303 being in attendance, and a new mark of 350 was set.

—Most people have an idea that the Common Council is to act on the license question to-night. The idea is a mistake. The public has until Feb. 21 to file remonstrances to the license petitions.

—Mary, the wife of John Moore of 39 Chatham street, has been restored from a dangerous illness by Drs. Lowrie and Carman, to whom the family feel very grateful, and to whom they wish thus publicly to express their appreciation.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Ada Wagner of Pence street is visiting friends in Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger F. Murray left last evening for St. Augustine, Fla., to be gone two weeks.

Miss Mary A. F. Gardner died at the home of Morgan C. Bird, 61 Park avenue, Saturday forenoon, in the 49th year of her age. A stroke of apoplexy was followed by her death inside of an hour. She was an aunt of the late Mrs. George A. Hallock. Funeral services were held at Grace church this afternoon at two o'clock.

News reaches Plainfield to-day of the death of Samuel H. Stevenson, at St. Paul, who some time ago, during his residence here, was one of the pillars of the Methodist church and a most prominent and philanthropic citizen. His son George, now of Topeka, and his daughters Mary, since married, and Josephine, grew up in Plainfield, were educated in its public schools and much admired in its society. Funeral services will be held in the Reformed church at Somerville, to-morrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

KEEP YOUR MOUTH SHUT! SAID HARDY.

Even Truckman Coddington Did n't Know Where the Magistrate's Goods Were Going.

The story of the departure of James Hardy and family from North Plainfield, told exclusively in THE PRESS Saturday, has furnished the New York journals with food for sensational matter, but no facts have yet been published about the case that have not been stated in these columns.

Those who saw Hardy's goods being taken away supposed that he was only removing to another part of town. Even truckman Coddington did not know where the goods were to go. When Mr. Coddington was engaged to cart the goods he was made to promise that he would keep his mouth shut about the removal, and not until the effects were on the truck was he directed to take them to Fanwood and load them on a waiting freight train.

Young Men Protest Against Saloons.

A copy of the following petition has been sent to Councilman S. A. Ginna, to be presented to the City Common Council:

To the Councilmen of the City of Plainfield, Union County, New Jersey:

We, the undersigned, members of the Harned Academy, respectfully petition your Honorable Body not to grant any licenses for the sale of alcoholic liquors in this city, believing as we do that the tendency of the saloon is only to demoralize, to degrade and to destroy that manhood which we are doing our utmost to build up and ennoble.

FIVE MONTHS A BRIDE.

But the Husband Whom Her Parents Warned Her of, Has Deserted Her, and Her Girlish Dreams of Bliss Are Ended.

Charles Peterson, who was one of Tunis J. Carey's henchmen in spying out evidence against alleged law-breakers, has brutally deserted the wife whom five months ago he promised to protect and cherish.

Peterson is a young man of German descent. He had for many months been courting Annie Marienscheck, a Polish girl, whose parents live near New Market, and whose father is a gardener for Mr. Drayton.

When the girl told her father and mother that she was going to be married to Peterson they pleaded with her to give up the idea, assuring her that he was a worthless young man. Their pleadings were of no avail, so they grew determined, and ordered her not to marry him. She persisted, however, in spite of her parents' opposition, and became his wife.

A few days after the wedding Peterson accompanied constable George R. Rockafellow to the house of the Marienschecks, and made a demand for his wife's clothes. The father and mother both screamed all orts of epithets against the groom, and yelled so that they could be heard a long distance away. The old man chased them away with a gun, and warned Peters n that the next time he showed his head on the premises he would get shot.

Some time afterward the constable succeeded in getting Mrs. Peterson's wardrobe for her, but Peterson never again dared to visit his bride's parents.

Gradually the young bride began to find out that her husband had at various times practiced gross deceit on her.

When he married her he had assured her that he had a big bank account, but she found that he was well-nigh penniless, and had had to borrow $5 from a girl who worked in Boehm's, to pay the minister's fee, which debt, it is now asserted, the girl has tried vainly to collect.

Peterson was doing no work, and it is reported that when his wife pleaded with him to get something to do, she was subjected to grossest abuse and brutal treatment.

Last Monday Mrs. Peterson had another earnest talk with her husband, at their home in the building recently purchased by the Young Men's Christian Association on Front street at the head of Peace. Peterson flew into a brutal passion—the people in the house say—and treated her shamefully, winding up by tearing her wedding ring from her finger and rushing, with curses, from the house. The terrified wife ran after him, calling him back, but he only shouted vile things at her, and she went weeping back to the house.

She has seen nothing of him since, and would not welcome him back, since he has treated her so and abandoned her.

The deserted wife is a comely young woman, of about twenty years of age, and deserves sincerest sympathy. The runaway groom bears not the best of reputations. Some of his misdeeds caused Hook and Ladder Company No. 1 to expel him from its ranks some time ago.

Peterson was known as "Carey's informer."

THE WIDOW EAGER FOR A FIGHT.

She Is Glad "Nick" Kelly Had Her Arrested, as "It Gives Her a Chance to Show Him Up".

Eliza C. Clickner, the widow with whom ex-policeman Nicholas Kelly used to board, who was accused by Kelly's sweetheart of writing bad and spiteful letters to her because she had wanted to marry "Nick" herself, and who told THE PRESS that she would n't marry "Nick" Kelly if he was the last man on earth, was arrested this morning on the charge of sending through the mails the obscene letters the Kelly faction have been receiving. Justice Nash set bail at $100, and she gave bonds in that amount to await the action of the Grand Jury. She says she is anxious to meet Kelly in court, as she may then be able to secure from him her just dues. She stoutly protests her innocence of writing the letters, but says she is eager for fight. She is a resident of "Hetfield's row," Arlington avenue.

ANNEKE JANS'S HEIRS.

They Still Have Hopes of Getting the Trinity Church Property.

Two or three Plainfield people, including the writer, have again been notified that they are among the heirs to the Anneke Jans estate in the heart of New York city, valued at $200,000,000, and that the heirs will meet at Indianapolis next month, when definite arrangements will be made to settle the vast inheritance. The estate, comprising thirty-six acres in the heart of New York city, was leased to Trinity church in 1790 for ninety-nine years.

Burned Out One Eye, Knocked Out the Other.

Amos Allen of Westfield totally lost his eyesight through an accident on the Jersey Central Railroad Saturday night. He made a misstep from a moving car, and in falling cut open his head and knocked out an eye. His other eye was destroyed by lime some time ago.

I was persuaded by a friend to try "Salvation Oil" for neuralgia and headache. I found it a great relief after a few applications. I cheerfully recommend it to all who likewise suffer. G. H. McGee.

TAR AND FEATHERS FOR MARY STAATS.

Mrs. Wilson Tells Her Story of the Curly-Headed Siren, and Hints that a Coat of Sticky Feathers Awaits Her Return.—Was She Real Wife of Abram, Or Had She Lured Him, Too, Away from a Legal Consort?

Louise Wilson, wife of the man who ran away with Mary Staats, as first recorded in these columns, told THE PRESS a long story in connection with the case, Saturday evening, in an effort to relieve her erring husband, Edward, of some of the odium that has been thrust on him as the result of his duplicity and in consequence of the elopement.

Mrs. Wilson states that Mary lured the man to ruin. Edward was striving hard—she says—to be a good man and to make his wife and family the happy home they had known for many years, but this woman persistently got in his way and at last, by her allurements, effected his downfall. She would visit the Wilson residence on all sorts of pretenses, and would load herself down with heavy bundles before stopping at the Wilsons', so as to get Edward's help in carrying them home. When she once got him in the house of her husband, Abram, she would keep him there.

Mrs. Wilson adds that not only did she plead with Mrs. Staats to refuse Edward admittance to her house, and condemn Mr. Staats as "only half a man" for not kicking the intruder bodily out of doors, but Mrs. Staats's married daughter got down on her knees and pleaded with Mrs. Staats to refuse to associate with Wilson and wreck a home that had been happy and that might be so again.

Everybody told Mrs. Staats—adds Mrs. Wilson—that Edward would cease his devotion to her as soon as she ordered him to, but Mrs. Staats is quoted as saying that Edward was a lovely gentleman, and that she was going to keep him in her clutches no matter what people said. She did n't care for gossip—she is reported to have added—and Edward was a good-hearted, generous fellow, free with his money, and the best man she ever knew.

Mrs. Staats is further accused of poisoning the mind of Wilson against his wife, and of industriously sowing the seeds of scandal, about Mrs. Wilson's character, among the Cleaver flock, and among other people. She is described as a curly-haired siren, and if all stories are true has had some experience before in breaking up home happiness and shattering domestic hearth-stones. It is even said that she is not the genuine wife of Staats, but that she enticed Staats years ago to desert his true wife, who is said now to be living at New Brunswick.

If the bewitching Mary ever returns to Plainfield she may meet with a warm reception. Mrs. Wilson is in a frame of mind which might result in Mary having her face scratched and her curly locks yanked out unmercifully by the fist full, just as Mr. Staats's frame of mind may result in Wilson's getting shot at if ever he show himself here again.

"There are ladies in town"—says Mrs. Wilson, significantly—"who have said that they will stand ready to furnish the tar and feathers for Mary Staats when she comes back, and there are men who have promised to protect me from interference if I apply the sticky, fuzzy coat. And I'm not afraid that I could n't do it. I've slapped her face twice, for enticing my husband into her house when I told her not to, and when her husband was away."

WHAT DO THEY WANT OF KANE?

He Disappeared in Plainfield, and Now There Are Hints of Money and a Woman.

Charles Kane, alias Charles King, is wanted. He is described as being "of German descent, had curly chestnut hair, a sandy mustache, and small dark blue eyes, which were always watery as if sore." His height was about five feet seven inches, and his age 38 years.

Just why he is wanted is not quite clear. It is stated by inquiring ones that he has fallen heir to an estate worth $5,000, but mysterious hints are made about a woman, either wife or sweetheart, whom he treacherously deserted. At any rate people at 133 Willett street, near Avenue C, New York city, will gladly receive any information concerning him, and there is some girl who lives there who is greatly interested in the case. THE PRESS will give further particulars later. The last heard of Kane he lived in Plainfield.

North Plainfield Happy at Last.

At last the borough of North Plainfield has excellent street lighting. The new electric light service was turned on as far as was practicable last night, and the lamps were very satisfactory. The entire service will speedily be perfected, and the streets of the thriving borough will have the bright all-night illumination they deserve.

Not Sure They Have "Jack the Ripper."

LONDON, Feb. 16.—The police of London are coming to the conclusion that the drunken sailor now under lock and key is not the much sought for "Jack the Ripper." There is no doubt that the fellow has been in a row with somebody, and that the row was attended by blood spilling; but there is nothing to indicate the desperate murderer or the refined assassin, and his features bear evidence of his having been on a heavy spree. The detectives are continuing their search in every quarter, and have apparently some idea that the guilty man is in Paris, as a special request has been sent to that city to be on the lookout for suspicious characters. The police place no confidence in the theory that the prisoner is a woman.

The Engineer Disobeyed Orders.

MT. MORRIS, N. Y., Feb. 16.—The coroner's jury in the cases of Albert Englehart and James L. Powers, killed by the accident on the Lackawanna Railroad last Tuesday night, found a verdict that the men came to their death by the neglect of Charles Shriver, engineer, to obey the printed rules of the railroad company and the explicit orders of the conductor of his train.

Republican Conspiracy in Spain.

MADRID, Feb. 16.—Many rumors are afloat of a conspiracy to overthrow the government and establish a republic. The working classes are much exasperated by the rise in the price of bread, owing to the new duties. Excitement prevails in the cities and larger towns and the garrisons in Madrid and Barcelona have been increased.

Tupper May Become Premier.

OTTAWA, Feb. 16.—It is confidentially affirmed here that after the election, if the Conservatives return from the country with a small majority, Sir John Macdonald will take the High Commissionership in England, while Sir Charles Tupper will become Premier. Sir John's health is not good.

Will Fight If They Strike.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 16.—The miners of Clearfield and Centre counties are preparing for a strike by arming. The agreement expires March 5, and should no new one be made bloodshed is feared. The miners are in an exceedingly bitter frame of mind. There are about 8,000 of them.

Senator Moody Abandons the Contest.

HURON, S. D., Feb. 16.—Senator Moody has left here on his way to Washington. He has abandoned the Senatorial contest and leaves the field to the score of other aspirants. He believes the Republicans will yet succeed, although the prospects are not encouraging.

FIGHTING THE SALOONS.

The Pastors of the Ministers' Association Stir Up Their Congregations Against Increasing the Number of Local Licenses.—Vigorous Words from Clergymen, and Strong Arguments from the Pond Tool Works and Hope Chapel.

Most of the Plainfield churches were closed last night, and the congregations united in mass-meetings in the largest two houses of worship in the city, to protest against the encroachments of the saloon traffic on public and private interests.

The First Baptist and the Crescent Avenue churches, where the meetings were held, were filled to overflowing. At the First Baptist the pulpit platform was occupied by the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, the Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham, the Rev. C. B. Mitchell, the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, and the Rev. W. E. Honeyman. Dr. Yerkes and Mr. Honeyman took part in brief devotional exercises, and stirring speeches were made by the several pastors.

Dr. Ketcham spoke earnestly on the influence of the saloon on morals and intellect. He said that one young man out of every five families was being ruined by the saloon, and depicted in powerful language the awfulness of the evils of the liquor traffic. He held the theory to be fallacious that there would be just as much drinking without saloons as with them. It was the institution—he said—that caused the spread of the curse. Religious, educational and other movements amounted to comparatively little until provided with some institution, some home, where their work could be propagated. Just so the saloon was a powerful institution of the liquor traffic, and when it was successfully abolished the amount of liquor consumed would easily be reduced nine-tenths, and much consequent evil would be averted.

Mr. Schenck told of the aggressiveness of the saloon power, showing its constant, untiring attempts to secure from man all that made life dear—the joys of the family, of the home and of the Holy Sabbath. Right in our own State—he said—the saloon power was seeking to destroy these very things, and in our own city it was striving to increase the number of hours it might deal out its deadly work each day and to increase the number of places where young men could be ruined. He was opposed to all licensing of another in the midst of the working population near the Pond Tool Works. This was the stand taken by all the ministers.

Mr. Mitchell said that the Bible taught him that no drunkard could inherit the Kingdom of Heaven, and yet that the soul of that drunkard was worth more than all the material universe. He was therefore strongly opposed to the saloons that made the drunkards. But he was aware that it would be useless to ask that no license be granted in Plainfield this year. It was well settled that there were going to be licenses. But if especial effort were directed against the opening of any new saloons it was possible that such effort might prevail. He held that if J. B. Miller were granted a license to open a saloon in Amphion Hall that saloon would be the most dangerous in town. The saloon would be extraordinarily attractive. Besides being presided over by a genial gentleman, as Mr. Miller appeared to be, it would have the added inducements of bowling alleys and gaming tables, with the bar for drinks very close at hand. It would be a "respectable", gilded place, and would entice from the path of sobriety and virtue young men who would be ashamed to be seen in the lower dram-shops. It would set up a pernicious influence against the neighboring church, and would lure young men on the way to and from the house of God. The proposed saloon in the Pond Machine Tool Works neighborhood would also be especially destructive, in that it would clutch and devour the money and the manhood of the workingman. Mr. Pond had told him that during the time his works had been running in Plainfield he had had on his pay-roll the names of 1,200 men. Of these 800 had been discharged, mostly because of strong drink, and now it was proposed to open a saloon at the very doors of the manufactory that would extend this fearful work of ruining men. Mr. Mitchell added that already the men were saying among themselves, "Well, I have been trying hard to keep my pledge, and have been keeping it, but if, tired after each day's work, I am to be subjected to the temptations of a saloon that I am compelled to pass, I fear I cannot keep my pledge longer."

E. P. Williams, who spoke as a member of the Society of Friends, asserted that through the influence of a saloon already established in the manufacturing district all but 3 of 150 who had signed the pledge at Hope chapel had gone back to the drinking habit.

Dr. Yerkes read from a report of Mrs. Kimball, of the Children's Home, published in THE PRESS of Thursday, Feb. 5, and commented forcibly on it. He then read a copy of the following protest, to be presented to the Common Council, and announced that signatures would be taken. Most of the hundreds present attached their names to the paper, which was as follows:

We, the undersigned, believing that the general sentiment of our people is opposed to any increase in the number of drinking places in this city, do enter protest in particular against granting the application for license to sell liquors in the building now known as Amphion Hall, being only 75 feet from the Trinity Reformed church.

Also against granting the application for a license to sell liquors at the corner of South Second street and Grant avenue, being near the Pond Machine Tool Works.

Also against allowing saloons to keep open bar until 12 o'clock instead of 11 at night.

A collection was taken for the benefit of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and Dr. Yerkes pronounced the benediction.

At the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church the platform was occupied by the Rev. W. R. Richards, the Rev. Asa Reed Dilts, the Rev. C. L. Goodrich and the Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman.

Mr. Richards said that the saloon had already achieved a work of great evil, but yet was not satisfied to let things remain as they were, bad as they had been. They were now—he stated—reaching through the State Legislature after our Sundays. Also in our own city—he asserted—where already we have too many saloons, it is proposed to license three more—one near the Trinity church, another near the Pond Machine Tool Works. The Pond people tell me that they don't want a saloon so near at hand, explaining that after a holiday the men who drink are unfit for regular work for two or three days, and that in this and other ways the business of the firm and the personal affairs of the men are injured.

Mr. Dilts showed that the demands of the saloon on all that was good and holy were constantly increasing. He considered the present attempt to convert a part of Sunday into a carnival of rum-selling was outrageous. He insisted that the proposed saloons near the Trinity Reformed church and the Pond Machine Tool Works were entirely unnecessary, at least, and urged the people to protest against their being licensed.

Dr. Rodman put the question "Where should saloons be placed?" and answered it himself in this wise: "I don't want one near my home. You don't want one near your home. The only right place I can think of where they should be put, is put out. I wish that every saloon could be put on wheels and carted to the sea shore, fastened to the scows that carry the refuse from New York, and taken out to deep water, and sunk to the bottom. I suppose, however, if that were done the fishes would raise a loud protest against such treatment." He was especially outspoken against granting an increased number of licenses.

Mr. Goodrich announced that he was heart and soul against the saloon, "first, last and always", and described the woe, misery, poverty and ruin wrought by king alcohol in happy homes.

The same protest that was read in the First Baptist church, was signed by nearly everybody present. Dr. Rodman pronounced the benediction.

From Dr. Lewis.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Sickness and death kept me from the mass-meeting last evening. Grant me space to say that the Christian people of Plainfield have the right to be heard and heeded, at this time. Their commission from God, to look after the best interests of the city, is far higher than any authority which the Common Council has, or can bestow. Christianity bears the burden of the reforms and charities of the city. The church struggles to heal the sorrow, sin, and suffering which the saloons create. The saloons and the devil are fostered by the present attitude of the city government toward the rum traffic. In the short run, the case is thus made unequal, in favor of the devil. We demand that God be recognized, and that the Honorable Common Council put the law on the side of right and justice. Some of the members of the Council are professed Christians. Is there any difference between John Doe a Christian man, and John Doe a Councilman? Does God know what goes on in the secret caucuses, and in the council room? Have purity, and sobriety, and righteousness, and Christianity, and God, any rights which the city government of Plainfield is bound to respect? Are things to go on as they have been going for a few years past? If so, all right. Open a saloon next door to Trinity church; Pastor Schenck has less "political pull" than the man who wants the saloon. There is also a good corner down by Dr. Yerkes's church. Crescent avenue would be a good stand for a "high toned" place. I presume that if it were secretly done a place could be bought for a saloon near my own church on Central avenue. I saw a woman, too drunk to walk, pushed out of the saloon near the Potter Press Works the other day. Better renew that license. If the city of Plainfield is sold to the rum power, better hasten and deliver the goods, all along the line. There is "political capital" in prompt delivery, C. O. D., all goods warranted. Don't mind the "Dominies", and the Christian business men, and the women (they can't vote). Preachers and church people are convenient to have at hand, when sorrow and trouble come to councilmen and saloon keepers; but "they don't know much about politics, you know"; they don't count much at "primaries"; you can generally work them by a few promises. If the law makers of this city have made up their minds to follow the programme laid down by the saloons, let us know it. Fill the cup. Run it over.

I will not so far forget that I am commissioned of God to speak at this hour, as to ask with "bated breath, in bondman's phrase", that the number be lessened. Gentlemen of the Common Council, if there be enough of you who fear God, and hope in the mercy of Jesus Christ, to vote down every saloon in our once, but now no longer, fair city, do it soon, and sleep with the feeling that you are willing to face God's book in Judgment, however you may be rated on the books of the saloon keepers. In the long run God always wins. He is not dead yet. The day of reckoning will come. The strongest "Combine" is God and Truth and Righteousness. A. H. LEWIS.

ALL ABOARD FOR THE "RUSH" LINE!

But If the Train Be As Slow As Past Rapid-Record Efforts, Plainfield Is Likely to Remain Forever in the Tallow-Candle Period.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I notice that a horrible nightmare has descended upon the minds of some people over the rumor that an attempt to "rush" through an electric railway franchise threatens the "Queen City of New Jersey."

I do not doubt that some of the "oldest inhabitants" were in an equally frantic state of mind in 1869, over the danger of "rushing" water-works, when a charter was granted in that year. That matter has been "rushed" so heedlessly that after a lapse of 22 years several large water pipes are discernible to the naked eye between the pumping station and the oil-cloth works.

Let us not perspire too profusely! Plainfield will never become so recreant to all her traditions as to "rush" anything.

I notice also "that the scheme will be bitterly contested by the leading people, who contend that the introduction of poles and trolley wires will render unsightly Plainfield's beauty, the macadamized roads and driveways." This certainly cannot mean the residents along Washington street, Ninth street, and Madison avenue; nor those of that beautiful mireway, Seventh street, between Grant and Clinton avenues, to whom it does not appear to make a particle of difference whether they wade through 6 or 12 inches of mud. I have no doubt that the hackmen and stage proprietors are likewise bitterly opposed to "rushing."

There was once a fox that lost his tail in a trap, and tried to induce his fellows likewise to amputate theirs, contending that they would look far more beautiful without them. It is no doubt very gratifying to christen our city "Colorado of the East", "Queen City", etc., and to imagine the eyes of all Europe and America are on us; but we have only to travel a short distance (yea, even within this State, which contains nearly as many people as New York city) to find other towns which compare favorably with us in beauty, wealth, and architectural attractions. Montclair and the Oranges may even dare to compete; and we can also discover that even Bloomfield, with but half the population of Plainfield, has had a street railroad for several years. And, going to an adjoining State, we can find Germantown and Chestnut Hill—either of which contains stables and porters' lodges, nearly, if not quite, as handsome as most of our places—not only not afraid of street cars, but hailing them as a convenience. Of course Walnut street and Arch street, Philadelphia, cannot be mentioned in the same breath with West Fourth and Richmond streets, which we propose to "ruin", and yet the former two have had street cars for more than 25 years. The sailor who knocked down the Hebrew, and who when told that the event which excited him so had happened 1800 years before, replied that he had only just heard of it, did not display more ignorance than we display when crying—"We are the people; admire us: see our progress; our cosmopolitanism; our Y. M. C. A. building; and, above all, our beautiful streets!"

If poles and wires are so unsightly, why are our beautiful streets now defaced by them? Telegraph, telephone and electric lights poles and wires now disfigure our streets, kill our horses, and cumber our roofs and backyards. Why do we not compel these unsightly objects to come down? Because the leading people who want their houses illuminated with electric lights see no unsightly poles and wires along the beautiful streets. The oxen of the electric light burners and of the telephone users are not gored; therefore, the poles are things of beauty; and the wires, a joy forever. Selah!

The aborigines dwelling here before the flood (of 1889), may recollect the fearful picture which was drawn concerning the horrors and dangers likely to come upon Plainfield, if the Singer Sewing Machine Works were erected here. The company, however, could not obtain land enough on their terms, and the terrible peril was averted. A quarter of a century later, the settlement of a company—not employing more than one-third as many hands as the Singer Company does—was hailed with rejoicing and acclamations:—"Now we are going to be a seaport town!" as the old woman said when the railroad first stopped at Pittsfield, Mass.

Perhaps, however, the African in the fence is twin to the one found in the water-works wood pile. Know-nothingism (although decided to be un-American) may be a good thing, if you have natives enough with large and open pocket-books; but the Daft system fell through because the natives would not subscribe. If foreigners want to build a road, what do we lose? Our beautiful streets! Make them so, then! Away with the unsightly poles and wires! Let the leading people burn candles: their forefathers did. Why "rush" into electric lights, telephones and such dangerous and unsightly innovations!

Further: Some panic-stricken anti-rushers fear that taxes will be increased; (this is not imaginary, I have heard it gravely discussed). Do such fearful ones consider that every thousand or hundred thousand dollars invested in the city help to reduce our present very high taxes (high for the conveniences we have), by furnishing additional property to be taxed?

Then the bugaboo about spoiling the streets! Do they not also know that for every mile of track laid the sum of $2,000 has to be deposited with the State Treasurer as a guarantee that the streets shall be maintained in good shape, or replaced as found? Does the Water-Works Company make the same deposit? Why should it tear up and deface our beautiful streets?

However, I am not borrowing any trouble about the streets being torn up in a hurry. Considering the rapidity with which the water business has been "rushed", it is only necessary to propound the following conundrum:

If between 1869 and 1891 a beautiful "architecturaldoral" pumping station can be built, and possibly 200 or 300 iron pipes laid above ground, when will the beautiful streets be defaced by any kind of a surface road?

I don't believe we have a mathematician capable of answering. QUEEN CITIZEN.

SPOOL FURNITURE.

A Great Variety of Useful Articles That Can Be Made at Home.

Spools are used, strung on strong steel or iron rods, to make the legs for a small table. Obtain four rods of a size to fit into the holes of spools you have collected, and long enough to make the height of your table. They can be fastened at the bottom by a round piece of wood nailed to the bottom spool. Get a carpenter to prepare a small square of wood for the top of your table, and, if you choose, another for a shelf or standard, a foot or so from the bottom. He will also, for a small sum, fasten these squares to the legs you have prepared. Now your table is ready to be decorated, for which you must procure some black enamel paint, and some good gilding. Paint the top and shelf black with a single line of gilding near the edges. The spools may all be black, except a tiny line around the place where their edges meet. If the cracks show fill with putty, and make smooth before gilding. The table may be further ornamented by having a row of spools, secured by rods, pass around the top of the table, fastened to small cubes of wood in the corners, and by a row of them placed standing around the edge of the shelf, held by a slender piece of wood fastened along the tops.

If desired, the table may be painted white and gold, and instead of the wooden top and shelf, squares covered with colored plush can be used. The top can be made to look handsome if a carpenter be hired to fit to a plush-covered square a neat molding, to be painted the color of the spools. This will make the top look as if inlaid with plush. A checker table can be made by dividing the top into squares and painting them the colors of a checker board. Some prefer to use spools of graduating sizes. Other pieces of furniture to be made with spools are easels, book-shelves, cabinets and screens.—American Home Graphic.

BARREL CLOTHES-HAMPER.

It Is Neater and Much Cheaper Than Those Sold in Stores.

A clothes-hamper is a convenience every housekeeper should have; still it is one I should not be able to enjoy if I had to pay the price asked for the wicker ones at the stores. My hamper is a home-made one, and while it may not be quite as attractive as some, it is just as convenient, more durable than many I have noticed, and pretty enough for any hall or bedroom. It is made of a small barrel with a cover. After cleaning and scalding the barrel thoroughly and allowing it to become thoroughly dry, I lined it smoothly on the inside with old calico; before putting it in I washed, and starched it a little. I sewed the breadths up skirt fashion, then put a circular piece in for the bottom, and with a few tacks nailed it in the bottom of the barrel, and pulled the upper edge up and over on the outside of the barrel, the edges of which I hid with the outside covering. This you will notice is of figured crétonne, fulled on evenly all around the barrel. The cover is covered with the same material as that used for the outside of the barrel, and altogether I consider my hamper an ornament as well as a convenience.—Prairie Farmer.

Good Way to Cook Cabbage.

A delicious way to cook cabbage is the French method, which is as follows: Chop cold boiled white cabbage and put in a colander to drain until dry, stir in some melted butter—about two tablespoonfuls to a large spiderful; add pepper, salt and four tablespoonfuls of cream; after the cabbage is heated through add two well-beaten eggs, then turn the mixture into a frying-pan; stir it until it is hot and of a delicate brown on the under side. Place a hot dish over it and when ready to take it to the table turn the frying-pan or spider upside down, so that the brown or crust part will be on top, thus making a very pretty looking dish.

Sweet-Bread Fritters.

Parboil the sweet-breads, cut them into slices half an inch thick; then sprinkle them with pepper and salt, a very little grated nutmeg, a few drops of lemon juice and some finely-chopped parsley; dip them each into the following batter: Place a heaping teacupful of flour in a bowl; add the well-beaten yelks of two eggs, a tablespoonful butter and one or two tablespoonfuls lemon juice. Stir well, adding by degrees water enough to make as thick as ordinary batter. When ready for use stir in the whites of two eggs beaten stiff. Fry in boiling lard like doughnuts. Drain them, pile on a napkin and serve.

REFORM DRESS SKIRTS.

Costumes Designed for Women Following Out-of-Door Occupations.

Mrs. Charles Hancock, of London, has undertaken a reform that has been attempted by many women before her. That it has failed heretofore and will fail again, in all probability, does not argue that the underlying idea is impracticable or at all undesirable, for those for whom it is designed will admit that it is both desirable and practicable. Mrs. Hancock explained at a drawing-room meeting of ladies that there was a pressing need for some costume which professional and busy women could wear for walking which should not require to be held up, should not cling about the ankles and become wet, muddy and uncomfortable. To meet these requirements she had designed a dress free from these defects, which she proceeded to exhibit.

The dress, which was extremely well made, presented a fashionable appearance, and, but for its shortness in the skirt, would hardly have been different from what is usually seen. The fabric employed was a pretty Scotch heather-mixture tweed, the fullness of the skirt was arranged in handsome box-plaits at each side and others at the extreme back, so that the tweed fell in graceful folds, which, not being caught or stitched to any under lining, left the limbs perfect freedom of movement. Instead of being supported by the waist or hips the weight of the skirt depended upon an under bodice of woolen material. The length was five inches less than an ordinary skirt, or six inches from the ground. In case that any rain should penetrate, a dress band of mackintosh was placed inside as a lining. Mrs. Hancock revealed that, save this skirt, she wore no other of an undivided character and that the place of the petticoat would be more than supplied, as far as warmth was concerned, with a pair of cloth "knee-breeches." The latter were met by high gaiters to match the costume. The bodice might be varied according to the fashion of the day, but Mrs. Hancock's was cut in the Spanish fashion over a habit bodice and sleeves of smooth chocolate cloth. A double-breasted reefer jacket in tweed and a chocolate-colored Spanish hat completed a costume which undoubtedly became its wearer.

PHOTOGRAPH HOLDER.

A Pretty Thing Made in the Form of a Folding Screen.

The picture in this article shows a pretty photograph holder made in the form of a folding screen. It is easily made at home. For the foundation cut three card-board panels, two twelve inches long on the longest edges, and one ten inches long on the longest edge; and all about seven inches wide. Cut the tops of these panels in scrolls, as indicated in the illustration, and cover them smoothly on both sides with old-gold plush, cutting out apertures of sufficient size for the photographs. Join the panels by sewing or with ribbon bows. The upper part of the screen is painted or embroidered with flower sprays and birds, or it may be left plain, if preferred. It is sufficiently handsome without decoration.—Ohio Farmer.

Pretty Embroidered Shoes.

The newest style embroidery is in gold thread like a spider's web, with a red and gold spider and a blue and white-headed fly. A black and yellow shoe is worked in gray, and has one of the new large bows. It was shaped like a Mother Hubbard shoe, but standing up in huge flutes over the instep, and discovering a lining of distinct coloring. Very fine floral embroidery is introduced on black shoes in pink and green beads, and with this a large pink and green bow was worn; green and gold had been treated in the same way. Bands across the instep are new, and so are the Suede shoes, covered with narrow stitched bands of a darker shade. With these tiny buckles are principally worn, with no bows at all.

A Remedy for Rheumatism.

General Lew Wallace, of "Ben Hur" fame, has the following remedy for rheumatism: "Apply a full-strength mustard poultice, containing a little garlic, to the hollows of both feet, and then cover up in bed. Place sufficient bedding under you to take up the perspiration. Remain still from three to four hours, then remove the mustard and wet bedding, but do not remove any clothing from the body for fear of taking cold; let it dry on you. The mustard will not blister your feet, but will drive the disease from the system."

CITIZEN TRAIN PREDICTS

The Immediate Downfall of Our Social System.

By Psychic Vision He Sees That Gould Hasn't a Penny and That Anarchy Is Close at Hand—A Mixture of Shrewdness and Crankisms.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

I stopped at the Continental Hotel on my way down-town this morning to ask Mr. George Francis Train if he knew the whereabouts of a man who had been swallowed out of my sight in New York's tossing and bubbling.

"I can't help you in the matter," said Citizen Train, "but I don't think you need trouble yourself. We shall all be swallowed up almost immediately.

"If you owe money, don't pay it; if anybody owes you money collect it promptly, for we are on the eve of a frightful convulsion."

I asked him what in particular seemed to be going wrong with the system of things.

"Come and sit down," he said, "and I'll put the situation before you. Then do you write out the truth as I give it to you, and the editor will red pencil it and blue pencil it, and if you are paid on space you won't get enough out of it to buy a cup of coffee. There is only one step that could bring about a genuine editorial reform, and that is the abolition of editors."

The hotel parlors were crowded, but the Citizen found two chairs by a window overlooking Broadway. Here we spoke in low tones like two conspirators, and a couple of lovers wondered at us, and an old gentleman frowned over his newspaper. A baby tumbled into the Citizen's hat beside him on the floor, and the Citizen patted her head and said:

"By psychic power I see the coming destruction; I feel myself drawn into it as into the great maelstrom off the coast of Norway. I hear voices; they call: 'Train, Train.'

"The other night I went to the Old Guard ball. It was beautiful, beautiful, with the lights and the uniforms and the dresses; but I saw corpses and tomb-stones and skulls. I could give you the names of three hundred men who are about to die, but it wouldn't be fair to shock them by announcing the fact prematurely."

Here the small girl held up a gayly dressed doll. "Yes, it's pretty," and Train pulled her curls and smiled.

Two sorts of storms seemed getting confused. I sought for phrase to ask if the Citizen's psychic signal service had kept him informed of the progress and present whereabouts of the social hurricane.

"The earth trembles before it—" The small girl sat down with momentum. Train lifted her and gave her his hand to hold by—"That flurry in Wall street last November was the first breath of the gale, that and the troubles of the Baring Brothers. It blew over, says everybody, and the skies are now clear; but the quiet is the hush before the cyclone."

"What has bred the gale?"

"Our greed of money, our perversion of our appetites and passions. We have wrecked human nature. There isn't a living man or woman who is sound."

I asked how the social convulsion would begin.

"You know how it is in a theater?" Train took from an inside pocket the familiar long black pocket-book, and from this the familiar pencil and folded paper and began to clear up his text with some of his characteristic illustrations. "Here," and he drew a small and irregular circle, "are the people in the boxes. Do they understand or know any thing about the people in the galleries? They think themselves quite a separate order of beings. Here," and he drew another small circle at some distance, "are the people in the galleries. Do they understand or know any thing about the box people? Nothing, one says, could ever bring the two sets together. Let a little street Arab shout fire. Now here," and he added a small rectangle in the corner of his drawing, "is the door. There is a grand rush, and gallery and box people get well mixed there.

MIXED AT THE DOOR.

"Do you understand the little allegory? People will wake some fine morning within a few weeks and find that Jay Gould hasn't a penny and the Standard Oil Company is in the dirt and Carnegie has his bread to beg and there isn't a dry-goods house or a mill or factory that can pay ten cents on the dollar. There's a great building going up yonder, seven stories high; the money that built it's all gone, eaten up, drunk up; nobody really has any thing. You'll be as rich as the Vanderbilts or Astors to-morrow or the day after, for there's nothing for any of you. All bubbles, bubbles!"

"And then?"

"Anarchy."

The Citizen said it sweetly. Pencil in hand, he had quite regained his composure. "Blood?" I emulated his calm.

"I see what is coming, but I am not constrained to reveal."

"And after anarchy?"

WOULD YOU INCREASE YOUR BUSINESS? (BEFORE) (AFTER)

HOW CAN YOU DO IT?

ADVERTISE JUDICIOUSLY.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS.

"Psychic force will be the great ruling power."

"And who will exercise the psychic force?"

"That is hard to say, if they can't duplicate me. I possess it but I've no revelation to cheat the grave. But would you like this thing on a broad, philosophic basis?

"Here am I, as a little boy"— Again the pencil and again a circle, and again at the prospect of pictures the child—"This is the cyclopean eye, the ego, the individual. If the other boys jump five feet, I jump ten and cry 'hooray,' 'hooray!' I go into the woods with a barrel and I shout into the bung hole; this is the barrel and this is bung"—a circle, with a smaller circle inside—"I shout into the bung 'GEORGE FRANCIS TRAIN! GEORGE FRANCIS TRAIN!' And the woods echo it back, 'GEORGE FRANCIS TRAIN! GEORGE FRANCIS TRAIN!'" The Citizen illustrates with his hand trumpet fashion at his mouth and the child is pleased.

"I keep this barrel and I shout into it for five years. George Francis Train is very large and the world very small. Then I travel and I find the universe very large and George Francis Train very small. This is the universe"—and on the paper appears a big and very ragged circle, dwarfing the little ones. It has its name, "universe," written for identification inside—"Then I utterly abandon the ego; I give up the individual, and by so doing I attain unto the universal. By having nothing I have every thing; by being nothing I myself am all things.

"Nobody can understand that by repudiating the one I gather all things into the one, and so they call me a crank. That's my own word; I applied it first twenty-five years ago. A crank turns things. Men never call a fool a crank, it's always a man of genius.

"But this merging of self in the all is psychism. Mesmerism and hypnotism and magnetism and electric force are all branches of it. People are getting glimpses into it as into undiscovered countries, and you find knowledge of it lying round in scattered pockets. We are like Watt when he saw the cover of the tea-kettle rise and fall, and there was just about to flash upon him the power, steam; or like Morse when he got $40,000 for the last mile of telegraph line between Baltimore and Washington; or like Edison when he heard the humming of the wire and dreamed of the telephone. We are on the brink but nobody understands."

"And it is by this sacrifice of the individual that you have become able to exercise psychic power?"

"It is like the closure of the horse-shoe magnet; here let me show you"—The child bent her head sagely and followed with her finger the outlines of a roughly indicated horse-shoe—"The longer the bar remains across it the stronger becomes the magnetic force. Now I have barred my system against animal food for sixteen years. I take my coffee and my cheese and my bit of cracker three times a day. Sometimes I think of doing without food, but I am not sure that one sound apple can live untainted in such a barrel of rotten ones. Yet my power increases. When I went round the world I did not ask the captain of the steamer to put on extra coal to enable me to beat the record, but he did it, psychic force compelled him."

THE CLOSED HORSESHOE.

"And how in future will this psychic force control the world?"

"A woman writes me that she has received a revelation of a new religion, of which I am to be the god; it would amuse you to see the letters I get from women. But, seriously, if the future can not duplicate me, if it can not find the universal in the individual, the all in the one, it must make much by combining the many. Suppose one person has a little psychic force; two working together will have more. Here"—and the patient paper once again received a circle—"is the radius of the influence of one. Here"—and a second circle inclosed the first—"is the wider influence of two. Now, you can add three, four, any number of psychic forces. Suppose a psychic convention of one hundred. Now if sixty of you who are weak or, perhaps, only six of you who are strong, think that a certain person must be chairman, he will be psychically compelled to rise from his seat before a word has been spoken and take the desk of the presiding officer. Psychic forces can produce unthought of results because they can be worked by combination."

CIRCLES OF PSYCHIC INFLUENCE.

"But first you see—"

"But first my psychic vision shows me the end of the present social system; now, to-morrow may be. Take this souvenir; it is a 'sen,' a Japanese cent of the new coinage. It can hold all psychic force, for I have carried it round the world. Have a hole bored through it and wear it for a mascot, then no harm will come to you in the dread days that are at hand."

CUT THIS OUT. PASTE IT IN YOUR HAT.

The baby had dropped asleep on a sofa, the old gentleman nodded over his paper, the lovers had gone out for a stroll. There was a young man waiting to see Train. I have kept the mascot, but I will go shares with you.

LABOR-SAVING DEVICE.

A Convenient and Useful Combination Closet and Table.

Cooking is fatiguing enough at its best estate, but doubly so when performed under the discouragements and inconveniences that abound in so many kitchens. The needless steps that are taken from pantry shelves to closet shelves, and from closet shelves to firkins, boxes and paper bags, would in a year's time count up to an alarming number of miles. Much of this waste of time and strength can be saved by gathering every conceivable thing in the shape of ingredients and utensils into one spot, convenient to the cook's hands. A means of doing this is illustrated herewith in a combination of closets and kitchen table. The small drawers above are for such materials as rice, tapioca, oatmeal, the small packages or boxes of spices, salt, etc., the name of the contents being marked on the outside of each. The closet above is for kitchen crockery, and should be provided with shelves, which will also accommodate some other articles if desired. One of the smaller closets below is for tin dishes, the other for those of iron. The larger drawer will accommodate a great many things that will suggest themselves to the housekeeper, such as knives, forks, spoons, egg-beaters, potato-mashers, cake-cutters and a host of small articles. This drawer should be partitioned off into a number of compartments, to keep these articles from becoming indiscriminately mixed. The large closet below may be used for such bulky articles as molasses, sugar and others. A barrel of flour can be placed under one of the end shelves, which can be hinged to turn up. It will be found a great convenience if a marble slab is obtained for the other shelf, for use in kneading bread and such other operations as require a perfectly clean, hard-polished surface. Hard wood can be made to answer very well. If one of the patent flour-holders and sifters combined is used, it can be placed on the back part of the kneading shelf. These shelves ought to set out an inch from the main table, to avoid a crack that is not readily kept clean. They should be supported by stout iron brackets.—American Agriculturist.

THE total number of stars, of which some knowledge may be obtained by the optical appliances now available, according to Prof. Lockyer, is from 40,000,000 to 50,000,000. Of these only about 6,000 are visible to the naked eye, equally divided between the two hemispheres.

HOME-MADE ARTICLES.

A Dainty Pin Cushion, a Slumber Ball and Memorandum Slate.

The dainty pin cushion shown in Fig. 1 is made as follows: Cut a piece of muslin six by six and a half inches; sew it into a bag, fill with bran, emery and, or sawdust, and fasten it to a piece of cardboard four inches long and two and a half inches wide, to keep the center of the cushion flat at the bottom. A small piece of embroidery in silk on canvas, two by three and a half inches, is laid diagonally across the top of the cushion. Any bit of goods of the right size can be used, instead of embroidery, which in this case is a combination of shaded lines in peacock blue in four shades, moss-green, and rose-colored filling silk or embroidery silk. Then the cushion is laid in a bag made of a piece of light blue surah, ten by seven inches, plaited around the ends, as shown in the cut, and the cushion finished with two bows of light blue satin ribbon. Other colors and materials may be substituted for this cushion. It makes a charming little trifle for the toilet table of either lady or gentleman.

Fig. 2 is a handsome slumber-ball, made of very narrow red and yellow ribbons sewed together in stripes three and a half inches wide, and alternated with stripes three inches wide made of red and blue ribbons. The length of the ribbons should be eleven inches, and the whole width of all, when sewed together, twenty-seven inches. Gather the ends of the ribbons closely together and fill the ball with feathers, bits of paper, silk ravelings, hops, rose leaves, or any thing generally used for pillows, even cotton will do. Finish the ends with silk pompons, or cut the ribbons about two inches longer, fringe the ends an inch, and gather them just above the fringe.

FIG. 3.

Fig. 3 is a pretty memorandum slate for the office, library, or housekeeper's room. It is small, ordinary school-slate, the frame of which is gilded, and a cluster of flowers painted in one corner. A bow and ends of old-gold satin, to which a sponge and gilded slate-pencil are attached, completes the useful little souvenir, which may be decorated in any color, in the same style. A slate for lead-pencil writing, made of white enameled board, may be used instead.—Ohio Farmer.

FINE NEEDLE-WORK.

The History and Some Specimens of Mountmellick Embroidery.

In early times it was very necessary to find work for idle fingers—work which should serve the purpose of putting in the time and also furnish a livelihood for the family. This embroidery was introduced into Mountmellick, Queens County, Ireland, about sixty-five years ago, by Jane Carter, herself an Irishwoman, and it has since become the staple industry of the women in that locality. An industrial association now provides work for more than fifty women. All sorts of beautiful articles of underwear, bed-linen and children's clothes are made of it, and its cheap price promotes the ready sale of it.

Firm Irish linen is used and white knitting cotton of different numbers, both of which will withstand the ravishes of the laundry. Knot stitch, satin stitch, outline and rolled stitch are used wherever the pattern calls for it. In the toilet set, all of them are used. The rolled stitch is made by wrapping the thread around the needle. The fringe is knitted of the coarse cotton and proves a very effective finish. No color but white is used upon these. Toilet sets and table furnishings can be made of it; also many beautiful garments for children's use.—Christie Irving, in Farm and Fireside.

Tomato Soup with Vermicelli.

Blanch a cupful of vermicelli in a small quantity of boiling water for ten minutes. Drain in a colander. Have boiling three pints of strained stewed tomatoes, to which add the vermicelli. Salt to taste, and just before serving add one cup of thin cream. Let all boil up for a moment, then serve at once. Macaroni may be used in the place of the vermicelli, but requires longer cooking, varying from twenty minutes to one hour, according to its age. When macaroni is used, it should be broken or cut into very short lengths.

"CAN I ASSIST YOU, MADAM?"

This is an every-day occurrence; she is taken with that "all-gone" or faint feeling, while calling or shopping. The cause of this feeling is some derangement, weakness, or irregularity incident to her sex. It matters little from what cause it may arise; instant relief may always be found by using

HONORING THE DEAD

Gen. Sherman's Body Placed in the Casket To-Day.

THE FINAL FUNERAL ORDERS.

Completing the Details for the Military Parade in New York.

Thousands of Veterans to Escort the Body to the Train—Grand Army Men in Towns Along the Route to Salute the Old Commander—A Riderless White Horse to Bear the Accoutrements.

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—The remains of General Sherman were placed in the burial casket this morning and taken to the front parlor on the first floor. The great commander is dressed in the full uniform of a general of the United States army.

Until Thursday none but members of the family will be permitted to see the body. The smallness of the house will admit of only a few viewing the remains and only those will be admitted who make a special request. This will be the only occasion upon which the remains can be seen.

During the morning hours there were but few visitors at the house, but in the afternoon a number of military officers called, among them being General Miles. He arrived about 3 o'clock and remained in the house about half an hour.

The funeral car will be placed on the regular St. Louis fast express of the Pennsylvania Railroad at 6:30 Thursday evening. The train is expected to arrive in St. Louis Saturday morning at 7:30. Only a few of the General's family and relatives will go to St. Louis, and only one car will be used by them. President Roberts, of the Pennsylvania, has tendered the family the use of his special car. No extra cars will be allowed for those desiring to accompany the remains on their westward journey.

The members of the G. A. R. at Pittsburg desire to pay special honors to the remains in that city. A telegram was received from Senators Quay and Cameron asking for this special privilege. The reply to the telegram was not made public.

Preparations for the funeral are actively being carried on by Generals O. O. Howard, Henry W. Slocum and Daniel Butterfield, the committee having the matter in charge. The exact arrangements for the assigning of position of the troops who will escort the body from the family home to the Pennsylvania railroad station in Jersey City, have not been completed, but the committee to-day will announce the positions each organization will hold in the procession. It is expected that 12,000 or 15,000 men will be in line.

Minute guns will be fired from every military and naval station near the harbor from the hour set for the starting of the funeral parade to the time the coffin is put aboard the train. It is requested also that church bells generally be tolled during the same time.

The President and his Cabinet have been formally invited to participate in the ceremonies, and the question will be considered at to-day's Cabinet meeting. The invitation will undoubtedly be accepted, unless the state of public business renders it impossible for the President and his Cabinet to leave the capital on that day.

A white horse will go in advance of the caisson bearing the General's military trappings.

Waiting for the Son.

Senator Sherman will return from Washington to-morrow morning. Much anxiety is expressed as to when the Rev. Thomas Ewing Sherman will arrive. The steamer on which he sailed is expected to-day. He has not, it is thought, learned of his father's death.

The Line of March.

The column will form on Eighth avenue at Seventy-first street, extending down to Fifty-seventh street on the avenue, then through Fifty-seventh street to Fifth avenue, and continuing down the latter as far as necessary to get all the organizations in line.

A JOYFUL ORDER.

Issued by Gen. Sherman to His Army Announcing Lee's Surrender.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 17.—Col. John E. Marshall, of this city, who was attached to the late General Sherman's headquarters during the famous campaign which included the march through Georgia, makes public to-day Sherman's order issued to his army announcing the surrender of Lee. The draft of the order was given to Colonel Marshall. It reads:

HEADQUARTERS, SMITHFIELD, N. C., April 12, 1865.

Special Order No. 54:

The General commanding announces to the army that he has official notice from General Grant that Lee has surrendered his army on the 9th inst., at Appomattox Court House, Virginia.

Glory to God and our country, and all honor to our comrades in arms towards whom we are advancing. A little more labor, a little more toil on our part, the great race is won and our government stands regenerated after the four long years of bloody war.

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major-General Commanding.

The order is written in pencil and bears evidence of careful study as there are several erasures and interlineations. For instance, instead of "his entire army," Sherman first wrote "the army of North Virginia," and "our government" was substituted for "our beloved country."

Public Buildings to be Closed.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—As the ceremonies incident to the funeral of General Sherman will occupy Thursday and Saturday of this week, the President has directed that the public buildings in Washington and St. Louis be closed on Saturday, the latter being the day of the funeral.

Official Order to Grand Army Posts.

RUTLAND, Vt., Feb. 17.—The following order has been issued from the headquarters of the Grand Army of the Republic in this city by the Commander-in-Chief: "Posts in the route of the funeral train of General Sherman from New York to St. Louis will form at their respective railroad stations and salute the train as it passes."

GOV. HILL'S MESSAGE.

He Officially Announces General Sherman's Death to the Legislature.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 17.—The following message was sent to the Legislature by Governor Hill last night:

It is my sad duty to announce the death of General William T. Sherman at his residence in New York city on Saturday last. His distinguished patriotic services and pure life have endeared him to the hearts of his countrymen, who everywhere now deeply mourn his loss.

In this hour of universal expression of a nation's sorrow and esteem it is proper that the Legislature of the State, which in recent years has claimed him as a resident and in which he died, should manifest by appropriate action the people's grief at his death and the affection and respect with which they cherish his memory.

I have already directed that, as a mark of respect for the distinguished dead, the flags upon the Capitol and upon all the public buildings of the State, including the armories and arsenals of the National Guard, be displayed at half mast until and including the day of the funeral, and I commend to your consideration such further action as in your judgment may fittingly indicate the sense of appreciation and loss. (Signed) DAVID B. HILL.

Appropriate resolutions were introduced in the House and Senate and adopted by a rising vote.

ACRES OF MINES ON FIRE.

Rumor Says that Fourteen Persons Have Been Burned to Death.

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Feb. 17.—Fifty-six acres of the Moyer mines, owned by W. J. Rainey & Co., are on fire.

Three persons are known to have been burned to death. How many more men have perished the management of the mines are unprepared to say, and rumor here fixes the loss of life at not less than 14 people.

There was no explosion in the mines, as has been reported. The mine has never been known to contain gas, and while the authorities here are discreetly silent, it is known that the striking cokers throughout the region are charged with having set the mines on fire to secure a general suspension of the Rainey works.

The names of the unfortunates who are known to be in the burning mines are: James Waddell, aged 22; John and Robert Rohoval, aged 12 and 14 respectively.

Those who claim to know say that 10 or 12 Hungarians were also in the mine when the fire started but the officials of the mines say all the miners have been accounted for except the three mentioned above.

The mine is now being flooded. Borland's creek, six feet wide and swollen has been turned into the mouth of the shaft and with an utter abandon for the unfortunates entombed. Since daylight the great body of water forming a solid shaft six feet in diameter has poured into the ponderous tomb and yet it is not full.

There was no effort made to save the men in the mine. The fire cut off all possible hope for their rescue and as the company has no list other than their pay-roll they are as completely mystified as outsiders.

ADMIRAL PORTER'S FUNERAL.

Imposing Ceremonies Before the Interment at Arlington.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—The funeral of the late Admiral D. D. Porter took place with full naval honors this afternoon, the remains being interred in Arlington, in a spot selected by the dead hero himself.

The pastor of St. John's Episcopal Church, Rev. Dr. Douglass, read the service at the Porter residence. A salute and naval ceremony occurred at the grave. Commodore Ramsey was master of ceremonies.

Rear-Admiral Kimberly was in charge of the escort, which numbered 3,000 marines, soldiers and militia.

Resolutions by the Press Club.

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—The members of the Press Club passed a resolution of sympathy and condolence for the family of General Sherman. The resolution referred to the fact that General Sherman had made his last public speech at the recent annual dinner of the club; and eulogized his memory for the interest he had always taken in the press and journalism generally. The resolution was presented to the General's family.

BIG FLOODS FEARED

The People of Johnstown Getting Away in Boats.

HALF THE CITY UNDER WATER.

Many Bridges Swept Away and Horses and Cattle Drowned.

Work in the Cambria Iron Works Suspended—Snow in the Conemaugh Valley Eighteen Inches Deep—A Large Log Boom Liable to Break at Any Time—Thieves at Work Again.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 17.—The steady down pour of rain has had the effect of more or less seriously impeding travel on almost every railroad that enters this city. The largest landslide that has occurred on the Baltimore & Ohio road in several years now covers the tracks for a distance of 800 feet and nearly half that in depth near West Newton. The tracks will not be cleared for several days. The Youghiogheny River is bank full and rising. A big flood is feared.

Reports from Greensburg are that the streams in that vicinity are over their banks, and that many people living on the lowlands have been driven from their homes.

The Manor Valley and Alexandria branch railroads are covered in many places with water and slides. The lower end of Greensburg and the fair grounds are submerged. Already the damage to property is great.

FLOOD AT JOHNSTOWN.

Water from Stony Creek Flowing Over the Business Part of the City.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Feb. 17.—Stony creek and Conemaugh river are higher now than at any time since the flood. The Poplar street bridge, Cambria railroad bridge, a temporary bridge at East Conemaugh, Eleventh Ward bridge and the partly constructed Walnut street bridge have all been destroyed.

The cellars in the lower part of Johnstown are filled with water, and work at the Cambria Iron Company's plants has been suspended owing to the water backing up through the sewers into the mills and furnaces.

The water is now two feet higher than at any time since the great flood and is still rising. A telegram from Shade Creek says the large log boom is liable to break at any time. Should this happen the destruction of bridges would be complete. The Poplar street bridge left its piers last night with a loud crash.

The snow up the Conemaugh Valley is 18 inches deep, while in New Somerset County it is several feet. The water from Stony Creek is beginning to flow over the business part of the city.

The People Alarmed.

The people are thoroughly alarmed, and as the water is as high as on the day the flood just preceding the bursting of the reservoir, the scenes and incidents very much resemble those of that time. Boats were brought into requisition, and women and children hurriedly taken to places of safety.

A notable difference, however, was observed in the actions of the people as contrasted with the great disaster. Instead of trying to save their furniture and property, a few necessary articles of clothing only were taken, and then the houses were locked up and abandoned.

Narrow Escapes.

Fully one-half the city is under water, the depth varying from two to ten feet. By the aid of wagons, horses and boats the people were taken out safely. The gradual rise in the rivers and the early alarm that was taken largely contributed to the safety of this work, although a number of narrow escapes were reported.

Several horses and a number of cattle were drowned, but all live stock has now been taken to higher ground.

In addition to the destruction of all the bridges the chief loss has been the damage of household goods. When the alarm came people hurriedly closed their doors and decamped.

Thieves have taken advantage of the situation and are reaping a harvest.

Morley's Motion Defeated.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—In the House of Commons Mr. Morley's motion that the House censure the Irish Executive for its action in the Tipperary prosecutions was lost by a majority 73. Gladstone made a vigorous speech in support of the motion, and triumphantly proclaimed the downfall of the government party. For the first time since their rupture the Irish members were grouped together. Mr. Parnell exchanged words with Messrs. McCarthy and Sexton, but ignored Mr. Healy.

Victoria May Witness Ivanhoe.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—Queen Victoria has given a half promise to attend a performance of Ivanhoe. The Queen is said to be much interested in the new opera. She has not attended a theatrical performance since the death of Prince Albert, and it was supposed that she would continue this rule throughout her life.

MARRIAGE OF MILLIONS.

The Astor-Willing Wedding in Philadelphia Takes Place To-day.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 17.—John Jacob Astor and all of his millions was married at 1 o'clock to-day to Miss Ava Willing, the Philadelphia beauty, at her home, No. 511 South Broad street.

The ceremony was remarkable for many things, and will have a conspicuous place in the history of the social doings of the age. It was attended with more display than any wedding that has ever taken place in Philadelphia, and the reception which followed was the largest that has ever taken place in this country.

The marked prominence of the families of the young couple, aside from the vast wealth of Mr Astor, made it a matter of national interest. The Willings have been identified with the formation and growth of this city almost as closely as the Astors have been connected in a like way with New York.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN JACOB ASTOR.

The decorations were made on a scale that bewildered even the New York society people, accustomed as they are to lavishness in everything.

There were about 1,400 New Yorkers present and a full thousand of Philadelphians. The wedding ceremony itself, however, was witnessed by only 150 people, including the immediate relatives and the very intimate friends of the Astor and Willing families.

Mrs. Willing has refused to say anything about the wedding gifts, but it has been learned from another source that in diamonds alone over $700,000 worth have been received.

The wedding tour includes a six weeks' trip to the South and a journey abroad in the early part of April.

ANOTHER BASEBALL WAR.

The Association to Break Away from the National League.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 17.—A special meeting of the American Baseball Association is in session here. Its object is to oust President Thurman and admit Cincinnati to membership.

The club owners are incensed beyond measure at what they term the duplicity of President Thurman in voting with the National League's member of the National Board against returning Bierbauer and Stovey to the Athletics, and they are now busily engaged in preparing for aggressive warfare.

Another meeting of the American Association will be held in Philadelphia to-morrow, at which Chris Von der Ahe will be present.

Struck by an Immense Rock.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 17.—A huge rock was loosened from the hillside by heavy rain and fell from the bluff known as Duquesne Heights at 8:30 a. m., crushing into a passenger coach of the Washington, Pa., express on the Panhandle road, instantly killing Clara Fleming, aged 18, a resident of Washington, Pa., and a student at Duff's College, this city. J. F. Donahue, a student at Pittsburg Medical College, occupied the seat with Miss Fleming and received injuries on his head and legs. Miss Mamie Baldwin, aged 17, of Washington, had her arms and side badly hurt. This is the second time that a train has been struck by falling rocks at this point.

More Russian Tyranny.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 17.—The Rabbi Markus and a Jewish physician named Chassanovitch, both living in Grodno, have been arrested and exiled from that province for two years for sending to the government in behalf of the Jewish community a petition demanding redress for an outrage committed by a Russian doctor, who is accused of having branded the word "Thief" in three languages upon the forehead of a Hebrew boy who was charged with having stolen a small quantity of fruit. The petition set forth that the case would excite the indignation of the civilized world.

They Feel the Coke Strike.

READING, Pa., Feb. 17.—Through the scarcity of coke many furnaces along the Lebanon Valley are now receiving and using anthracite coal. Some furnaces are using part anthracite in order to bridge over the trouble. Should the strike in the coke regions continue two weeks longer, it is predicted that every stack in the Lebanon and Schuylkill Valleys will have to resort to anthracite coal for fuel.

Accidentally Shot Her Twin Sister.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Feb. 17.—Two twin sisters, Ida May and Winnie May, 14 years old, were playing with a loaded revolver at their parents' home during the morning when the revolver suddenly went off in the hands of Ida. The bullet entered the right eye of the other sister and lodged in her brain. She died a few hours later. The shooting was entirely accidental.

Farrell is After Fitzsimmons.

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—Patsy J. Farrell of Pittsburg, who first came into public notice by defeating Dominick McCaffrey in Philadelphia, is eager to arrange a match with Bob Fitzsimmons. He has authorized a gentleman well known in sporting circles to meet Fitzsimmons and arrange a match for $5,000 a side.

They Want United Ireland.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—The Anti-Parnellites held a meeting and resolved to institute legal proceedings to, if possible, secure control of United Ireland, the Dublin newspaper recently taken possession of by Mr. Parnell.

MR. QUAY'S DEFENSE

The Pennsylvania Senator Answers His Accusers.

AN ADDRESS OF EXONERATION.

He Declares in the Senate that All the Charges Are False.

He Says the Assaults Carried With Them Their Own Refutation—Explanation About the State Securities—His Action as a Member of the Board of Pardons—Was Not Bribed in '87.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—After the secret session of the Senate the doors were reopened, and Senator Quay, being recognized, spoke as follows:

"Never, probably, since Alexander Hamilton was hunted to his death, has one in public life been pursued so persistently and malignantly. The field of the malign efforts has been the entire Union. The assaults were of a character so monstrous as largely to carry with them their own refutation. Were it otherwise, I could not remain, nor would my constituents permit me to remain, a member of this Senate.

Confronts His Accusers.

"Partly through indifference to slander, a weapon which has never had a place in my political arsenal, and partly by the advice of friends who urged me to treat the assassins of my reputation as undeserving of open controversy, I have permitted, without comment, the passing of the flood of falsehood. Its malodorous waters chance at this time to be quiescent and now, when no heated political conflict is raging, when neither hope nor fear can be dashed, I choose briefly to confront accusation with truth. I would not allude to this subject in this presence had not many members of the other House made it a matter of debate there. Looking to the future, and knowing that the records of this Congress will remain for other generations to read when most of us composing it will be forgotten, I choose, for the truth of history and for that which is dearer to all men than riches, to dispel the mist of falsehood with the clear light of fact.

It is a Final Statement.

"It is not my purpose to weary the Senate by a rehearsal of each detail of the mass of misrepresentation. Nevertheless avoiding prolixity, I will endeavor to make this statement specific and so complete as to be final. If any thread in the fabric of falsehood remains unsevered, it will be because this tissue of lies is so complex as to ravelled with contradiction and confused with insinuation, that some insignificant portion has escaped my attention.

That Embezzling Story.

"The first assertion concerning my official acts is that, at some time, or continuously, between the years of 1879 and 1882, I, alone, or acting with another or others, used the money of the State of Pennsylvania for speculative or private purposes. I denounce that statement as absolutely false.

"In 1877, the Democratic party of Pennsylvania elected a State Treasurer and an Auditor-General, the financial officers of the Commonwealth. A year or two later, pending their terms of office, I became engaged in stock operations. In some transactions I was associated and jointly interested with the gentleman who was at that time the cashier of the State Treasury. These transactions proved seriously disastrous, and I was compelled to pay a portion of his losses, as well as my own.

"In doing this, it became necessary to supply an alleged deficiency he had caused in the Treasury. As a portion of the fund for this purpose I borrowed $100,000 from the gentleman who is at present my colleague in the Senate. I gave him my judgment note therefor, the amount of which was paid to him dollar for dollar years ago. My connection was simply with the aid of friends to raise the necessary funds to supply the deficit.

His Friend's Widow's Case.

"Collateral to this last accusation is a charge that I defrauded or attempted to defraud, the widow of a deceased friend. This also is absolutely false. There breathes not upon the earth man or woman who can truthfully say that I ever defrauded, or attempted to defraud, him or her of a dollar. Upon this point, charity for dead and the living forbids my making any personal explanation.

The Pardon Board Charge.

"I come now to what might be called the fourth ground of criticism of my public conduct. This was my action as a member of the Board of Pardons of Pennsylvania in voting for the pardon of certain members of the Pennsylvania Legislature and others, upon whom sentence had been passed for bribery.

"My vote as a member of the Board of Pardons was in accordance with the law and with the action of my colleagues, and was compelled by the fact that the sentence imposed by the Court upon the persons pardoned was illegal. Upon this point the Attorney-General filed his written opinion with the decision. I am frank to say that I have no regrets for that vote, and would repeat it under the same circumstances. Even had not the sentence been unlawful, it is my opinion that the ends of justice had been fully served by the conviction of the defendants. One of the gentlemen involved has within the last few weeks received the unanimous thanks of the Pennsylvania Legislature for important services rendered humanity and the State.

Ancient History Next.

"It is necessary to pass to history somewhat ancient in order to dispose of the nebulous charges of bribery and corruption as a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature nearly 15 years ago, in connection with an action for libel against the editor of the Pittsburg Commercial. With chivalric gallantry, my assailants have been careful to emphasize the fact that the case was never pushed for trial. They fail to state that the libel was retracted and that the defendants plead nolle contendere, paying the costs of the case and the fees of the counsel.

Denies Every Charge.

He denounced the charge that he received $80,000 from the liquor dealers of Pennsylvania to secure legislation in their interest as an absolute falsehood and concluded his address as follows: "I deny every charge seriatim in toto. They are false and foul to the core."

THE CLARK STRIKERS.

They Now Claim that the Struggle Has Only Just Begun.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 17.—The striking spinners of Clark's O. N. T. thread mills at their regular meeting discussed the offer made by the Clarks to take back 80 men.

The spinners say that they are as firm as ever, and all must be taken back if any. They also say that the strike is only beginning.

The 600 women employed in the mill are preparing a set of grievances under the direction of Miss Ida Van Etten, and will present them to the Clarks in a day or two.

President Harry Woods and Secretary Chris Hughes of the Spinners' Union, held a conference with State Senator McDonald, of Hudson County, during which they stated their case in full to the Senator. Gregory's deputies are still on the cars patrolling the streets in the neighborhood of the mills.

Capt. J. F. Kelly, of the Second Precinct, who is in command of the police, says that he does not expect any further trouble.

John Johnson and Patrick Rohan, charged with inciting to riot at Kearney, are committed by Justice Weed in Jersey City to await trial.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The situation in Canada is more encouraging for the Liberals.

Stephen Billings, who cut his throat in the jail at Freehold, N. J., on Sunday, is dead.

The Kansas Legislature has passed a bill to prevent the holding of lands by aliens.

John R. Russell, who was a police commissioner in New York in Boss Tweed's time, is dead at New Brunswick, N. J.

Dr. J. S. Musserasmith, a retired medical director of the United States Navy, died at Lancaster, Pa., last night, aged 81.

The indicted Jersey City election officers were called for trial in the United States Court at Trenton, N. J., to-day.

The examination of the prisoner Stadler, charged with the latest Whitechapel murder, resulted in his being remanded until Feb. 24.

An unknown man was found dead in the New York Central freight yard at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., last night. He is supposed to be a freight brakeman who fell from a passing train and been run over.

The Newfoundland Legislature adopted resolutions denouncing the action of the British Government in refusing its sanction to the treaty for reciprocity negotiated between Newfoundland and the United States.

A Dunkirk, N. Y., dispatch says the Chautauqua Women's Relief Corps unanimously adopted resolutions calling on the Legislature to pass the bill introduced by Senator Coggeshall enabling soldiers' widows, army nurses, etc., to vote.

The young man who was found drowned at the Battery in New York has been identified as James P. Lenny, a telegraph operator of Rutland, Vt. He left home a week ago for New York to obtain employment but had not succeeded in his mission.

The First National Bank, of Ayer, Mass., which is $25,000 short as a result of Cashier Spaulding's misdoings, did not open for business during the morning, as announced. The bank is ready to resume and will do so as soon as permission is given by the government.

The Rev. J. H. Kyle, Independent, State Senator of South Dakota, was elected United States Senator by a combination of the Democratic and Farmers' Alliance members of the Legislature. He is a native of St. Lawrence County, New York State, is about 37 years old, and is a Congregational minister of broad views.

Failure of a Drygoods Firm.

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 17.—J. Mandelbaum & Sons, a large drygoods firm in this city, have made an assignment.

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—The only recreation offered for Washington's Birthday, afternoon and evening, will be skating at The Crescent.

—Miss Jane Thomas, of Mount Bethel, will tender a wine supper at her home this week, to about 65 guests from New York city.

—At the Netherwood fire of Sunday night, a crank and chain was lost from No. 1 hose cart. The finder is requested to return them.

—Always first to fill the requirements of the people, Hallock & Davis are already selling a line of fine Spring derbies for gentlemen.

—The damage of the recent storm to local telephones has all been repaired, and every telephone in Plainfield is now in working order.

—Chas. Frey, of 100 West Fourth street, was fined $5 for drunkenness and disorderly conduct, this morning, on complaint of his wife Mary.

—Prior to his removal across the street, Willett of 6 Park avenue is offering his present stock of boots, shoes, rubbers, etc., at especially low prices.

—"Resolved that the McKinley Bill is a benefit to the laboring classes," is the subject for debate at the Y. M. C. A., next Thursday. The debate will be open to all.

—To-morrow evening a Missionary Concert will be held in the Crescent Avenue chapel. The Rev. W. J. White, a Missionary from China, will speak of the work in that country.

—E. A. Embury advertises in another column for a tenor voice for a church choir. A small salary will be paid at the start. Applicants will be received at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-morrow evening at eight o'clock.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

John L. Hall, formerly the leading lumber merchant of this city, and now of Williamsport, was in Plainfield yesterday.

The Rev. C. E. Dunn, of Albany, N. Y., assisted at the funeral services of Thomas Worth, to-day. Mr. Dunn is a nephew of the deceased.

Advices from the family of Carmon Parse state that he is in a precarious condition at Knoxville, Tenn. His brother-in-law, Dr. Daniel C. Adams, started Sunday evening for that city in answer to a telegram announcing the serious illness of Mr. Parse.

A Flourishing, Reliable House.

A suite of offices that rank among the handsomest in the city has just been fitted out in the large brick warehouse of the Plainfield Produce Company, at 29 and 31 North avenue. This company has developed a large and flourishing business, and has been established on such lines as to deserve the most hearty public patronage. The proprietor of the concern is A. D. Thompson, whose associates in the careful and efficient management of the business are H. E. Rider, general manager, and O. P. Vosseller, bookkeeper. The house makes specialties of various goods in its line, a notable one being the Raritan Mills feed and meal, the merits of which are told in an advertisement in another column. W. J. Tunison is the courteous and trustworthy salesman of the produce and feed department.

She is Coming Again.

Having closed a most successful engagement at the Eden Musee, New York, and being detained in that city while rehearsing her new part in one of the most popular of the plays now running in that metropolis, Miss Jennie Houghton has consented to appear at the Crescent rink, this city, at both the afternoon and evening sessions of next Monday, "Washington's Birthday." She will exhibit some of her latest imported costumes, and introduce some new evolutions on skates.

Friends of Dumb Animals.

The Union County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals will meet this evening at the residence of Dr. G. W. Bailey, 1165 East Jersey street, Elizabeth. The meeting is for the purpose of effecting a re-organization and perfecting plans for more effectual work. Former members, and all interested in the work, are invited from this city.

Plainfielders Win Both Games.

The Olympics, of this city, bowled the Lenoxs, of Newark, on the Montgomery alleys in that city, Saturday evening. This was the result: First game—Olympics, 685; Lenoxs, 683. Second game—Olympics, 769; Lenoxs, 667.

Ladies, clean your kid gloves with Mather's glove cleaner; for sale only by Mrs. J. C. Dyer, 38 West Front street. All the latest novelties of the season in fine Millinery. Correct styles.

WESTFIELD'S AMATEUR CHORISTERS.

They Give in This City Their Second Concert, and Astonish the Natives.

The Casino was filled, last evening, upon the occasion of the second concert of the season by the Westfield Musical Society. Including the chorus of over one hundred, there were present about 500 Westfield people together with a number of Plainfielders. Had it not been a rehearsal night of the Plainfield Choral Society, and so near its own concert, many more music lovers of this city would have been present.

To those of the latter who were there, the wonder grew how complete a chorus could be found in so comparatively small a town. The male chorus was particularly good. They rendered much better, probably, than could the male chorus of the Plainfield society, "A Father's Lullaby," written by their conductor, C. Mortimer Wiske. The full chorus, however, cannot be praised so highly as that—its singing of Buck's "Hymn to Music" was rather crude—but, as intimated above, the Society as a whole did remarkably well.

The rendering of a selection of Gounod's by Mrs. Annie Mooney-Burch, the chorus and the orchestra, would not have found favor with the composer, possibly, but it was fairly well done, nevertheless. Mrs. Burch is still the sweet soprano she was when as Miss Mooney she sang with Mr. Burch from the same piece of music, at Music Hall, some years ago. Mr. Wm. J. Lavin, the tenor soloist of the evening, has a voice without fault except that its upper register might be slightly criticised. He will sing again in this city, March 5, with the Plainfield Choral Society in "The Crusaders." The orchestra of the evening was composed principally of talented amateurs. In a "Serenade" played by a trio of the instrumentalists, the cello part of Mr. Clauder deserved the applause it evoked.

In this matter of encouragement by the audience, the Westfield vocalists are favored beyond comparison. The subscribers applaud everything, and heartily, too. In all the Plainfield concerts of this season there will not be as much encouragement and expressed appreciation from the audiences combined as there was in just that one of last night alone. The officers and managers of the Westfield Society are as follows:

President—James O. Clark.

Vice Presidents—Joseph Sherman, Jr., and Robert Luckey.

Recording Secretary—Wm. B. Dudley.

Financial Secretary—Charles H. Day.

Treasurer—John W. Beebe.

Librarians—L. A. Lightfoot and Rollin P. Grant.

Board of Managers—James O. Clark, John W. Beebe, William B. Dudley, Robert Luckey, Martin Welles, Rollin P. Grant, D. S. Bennett, Cranford, Frank S. Rogers, Elizabeth, L. A. Lightfoot, C. W. Harden, C. Mortimer Wiske, Charles H. Day, John W. Sensom, T. J. Nichols, Fanwood, S. Edwin Beebe, B. H. Chamberlain, Joseph Sherman, Jr.

The New Metropolitan Success.

One of the most distinct and popular successes in the metropolis this season is Mr. Gunter's dramatization of "Mr. Potter of Texas." It is a bright, sparkling comedy drama, closely following the lines of the novel, and is destined to exceed in popularity any of the favorite modern successes.

The only thing to be regretted is its limited engagement at the Star Theatre, where it is now playing to the capacity of the house.

The acting is far above the average, which is not surprising, as Mr. Frank W. Sanger, manager of the handsome Broadway Theatre, personally selected each member of the cast with the greatest care, and directed the production; that he succeeded in securing one of the strongest companies now playing in the city, can be seen from the following list of metropolitan favorites: Frank Mordaunt, Minnie Seligman, Sydney Drew, Louis Massen and Henry Holland.

Roman Catholics in New Jersey.

From statistics recently compiled it appears that in the two Roman Catholic dioceses in New Jersey—Newark and Trenton—there is a total Catholic population of 215,000. In the Newark diocese there are 202 priests, of which sixty-four are regulars and 138 seculars; 118 churches, twelve stations, seventy-five chapels, six orphan asylums, 758 orphans, one theological seminary, twenty-six theological students, three colleges, eighteen academies, seventy-nine parochial schools, 25,914 parochial school pupils, and a Catholic population of 170,000. In the Trenton diocese there are eighty-six priests, eighteen being regulars and sixty-eight seculars; eighty-six churches, forty stations, one orphan asylum, sixty orphans, two theological seminaries, twelve theological students, one college, six academies, twenty-eight parochial schools, 6,500 parochial school pupils, and a Catholic population of 45,000.

Big Orders for Jersey Oak.

The lumbermen at White House, Hunterdon county, on the line of the Jersey Central, are rejoicing over the fact that an English firm has contracted with a local concern for half a million feet of Jersey oak, to be delivered in six months. At the same time the New Jersey Central ordered 250,000 feet of the same timber, and orders from wagon and boat builders are plentiful. There will be employment for the lumbermen and prosperity for the little hamlet through the year.

Disorders of the throat and lungs, no matter what their origin, can be relieved and cured by the use of Hires' Cough Cure, the safest and most pleasing pulmonary remedy in the world.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD'S NEW RAILROAD.

Improved Suburban Traffic Begun Over the Lehigh Valley Tracks Yesterday.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company began running trains over its new line from South Plainfield yesterday morning, connecting with the Pennsylvania's track at Broad street in Newark. This reduces the distance about five and a-half miles between South Plainfield and Newark. There will be another connection established in May, next year, from Waverly, which will lead to Buffalo, giving Newark another outlet to the West. Perth Junction, Menlo Park, Metuchen and Rahway will be served with trains of either the Pennsylvania or Lehigh Valley roads. The new line opens up Lyons Farms (hereafter to be known as Lehigh) to railway communication. The road runs directly into the property recently purchased of Newark for a union freight station and drilling grounds, and connects without deflection with the new lines built across the meadows.

It is in contemplation to remove the present coal dumps toward Waverly, and it is prophesied that some day all that tract will be an immense coal yard. The Pennsylvania Company has purchased from Governor Abbett and others a strip of land east of the main land, and is now grading it with a view to straightening out the track at the curve opposite the coal pockets and laying a fourth track. The Waverly yard, which is being used to make up local freight trains and trains going west, is constantly being extended.

The new road from South Plainfield passes through Picton, in the outskirts of Westfield, through Roselle, and thence to Lehigh (formerly Lyons Farms) and Newark. All Lehigh Valley trains will hereafter connect with the Pennsylvania tracks at Newark, instead of Metuchen as heretofore.

Mr. Fountain Flatly Contradicted.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—At the meeting held in the Baptist church Sunday evening, I understand a Mr. Williams made the statement (using Mr. Fountain as his authority) that "out of 150 who signed the pledge at Hope chapel, only 3 have kept it." I emphatically contradict such statement. He also gave the impression that the men who work at both shops in that vicinity and live there, spend their money in saloons. I beg to state, there is a small percentage who do so, but the majority who do live there and who signed the pledge, belong to the Hope chapel Sunday-school and are among the best citizens of that locality. Mr. Fountain knows this to be so, as he is a teacher there himself. He ought to be very sure of such statements before he makes them public, as I think it is the duty of every Christian to lift up the fallen—not to advertise their downfall. While we admit a large number did violate their pledge, it would be only just to give credit to those who did keep it. The cause of the violation can only be accredited to the licensing of saloons in that part of town.

JOS. M. HAWKINS,
Late Sec'y Hope Chapel Tem. Society.

Somebody Has Been Misleading the Rev. Mr. Mitchell.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—While reading your report of the meetings held Sunday evening to protest against increasing the number of licensed saloons in Plainfield, I notice that one of the speakers quotes me as authority for a statement that reflects seriously upon the character of the men in our employ, most of whom are honest, industrious and of steady habits.

I have never had a conversation upon the subject of temperance with any of the gentlemen who spoke at the Sunday evening meetings, and while utterly opposed to granting a liquor license in the vicinity of our works am compelled, as a matter of justice, to refute a statement which may cause the public to misunderstand the character of most of the 500 men employed in our works.

Respectfully,
DAVID W. POND,
Pres't The Pond Machine Tool Co.

No Sabbath for Railroad Men.

The newspapers from towns along the Jersey Central are complaining that "it seems as if Sunday was entirely ignored by the railroad and telegraph companies. The workmen of these concerns say that they are compelled to work on Sunday or lose their job on the railroad, and last Sunday too there was a gang of men passing through this place repairing the telegraph line. Now if the railroad makes it compulsory for their men to work on Sunday and thus violate a divine law, should not there be enough Christianity in our law-making men to make it compulsory to keep the Sabbath day holy? Think of it."

Faithful Employes on a Pleasure Trip.

Vincent L. Frazee started to-day on a week's pleasure trip to Boston and other points, in company with his brother-in-law, Augustus Hetfield, who is one of the Central Railroad Company's most trusted employes, he having been in that company's service the past twenty-three years. Mr. Frazee has been a faithful employe of J. S. Cutter the past fifteen years, and it is but just that both have a slight relaxation from business. The large circle of friends among whom the two are so highly esteemed hope that both of them may have a splendid time.

I highly recommend Salvation Oil; it has done more for my wife in one night than physicians have accomplished in years. FRED. A. SCHULZE, 612 W. Fayette Street, Baltimore, Md.

Assemblyman Demarest Gives Bail.

NYACK, N. Y., Feb. 17.—Assemblyman Frank P. Demarest, who was indicted last week for forgery by the Rockland County grand jury, was taken to New City and there gave bonds in the sum of $3,000 to appear for trial. The time for the trial has not yet been fixed.

The Twenty-second Victim.

A COLORED MAN FOR DOG CATCHER.

And Brand-New Meeting Rooms of Modern Style for City Council Purposes.

The adjourned meeting of the City Common Council Monday evening was devoted entirely to routine matters, and nothing especially important was transacted.

All the Councilmen were present. Because of the illness of janitor Mundy, W. R. Mattox took his place. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved. The protest adopted at the temperance mass-meetings held Sunday night, against increasing the number of local liquor licenses, was presented and referred to the Committee on Laws and Ordinances. The document was nine yards long, and bore 504 signatures.

A communication from the Y. M. C. A., notifying the Council that they had adopted plans for a building on Front street, at the head of Peace, and that the work of construction was to be begun in the Spring, was referred to the Committee on Streets, who will consider the matter in connection with the proposed extension of Peace street.

Jacob Vochl was granted the privilege of erecting a frame barn at 70 East Front street.

A petition against the proposed change of the hackmen's stand on North avenue, with the hackmen's signatures attached, was filed.

Remonstrances from the Harned Academy, the Society of Friends, and the Reform Club, against granting local liquor licenses, were filed.

A remonstrance against the proposed change of the hackmen's stand, signed by many score of citizens, was filed. The first signature was read by Clerk Coward as Seymour Smith, which greatly surprised not only the lobby but President Smith himself. Considerable amusement was manifested when Mr. Coward explained the mistake, and read the name as it was actually recorded, Seymour Marsh.

The appointment of Frank Conde as special policeman was confirmed, as was also that of Thomas H. Martin as special policeman and dog catcher. Mr. Martin told THE PRESS this morning that he would gladly accept, even if other colored men had refused to qualify.

The election of Frederick S. Moore to membership in Hook and Ladder Company No. 1 was confirmed; also that of Townsend Rushmore, Edward H. Ladd, Lewis G. Timpson and Charles J. Fisk to membership in Alert Hose Company.

Edward Rushmore was granted the privilege of erecting an iron-covered shed in Rheaume's coal yard.

Messrs. Hetfield, Gallup and Roberts, the committee to whom had been referred the matter of procuring City offices and a Council chamber, reported that for a yearly rental of $600 the city could procure, under a five year's lease, two floors in the new Coward building at Nos. 9 and 11 Park avenue. This would give a large, airy Council chamber, a court room, and offices for the Mayor, Police Captain and Fire Board, with every convenience, including heat and light, at a cost of $40 less than is at present expended for inferior, smaller, and fewer apartments.

The matter of accepting the proposed change of headquarters was laid over.

An application from James J. Day to sell liquors at wholesale at 97 West Third street was referred to the Committee on Licenses.

A resolution from Mr. Moffett was adopted, that the $420 benefits assessed on Orchard place property-holders because of the extension of that thoroughfare be paid over, as soon as collected to Peter and John Emmons, who had been damaged that much.

A resolution from Mr. Hetfield, was adopted, that the inlet of water to the fire-well at Somerset and Front streets, be changed from the fore-bay of French's mill to the race-way, at a cost of not more than $60.

The Council adjourned to Feb. 26.

THE SOMERSET CONTEST.

Counselor Marsh Has Senator Keys Under Cross-Examination for Three Hours.

The Senate Special Committee in the Somerset county contested election case sat again last evening, and after listening to further extracts from the evidence taken in the case adjourned to Wednesday afternoon.

Senator Keys appeared before the Committee and gave testimony to establish his claim of residence in Somerset county before 1887. He showed a deed for one of his farms in Somerset county, purchased in 1886. The other was bought in 1887. It is the deed for the latter which misled the Republicans into supposing the Senator's residence began here in 1887. He swore that he did not vote in New York in 1887, as charged. The Committee considered his evidence quite convincing.

Counselor C. A. Marsh, of this city, who is for Charles A. Reed, of North Plainfield, the contestant, submitted Senator Keys to a cross-examination that lasted three hours. The defense have finished their case.

He Denies That He Is Either a Bigamist or an Avenger.

Mr. Staats, whose wife has run away with Mr. Wilson, wishes to deny Mrs. Wilson's story that he (Staats) has another wife whom he deserted in New Brunswick. Mr. Staats says that when he was nothing but a boy he lived with a young girl in New Brunswick. Since then she married and has grown up children, and so has he. Mr. Staats also says he does not intend to shoot Wilson.

WHAT THE PASTOR'S PAPER SAYS.

Items of General Interest from the Rev. Mr. Mitchell's "Visitor".

Another issue of The Visitor, published by the Rev. Charles Bayard Mitchell for circulation among the people of the Methodist Episcopal church, is at hand, bearing the date of Feb. 17. From it THE PRESS selects the following paragraphs, as items of interest to the entire community:

R. W. Mahaffee and family will soon remove to Brooklyn.

The first Sunday in March will be the time of our next Communion.

We expect to open the Monroe avenue chapel the first Sunday in April.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. C. Cokefair have recently enjoyed a visit from their niece, Miss Thompson.

Mrs. Alfred A. Taft has returned from visiting her sister-in-law, Mrs. William Cookman, of Philadelphia.

Five hundred people of the Trinity Reformed congregation have signed a protest against granting a saloon license for Amphion Hall.

Mrs. L. B. Kellogg, of Emporia, Kansas, and Mrs. Chas. H. Aull, of Pittsburgh, Pa., sisters of the pastor, are visiting at the parsonage.

S. O. Doane is rapidly regaining his health and strength, but Mrs. Doane has been quite ill. We are glad to learn that she is improving.

A very large circle will be saddened to learn that Clinton Van Vliet has sold his home on Prospect avenue and removed with his family permanently to New York.

This community has recently been called to observe the wisdom of the prophet's words to Hezekiah: "Set thy house in order, for thou shalt die and not live."

A very pleasant social under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Mission Band was held last Thursday evening at the hospitable home of Edward Winter, 27 East Fifth street.

Leonard Mulford, of Vineland, formerly of this city, and long one of our church ushers, recently visited friends and relatives here. He reports his father, David H. Mulford, as much better.

Mrs. Ann Dickinson has presented to the Epworth League a fine steel engraving of John Wesley standing at his mother's grave. It will be framed and hung in the parlor of Vincent Chapel.

A large number of our ladies have signed a petition to the Legislature, praying that no laws be enacted more favorable to the saloon, race-track and other forms of gambling in this State.

During the past year, under high license, there were about three times as many arrests for drunkenness as during the year before, when there was no license, though many reported places of illegal sale.

The Rev. George Angleman has had a very successful revival in his church at Rosedale, Kansas. He has greatly prospered in his work since entering the ministry, and his relatives and friends here are rejoiced.

The following constitute a committee appointed by the Official Board to have in charge all matters pertaining to the Monroe avenue chapel: Jas. W. Jackson, President; Walter M. McGee, Secretary and Treasurer; Chas. B. Mitchell, James McGee and John Corey.

Five of our Councilmen have expressed their opposition to an increase of saloons. The key of the situation is with one of the remaining six. Will not at least one of them step out boldly and ally himself with the temperance people of the community, and win for himself worthy praise?

Walter M. McGee has been elected superintendent of the Monroe avenue chapel Sunday-school. The union Evona Sunday-school, with its efficient corps of teachers and goodly number of pupils, will move into our chapel and constitute the larger portion of the Sunday-school, which will be under the management of our church.

Since the Mills revival meetings 535 have united with the various churches on profession of faith. Many joined by letter, but the above number may be considered new converts. The pastors think that a good per cent. of the card-signers have united with the churches. We give the number joining each church. The figures may not be exact, but nearly so. First Baptist, 90; First Presbyterian, 50; Methodist Episcopal, 91; Crescent Avenue Presbyterian, 65; Seventh-Day Baptist, 5; Grace Protestant Episcopal, 19; Trinity Reformed, 86; Congregational, 30; Park Avenue Baptist, 20; Holy Cross Protestant Episcopal, 20; Bethel Mission, Presbyterian, 6; Hope Chapel, Presbyterian, 53.

I HAVE been a great sufferer from dry catarrh for many years, and I tried many remedies, but none did me so much benefit as Ely's Cream Balm. It completely cured me. M. J. Lally, 39 Woodward ave., Boston Highlands, Mass.

AFTER using Ely's Cream Balm two months, I was surprised to find that the right nostril, which was closed for over twenty years, was open and free as the other, and can use it now as I could not do for many years. I feel very thankful.—R. H. Cressenghan, 275 18th street, Brooklyn.

Dropped Suddenly in a Hotel.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 17.—Charles E. Morrill, senior partner of the Morrill Leather Company, of Boston, died suddenly at the Powers Hotel in this city. He arrived in the city yesterday, and in the evening appeared to be in the best of health. Death resulted from a stroke of apoplexy. His son will come here and take charge of the remains.

Barbers Cannot Shave on Sunday.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 17.—The decision of the lower court in the case of the Commonwealth against Waldman has been affirmed by the State Supreme Court, thus upholding the law against barbers shaving on Sunday. Waldman had been fined for violating the law by a magistrate, and he appealed from the decision.

Staub Takes His Office.

HARTFORD, Feb. 17.—Nicholas Staub, Democratic candidate for Comptroller, has taken his office. Chief Clerk Moore turned it over to him on his demand at noon on receipting a certificate that he took the oath of office on Jan. 12. This is the oath taken in the Senate chamber before the House declaration.

The Coroner's Jury Disagreed.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Feb. 17.—In the case of Carrie Gerard, who died, as alleged, from malpractice, the coroner's jury, which has been investigating the matter at Wappingers Falls, disagreed. The coroner will procure additional evidence and hold another inquest, probably to-morrow.

Queen Liliuakalani is Ill.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 17.—In a private letter received here from Honolulu it is stated that Queen Liliuakalani has been ailing of late. To guard against contingencies that might arise in the event of her death, Princess Kaiulani, heiress apparent, has been requested to return from England, where she is now.

Charged With Infanticide.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 17.—Franciska Gorski, the Polish woman charged with infanticide, was arraigned, and offered to plead guilty to manslaughter in the third degree. The court called for the evidence taken before the grand jury and will decide whether to accept the offered plea.

The American Wrestler Defeated.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—Antonio Pierre, of Greece, wrestled at Glasgow last night with Tom Cannon, of America, for the championship of the world. Pierre beat Cannon, two falls to one. Cannon protested against the decision, but his protest was not allowed.

Jem Smith Challenges Mitchell.

NEW YORK Feb. 17.—A dispatch from London says that Jem Smith posted $250 at the Sporting Life office and issued a challenge to fight Charley Mitchell for $2,500 a side. The challenge has created quite a sensation among sporting men.

Old-Fashioned.

New Boarder—See here, I can't stand this lamp. It smells like an oil refinery. What sort of a lamp is it anyhow?

Chambermaid—That's a center-table lamp, sir.

New Boarder—Well, take it away, and bring me one of the old-fashioned kind. I don't care for these new-fangled scenter table-lamps.—N. Y. Weekly.

"CIRCUMSTANCES ALTER CASES."

Man-Afraid-to-Talk-Back-to-His-Mother-In-Law (flourishing knife)—Wah, me bad Injun; take pale face scalp.

Mr. Man-Out-West—Don't trouble yourself, my friend; allow me to hand it to you.—Life.

The Deadly Compositor.

A New York editor who wrote an obituary notice of a man of some celebrity said: "He began life as a legal practitioner, but was diverted from it by a love of letters." He did not see the printer's proof, and was confronted the next morning with this: "He began life as a legal politician, but was diverted from it by a love of bitters."—Demerara Argus.

Limitations of Genius.

Book Publisher—I have looked over the manuscript which you submitted to us, and find a good plot, many well-drawn characters, and some picturesque word-painting; but the love-scenes are cold and stilted. Can't you improve on them?

Authoress (wearily)—I am afraid not. I'm married.—N. Y. Weekly.

Mr. Slim's Precautions.

"Isn't that Chollie Slim in the window?"

"Yes. What on earth has he got on his lap?"

"Paper-weight, I guess. It's a very windy morning."—Jury.

Too Much of a Good Thing.

Patient—I just dropped in to see you, doctor, to say that I am entirely recovered.

Doctor—Is that so? I wish you would drop in oftener.—Puck.

Trouble with the "R."

Miss De Jones—Aw you a lovah of hawmony, Mr. De Lewd?

Mr. De Lewd—No—er—cawn't say I am. It don't seem to agree with me as well as oatmeal for bweakfast.—Grip.

Not to Be Divulged.

Jawkins—How did you get that black eye?

Hogg (who has recently had some business in court)—Oh, that's a secret of the jury-room.—Judge.

AN AZTEC SACRIFICE.

Specimen Scene in Mexico in the Days of the Montezumas.

Fifty-two years constituted the Aztec cycle, says the Detroit Free Press. To this cycle was added a complement of thirteen days, intended to make the solar and civil years agree. It was believed that the world would come to an end on the last night of a cycle, and that the gods, if merciful, would light their fires on the distant mountains. If the world did not come to an end the Aztecs congratulated themselves that it would survive another cycle, and the thirteen complementary days were passed with feasts, sacrifices and bacchanals.

In the temple of Huitzilipochtli there was to be a gladiatorial combat, which was nothing less than a sacrifice. The six ministers of the ceremony were at hand. Topiltzin, the chief among them, clad in a crimson vestment, with a crown of vari-colored feathers, was performing the duties that preceded a sacrifice to the god, and the others, with white robes bordered with black, their faces hideous with somber pigment and mouths painted white, assisted him. A crowd filled the stone walls of the temple to witness the spectacle, surging with impatience about the temalcatl (or round stone platform, eight feet high) where the combat was to take place.

The victim, a prisoner of war, is brought in. Armed with only a short spear and shield, he is placed upon the temalcatl, tied by one foot and confronted by an Aztec warrior, fully armed. The flat nostrils of the victim are distended, his black eyes burn with desperation; his coarse, black hair straggles about his face, and his thick purple lips quiver as he views the well-armed soldier before him.

At a word they fall to the fray. The spears clash, and they fight like demons—the victim with the desperation of certain death, the soldier to uphold his valor among his comrades.

Suddenly, realizing how unequal the contest, and that his fate is sealed, whatever the outcome of that battle, the prisoner throws away his shield and spear, and presents his breast to the soldier's weapon. A pause, a blow, and the victim falls heavily to the stone.

In a trice the priests, with frenzied shouts, and hair streaming about their demoniacal faces, are upon the temalcatl, and have borne the dying man to a block of green jasper, on whose convex surface they throw him. This is the sacrificial stone, and Topiltzin, who now takes the name of the god to whom he sacrifices, opens the breast of his victim, tears out his heart and offers it, still palpitating, to the sun.

Then the bleeding trophy is placed in the hollow mouth of the idol of Huitzilipochtli, and the lips of the statue daubed with blood. The dead man is decapitated and his head deposited in the Tzompatli, an ossuary where the skulls of sacrificed prisoners of war are set into the walls; the soldier claims the body for his own, and bears it away for the delectation of himself and his anthropophagical comrades.

The Aztec annals that come down to us are glutted with scenes like this.

BURGLED FOR A WAGER.

A Society Man Steals Silver from Swell Houses to Win a Bet.

"I heard the other day a good story, which my informant believes to be true," writes the "Man About Town" in the New York Star. "I give it for what it is worth: A young man about town made a bet of five hundred dollars that he could visit a number of fashionable receptions on a single afternoon and carry off five hundred dollars' worth of silverware. According to the terms of the bet he was not to visit any house where he was known. He merely picked out a list of receptions from a society paper, called a cab and started on his predatory expedition. At the first house he was about to take a silver-mounted brush from the men's dressing-room when an application of the teeth convinced him that the article was not worth the risk. Accordingly he dropped the brush and contented himself with some other article. He visited three or four places, and at each took something of value. Finally, just after he had slipped several spoons into his pocket at one place, a big man with a heavy mustache said to him: 'Have you every thing you want?'

"Affecting to understand the other to refer to the eatables, he of the bet answered: 'Yes, thank you; I'll not eat any thing more.' When the young man left the house his questioner, who was a detective, saw him get into the cab and heard the instructions given to the driver. When the maker of the bet arrived at the next house he went to the dressing-room and promptly began pocketing silver. But in the midst of this the detective emerged from under the bed and attempted to arrest the supposed thief. The latter, however, being an athlete, shook off the detective, tripped him up, and when those in the house reached the scene succeeded in persuading every one that the detective was the guilty man. This accomplished, the young man hastened home, did up his plunder in packages addressed to the owners and sent each package home by a messenger boy cautioned to deliver his packages and answer no questions. The audacious young man won the bet and escaped arrest."

The Solar Record.

At precisely twelve o'clock every day the Naval Observatory at Washington telegraphs the time all over the country. The instruments of the Western Union are in the room where the computations are made, and just three and a half minutes before noon, operating ceases in telegraph offices all over the country, at great loss and inconvenience sometimes. The wires are then put in unbroken connection with Washington. A note of warning is sent in advance, and at the second when the observer notes the passage of the sun over the seventy-fifth meridian, the electric current flashes the news all over the country, and thousands of clocks—seven thousand in New York City alone, it is said—are daily regulated by this record of solar time.

Ready to Make an Impression.

Father—Sarah, I don't like that dude who calls here to see you.

Sarah—I don't see why not, pa. I'm sure he bears the impress of a gentleman.

Father (wiggling his foot)—If he comes again he'll bear the impress of another gentleman.—Boston Herald.

Why He Didn't Want to Hear It.

Giles—I want to tell you a joke I heard when I was in Europe last summer.

Jagway—Don't want to hear it, old man.

Giles—Why not?

Jagway—Just like jokes of all foreigners, too far-fetched.—Boston Herald.

"None So Blind," Etc.

Tramp—Can't you give me something to eat, lady?

Lady—Are you willing to spend some time at the wood-pile?

Tramp—Yes'm. I'd jes as soon eat out there as in the house.—Boston Herald.

Free Coinage His Forte.

"On this financial question, are you in favor of the free coinage of silver?" asked a passenger on the Erie road, of his neighbor.

"In favor of it! Why, sir, I've done seven years twice and five years once for it!"—Munsey's Weekly.

Washington's Eyes.

Small Boy—Mamma, was General Washington blind?

Mamma—Of course not. Where did you get that idea?

Small Boy—Nurse took me to th' Old Ladies' Home to-day and showed me a woman that he kissed.—N. Y. Weekly.

The Right Men.

McCorkle—The Government of Australia still offers $125,000 reward to the person who can kill off the rabbits there.

McCrackle—Yes; I notice that several physicians are trying for the prize.—Munsey's Weekly.

Real Acting.

"Do you consider Francis Billson a good comedian?"

"Good! Why he's wonderful! He's the greatest actor in America! You should just see him fall off a chair!"—West Shore.

One Can But Try.

Old Parkrich—Should I let you have my daughter, do you think you are able to keep her, sir?

Young Man (doubtfully)—I'll do all I can, sir; but you know this is Chicago.—N. Y. Sun.

A Ward in Chancery.

"The Indian is one of the wards of this Government and should be treated as one."

"Yes, sir. So far we have kept the poor fellow in chancery half the time."—Puck.

Neglecting His Opportunities.

Day—I wonder why Undertaker O'Rourke failed.

Weeks—He did not know enough to stand in with the doctors, and nobody died.—Munsey's Weekly.

An Artist Herself.

He (an artist)—I would ever so much like to paint you!

She—I thank you very much, but it is not necessary, because I paint myself. —Texas Siftings.

Fixed as the Stars.

"To-morrow's my sister's birthday."

"How old is she, Johnny?"

"Same as ever. She ain't changed a bit since I've known her."—Harper's Bazar.

LAW UNTO HIMSELF.

John I. Davenport Tells a Story About General Butler.

How the Clever Commander Brought Secretary Stanton to Terms—Triumphant Yankee Shrewdness—General Butler's Force Bill of 1875.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

A gentleman of less than medium stature sat in the smoking-car of the Congressional limited express train, running between New York and Washington, on January 12. He had bright black eyes and was of slender physique. He wore a skull-cap and his lap was filled with newspapers. After reading all the New York evening papers he crossed his legs, and opened a novel. It evidently proved uninteresting, for he finally closed it, threw it into a seat at his side, and began conversation with a friend on his left. He had a remarkable flow of language, and he was full of reminiscences. His gestures were quick, nervous and illustrative.

Gradually the conversation drifted back to the war. The slender gentleman, although boyish in appearance, and wearing a tiny black mustache, had been an officer in the army of the James. He was a great admirer of General Benjamin F. Butler. He asserted that the General was one of the most remarkable commanders of the age, and cited incidents of his career in proof of his assertion. All were well worth relating. One, however, impressed itself upon the mind of his listener, and is given from memory.

No one doubts that General Butler is a man of ready expedients and of great executive ability. In his career in the army, he followed no beaten paths. To accomplish the object sought, he made his own laws, and saw to it that they were carried out. He sought no instructions from Washington, but tried to accomplish what he was sent to do in his own way. He supported not only his army, but his government, by supplies drawn from the enemy. This was illustrated by his career in New Orleans. He found the city sullen and unwilling to accept the situation. Its streets were filthy, its levees were honeycombed, and a pestilence was threatened. There was no law. The city was sunk in dejection. Lawlessness prevailed.

Martial law was first declared. After that a code of municipal regulations was drawn up. A tax was levied upon the business men. Those who took the oath of allegiance to the United States were not taxed as heavily as those who did not take it. The taxes, however, were rigidly exacted. All manner of supplies for the Confederacy were confiscated. A fund was quickly established to clean the streets and maintain municipal regulations. But this was not all. Over forty thousand dollars was expended for a hospital, and money was used to buy army and other supplies.

The regular army officers were astonished. They had never before seen a legislating General. Butler waited for no orders from Washington, but took the reins in his own hands and drove ahead regardless of protests. One day he sent for General Godfrey Weitzel.

"I want you to go down to Fort Jackson," he said, "and repair the fort."

General Weitzel demurred.

"This is not the way to do," he replied. "The proper way is to seek an appropriation from Washington. Then ou want the authority of the War Department upon a recommendation of the Board of Engineers. There is no unexpended appropriation made for the repair of Fort Jackson, and you have no authority to make the repairs."

HE MADE GESTURES.

"Well," Butler replied, "you must go down and repair the fort. The safety of the city requires it. I will take care of the appropriation."

Weitzel again demurred. Butler urged; and finally General Weitzel said that he would resign before he would undertake such a work without law.

Butler knew Weitzel's worth as an engineer officer. There was no better in the army.

"Now, Weitzel," said he, "sit down at that table. Write the strongest protest that you can make, saying that you only do this by my imperative command, and upon the distinct understanding that I alone am responsible."

After much hesitation General Weitzel sat down and wrote the protest. Butler indorsed it as correct, and the engineer officer thereupon promised to go down and see to the repairs at Fort Jackson.

Nevertheless, he was still doubtful as to his course. He went over to General Strong, who held a prominent position under General Butler, and who, like Weitzel, was a West Point graduate. Strong afterwards fell in the assault on Fort Wagner, and was buried by the Confederates under the bodies of his black troops.

Weitzel explained the situation and implored Strong to go over and reason with Butler. Strong did so on the instant. Butler listened to him for several minutes, and then broke in with the words: "Strong, I've had trouble enough with Weitzel. Don't bother me with your advice. I don't need it. You are not ordered to Fort Jackson. Weitzel, try to attend to your own duties and allow other officers to attend to theirs. Fort Jackson must be repaired and Weitzel is the man to do it."

Strong departed crestfallen, and reported to Weitzel. The latter made no further protest. He gathered his men, went down to Fort Jackson, and put the fortification in complete repair.

When his work at New Orleans was completed General Butler returned to Washington. His books showed every cent that he had received while in command at New Orleans and every cent that had been expended. For all his expenses he had vouchers. He appeared before Secretary Stanton one day with his ledger and his vouchers. Stanton gazed at his cocked hat, his shoulder straps and his sword, and asked him what he wanted.

"I've just come from New Orleans," said the General. "I want to settle my accounts. Here are my vouchers and my ledger."

Stanton sent him over to the proper accounting officer in the War Department. That officer was a trim West Pointer, with an elegant mustache, a manly form and a polite bearing. The General threw down his ledger and laid his vouchers upon the table. The officer inspected the ledger. He looked at the expense account. Among the first items was the one of forty thousand dollars for fixing up the hospital. He checked it with his pencil. He passed down the column and began to check every item in it.

"WHAT DO YOU WANT, GENERAL?"

"What are you doing? Why are you crossing those items?" the General inquired.

"Disallowed, sir," replied the officer, with dignified emphasis. "There were no appropriations for them."

He continued checking one item after another to the evident surprise of General Butler. For some seconds he kept his off eye on the pencil and finally arose, put the ledger under his arm, stuffed the vouchers in his pockets and strode out of the room.

The officer, after recovering from his amazement, marched over to Secretary Stanton, and told him what had occurred. The Secretary sent an orderly after Butler. The General had hardly got out of the building before the orderly overtook him.

"The Secretary of War wants to see you, General," he said.

Butler turned and mounted the stairs, his sword jingling at every step. As he entered the Secretary's room, Stanton shouted: "Why, what's the matter, General? I thought you came for a settlement of your accounts."

"Well," replied Butler, "the trouble is quickly explained. I went to New Orleans, strengthened the levees, cleaned the streets, fitted up hospitals, repaired the forts and put the city completely upon its feet, without asking or receiving one dollar from the general Government. I raised the money myself. I made the city foot the bills. Here are my accounts. They represent every dollar that I collected, and they show how every cent was expended. I have the vouchers here. If I have collected any money which does not appear upon the ledger, or if I have expended any money for which there is not a voucher, I am responsible. Now, over and above what I have expended, I have $500,000 in my pocket, which I did propose to turn over to the Government as soon as my accounts were settled. But as my expenses are disallowed, I presume, of course, that my collections will be disallowed. Consequently the $500,000 does not belong to the Government. As it is thus without an owner, and I am in possession, I propose to keep it. The Government doesn't seem to need it. Good day, Mr. Secretary."

Thereupon the doughty General saluted and was about to sail out of the office of the Secretary of War, when Stanton recalled him. There was an informal conversation and an informal settlement on the spot. The Government got the five hundred thousand dollars and Butler's accounts were settled to his satisfaction.

Such was the story told by the boyish-looking gentleman in the smoking-car of the Pennsylvania train. The slender gentleman was John I. Davenport, Butler's provost marshal when commanding the Army of the James. The conversation opened with a discussion of the force bill and closed with this story of General Butler. It was rendered all the more interesting because General Butler framed the force bill of 1875, which was defeated by the masterly parliamentary tactics of Samuel J. Randall, and Butler's provost marshal framed the force bill of 1890, which has stirred the country to its innermost depths.

THE CHOCTAW HEREAFTER.

Primitive Religious Beliefs of That Tribe of Indians.

A son of the first missionary among the Choctaw Indians once related to me, says a Kansas City Star man, some of the primitive religious beliefs of the tribe, among them a version of a universal deluge, which, it was stated, was one of their oldest legends. Once, many years ago, it was night over the whole nation for a long time, and the whole nation despaired. After waiting many months a streak of light was discovered far away in the north, and the people rejoiced until they found to their horror that it was an immense mountain of water that was rolling down toward them. The flood killed every one but a few families, who, somehow or other, had been warned of it, and having built themselves a raft, were rescued.

From their earliest traditions the people have been taught to believe in a life after they leave this world. They believe that the spirit, the moment it leaves the body, is compelled to travel a long distance to the west, until it arrives at an immense chasm, at the bottom of which flows a very rapid, rocky and dangerous stream. This terrible gorge, which is surrounded on every side by great mountains, the soul has to cross on a "long and slippery pine log with the bark peeled off," the only passage to the "happy hunting grounds,' which lie beyond the dangerous bridge. On the bank of the stream, just at the other end of the log, there always stand six persons, who have reached the "happy hunting grounds," and who throw sharp rocks at whoever attempts to cross the treacherous log the moment the middle of it is reached. Those who have lived properly, according to the Indian idea of morals, have no trouble in crossing the log; the stones fall harmlessly from them and they reach the "happy hunting grounds," where there is perpetual day, without difficulty. There the trees are ever green, the sky cloudless, and the breezes always gently blowing; there, too, a continuous feast and dance are going on, the people never grow old, but live forever in perpetual youth. The wicked, when they attempt to cross the dangerous bridge, can see the stones which are thrown at them, and, in trying to avoid them, they fall from the giddy height into the awful gorge thousands of feet below the slippery log, where a rushing, boiling stream is tumbling over the great sharp rocks, filled with dead fish and animals which are continually brought around to the same place by the eddies and whirlpool. There all the trees are dead, the waters infested by poisonous snakes, toads, and other repulsive-looking reptiles; the dead are ever hungry but have nothing to eat; are always sick, but never die. There is no sun, and the wicked are constantly "climbing up by thousands on the sides of a high rock, from which they can overlook the beautiful country of the good hunting-grounds, the abode of the happy, but can never reach it."

Mexican Trickery.

The Mexicans on the border have an ingenious plan for cheating their Government out of postage. In Mexico the rates are high. For instance, it costs ten cents to send a letter from any of the river towns to the City of Mexico, or provinces south of there, and five cents to nearer points. The greasers are not at all lacking in trickery. Instead of paying the high rates of their own Government, they simply paddle across the river, buy a two-cent American stamp and mail their letters to any point in Mexico they please. They take a dollars' worth of trouble to save a few cents; but then the Government is cheated, and there is some satisfaction in that. The officials have tried to stop the business, but they couldn't do it.

TRICKS OF ACROBATS.

An Old-Time Tumbler Tells How to Turn a Somersault.

"What man or boy ever went to a circus or variety show, where a troupe of acrobats were on the bills, without having a vague sort of hankering to be able to throw a pretty somersault or a series of neat 'flips'? If his blood ever does flow through his veins at times faster than at others, it is when he sees a neat 'brother act' wound up with the 'roll over,' accompanied by the familiar 'Hiya! Hi-ya!' of the performers, and the band playing as if crazy."

These remarks were delivered by a short, stout little man, as he sat at a table in the bar of one of the quieter of the uptown hotels. Not ten years ago his name appeared on three-sheet posters in letters a foot high, says the New York Sun.

"Hard to learn? Why, bless you, no. All the talk about having to be double-jointed and without a backbone is bosh of the worst kind. A man certainly wants the stiffest kind of a back, and a good strong pair of legs, or he will never be a tumbler or leaper.

"Mind you, I don't allude to this contortion business; that's different. When I say the stiffest kind of a back I don't mean one that can't be bent to a reasonable extent, but one set up with good strong muscles—muscles which, when called upon for a little extra effort, will respond with some vim. We have often heard that it requires constant practice for years, dating almost from the cradle, to become a finished acrobat. Why, I never did a 'flip' in my life until I was eighteen years old, and if there was anybody in the ring who could throw a higher somersault, or get over more elephants than I could when I was twenty, I never ran across him.

"How did I learn it all? Easy enough. All you need is a set of 'lunges' and a mattress.

"May be you don't know what 'lunges' are. Simplest arrangement you ever saw. Just a broad leather belt, with a ring at each side, from which two light manilla cords run up through a couple of pulley-blocks screwed into the ceiling. The ends of the cords are held by somebody who knows what he is about, and that's all. With this rigging you can learn all there is to know about tumbling, from a plain handspring to the three-high somersault down to the bottom man's shoulders, and not risk your neck nearly as much as you do going down a toboggan-slide. Give me a man who is ordinarily active, who has a little pluck and perseverance, and I will teach him to jump up and turn over before he is two days older.

"You see, a man is heavier from his waist down than he is up above. When he gets into the 'lunges,' no matter how awkward his attempt is, he is bound to flop around right side up, providing the man who holds the ropes don't ease up on them too much. Why, it's as simple and safe as eating your dinner!

"The ability to throw a somersault, forward or backward, is the foundation on which all tumbling acts are built, and this is how to do it: Stand squarely on your feet. Don't keep them too close together, and be sure you have a good balance. Then rock forward a little until your weight rests on the balls of your feet, then give a sharp spring upward, at the same time lifting with the arms and shoulders. Practice this 'lift' a few times until you get the idea. You will find it will add a foot to the height of your jump. Now you are ready to turn over. The next time you jump up throw your hands high over your head and give your head a quick jerk backward at the same time. If the instant you feel your feet leave the ground, by drawing them up under you you will find that they will swing around so as to meet your hands, if you want to reach for them. Just catch hold of your knees and give a little pull and you are over.

"That's the 'back.' The 'forward' is on the same principle, only the head and arms are thrown forward after the 'lift.' The only hard part of it is to make a neat landing and not, after accomplishing the somersault, strike on your feet, and pitching forward, fall all over yourself. A little practice will enable you to know just when to expect to land, and then you can begin to put some style into your work. You are now in a fair way to become a gymnast. All the rest is easy when you once get command of yourself."

AN ANGEL UNAWARES.

The Wonderful Effect of Kindness on Humanity.

It is undoubtedly true that occasionally "one touch of nature makes the whole world kin." The New York World gives an instance that illustrates the truth of the old proverb. A news boy took the Sixth avenue elevated cars at Park place, and, sliding into one of the cross seats, fell asleep. At Grand street two young women entered the car, and took the seats opposite the lad.

The boy's feet were bare, and his hat had fallen off. Presently the younger girl leaned over and placed her muff under the little fellow's dirty cheek. An old gentleman in the next seat who had seen the kind act smiled, and, without saying any thing, held out a quarter, with a nod toward the boy.

The girl understood what he meant, hesitated a moment, blushed a little and then reached for it.

The next man, who had seen the act and enjoyed it, just as silently offered the girl a dime, to be used for the same purpose. A moment later a woman across the aisle held out some pennies, and before she knew it, the girl, with flaming cheeks, was offered money from every passenger in that end of the car, each smiling and enjoying the little episode.

The young girl quietly slid the amount into the sleeping boy's pocket, removed her muff gently from under his head without arousing him, and soon after rose to leave the car at Twenty-third street. As she did this, she included all the passengers in a pretty little inclination of the head, that seemed full of thanks, and the possession of a common secret. It was a very pretty little incident and will not soon be forgotten by those who saw it.

TAKING A LAST LOOK

Friends Gaze Sadly on the Dead Commander's Face

ORDERS FOR THE LAST MARCH.

Generals Howard and Slocum Issue Directions for the Funeral Procession.

General Sherman's Son Looked for To-Day—The President and His Cabinet Start from Washington—Brief Services Held Over the Dead Hero's Remains This Morning.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—The people who loved him so well were permitted to see General Sherman's to-day for the last time.

A glass cover was above the face and all that could be seen through the sombre frame was the face and bust clothed in the General's uniform, with yellow sash, and the right hand lying peacefully on the breast.

How grand a face it was! How high and broad the forehead, and what tracings of the soldier were written deep by the hand of time in the lines above the austere yet kindly mouth, and the bold, aquiline nose and adamantine chin!

At the head of the casket several tall wax tapers are kept burning, in accordance with the customs of the Catholic Church, and the last rites were performed by Father Taylor, of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, and his assistants.

To-day, if all goes well on the sea, the Majestic, having on board the Rev. Thos. Sherman, the absent son of the General, will reach New York and the mourning family will be again united.

Throughout the day there was a constant stream of visitors at the Sherman residence. Among the callers were ex-President Hayes, Mr. and Mrs. John Jay, A. Gieger, Secretary of the Russian Legation, Mrs. Gen. Custer, Mrs. Gen. Hancock and many G. A. R. men.

Many more flowers were received during the day. A pillow of violets was received from Mrs. Admiral Porter.

THE FUNERAL PARADE.

Generals Howard and Slocum Issue Their Final Order.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—The funeral arrangements were completed in the morning, and the formal programme was officially announced by Generals Howard and Slocum as follows:

The regulation escort, under command of Col. Loomis L. Langdon, First Artillery, will consist of one regiment, as infantry, to be composed of a batallion of United States marines, four companies of United States engineers, and six companies (foot batteries) of artillery; of a battalion of light artillery from the army and the National Guard of New York, and of two troops of cavalry from the National Guard of New York.

The remains will be received by the escort at the late residence of the General, 75 West 71st street, at 2 o'clock p. m. on Thursday next, the 19th inst. The body will be borne on a caisson, preceded by the following named pall bearers in carriages:

Major-Gen. J. M. Schofield, Major-Gen. O. O. Howard, Rear Admiral D. L. Braine, Rear Admiral J. A. Greer, Prof. H. L. Kendrick, Gen. Joseph E. Johnston, Major-Gen. H. W. Slocum, Major-Gen. D. E Sickles, Major-Gen. G. M. Dodge, Major-Gen. J. M. Corse, Major-Gen. Wager Swayne, Major-Gen. Stewart L. Woodford.

These pallbearers will accompany the remains as far as the train at Jersey City. Six sergeants will be detailed as bearers, and will proceed to St. Louis. The special escort of honor from the Grand Army, Lafayette Post, will form on the right and left of the caisson. The order of column, following the family and relatives, will be as follows:

1—The President and Vice-President of the United States.
2—The members of the Cabinet.
3—Ex-Presidents of the United States.
4—Committees of the Senate and House of Representatives.
5—The Governor of the State and the Mayor of the city of New York. (These officials will follow the family and relatives as representative mourners.)
6—The Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States and officers of the army and navy.
7—The Grand Army of the Republic.
8—The corps of cadets, United States Military Academy, Lieut.-Col. Hawkins commanding.
9—The National Guard, under Brig.-Gen. Louis Fitzgerald.
10—Delegations and representatives from Veterans, Sons of Veterans, and other organizations unassigned, under charge of Gen. David Morrison.

Brig.-Gen. Louis Fitzgerald has ordered out the entire First Brigade of the National Guard to participate in the parade. This comprises all the regiments in this city. About 150 marines and the Navy Yard band have also been added to the line.

Confederate Veterans Take Action.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—The Confederate Veteran Camp of New York held a special meeting at the National Park Bank building on Broadway for the purpose of taking action on the death of General Sherman. There was some discussion as to whether the whole camp should attend the funeral to-morrow or only a committee. Finally the latter was decided upon. Resolutions were adopted expressive of the determination to bury all animosity engendered by the late war and join in an expression of the loss that the nation has sustained in death of General Sherman.

The President and His Cabinet Start.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The President, all the members of his Cabinet, the committee from the House, a number of army officers and others left here at 3 o'clock this afternoon on a special train of Pullman cars over the Pennsylvania Railroad for New York to attend the funeral of General Sherman to-morrow. Another special train, carrying the Senate committee, will leave at 10 o'clock to-night over the same route for New York.

No Ritual at the Grave.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 19.—In accordance with the wishes of the family, the Grand Army funeral ceremonies or ritual will be omitted at the grave on the occasion of the Sherman obsequies. The regular army ceremonies will be carried out instead, and there will be no religous services whatever.

GRAND ARMY ORDER.

Commander-in-Chief Veazey Announces the Death of General Sherman.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—The following order of the Grand Army has been issued:

HEADQUARTERS G. A. R. (National) RUTLAND, Vt.

General Orders No. 18.

The Commander-in-Chief has the sorrowful duty to announce the death at New York, February 14, 1891, of the distinguished comrade William Tecumseh Sherman, general on the retired list of the United States army, and a member of Ransom Post 131, Department of Missouri, G. A. R.

The military record of this comrade is so well known that it requires no recital. He achieved the highest degree of fame as a soldier, and with his death the last of the three successive Generals, Grant, Sherman and Sheridan, passed away. His countrymen will honor his name throughout generations to come, and his comrades will ever cherish his memory.

He has always attended the National Encampments of this order, and his interest in its welfare was only exceeded by his regard for the men with whom he shared the hardships of his march and campaign.

The prescribed badge of mourning will be worn by officers when on duty for a period of 30 days from the receipt of this order as a token of respect to the memory of Comrade Sherman.

W. G. VEAZEY, Commander-in-Chief.

THE PRESIDENT'S TOUR.

He Will Take the Southern Route on His Trip to California.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The President has accepted the invitation of Senator Squire to visit the State of Washington on his return east from California. The President goes west as the guest of Senator and Mrs. Stanford.

The special train will go by way of the Southern route, stopping for a day at New Orleans and San Diego and a week at San Francisco. They will also visit the Senator's country place at Palo Alto.

The return trip will be made by way of the Northern Pacific. Those invited are President and Mrs. Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. McKee, Mrs. Dimmick, the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy.

STEAMER WRECKED.

Disaster on the Ohio River and Serious Loss of Life Feared.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 18.—The steamer Sherlock struck a Kentucky pier of the Chesapeake & Ohio bridge going down the river on a trip to New Orleans. She had on board 30 passengers and 50 or 60 of a crew.

She went to pieces and floated down to Fifth street, where she sank. The cabin floated down the river and at Riverside some of the crew got ashore in a skiff. Some were rescued at Fifth street.

It is not known how many are lost. A harbor steamer has gone down the river, and is momentarily expected to return with news.

A Steamer Disappears.

NORWALK, Conn., Feb. 18.—As the freight steamer Express loaded with a number of cars of the New England Terminal Company, was proceeding up the New York harbor she collided with another steamer, which is supposed to have immediately filled and sunk as nothing was seen of her after the collision. A number of the cars on the Express started rolling and before they could be stopped they had rolled overboard. The Express was damaged to the amount of $25,000. She is now at Wilson's Point.

The Railroad Issue Won.

READING, Pa., Feb. 18.—Fourteen members of the common council were elected here to fill expired terms. Of these the Democrats elected seven and the Republicans seven. The Democrats, however, have a large majority on joint ballot. The railroad issue was the principal question fought at the polls, and of those elected a majority are in favor of giving the Pennsylvania Railroad Company more extended privileges.

Discussing a Big Strike.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—The labor leaders of England and Australia are discussing a strike of all trades engaged in shipping, to extend to Great Britain and Australia. Ominous mutterings of the coming struggle are heard in all the leading seaports of Great Britain.

APPALLING FLOODS

Towns Partially Submerged and Much Alarm Felt.

RIVERS TEN HIGHEST IN YEARS.

The Danger is Apparently Passed at Johnstown, Pa.

Great Suffering in Many Pennsylvania Towns—Hundreds of Families Have Abandoned Their Homes—Washouts on Railroads in West Virginia—Factories Closed Down on Account of High Water.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Feb. 18.—The streams are increasing in volume and the people are becoming frightened, and those who have not moved are preparing to go.

At West Latrobe, the Loyalhanna covers an area half a mile wide, and much of the town is submerged, the water rising to the second and third stories of the buildings along the creek bottom. The buildings are already damaged, and as the rain still keeps falling it is feared they may be carried away altogether.

At Larimer, Irwin, Manor, Penn, Harrison City, Crabtree and other places the water is very high, and persons living in the lowlands are making preparations to move out.

In the low parts of this city all the cellars are flooded and Gillindor & Son's glass works are damaged. Bridges, fences, haystacks, etc., have been carried away. The aggregate loss will run up to the thousands.

RIVER MEN FRIGHTENED.

Nearly Every Town Along the Allegheny is Flooded.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 18.—Rain is again falling and the rivers, particularly the Allegheny, continues to rise and it is now feared that the disastrous flood of 1884 will be exceeded by the present rise of the rivers. Property owners along the rivers are now thoroughly frightened, and damage to property in the cities of Allegheny and Pittsburg will be very great.

At 11 o'clock the marks in the Allegheny River showed 31 feet and rising. River men think that at least a 33-foot stage will be reached and possibly higher if the present rain fall continues a few hours longer. Reports from points along the Allegheny and Monongahela Rivers are to the effect that nearly every town and island is badly flooded, and that hundreds of people have been compelled to flee from their homes. Vast quantities of logs, drift and buildings are coming down the Allegheny River, indicating that property for many miles up that river has suffered great damage.

All of the Baltimore and Ohio Railway branches and nearly all other railroads are shut down on account of washouts and slides innumerable.

Rolling mills, glass factories furnaces and manufactories by the score in this city have been flooded and work suspended.

Danger Passed at Johnstown.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Feb. 18.—It is understood that danger from high water has passed and further damage is not now probable. Stony Creek is stationary, while the Conemaugh River is slowly falling. All industrial establishments are closed, and business is at a standstill.

A later dispatch says that three dams in mountain streams above Johnstown, it is feared, may break and send acres of water and millions of logs crashing through the disaster stricken city.

Hundreds Are Homeless.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Feb. 18.—Railroad traffic has been suspended here, as the bridges are not considered safe. At Temperanceville, near here, the Chartiers Creek covers half the town, and is spreading. Hundreds are homeless, and since all the trains are tied up they can only seek the higher ground and take with them what few belongings they can carry in their hands.

West Virginia in Bad Shape.

WHEELING, W. Va., Feb. 18.—Everybody in Wheeling is preparing for a flood greater than any since the deluge of 1884. Reports from all sections of this State show heavy rains and small streams swollen. The railroads entering this city are all blocked by numerous landslides and outside communication is almost entirely cut off.

Abandoned Their Homes to the Flood.

JEANNETTE, Pa., Feb. 18.—A large number of persons in this place have abandoned their homes to the flood, and have sought personal safety on higher ground. Many bridges and houses have gone down already and the water is rising at this point very rapidly.

The Juniata Very High.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 18.—The Susquehanna river here is rising but no serious damage has yet resulted. The great volume of water from the north has not yet reached here. The Juniata river is 17 feet high at Newport and great alarm exists among its inhabitants.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

Royal Baking Powder
ABSOLUTELY PURE

POWDERLY STRICKEN.

He Falls from His Chair With a Slight Attack of Heart Disease.

TOPEKA, Kan., Feb. 18.—It has been known for some time that Grand Master Workman Powderly is subject to heart disease. Nevertheless this knowledge did not prevent the Knights of Labor who were at the meeting at Representatives Hall from being almost panic-stricken when Mr. Powderly was attacked by the disease.

It was just as he had concluded a speech that the attack came and he fell from his chair to the floor. Instantly there was great confusion, which was allayed, however, when it was learned that the grand master workman was not dead.

He was picked up and carried to an ante-room, where he received every attention. In a few minutes he recovered sufficiently to walk slowly to his hotel. To-day he is feeling as well as can be expected, and, beyond a certain lassitude, shows no effects of the attack.

DUNRAVEN WANTS TO KNOW.

He Questions the British Government About Certain Documents.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—Lord Dunraven, the champion of an imperial zollverein for Great Britain and the colonies, questioned the government in the House of Lords regarding the documents which the government had promised a few days ago to present, relative to the draft of a convention between Newfoundland and the United States.

Lord Knutsford, on behalf of the Cabinet, said a misapprehension had arisen on the subject in Newfoundland as to the course of the British government, which had been condemned for breaking engagements that never were made. Leave to negotiate did not imply imperial sanction of the results of the negotiation. The Canadian government was strongly opposed to the Newfoundland convention, and the imperial government had decided after mature consideration that the proposed convention should not, for the present, be completed.

DARING ROBBERY.

Thieves Secure a Large Amount of Money from a Railroad Station.

ROSEDOUT, N. Y., Feb. 18.—The most daring and well planned robbery that has been committed in this vicinity for some time occurred in the village of Walden on the Walkill Valley Railroad yesterday.

Two men drove up to the depot in the absence of the station agent, who had gone to dinner, broke open the money drawer, and secured between $30,000 and $40,000 from it. They then jumped into their vehicle and drove rapidly away.

They were followed by an officer, but as the latter was on foot they easily eluded him and disappeared. There is no clue to the robbers.

Arrested for Forgery.

NYACK, N. Y., Feb. 18.—Richard and Christopher Kelly, well known residents of South Nyack, have been placed under arrest, charged with forgery in the second degree. They are accused of forging the name of A. Venecamp, a cigarmaker, to a check for $30 under the date of Dec. 10, 1890. The check was drawn to the order of Elmer Bloodgood, who endorsed it and got the money. Bloodgood testified against the Kelly brothers at their examination. The witness, who is not very bright, said he thought he was doing all right in drawing the money.

Trust Companies in Trouble.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Vice-President Evans of the American Loan and Trust Company states that the institution had raised all the money it needed to tide over the difficulty. The run on the company is apparently over. The teller denied that advantage had been taken of the five-day rule, and said all demands had been met with cash. There are persistent rumors that another trust company is in trouble. The president of the company referred to states, however, that there is no foundation for the reports.

Died in an Insane Retreat.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Feb. 18.—Samuel Newell, who died at the Retreat in Westboro, was a brother of President Newell of the Nickel Plate Road, and a farmer of means. About a year ago he attempted to commit suicide, but recovered and resumed farming, but a month ago he again developed signs of insanity and was taken to Westboro. He resided at one time in Clifton, N. J., was a member of the New Jersey Assembly and also practiced law in New York city. The remains will be taken to West Newbury, Mass., for interment.

Rebels Winning in Chili.

BUENOS AYRES, Feb. 18.—The Chilian revolutionists have defeated the government forces at Coquimbo and Quillota. At Coronel the coal depots have been pillaged by insurgent sailors sent ashore to procure coal for the rebel warships. The mines at Tarapaca were set on fire and afterward flooded in an attempt to subdue the flames. The German miners employed in the mines fled into the interior. The work of destruction is supposed to have been done by a landing party of insurgents from a war vessel.

Salisbury Opposes Female Suffrage.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—In the House of Lords Lord Denman offered a motion for a bill giving suffrage to women who were householders. Lord Salisbury thought it unwise to interfere with the franchise as at present established, as the Commons might take advantage of such a proposition to initiate other and less desirable changes.

She Probably Perished in the Fire.

CASTILE, N. Y., Feb. 18.—Bell S. Burnapp's photograph gallery burned during the morning and Miss Burnapp has not been seen since the fire and is thought to have perished.

The Pope's Letter to Cardinal Gibbons.

ROME, Feb. 18.—The Pope's letter to Cardinal Gibbons on school education in the United States will be public

TREASON CHARGED

Sir John Macdonald Creates a Sensation at Toronto.

HE ACCUSES VARIOUS PEOPLE.

Claims Made that They Are Conspiring Against the Government.

The Globe Newspaper Office Guarded by Government Police—It is Feared the Conservatives May Attack the Establishment—An Annexation Scare that May Cause Many Arrests.

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 18.—Sir John Macdonald spoke last night in Toronto before an immense audience. In the course of his speech he charged Sir Richard Cartwright, John Charlton and Edward Farrer, editor of the Globe, with conspiracy. He says he has a copy of a document furnished by Farrer to certain Senators, in which he states Canada is only kept together by the corrupt practices of a premier now 75 years old.

The document advises that the United States place a tonnage on Nova Scotia vessels entering American ports, abolish the bonding privileges and exclude Canadian railways from American business, so that a discontent may be created in Canada so strong that on the death of Sir John Macdonald a movement for annexation will take shape.

The document adds, "With the occasion will come the man."

The reading of the document caused intense excitement, and gave renewed vitality to the rumor that the gentleman named will be arrested for treason before the polling day.

The Globe office is now guarded by government police, as it is feared that the Conservatives, aroused by the Premier's revelations, may attack the establishment.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

An Adverse Report on Senator Stanford's Land Loan Bill.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—In the Senate Mr. Stanford's Government Land Loan bill was reported back adversely with a recommendation that its consideration be indefinitely postponed.

The Diplomatic and Consular Appropriation bill was considered and a long debate ensued on the amendment increasing the salary of the Minister to Portugal from $7,500 to $10,000. The amendment was voted out and the Diplomatic bill was passed.

In the House the conference report on the Fortifications bill was agreed to. The Indian Appropriation bill was then considered in Committee of the Whole and its engrossment and third reading ordered.

A resolution was reported for the impeachment of Alexander Boarman, Judge of the United States District Court for the Western district of Louisiana, for high crimes and misdemeanors. The resolution was ordered printed and recommitted.

Better Class of Immigrants Wanted.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Representative Lodge, of Massachusetts, presented to the House for reference a petition signed by Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen and 5,000 other persons asking Congress to insert in any bill to regulate immigration a provision that the American Consul nearest the point of embarkation shall issue a certificate to the emigrant stating that he is not inimical to American institutions; that he can read his native language; that he is physically and mentally sound; that he is not under contract, and that he has never been a pauper or criminal.

The Presbyterian Committee Adjourns.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The Presbyterian Assembly Committee, which has been in secret session here for 11 days, has finished its work and adjourned. The results of its labors will not be made known until the next meeting of the Assembly at Detroit during the coming summer. The principal work of the committee was the revision of the Confession of Faith.

It Was a Serious Telegram.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Secretary Blaine says that the telegram attributed to him, and said to have been read at the railway celebration at Fair Haven, Washington, was neither written nor sent by him. The Secretary says he never heard of the celebration until apprised of it by the newspapers.

Senator Quay Leaves for Florida.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Senator Quay left Washington to-day for Florida, where he will remain two months in the hope of benefiting his health.

The Alabama Indemnity Discussed.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—In the House of Commons, the Hon. W. H. Smith, in reply to a question, said that, according to accounts published in America, a portion of the Alabama indemnity remained in the hands of the United States government, but it would be contrary to the engagements of the treaty of Washington in 1871 for the British government to request a return of the money.

Cardiff's Labor Troubles Increasing.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—The labor troubles in Cardiff are increasing. The employes on the tramways resolved to strike to-day, and it is feared that there will be a general strike of all trades in support of the dockers in their fight against the Bute Dock Company. Police are swearing drafted into the town to preserve order.

He Is Not Jack the Ripper.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—It is said to be an open secret that Sadler, the alleged murderer of the girl, called "Carroty Nell," is innocent of the crime, and is not Jack the Ripper. The police retain him in custody, under remand, but are busily engaged in searching in other directions.

HIS WIFE DISOBEYED.

A Newark Husband Uses a Revolver With a Tragic History.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb., 18.—A revolver that has a very tragic history was the weapon used last night by John C. Huber to end his troubles. Two years ago Huber's father killed himself with the same revolver, and his stepfather severely wounded his mother with it, and is now doing time in the State prison for his crime.

Huber was a young man of 24, and lived with his wife and two small children at the corner of Bank and Bergen streets. He worked at the hat shop, and when he came home from work last evening he found his wife entertaining a woman whom he had forbidden her to associate with. He ordered the woman out and she left. Two friends who had accompanied him home from the shop left at the same time.

Mrs. Huber began at once to prepare supper, when she was startled by a pistol shot that rang through the house. Hastening to the bedroom, she found her husband weltering in his blood. He had shot himself through the temple. He died without speaking a word.

BERNHARDT STARTLED.

Said to Have Recognized in an Audience a Great Paris Embezzler.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—The latest rumor touching the visit of Inspector Byrnes to Mme. Sarah Bernhardt is to the effect that Mme. Bernhardt recognized seated in the auditorium M. Mace, the absconding private banker who recently set all Paris by the ears when he disappeared, leaving depositors mourning over a loss of 2,000,000 francs.

It is said that a large sum of Mme. Bernhardt's money was on deposit with Mace, and she is keenly regretful of her loss. On recognizing Mace, Bernhardt communicated with Inspector Byrnes through her managers, Abbey and Grau, and detectives, it is said, are now searching the French quarter for the defaulting banker.

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—The news about carpets is very concisely and interestingly told in I. H. Boehm's new advertisement to-day.

—Mrs. Coard, superintendent of hygiene, will give a health talk at the Thursday afternoon meeting in the W. C. T. U. rooms.

—Now that house cleaning time is so near, the advice given by Miss. C. E. Clarke in her new advertisement to-day will be found to possess special interest.

—Arrangements are being made for a lecture in this city, sometime in March, by Mrs. Custer, the author of "Boots and Saddles" and "Tenting on the Plains." Her subject will be "Garrison Life on the Frontier." Mrs. Custer is very pleasing, and her lecture offers a rare treat.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

The engagement is announced of Miss S. Kate Potter of Mt. Pleasant, to Harry Edger of New York.

Miss Rosemary Baum, of Atlanta, Ga., is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Joseph A. Hubbard, of West Fifth street.

B. A. Hegeman, Sr., is confined to his home on Sycamore avenue, because of a severe strain to the ligaments of his leg.

At the home of the bride's parents in Scotch Plains, yesterday, occurred the marriage of Miss Mary A. Clark and Louis C. Ackerman of Hazlet, N. J. The Rev. J. H. Parks, D. D., officiated.

The statement made that cashier Carmon Parse is in a precarious condition, is an error. Mr. Adams, his brother-in-law, is visiting him in accordance with a previous arrangement. Mr. Parse is reported to be in fair health at Thomasville, Ga.

Ex-Councilman S. C. Ryder of this city, who is now connected with the Tropical Hotel, at Rockledge, on the Indian River, Florida, sends THE PRESS office a box of "russets" and "brights" that excel anything in the way of oranges ever tasted. Mr. Ryder will be pleased to see any of his old friends who are traveling in the South, at the "Tropical," whose manager, by the way, is a brother of Paul Wachenhusen of this city.

Mr. Fountain Also Explains What He Said.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In your issue of Tuesday, Mr. Hawkins contradicts Mr. William's statement that I had said that "out of one hundred and fifty who signed the pledge at Hope chapel, only three have kept it. The original assertion as made by me was that a friend of mine and myself were talking over the affairs of the Temperance Club, and out of about one hundred and fifty that had signed the pledge we could place but three of the drinking men that had kept it.

There is quite a difference between the alleged an the true assertion. The first assertion would imply that the non-drinkers who had signed had become drinkers, which is absurd on its face. He also says that "he also gave the impression that the men who work at both shops in that vicinity and live there spend their money in saloons." Whether the antecedent of the "he" that Mr. Hawkins refers to is Mr. Williams or myself, I can not make out from the context, but I will "flatly contradict" that I ever gave such an "impression" or made any such statement.

Mr. Hawkins uses that "he" again when he says that "he ought to be very sure etc." I can not make out to whom he refers in this case either. I have no desire to advertise the "downfall" of the "fallen," but what I do advertise is that I believe the temperance work in that district was destroyed by the saloons licensed by men who call themselves Christians—Christ-men, men like Christ—men who (ignorantly it may be) sell their brother church members and their Master for seven hundred pieces of silver and make more out of His precious blood than Judas did.

It is written, "do right and fear not." But they say, "do the best you can and fear not," and the best they can do at present is seven hundred pieces of silver.

GEORGE H. FOUNTAIN.

Plainfield Gave Him a Glimpse of Heaven, and So He Died.

Charles Kinsey of New Brunswick drove a valuable horse to Plainfield Sunday. The horse sped with joy over the hard and smooth roadways of Plainfield's handsome streets, and when it returned to the mud holes which pass for thoroughfares in New Brunswick, and realized that it was doomed to the miserable existence of dragging vehicles over the worst highways in the State, it whimpered bitterly, lay down in the mire, yielded up the ghost, and journeyed to that happy trotting ground where all the streets are like the streets of Plainfield.

Tore a Mouthful of Flesh from Her Leg.

A young daughter of Michael Burke of Plainfield avenue was badly bitten by a neighbor's dog yesterday. She climbed the fence to chase one of her father's hens out of the neighbor's yard when the dog flew at her. He seized her by the leg, and tore a mouthful of flesh from it. Drs. Probasco and Carman attended her, and dressed the frightful wound, which causes intense pain.

OBITUARY.

Abraham Runyon.

Abraham Runyon, father of Chancellor Runyon, of Newark, died suddenly of old age at the home of his niece, Mrs. Jeremiah VanWinkle, 3 Central avenue, this city, at two o'clock this morning.

He celebrated his ninetieth birthday anniversary Wednesday, Jan. 14. No attempt was then made at elaborate celebration of the notable event, but a number of old-time friends called on the nonagenarian at his home on Central avenue, and expressed their hearty congratulations.

Father Runyon, as he was known among the people of the Methodist church, where he was a faithful member, was born on the old Runyon homestead at Greenbrook, which for two hundred years has been in the family. Besides the Chancellor, Theodore Runyon, he leaves one other child, Mrs. Wm. Stanbury of Scotch Plains.

The family of Father Runyon has a remarkable record for longevity. His father was eighty-four years of age at the time of his death, in 1855; and his mother had attained her ninety-first year when she died in 1861. Of his five brothers one lived to be almost ninety, another reached eighty-nine, a third eighty-six, and a fourth seventy-eight. Father Runyon himself had never known serious illness, and though he was somewhat feeble his death was entirely unexpected.

Up to the very last Father Runyon retained great keenness of mind, and the strength of his faculties abated not one whit with age. His memory was extraordinary.

He was one of the first subscribers to THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, and came in regularly each year for twenty-three years to renew his subscription. Of late years he felt that he was approaching his end, and each time he renewed his subscription would say: "Well, this is the last year I shall need my paper." But the last year was longer in coming than he anticipated.

The funeral services will be held in the Methodist church, Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

WILLIAM F. CONROY.

The death occurred yesterday at his home, 43 LaGrande avenue, of William F. Conroy, whose serious illness has already been told of in these columns. He had been sick since the beginning of the new year, but the cause of death eventually was acute bronchitis. He leaves a wife, and one daughter Mrs. John H. Doane.

William F. Conroy was nearing sixty-three years of age, having been born in New York city, March 5, 1828. For fifteen years, until he removed to Plainfield in 1871, he was a member of Company C, 7th Regiment, in which company John W. Murray of this city was a fellow-member. He accompanied the regiment in its march to Washington at the outbreak of the war, and was in active service during the riots some months later in New York city. For the past seventeen years he has been connected with the Standard fire insurance company of New York. He was a man of the finest character, kindest heart and most perfect disposition.

Funeral services will be held at his late home, Friday afternoon at three o'clock. Interment private.

Plainfield Alone Could Get Her.

The New York papers intimate that it was because of Otero, the dancer's, extreme jealousy of Jennie Houghton's success at the Eden Musee, where they were both appearing, that the former scratched the face of the Musee's manager the other day. Miss Houghton was undoubtedly the drawing card on the programme while her engagement lasted, and Otero realized it.

Now a well-known author is writing a play especially for Miss Houghton, which she and her company will present to the public next season. Meanwhile the charming little soubrette is busy daily in rehearsing in New York a part that has been offered her in one of the most successful plays now on any stage in that city. But she has consented to favor Plainfield again by appearing in some of her latest Paris dresses, and with new acts, at both the afternoon and evening sessions in The Crescent, next Monday, although she has positively refused a hundred offers from other rinks, and had decided never to appear off the stage again. There will also be general skating and band concert.

Gone but Coming Back Again.

Learning that the wife of a well-known colored gentleman of this city had mysteriously disappeared leaving her husband with no clue to the direction in which she had fled, a PRESS reporter inquired for particulars this morning at the barber shop where the young man works. He said that he had traced his wife to Bayonne, but denied that she had gone away with another man. He expects her home again to-day.

Will the Crescents Join?

A new base-ball league in which the Unions of New Brunswick are prominently concerned, and with which the West Ends of Somerville seem disposed to affiliate, is to be formed. Efforts are being made to induce the Crescents of Plainfield to join the association.

He led the German and his dudish dress was the admiration of the assembled fair, but his stout partner slipped on his favorite corn. Sensation! Salvation Oil to the rescue. Happiness again!

Nothing is more provoking than a troublesome cough. Cure it with Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. 25c.

The Rev. Mr. Mitchell Explains Just What He Did Say.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In your paper of last evening appeared a letter signed by David W. Pond, President of The Pond Machine Tool Co., in which the writer refers to a statement made by one of the speakers at the Union Temperance meeting in the First Baptist church last Sunday evening. That letter is headed by the editorial caption, "Somebody has been misleading the Rev. Mr. Mitchell." Undoubtedly I am the speaker to whom Mr. Pond refers. I have just two things to say in reply: First, in my speech Sunday night I did not say that Mr. Pond had told me anything about his workmen. Both of the evening papers reported me as saying that "Mr. Pond told me", etc. I did not refer to any personal conversation I ever had with Mr. Pond, for I do not even know the gentleman by sight. What I did say was that "I was credibly informed that Mr. Pond had said", etc. When I read those reports I immediately wrote to Mr. Pond and informed him that I had been wrongly reported, and that I did not want him to think that I had manufactured a ficticious interview with him. Evidently he had not received my letter when he wrote his letter for THE PRESS. Your caption to Mr. Pond's letter may be true; I may have been "misled by somebody." The informant to whom I referred in my speech may have misled me; but it surely was not intentional. Nothing Mr. Pond has to say is contradictory to the statement as I gave it from my informant. He denies having had an interview with me, and I deny that I said I had an interview with him. He also says that my published speech "reflects seriously on the character of the men in his employ." This leads me to my second statement in reply: Nothing I said, or am reported as saying, reflected in any way on the character of his present force of nearly 500 men. I said that I had been credibly informed that Mr. Pond had said that of the nearly 1,200 men who had been at various times on his pay-roll since coming to this city, nearly 800 had been discharged on account of intemperance. I said nothing of the present force (leaving it clear that they must be picked men), except to say that they would be subjected to temptation by a saloon so near the works. My reply in one sentence is this: "I never claimed an interview with Mr. Pond, and I never reflected seriously on the character of the force now employed, as will be remembered by all who heard my speech or read a report of it.

CHAS. B. MITCHELL.

[At the request of Mr. Mitchell, THE PRESS re-publishes from its colums of yesterday Mr. Pond's letter as follows:]

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—While reading your report of the meetings held Sunday evening to protest against increasing the number of licensed saloons in Plainfield, I notice that one of the speakers quotes me as authority for a statement that reflects seriously upon the character of the men in our employ, most of whom are honest, industrious and of steady habits.

I have never had a conversation upon the subject of temperance with any of the gentlemen who spoke at the Sunday evening meetings, and while utterly opposed to granting a liquor license in the vicinity of our works am compelled, as a matter of justice, to refute a statement which may cause the public to misunderstand the character of most of the 500 men employed in our works.

Respectfully,

DAVID W. POND,
Pres't The Pond Machine Tool Co.

He Would Not Pray Where a Unitarian Had Preached.

A correspondent of The Boston Transcript recalls this anecdote of Father Taylor: Seeing in his audience at one time a well-known clergyman of the Baptist denomination, he left his pulpit, and passing down the aisle to the pew where the reverend gentleman was seated, invited him to occupy the pulpit with himself and make the opening prayer. The visiting preacher declined, giving as a reason that a Unitarian had occupied the pulpit the Sunday before. Father Taylor was not the man to waste time or words on such material, so, hastily turning about, he strode hurriedly back to the pulpit, and on reaching it said: "Let us pray—Oh, Lord, deliver us from bigotry and bad rum; Thou knowest which is worse; I don't. Amen."

To Swell the Organ Fund.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian church of Dunellen, will give an "Old Folks" concert in the church, Thursday evening, February 26, for the benefit of the organ fund. Music and songs of ye ancient times will be rendered, interspersed with comical vocalisms. A good programme is being prepared and those that attend will be well repaid.

Bit the Hand that Petted Him.

Albert Cook has for some time made friends with a strange dog on the streets. This morning he was fondling the animal when it snapped savagely at him. The teeth met through his hand and caused a very painful wound. The injured member was dressed in Reynolds's Pharmacy.

You May Smoke Cigarettes in Jersey.

The small boy and the dude in New Jersey, whom Senator Fowler last week threatened to make unhappy by passing a law against the selling of cigarettes, have been saved. When the bill came up in the Senate at Trenton, it was promptly rejected by a vote of 10 to 6.

WILL RUN FAST TRAINS NO MORE.

The Jersey Central's Famous Record-Breaker Retires from the Service that Has Shattered His Wonderful Nerve.

Wm. Aten, who is known to every railroad man in New Jersey as plain "Bill" Aten, has voluntarily given up running fast express trains. For years he has been running the early morning "lightning flyers" from Philadelphia to New York on the Jersey Central. A few days ago he went to the road officials at Jersey City and asked to be relieved and put on a slow train. Three years ago he made a similar request, but was induced by a material increase in his salary to stick to his line of work. This time he persisted in his request to be relieved, and was assigned to engine No. 93, which carries out only local trains.

Aten gave as his reason for wishing to be changed that he could no longer stand the strain of fast running. He said his nerves were beginning to break up, he was growing apprehensive of danger, and he thought he should be relieved before any accident of a serious nature should be attributed to him in any way. He has been on the Central twenty years. He is a sturdy-looking fellow, with a keen gray eye; his hair is of grizzly iron-gray, and there is always the cheeriest kind of a smile on his face. He has run the fastest trains on the Jersey Central end of the Philadelphia and Reading and Baltimore and Ohio service for years. With engine No. 169, in the cab of which he sat for many years, he has made the fastest time for short distances ever made in this country or probably in the world. With four loaded passenger cars the miles between Plainfield and Elizabeth have been reeled off many and many a time at the rate of 52 seconds, 50, 47 and 45 seconds to the mile, and Aten himself said he made the mile through Cranford once on a dead, level track in 42 seconds. Every one on the line of the Central believes this to be true, for Aten has the reputation for exact truthfulness as well as for wonderful nerve.

During all the time Aten has been running fast trains on the Central he has never had a serious or fatal accident. Six years ago, while the morning express was bowling along at a sixty-mile an hour click, the tender of the engine left the track near the Greenville station. In an instant the whole train was in pieces and fit only for kindling wood. Strange to say, not a life was lost, though there were many bones broken and bodies bruised. Aten himself did not receive a scratch. A few weeks later the connecting rod in his engine broke when the train was near Westfield. The cab was torn to pieces by the flying rod and Aten received a deep gash in his leg.

The great speed of the fast train made its engineer well known all along the road, and he never passed a station or through a town that waving hats and handkerchiefs did not greet him. Passengers along the road always seemed to have a feeling of security when "Bill's" hand was on the throttle, no matter what the speed might be. A nervous old woman once appealed to a veteran commuter when Bill's train was making up lost time one day, who replied to her, "We are going fast, to be sure, but Bill Aten's in the cab. It's all right."

Does Marsh Want to be Prosecutor?

[From The New York World.]

The indications are that if Senator Marsh wants to be Prosecutor of Union county he will have to do some lively work. Prosecutor Wilson is working like a beaver for reappointment and petitions in his interest are being circulated in all parts of Union county. His friends are trying to obtain letters from prominent Democrats and influential citizens, addressed to Gov. Abbett, asking him to reappoint Mr. Wilson. The latest rumor is that Gov. Abbett is undecided, and as Mr. Marsh holds the Senatorship, can hardly see his way clear to appoint him Prosecutor. President Adrain, of the Senate, has been appointed Prosecutor of Middlesex county since he was elected Senator, and it is claimed by friends of Senator Marsh that this establishes a precedent for him.

Spread the Laws Before the People.

The Trades Assembly of Passaic county have declared that:

WHEREAS, The newspapers of New Jersey are read by the masses and reach the homes of the working people and are therefore more generally read than publications of any other kind; and,

WHEREAS, The newspapers contribute in a large degree to the prosperity of the State; be it

Resolved, That the Passaic County Trades Assembly pronounces emphatically in favor of the publication of the annual session laws in the newspapers of the State, and declares that to be the sentiment of the wage workers who are organized in the trades unions of New Jersey.

And there's more sound sense in a statement like this than in all the buncombe pamphlet economy that can be raked and scraped together in a century.

Seeds For Folks in This District.

Congressman Geissenhainer has directed that one-third of his allowance of farm and garden seeds furnished by the National Department of Agriculture, be distributed amount the county boards of agriculture in this district. President Long has received 2,500 packages, and persons desiring any can have them by applying to him at his post-office address, Irvington.

Disorders of the throat and lungs, no matter what their origin, can be relieved and cured by the use of Hires' Cough Cure, the safest and most pleasing pulmonary remedy in the world.

NEW LICENSE LAWS.

Bills Already Introduced That Effect the Control and Restriction of Liquor Selling in this City and North Plainfield.

There are eight bills before the Legislature to change the license laws of the State. The first one was introduced by Mr. Lane, of this county, and it authorizes the licensing of social clubs by the Court of Common Pleas. This is to keep these clubs from being affected by the recent decision of the Supreme Court, which makes it illegal for such clubs to sell liquors even to their members unless they take out a regular license. This becomes rather expensive.

House bill 124 gives power to the Mayor and Common Council in third-class cities, such as Plainfield, to transfer licenses from person to person, as well as to grant new ones. Such a license, after transfer, is only good for the unexpired term.

Mr. Swartwout has a bill giving to the Court of Common Pleas, which has the granting of licenses in the counties and townships like North Plainfield, the power of transfer as well. If the transfer sought is from one person to another person, and not from one place to another, the applicant is required to present a petition to the court signed by twelve freeholders, stating that the person to whom the transfer is requested is a person of good repute for honesty and temperance. If the license is to keep an inn or tavern the petition must set forth that the person has at least two spare beds and the place is well provided with house room, stabling and provender. The person who is to get the license must make an affidavit that he will keep a quiet and orderly house. The application must be presented in open court. In case of death the executor or administrator may continue the business of the decedent under the same license.

Mr. Nash, of Camden, has a bill which will again make the "running of the growler" a lawful amusement. It permits the selling of liquor in less quantities than one quart to be taken away from the premises. Another bill offered by the same gentleman repeals that portion of the Werts' law of 1889 which permits townships to hold elections to fix the amount of fees.

Mr. A. E. Johnston has two bills of this character. One provides that if any person, being a tenant, shall remove from the building for which the license shall be granted before it expires, his license shall at once become null and void unless he shall ask the court to transfer it to the incoming tenant. The other bill makes it a misdemeanor for persons to loiter around any saloon or hotel, after being ordered away. The fine is $50 or imprisonment for three months or both.

The most sweeping bill of all was offered by this same gentleman. This created a State License Commission, which shall grant licenses throughout the State. There are to be three commissioners to be appointed by the Governor. They may have a secretary, whose salary is fixed at $1,500.

To-Morrow Evening.

"Kit, the Arkansaw Traveler," the popular play to be given at Music Hall, to-morrow evening, by Henry Chanfrau and company, certainly has deserved the large measure of favor which it has won from the public. It has an interesting story, which is well told. It is thoroughly American, in theme, character and atmosphere, and it has much of humor, wit and fun to relieve its serious interest. Kit was made famous by the elder Chanfrau, but his son has proven a worthy successor, and everywhere he has appeared in the role which his father played so long and successfully, he has won a signal triumph. He does not copy his father as do the imitators of actors, though necessarily he has builded his performance on the plans laid down by him. There is much that is original and much of the younger man's personality in this impersonation, and he makes the part singularly impressive. The Judge and the Major have good representatives and the company on the whole, give a very commendable performance. The piece is finely staged, and all the thrilling effects which have served to make the drama notable, are presented in a manner which calls for praise.

Personal Testimony of His Worth.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—At a meeting of the board of directors of the Plainfield public library and reading room, held at the Job Male public library building, on the evening of Wednesday, February 4, 1891, it was resolved that in the death of the Hon. Job Male, this board recognizes the end of a long, successful and useful life.

While mourning his departure, we feel that this institution, associated with his name, which he has endowed, and placed upon a substantial and permanent foundation, will ever live to perpetuate his influence and is a fitting monument to his generosity, public spirit and wisdom.

His associates in the board desire to personally testify to their appreciation of his rare personality.

Simplicity, kindness, common sense, industry, frugality, conscientiousness and benevolence were the strong features of Mr. Male's character. His life presents a worthy example.

HON. JOHN KEAN, JR., IS SURPRISED.

A List of Transfers of Property on Ripley Hill with Certificates of John M. C. Marsh, Surveyor and Searcher, Suggestive of the Cause of that Statesman's Surprise.

Hon. John Kean, Jr., was in Westfield within the past few days, and on meeting one of our fellow citizens declared himself surprised at the improvements he viewed from the depot. Well, we should think so! Mr. Kean had not been in Westfield before for some months. Seeing is believing. That is what Mr. Brown, of Elizabethport, said.

The certificate of John M. C. Marsh, surveyor, shows that he surveyed for Chauncey B. Ripley, lots and plots as specified below, and an examination of the records in the county clerk's office found that deeds had been recorded for Ripley Hill property, Chauncey B. Ripley, grantor, as follows:

1887, Sept. 13, lot to William Archbold,	$800 00
Nov. 14, to Sparkman & Seagar,	1,000 00
Aug. 25, 1888, to Wm. S. and Littleton F. Welch,	1,200 00
Jan. 20, Fred Decker,	1,068 00
Aug. 25, to George W. Cross,	600 00
Sept. 5, to Luther M. Whitaker,	550 00
Dec. 4, to Carrie W. Smith,	550 00
1889—July 16, to Annie Decker,	650 00
Aug. 19, to Thomas H. Love,	500 00
Nov. 11, to School Dist. No. 10,	3,500 00
1890—July 16, to Thomas H. Love,	1,562 50
Oct. 3, to Emory J. Whitehead,	1,275 00
Nov. 25, to John Ulrich,	2,175 00
Dec. 1, to Mary K. Cox,	625 00
1891—Jan. 6, to E. J. Whitehead and Wm. H. Gomes,	9,600 00
Feb. 4, to J. Wallace Cox,	500 00
	$26,153 50

Not yet recorded are transfers in addition to the above as follows:

1891—Feb. 4, to Littleton F. Welch,	$885 00
Feb. 4, to J. Wallace Cox,	625 00
	$1,510 00
Added to above,	26,153 50
	$27,663 50
1889—Nov. 28, to Mrs. Isabel Stacy,	625 00
1891—Jan 2, to Mary K. Cox, lot,	650 00
Jan. 2, J. Wallace Cox, lot,	650 00
Total amount of sales,	$29,588 50

The above table has been submitted to Dr. Ripley, who vouches for its correctness, qualified by the statement, however, that the discounts for cash and immediate improvement in the case of some of the sales do not appear. Nearly every purchaser or his grantee has already erected one or more buildings. Many have purchased plots on which a number of buildings will be erected. Messrs. E. J. Whitehead and Wm. H. Gomes have a dozen or fifteen lots, and will erect several more houses at once.—Union County Standard.

Councilman Sebring Needs to Stir Up His Company.

Already complaints are made that the Edison Electric Light Company of North Plainfield is not living up to its contract. One boroughite says that he nearly broke his neck stumbling through the unlighted streets from an early morning train, and others add their testimony to the fact that the current furnishing the light is turned off before break of day. The people want the lights to be kept burning all night, and every night, as the contract stipulates. The company was to have the lights in operation in early January, and since it was given a month's extension of time it ought by this time to have every arrangement perfected for the satisfactory service that was promised.

Envious of Plainfield's System.

[From The New Brunswick Fredonian.]

A check is set upon license crookedness in Plainfield. In that city the city ordinance instead of the State law is enforced, and saloon keepers are compelled to publish their applications for licenses in the newspapers, thus giving all who desire an opportunity to present remonstrance or hold their peace. During the past year saloon keepers in this city have been permitted to comply with their own desires rather than law, and for this reason no guard was set against fraud, and the city is again the sufferer.

The Singers Enjoy Some Fine Singing.

A feature recently at the rehearsals of the Melopoia, is the volunteered effort of those especially favored to contribute from their talents more or less entertainment for the chorus during its rests. The most artistic and altogether enjoyable of these impromptu affairs, was that of last night, when Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Knight contributed what was even to that audience of singers, a veritable treat in the way of music. The applause was loud and sincere, and cries of "Bravo! bravo!" were shouted.

Dillon Prostrated in Prison.

DUBLIN, Feb. 18.—Mr. Dillon is so completely prostrated by the anxieties and labors of the past few weeks that the officials of Clonmel prison have deemed it advisable to place him in the infirmary for rest and treatment.

Salisbury's Reply is on Its Way.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—Lord Salisbury's reply to Mr. Blaine's dispatch of last December on the Behring Sea question has been forwarded to Washington, and will be forthwith presented to Mr. Blaine by Sir Julian Pauncefote.

Arrested for Stealing a Mail Pouch.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., Feb. 18.—Three young men of this city are under arrest for stealing a mail pouch from in front of the Central depot and rifling it of its contents. One of the thieves threw a quantity of mail matter from the river bridge down on the pier, but it was recovered. Whether any registered letters are stolen is not yet known. United States officers have been notified of the theft.

The Ex-Postmaster Sentenced.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 18.—William H. Bennett, ex-postmaster of Long Branch, was arraigned in the United States District Court, pleading non vult to the charge of misappropriating postoffice funds. He was sentenced to six months' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $1,610.31, the amount of his shortage.

Mortgaged for $750,000.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 18.—The Phœnix Packing Company of Maine, which also embraces the Kansas City Packing Company of this city, recorded a mortgage for $750,000 with the County Register's office in favor of the American Loan and Trust Company of New York.

An Artist Found Dead.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 18.—Ernest F. J. Barton, an artist 63 years old, was found dead in his studio in the Conrad building at 7:45 a.m. by his son. He sat with his face buried in a sponge saturated with chloroform. He had been slightly demented for some time.

The Dixon-McCarthy Fight Off.

BOSTON, Feb. 18.—The fight between Cal McCarthy and George Dixon, which was to take place at the Hudson Athletic Club, Jersey City, Feb. 27, has been declared off, according to a private telegram received here.

A Sugar Sampler Indicted.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 18.—George C. Baker has been indicted. He was a sugar sampler in the Appraisers office, and was charged with attempting to defraud by altering the polariscopic tests on sugar invoiced to Claus Spreckels & Co.

NEW FANCY WORK.

Some Perfect Rules for Knitting Ladies' Undervests of Silk.

To the lady who asks me where she can obtain a perfect rule for knitting ladies' undervests of silk I will give this rule, and of course all the other ladies can copy if they wish.

It is ribbed throughout to give the vest more warmth and wear and the elasticity that fits it to the form like a jersey. (It may be true these under-vests are a little more expensive, but they pay in the end, as silk does not shrink. Another advantage is that the skin is not irritated as by wool.) I think cream white the most durable. It will take seven ounces or thirteen balls for one vest. Use No. 17 steel needles as long as you can get them.

Cast on 200 stitches loosely for the lower edge of the vest.

First Row—All plain knitting.

Second Row—*3 plain, seam 2, repeat from * to end of row and keep the ribs unbroken.

Third Row—*2 plain, seam 3, repeat from * to end of row and repeat the second and third row for 24 inches in length, and you will have a piece for the front of the vest.

Now arrange the work so that the wrong side is toward you in beginning the row for shaping the neck and shoulder bands. Knit off 50 stitches (ribbing as before) onto an extra needle for the sleeves or shoulder band; the 150 stitches left can be prevented from slipping off by placing a small cork on each end of the needle.

First Row—3 plain, seam 2, that is, continue the ribbing and decreased stitch on the neck side (not sleeve side) every row until the 50 stitches are reduced to 20, knit the pattern 6 inches, bind off. This forms the sleeve or shoulder band.

Now bind off loosely 100 stitches from the 150 stitches, and upon the remaining 50 knit the sleeve to correspond with the other, remembering to decrease only on the neck side; this completes one-half of the vest. The other half is knitted exactly like the first half. Fasten the sleeves together on the top of the shoulder, and crochet with a fine crochet needle round the neck and sleeves thus:

First Row—One double crochet in each stitch.

Second Row—One long treble, miss 2 double crochet, 3 chain, 1 long treble in next, repeat.

Third Row—One double under ½ chain, 5 treble under next 3 chains, 1 double under next 2 chains, repeat.

Sew up the sides before crocheting around the edge of the sleeve as far as the waist line, and if needed, insert a gusset for the hips. For a gusset cast on loosely 50 stitches, and knit them with two needles in ribs of 2 stitches (2 plain, seam 2); make the gusset about 2 inches in length, then narrow at the beginning of every row until it comes to a point of 1 stitch; make the other gusset same way. Sew them in the sides over the hips, and down to the bottom of the vest. Crochet the 3 rows round the bottom as were made at neck. Run ribbon 1 inch wide (use 2¼ yards) in each sleeve and tie in a bow. Run ribbon a little narrower around neck.

This size fits bust, measure 38 or 40 inches.—Eva M. Niles, in Chicago Inter Ocean.

NEURALGIA, RHEUMATISM.

What Causes Most of Our Pains and Aches and How to Cure Them.

Half the world suffers from pains and aches when there is not the slightest reason for so doing. Headache is alarmingly frequent and leads to serious results. Back ache is most common and keeps thousands in misery. Neuralgic pains of side or chest torment myriads of victims. All this suffering is unnecessary, and can easily be removed. Speaking upon the subject, the well-known Mr. James Bown, 27 Market st., New York city, said to the writer: "I have been under the care of many doctors for neuralgia and rheumatism, which I had terribly in my back and side. So badly did I suffer that I was unable to attend to my business for three years, before I came across the right remedy to cure me. This remedy is Dr. Greene's Nervura, and I have been perfectly and completely cured by this wonderful medicine."

Perhaps the most terrible case of neuralgia, and the most wonderful cure on record was that of Mrs. Louise T. Knight, of 438 Broadway, Chelsea, Mass. She suffered from an alarming attack of sciatica, and for eleven months the pain was so frightful that she could not sleep over ten minutes at any one time. "My heart-felt thanks," she said, "are due to Dr. Greene's Nervura, for the great benefit I received from that most wonderful remedy. I cannot say enough in praise of it. Before taking up the second bottle there was great relief, and now I am cured, am gaining in strength every day, all due to this good medicine. I wish I could tell every suffering one about its curative powers, and I will answer letters in regard to it, or see any one who would like to inquire about it."

OH, MY BACK!

Alonzo Patchin, Esq., of Boiceville, Ulster county, N. Y., spoke with unbounded enthusiasm concerning this remedy: "I suffered," he said "for many years with a terrific neuralgia in my head and neck, and oh, dear, how it pained me all through! I took Dr. Greene's Nervura and it cured me completely of the fearful pain. I think Dr. Greene's Nervura is the best medicine I ever saw or used.

Doubtless headache torments more people than any other difficulty, but the most aggravated case was that of Mrs. Mary Green, of Basin st., Norristown, Pa. "For over 20 years," she said, "my life was made miserable by frequent and terrible headaches. At times they were so severe I feared I would go insane. I was treated by nearly every physician in this city, but none could cure me, or even relieve me, except by large doses of morphine. My head would shake so badly it had to be held. No one could suffer more than I did. At last I bought a bottle of Dr. Greene's Nervura, and the very first bottle stopped the headaches, and I have never had any trouble with my head since that time. After suffering for 20 years I was cured by Dr. Greene's Nervura."

Another remarkable cure by this same remedy which has come to our attention, is that of Mary M. Dunlap of West Hempstead, N. H., who suffered severely with that very distressing complaint nervous and sick headache. After telling of her wonderful cure, she added: "I think Dr. Greene's Nervura is the best known remedy for neuralgia and sick-head ache, and I earnestly recommend it to all."

That Nervous Headache.

From the above it is plainly evident that no one need suffer, when by using Dr. Greene's Nervura, which can be procured at any druggist's for $1.00 per bottle, a cure is absolutely certain. This remedy is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless, and can be used by all without the slightest hesitation.

Dr. Greene, of 35 West Fourteenth St., New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled.

N. B. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write Dr. Greene about your case, and a carefully considered letter, fully explaining your disease and giving you a perfect understanding of all its symptoms will be returned, free of charge.

THE MINSTREL.

He longed to once could sing
A song of love and spring,
But stammered, though he held a full-strung lyre;
Because he lacked the art
Which later years impart;
Because the skill was less than the desire.

And now he seems to know
Just how the time should flow,
But misses the young ardor once so strong.
The impulse of the heart
Is slower than the art;
The skill to sing is better than the song.

The sobering touch of time
Holds back the hasty rhyme
That in the heat of youth once spurned control;
For snared in webs of thought
His flying dreams are caught;
Age looks beyond the senses to the soul.

Ah, could the singer's art
Assume the loftier part
As once the lowlier in the realm of song!
Ah, could life's grander themes
Flow like the early streams
What minstrel then would say he had lived too long?

—Christopher P. Cranch, in Harper's Magazine

"DEAR OLD FRIENDS."

Delight and Astonishment of an Unexpected Meeting.

I had just come out of the post-office when I caught sight of a face that seemed familiar to me.

It was that of a man about my own age, with bronzed features and a somewhat attenuated figure.

As I was trying to recall when and where I had seen him before our eyes met. I immediately perceived that our recognition had been mutual, for he came toward me with a frank expression of pleasure and held out his hand, saying:

"Hellos, old fellow, who'd have thought of seeing you here?" I don't know why he said this, and of course, I don't attempt to defend it; but it is a style of address affected by some men who are as profoundly astonished if they meet you in a restaurant as if they had run across you in the mines of Siberia. I felt a little bit annoyed at his want of originality; however, I smiled pleasantly, and said, as I shook hands:

"Well, if you come to that, old fellow, who'd have thought of seeing you here?"

We stood opposite each other for a few seconds, I simpering somewhat emptily at the nature of our greeting, and struggling to recall his name; and he, with his head slightly on one side, and an expression of courteously suppressed amusement on his face, as if my presence on the steps of the post-office was one of those inexplicable freaks of chance for which it is hopeless to seek to assign any reasonable law.

I gave him a few seconds to digest his astonishment, and then, feeling that the silence was becoming a little embarrassing, I said, inconsequently:

"Well, what have you been doing all this time?"

"Well," he replied, "I've been in Australia."

"Oh, ah!" I ejaculated, as if it had for a moment slipped my memory; "why, you went there"—and I hesitated, as though calculating within myself the exact day of his unknown departure—

"Three years ago," he put in shortly, "and quite long enough it is, too."

I ran over in my mind my acquaintances of three years ago, but could recall no trace of a recollection of my new companion; so, to gain time and to gather fresh information, I asked:

"And what sort of a time have you had?"

"Oh, much about the same as before," he answered, with a slightly puzzled air.

I candidly admit that the sensible thing for me to have done would have been to own up and admit that I had forgotten my friend's personality. Unfortunately, I am one of those painfully constituted people who shrink with nervous horror from any thing in the nature of an explanation, and, in addition, I felt that I had gone too far to cry off without some appearance of insincerity. Besides, he seemed to congratulate himself so warmly upon what he insisted upon looking on as our providential meeting, that my lips were sealed, and I felt confirmed in the idea that if I let things slide a little longer, his name would recur to my mind.

He had slipped his arm through mine as we walked up-town with an easy sense of good-fellowship, and said: "Of course you'll dine with me this evening. Now, don't say you are engaged," he added, as I hesitated for an instant between my desire to have more of my companion and my disinclination to dine under false pretenses; "you know they'll be awfully disappointed if they hear I have met you and let you off without a long talk, and I join them to-morrow."

I felt constrained to consent against my better judgment and added, in a playfully solicitous manner:

"And how are they all?"

"Oh, they are all tip-top—all except the Colonel," after a pause and with a slightly subdued air—"I don't think he has ever quite got over that affair."

"Ah," I rejoined, shaking my head sympathetically, "one doesn't get over that sort of thing in a day, you know; but the others?"

"What others?" he said, bluntly.

I hesitated, and rejoined, vaguely: "Were there not some others?"

He pondered heavily for a few seconds before replying: "Yes, I believe there were some others, but they made no difference."

I was just murmuring: "Very likely not," when he turned to me abruptly and said: "I hope you don't think he came badly out of that business?"

His hand seemed to relax its pressure on my arm, as if he was preparing himself for some censure or act of coldness on my part.

I felt touched by this little proof of his sensitiveness to my good opinion, and pressed his fingers as I rejoined, warmly: "I never, never heard any one speak otherwise than highly of his conduct in the matter."

He stopped and said, shortly:

"Why, who knows any thing about it? I thought you and I had it all to ourselves."

"Yes, yes," I faltered, and added, "you know you have been away for some time, old fellow."

It did not seem to fit in very well; but he accepted it as an argument, and said:

"There is something in that, but don't let people talk about it. I know he relies upon you and me."

There was something so touching in the reliance of this unknown, that a glow of sympathetic affection warmed my heart, and I resolved on the spot that his confidence should not be misplaced. Come what might, the secret of that old man's life should never be betrayed by me. Others might make it a subject of club gossip or tea-table tittle-tattle, but no word of mine should add one drop to the cup of bitterness that had been placed at his lips. There are passages in the lives of all of us which we would wish to have buried in oblivion—the thoughtless follies of youth, the unworthy ambitions of manhood, and the selfish jealousies of old age; who is there that can stand up and say there is no episode in his life he would not have expunged, forgotten or condoned?

We had turned into a restaurant for a bit of dinner, and those thoughts passed through my mind as we ate our fish. My companion pondered sadly for a few seconds, and then, shaking himself together as though to throw off an unpleasant train of thought, said:

"Now, tell me about yourself, your wife and family."

Before I had time to reflect upon what might be the result of my disclosure, I blurted out the simple truth:

"I have no wife."

He looked intensely surprised, as he said: "My dear fellow, I am very sorry. I never heard"— He paused, inquiringly, and again I blurted out:

"I never had one."

A look of extreme pain spread over his face as he heard this. He leaned across the table, and laying his hand on mine, said, with infinite sympathy: "I see it all; I ought not to have asked you. Forgive me, old fellow, and forget that I have said these words."

I gave him a clammy hand and turned away, lest he should detect the conscious guiltiness of my face. I had become confirmed in a suspicion that had been gradually dawning upon my mind, that I had never set eyes upon my host before that day, and that I had been carried away by some inexplicable chance resemblance to some remote acquaintance, and by his own apparent cordial recognition of myself. There was no blinking the facts, however. Everybody that he mentioned was a total stranger to me, while every incident that I mentioned with a view to drawing him out seemed to find his mind a blank. My sole object now was to extricate myself from my false position without detection. I got absolutely and hopelessly involved in fable and falsehood, and after having thus lightly taken away the good name of the supposititious mother of my children, a sort of despair took possession of me, and a wild desire to avoid exposure or explanation at any cost.

The dinner was good, the wine excellent, and my host geniality itself. We sat late and drank freely, and over our cups I blush to think of the people I married, the old friends I buried and the characters I took away. But he would have news, and what was I to do? Much of my information seemed to afford him matter for astonishment, and often he ejaculated:

"You don't tell me so," as I conveyed some specially startling piece of personal news.

However, the time for departure came at last, and my mind was torn with conflicting desires to escape detection and to ascertain his identity.

"You'll come and see us," he said cordially, as we shook hands preliminary to leaving.

"Yes, certainly," I replied; "but where are you putting up now?"

"Oh, the same old quarters," he returned.

"What is the best way to get there?" I asked, as a last and altogether desperate hope.

"You can't do better than take a cab," he said; and we parted never to meet again.—St. James' Gazette.

The Milk Supply of London.

Few people who have given the matter no special investigation have any adequate idea of the extent of the business of supplying milk to a large city. From a computation recently made by Prof. Sheldon it appears that about 84,000 cows are required for the production of the milk used in London, and that at least 300,000 more are needed for the supply of other dairy products. Of these cows, about 10,000 are kept within the city limits. Some 4,000 horses are used in delivering the milk.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS.

WASP-WAISTED WOMEN.

One of Them Asks a Question and Receives a Consoling Reply.

A wasp-waisted young lady propounded the following question to Dr. J. H. Kellogg in one of his question-box lectures:

"After all these years of torture to give ourselves a beautiful (?) form, is it possible, through massage, Swedish gymnastics, etc., to draw the ribs apart so that our much abused stomachs, livers and bowels shall have sufficient room? ONE OF THE SQUEEZED."

Answer: Of course a person who has grown to middle life can never have the form she might have had, but still a great deal can be done by patient, persistent effort. The clothing should be perfectly loose and the exercise graduated. I knew one young lady with a very bad figure at the age of twenty-four, who, in the course of four or five years, was able to expand seven and a half inches when she breathed, and developed quite a fine physique.

Sunlight as a Germicide.

Prof. Koch, the distinguished scientist, has been making experiments respecting the influence of sunlight upon the growth of germs. The results are very significant, showing very clearly the important relation of sunlight to health, especially as a disinfectant. We quote a portion of his remarks as follows: "As to direct sunlight, it has been known for some years that it kills bacteria with tolerable quickness. I can affirm this as regards tubercle bacilli, which were killed in from a few minutes to some hours, according to the thickness of the layer in which they were exposed to the sunlight. What seems to me, however, to be particularly noteworthy is that even ordinary daylight, if it lasts long enough, produces the same effect; cultures of tubercle bacilli die in five to seven days if exposed at the window in compact masses."

WRONGHEADED PEOPLE.

Those with Whom It Is Difficult to Get Along.

Among the most unpleasant people one is compelled to rub shoulders with on life's highway are the class whose minds take hold of every thing, as it were, the wrong end foremost. They are usually as obstinate as perverse, and the false inferences they draw from misapprehended premises they adhere to with as much tenacity as if they were Gospel truths. One knows not how to deal with such incorrigibles. Good-humored rallying they are as likely as not to mistake for studied insult, kind words for humbug, endeavors to instruct and convince for airs of superiority; and whatever one may do or say with a view of benefiting them, they mistake for insidious attempts to get on their blind side. Their field of moral vision is filled with a mist of suspicion which distorts every thing, and it is in vain to reason with them; for you can no more do away with their absurd impressions than you can wipe out graven letters with a sponge. Error, we suppose, is to them what truth is to right-headed men and women, and they cling to it because they believe in it. They are objects of commiseration; yet, being unabatable nuisances, it is prudent to give them a wide berth.

It is really a sad thing to be predisposed by nature to misconceive and misconstrue; but it is equally unpleasant to be misunderstood and misconstrued. We, therefore, make it a rule to have as little as possible to do with inveterately wrongheaded people.—N. Y. Ledger.

At a Pisen Creek Party.

Mrs. De Grizzler—You seem rather fidgety this evening, Colonel Whipsaw.

Colonel Whipsaw—Yes, just a little. "Is there any thing I can do for you?"

"Nope. You see I've given Bill Roper, over there, all the chance and inducement to elope with my gal Cyeloney that a feller could want, and now if he don't improve this occasion to skip with her he'll be sorry."—Texas Siftings.

Servants of the Justices.

Each of the Justices of the Federal Supreme Court is allotted a body servant, who is paid out of the contingent fun of the court. These servants report promptly every morning at nine at the residences of the Justices, whom they attend constantly during the day. They shave the Justices, do their errands and occasionally act as coachmen for them. Each Justice is also furnished with a private secretary.

A Moral Certainty.

Hooks—What makes you think so?

Caraway—Why, by that time the Government won't allow what is left of them to retain even a mental reservation.—Life.

THE AFFABLE WOMAN.

If She Were More Numerous the World Would Be Brighter.

If women could ever learn that it is quite possible to combine affability with dignity in commonplace, daily intercourse with their fellow creatures this would be a far brighter and more agreeable world, says a writer in the Illustrated American. Nine-tenths of the gentlewomen one knows would no more address an unintroduced female than bite off a bit of their own tongues. Not once in a blue moon do they dare converse with their servants, the clerk behind the counter, the chance companion of a railway journey, or even the lady who has dropped in to call on a mutual friend.

Awkwardness and timidity, with a sense of alleged well-bred reserve, seal their lips to every form of communication. In their shyness and stupid fear of furnishing an opportunity for undue familiarity, they go through life like oysters, as far as those outside their narrow circle are concerned. But, thank heaven! there is a woman, and her tribe is increasing, who realizes all of the beautiful opportunities and rights the gift of speech gives her. She can afford to talk to her domestics about any and every thing and cement their affectionate respect with every word uttered.

Her kindly recognition of the shop-girl and fragment of pleasant gossip across the yard-stick is a wholesome break in the clerk's dull day. To sit beside a respectable female for an hour's train travel and not exchange greeting as two human beings touching in their journey of life, would confound her kindly nature. She is sure of her dignity, and, strong in its integrity, affords to do what possibly a less fine-grained nature shrinks to essay. Her friendly, well-chosen words are as far removed from volubility as her cordial manners are from gush.

Recognizing the power of speech as the most potent of spells for removing dull, unlovely, discontent, embarrassment and loneliness, she is free with worthy thoughts graciously expressed. It is noticeable that such women never leave drawing-room, kitchen, shop or coach that every other creature of her kind present does not acknowledge to herself the supreme excellence of courtesy above all other feminine charms.

FOOTSTOOL WITH COVER.

If Properly Made, It Is Dainty as Well as Serviceable.

From strong cotton cloth cut two round pieces each thirteen inches in diameter.

FIG. 1.

Sew a strip of the goods nine inches wide around one of these, and fill the bag as full as possible with excelsior, or any thing that will answer the purpose. Sew the remaining round of cloth over the top (Fig. 1), and the footstool will be ready for the cover, which may be made of blue denim couched in decorative design with heavy soft white cord, or of common crash outlined with the heaviest turkey red cotton.

To make the cover, cut a circular piece of the denim thirteen inches in diameter, and sew on this a strip twenty inches wide, which has previously been hemmed on the upper edge.

FIG. 2.

Place the cover on the stool, and with strong doubled thread gather it up in the center on the top (Fig. 2), leaving a frill for a finish.

The cover can readily be taken off, and laundried when it becomes soiled. If a casing for a draw-string be made at base of frill, then it may be drawn up like a shopping-bag, and the cord tied in a bow with small tassels on the ends would enhance the appearance of the cover.

White bolton sheeting embroidered with heavy yellow wash linen floss in different shades would make a dainty and serviceable cover, as it could be laundried without injury; or any combination of colors or materials that will harmonize with the furnishings of the room can be used.—Youth's Companion.

FOR AFTERNOON TEA.

A Pendant Kettle Which Is Found Very Convenient.

The Upholsterer gives something in the way of a tea kettle that is just the thing for a ladies' "afternoon tea." It is also well suited to the liking of brides who begin housekeeping on the small scale in "two rooms and a cookery." The frame is of the newest brass and the kettle harmonizes with the most home-like furniture of a young couple's living room.

"CAN I ASSIST YOU, MADAM?"

This is an every-day occurrence; she is taken with that "all-gone" or faint feeling, while calling or shopping. The cause of this feeling is some derangement, weakness, or irregularity incident to her sex. It matters little from what cause it may arise; instant relief may always be found by using

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S Vegetable Compound

It is the only Positive Cure and Legitimate Remedy for these peculiar weaknesses and ailments of our best female population. Every Druggist sells it as a standard article, or sent by mail, in form of Pills or Lozenges, on receipt of $1.00.

For the cure of Kidney Complaints, either sex, the Compound has no rival.

Send stamp for "Guide to Health and Etiquette," a beautiful illustrated book.

Mrs. Pinkham freely answers letters of inquiry. Enclose stamp for reply.

THE LAST TRIBUTE

Imposing Demonstration in Honor of the Dead Hero.

200,000 IN LINE IN NEW YORK.

President Harrison and Members of His Cabinet in the Procession.

Business Suspended and the Church Bells Tolled—The Rev. Thos. Sherman Arrives in Time for the Funeral—Service at the House in the Morning—The Trip to St. Louis.

The warrior has laid down the sword
And taken up the crown.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—To-day saw the last march of General Sherman, the march to his long home in the far Western city where he wished to be laid to rest. This afternoon the metropolis put aside everything else and gave the final tribute of respect to the hero warrior.

The President and the members of his Cabinet, Congressional and Legislative delegations, cadets from the West Point Academy which General Sherman so loved, regulars and Grand Army veterans, all joined in an imposing funeral escort from the dead General's family mansion to the railroad on which he vanishes forever from our sight.

Rev. Thos. Ewing Sherman Arrives.

Rev. Thomas Ewing Sherman, son of the dead General, arrived early this morning on the White Star steamship Majestic. It was 2 o'clock when he reached the Sherman home on 72d street. The priest looked heart-broken and refused to talk with reporters.

Services This Morning.

This morning at 11 o'clock services were held in private at the house at which no one but the immediate family and the officiating clergyman were present. They were under the charge of Rev. Father Thomas Ewing Sherman.

After the services the family prepared for the sad trip to St. Louis and awaited the arrival of the officers who had charge of the escort.

The Funeral Procession.

It is estimated that there were fully 20,000 men in line, made up of the regular army, the National Guard, Grand Army of the Republic and civic societies. General Howard was in supreme command, and gave the order to move promptly at 2 p. m. sharp. The National Guard wore the regulation overcoat, which detracted from its usual brilliant appearance.

The regular military escort and the infantry corps took up a position in front of the Sherman house and received the remains. Colonel Langdon's command were ready with the caisson, and as soon as the remains were placed upon it and the flags adjusted upon the casket Lafayette Post, G. A. R., the honorary escort, surrounded the caisson and moved with it a short distance from the house, where a halt was ordered until the family, pallbearers, and friends, including the President, Vice-President, ex-Presidents, Cabinet, Senators, Representatives, Governors and Mayor took their places in carriages. They followed Lafayette Post.

Chiefs of Staff, departments of the United States army, were assigned to a position in the column next after the Mayor of the city of New York.

The Loyal Legion Commandery, with officers of the army and navy and retired officers broke into column and followed the carriages. The Grand Army of the Republic, made up of all the city posts and the posts from neighboring cities, under the command of Gen. Floyd Clarkson and his aids followed. The West Point cadets fell in line behind the G. A. R. The National Guard, under the command of General Fitzgerald, fell into line after the West Pointers.

The other military and civic organizations followed under the command of Gen. H. E. Tremaine. The Confederate Veterans Camp turned out strong.

At Watts and Desbrosses streets the organization of Veterans, under the charge of Col. Nugent, formed a double line within which the remains passed to the transport.

The Tolling of the Bells.

While the funeral cortege was moving through the streets the solemn dirges of the bands mingled with the mournful tones of all the church bells in the city.

One thousand two hundred policemen were stationed along the line of march from the house to the ferry under the charge of captains through whose precincts the parade passed.

The following was the route of the column: Eighth avenue to 59th street, east side of the circle, Broadway to 57th street, to Fifth avenue, to Washington square, where the column, excepting the regulation military escort, continued its march by Waverly place to Broadway, to Canal street, to Watts street, through Watts street, to junction with West street.

Chief of Police Murphy and Superintendent Jackson of the Pennsylvania Railroad have charge of affairs in Jersey City, and have to plans which will prevent confusion as far as possible, owing to the dismantled condition of the railroad depot, which is being torn down and rebuilt.

The Journey to St. Louis.

The party to accompany the body to St. Louis will consist of the Rev. T. E. Sherman, P. T. Sherman, Mr. and Mrs. Fitch, Mr. and Mrs. Thackara, Miss Rachel Sherman, Senator and Mrs. Sherman, Hoyt Sherman, Mrs. Wilborg, Gen. Thomas Ewing, Miss Ewing, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Ewing, Henry Sherman, Gen. and Mrs. N. A. Miles, Mr. and Mrs. Probasco, Mrs. Colgate Hoyt, Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Steele, Gen. Schofield and aide, Gen. Howard and aide, Gen. Slocum and aide, Secretary Proctor, Secretary Noble, Secretary Rusk, Col. John M. Bacon, Col. L. M. Dayton, J. M. Barrett, Col. C. T. Alexander, M. D.

At Pittsburg the party will be joined by Mr. William Fitch, and at Columbus by Col. and Mrs. Reese. Judge P. B. Ewing, Hugh Ewing, Mr. and Mrs. Sherman, Judge and Mrs. Granger.

The six sergeants of the regular army who serve as bearers of the casket, with their commander, Lieut. Rolman, and Undertaker Robert Bogger will be the only additions to this party. The funeral train will proceed as a five-car section of the regular 6:35 p. m. train of the Pennsylvania Railroad. The casket will be in the centre of a parlor car. The train will run on schedule time, making the regular stops, but under no consideration will the casket be taken off until St. Louis is reached.

THE ST. LOUIS RECEPTION.

Definite Arrangements for the Funeral Not Yet Completed in that City.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 19.—Meetings of the various committees having in charge arrangements for the funeral of General Sherman in this city on Saturday are being held daily. Reports and suggestions are being received and considered, but it is not likely that definite arranged will be made and announced before to-morrow.

From advices received from cities and towns in surrounding States, it is assured that large delegations of Grand Army men and Sons of Veterans will attend the funeral. It is expected that a large number of newspaper correspondents will be present, and a committee has been appointed to facilitate their work.

General Merritt has arranged to place a squad of artillery on the levee and they will fire a salute as the funeral train enters upon the bridge across the Mississippi river. Another detachment will be placed in O'Fallon Park and will fire a salute as the procession passes that point. Numerous offerings of floral tributes have been received by the committee, but in accordance with the wishes of the family and in conformity with the severe simplicity of a military funeral there will be absolutely no flowers.

After the funeral a guard will be stationed at the grave of General Sherman to prevent any possible designs on the part of the unscrupulous and as a mark of honor.

BITTER BASEBALL WAR.

The American Association Starts a Big Fight Against the League.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—War has broken out afresh in baseball circles, and there bids fair to be a lively time. The American Association has repudiated the National agreement, deposed President Thurman, and admitted Al Johnson and his club in Cincinnati.

The committee appointed to select a successor to Mr. Thurman in the Association presidency reported in favor of Louis Kramer, of Cincinnati.

Resolutions notifying President Thurman that he had been deposed, and also notifying Nick Young, the Secretary of the National Board, that the Association had voted to withdraw from allegiance to the National agreement were then drawn up.

Messrs. Von der Ahe, Barnie and Wagner were chosen to draw up the schedule, after which the meeting adjourned to meet in Cincinnati at the call of the chair.

A great scramble for players will now begin. It was said at the St. James Hotel that Roger Conner had already been secured and that Danny Richardson would follow his example and sign with an Association team. Other players mentioned as likely to be secured are Brouthers, Richardson, Farrell, Daly, Duffy, Beckley, Quinn, Nash, Crane, McGeachy and Pfeffer.

Most of the gentlemen interested in the Association teams have plenty of money and they claim they are willing to spend a good round sum to secure the cream of the players. The war promises to be a bitter one from this out.

THE KAISER AND BISMARCK.

Indications of Imperial Displeasure Becoming More Significant.

LONDON, Feb. 19.—The indications of imperial displeasure with Prince Bismarck are becoming daily more and more significant.

A Paris correspondent says that he has been shown a letter from Prince Bismarck's wife which represents the family as alarmed at the threatened prosecution of the ex-Chancellor because of his persistent utterance of remarks designed to irritate the Emperor.

The crisis in their relations may lead to Prince Bismarck's making an earlier visit and a longer stay in England than was intended.

It is now asserted that Prince Bismarck has despatched four boxes filled with documents of the first importance to London with a view to preventing their incriminating him in the event of his being prosecuted for his political utterances.

The Empress Skips Paris.

BERLIN, Feb. 19.—The Empress Frederick decided not to visit Paris. She stopped at Cologne, and then proceeded to London, where she will spend some days with Queen Victoria.

Made Sure of Death.

DANBURY, Conn., Feb. 19.—James Morrow, aged 60, a well-known hatter, committed suicide last night by shooting himself through the heart.

THE DANGER IS OVER

Rivers Are Subsiding but the Damage is Enormous.

PITTSBURG A HEAVY SUFFERER.

Conservative Estimates Place the Direct Money Loss at $2,000,000.

A Feeling of Relief at Johnstown but the Boats Still Useful—The Principal Hotel of the Town Sitting in the Middle of a Big Lake—Lumbermen at Clearfield, Pa., Lose Heavily.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 19.—The worst of the flood at this point is now over and all danger passed. Both rivers are falling fast. The signal service reports the highest stage of water at 32 feet at 10 o'clock, or within about two feet of the high water mark of 1884.

The direct damage done by the flood in the cities of Pittsburg and Allegheny is estimated at $2,000,000, the railroads and mills being the heavy sufferers.

The railroads are still in a bad way and will have to expend the better part of a million dollars for repairs. The manufacturers of Pittsburg, whose plants have been under water 48 hours, and will not be clear for 24 more, will lose $300,000. Merchants and other business men place their loss at $200,000. The balance of the loss is divided among the thousands. Many of these can ill afford to lose anything, and a movement has been started for their relief.

RELIEF AT JOHNSTOWN.

The People Busy Getting Their Families Back from the Hills.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Feb. 19.—The danger of another great disaster is over for the present. The fact that it is a danger postponed and not prevented everybody knows, but then, perhaps, Providence will step in next time, too.

The change in the weather has stopped the melting of the deep snow in the mountains, and the water in the streams has begun to go down. But the snow is still there and will have to melt some time, and if it melts with such weather as there has been for the last three of four days Johnstown will be in exactly the same position again.

The going about in boats isn't over yet, although the water went down a good deal to-day. In the lower parts of the tow rafts and skiffs still carry people through the streets. It must give strangers a rather peculiar sensation to see the principal hotel of town sitting in the middle of a big lake, and the guests being carried to and fro on rafts.

Relieved by the news that the water at the three threatened dams had frozen up again, the people spent no time in watching the gauge at the Franklin street bridge, but devoted themselves to getting their families back from the hills and pumping out their cellars whenever they could. Almost every store in town having a cellar full, it was a good lasting job.

One of the two beautiful nickel-plated fire engines, which were bought with the money contributed to buy bread for the poor people of Johnstown, was put to this work on Main street. The water it pumped out of the cellars filled the streets again and made the high rubber boots which every one here wears as much of a necessity as ever.

The flood has left over sidewalks, streets, floors and vacant lots a thick slimy ooze full of leaves and twigs and rotten wood.

Big Loss by the Flood.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 19.—A dispatch from Clearfield, Pa., says the outlook there is gloomy. The town is all flooded. The Beach street station, gas works, electric light plant, foundry, grist-mill and the approaches to the Market and Second Street bridges were flooded. One firm has lost 2,500,000 feet of logs, and others very nearly as much.

Savings Banks Demand Payment.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—There is no excitement over the closing the doors of the American Loan and Trust Company. There were three savings banks, one in Syracuse, one in Rochester and an outside bank, the name of which is not known, demanded payment of deposits amounting to $360,000. The institution could not pay, and at the request of one of the savings banks, the Superintendent took possession. The deposits of the company amounted to about $2,275,000, and of this amount over 60 per cent. has been paid out since the run commenced.

A Girl Meets a Terrible Death.

CHICAGO, Feb. 19.—Miss Phœbe Price, aged 17 years, fell 60 feet down an elevator shaft in the Chamber of Commerce building, from the fifth to the ground floor. James Black, the man in charge of the elevator, neglected to close the door. Miss Price leaned forward to peer down the open well and losing her balance fell to the bottom. Her body was terribly mutilated. Black surrendered to the police.

CAUGHT IN A FIRE TRAP.

Horrible Death of a Mother and Her Four Children.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Feb. 19.—Five human beings caught in a death trap and burned to death was the horrible spectacle witnessed early in the morning in Hopkins street this city.

Penned up by rolling clouds of smoke and walls of living fire, a mother and her four children died a miserable death almost within reach of dozens of hands ready and willing to save them.

The fire was caused by a pot of fat boiling over in the basement of a tenement containing nine families, which, with the ground floor store, is used by Fred Boldfus, a baker.

There was a very thick smoke, and in a few moments the flames had reached up through the hallway, and the inmates of the double flat came pouring down the stairs. All escaped with the exception of Mrs. John Henry, a widow living on the third floor, who stopped to dress her four children, Harry, aged 11; Julia, 9; Henry, 4, and a baby boy. She stayed too long, and when she finally attempted to get down the stairs she was overcome by the smoke.

When the fire was extinguished it was found that the mother and children had been burned to death.

It is the old story of criminal carelessness, as to the value of human life, as shown by the inadequate means of escape from fire.

HORRIBLE DISCOVERY.

A Wood-chopper Finds the Body of a Man Missing for Three Months.

ALTOONA, Pa., Feb. 19.—Thomas Styles, a wood-chopper, made a horrible discovery during the morning on the mountain side along the "Kettle" road, near Altoona, the victim being George Collier, a well-known citizen of this place.

Sometime ago Collier fell upon an axe and cut a severe gash across his right arm. The wound resulted in lockjaw, but the case was being successfully treated at the Altoona Hospital. Later his mind, however, became affected and he wandered away from the institution. Collier was employed at the time of the accident on a logging contract and when he left the hospital he returned to his labor. For the past three months he had been missing and nothing was known concerning his whereabouts until found.

The body was identified as that of Collier from papers found upon his person. The sight was sickening in the extreme, his face, neck, hands and other portions of his body having been eaten away by wild beasts.

STRUCK BY A STEAMER.

An Italian Bark Sunk and Two of the Crew Drowned.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—The North German Lloyd steamer Havel which left Hoboken at 1 p. m. for Bremen struck the incoming Italian bark Mascotta when off buoy No. 29 and sent her to the bottom.

The vessel was off Bay Ridge when the Havel struck her. While the steamship was backing off, several of her boats were lowered, and 11 of the crew were rescued. Two boys, who shipped on the bark at San Domingo 17 days ago, were lost. The Havel's boats transferred the crew to the tug Tallman and the revenue cutter Manhattan, which brought the survivors to this city. The Havel proceeded after picking up the crew.

ANOTHER SOCIAL SCANDAL.

A High-Toned Affair Which Threatens to Outdo the O'Shea Case.

DUBLIN, Feb. 19.—The Freeman's Journal says a divorce case of a most sensational character is pending, and that a member of the present government is concerned.

It is intimated that the connections and standing of the principals and the circumstances and details of the suit, if brought to trial or otherwise made public, will cause as much excitement as the O'Shea divorce.

Searching for the Victims.

JEANESVILLE, Pa., Feb. 19.—Pumps have stopped at the ill-fated mine. They have run unceasingly for 15 days and nights. It is estimated that 100,000,000 gallons of water have been pumped from the depths. Edward Gallagher's drowned body was recovered. The body was horribly cut by being washed to and fro in the flood. It is announced that before morning many more victims will be recovered.

Contractors on Trial for Conspiracy.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 19.—The trial of the 14 sewer contractors, indicted for conspiracy to defraud the city, has begun in the Superior Court. The contractors are charged with having conspired to fix excessive prices in their bids for sewer work, the work to go to the lowest bidder, as arranged by themselves, and the amount of the reasonable cost of the work to be divided between them. The trial will occupy several days.

Quebec Irishm n Favor Parnell.

QUEBEC, Feb. 19.—At a meeting held by the Quebec branch of the Irish National League, a great storm arose over a motion of confidence in Mr. Parnell. The chairman refused to put the motion, whereupon he was voted out of the chair. The motion was then put and carried and the secretary instructed to forward a copy to Mr. Parnell.

Arrested for Malpractice.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Feb. 19.—The coroner's jury in the Carrie Gerard malpractice case at Wappinger's Falls returned a verdict that the girl died from malpractice. Dr. Harris, of Newburgh, and Louis and Mrs. Gerard are held responsible for the girl's death. Dr. Harris has been arrested.

Her Mind Was Deranged.

CASTILE, N. Y., Feb. 19.—Miss Burnapp, who was missing after the fire in her photograph gallery, and who was supposed to have perished in the flames, was found last night at the house of Mr. Brown, two miles distant. Her mind was deranged.

TO BE IMPEACHED.

Judge Boardman's Case Before the House To-Day.

HOW THE TRIAL WILL PROCEED.

Rumors that the President Has Selected a Successor to Secretary Windom.

Ex-Governor Foster's Friends Confident—Some Talk About ex-Senator Sewell—Speaker Reed Very Ill—Selecting a Successor to Senator Ingalls as President Pro Tempore of the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—The House will be asked this afternoon to adopt the following resolution:

"Resolved, That Aleck Boarman, Judge of the United States Court for the Western District of Louisiana be impeached of high crimes and misdemeanors."

It is expected that the resolution will be passed. It is the outcome of an investigation made by a sub-committee of the House Judiciary Committee during its recent trip through the South on charges filed by Representative Boatner of Louisiana. When it is passed the House will appoint a committee to notify the Senate that such action has been taken, and the appointment of managers by the House will follow. It is certain, however, that the Senate will not try the case at this session.

"It would be impossible," said Senator Edmunds, Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, "for the Senate to proceed to an impeachment trial when the House is not in session to advise the managers day by day. The House is the sole impeaching body, the Senate is the sole trying power, and the prosecution must be conducted by the House. Therefore it is necessary and has always happened that the House must be in session when the trial is in progress."

Senator Edmunds added that if it was decided to leave the Judge untried until next December, the President could convene both Houses in extra session. He did not, however, regard this as probable.

THE TREASURYSHIP.

The President Has Selected Mr. Windom's Successor.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—The President has made up his mind as to his Secretary of the Treasury. The matter is settled and the nomination may be expected at any time. The President will not tell who the lucky man is, and although asked by a number of members of Congress his only information on the subject is that "the next Secretary of the Treasury will be a Western man."

The certainty that it will be a Western man has put fresh hope in the heart of Mr. Cannon. But a serious opposition has arisen to Cannon in the Senate, and it has been intimated to the President that his confirmation may be hard. Ex-Gov. Foster's friends are calm and say they have won the fight. Still the President is fond of surprises, and as he holds his peace no one can predict certainly the name.

No confirmation of the rumor that General Sewall, of New Jersey, will be appointed Secretary of the Treasury can be heard at the Executive Mansion. It is well known the General enjoys intimate relations with President Harrison. The time in which the President has to appoint a Secretary of the Treasury does not expire until Feb. 27.

DOINGS OF CONGRESS.

The Copyright Bill Finally Passed by the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—In the Senate a number of pension bills were passed.

The Copyright bill was passed by the Senate by a vote of 36 yeas to 14 nays.

The bill for the erection of a new custom house in New York city was passed.

In the House conferences were ordered on the District of Columbia and Military Academy Appropriation bills.

The Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures has agreed to close the hearings on the Senate Silver bill at 12 o'clock to-morrow. The vote on the bill will take place at 2 o'clock to-morrow.

The Indian Appropriation bill passed and the House went into Committee of the Whole on the Post Office Appropriation bill.

President Pro Tempore of the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—A caucus of Republican Senators will be held next week to determine on a candidate to succeed Senator Ingalls as President pro tempore of the Senate. Mr. Ingalls' term in the Senate will expire on March 4, and it is proposed, according to custom, to install his successor before the end of the session in order to provide against any difficulty that might arise should Vice-President Morton not be able to preside.

Speaker Reed Sick.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—Speaker Reed is confined to his room with a severe cold. He was not at the House the past two days. On Monday he took a cold and that night had a chill, and the doctor forbade his going out, so he has remained in his apartments at the Shoreham. He has had plenty of callers, and has not been lonesome. Mr. Payson of Illinois will serve as Speaker pro tempore during Mr. Reed's absence.

Governor Hill Sick.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 19.—Gov. Hill has been confined to the Executive Mansion with a severe cold since Saturday last, and was not able to attend the funeral of Gen. Sherman. In his absence Lieut.-Gov. Jones represented the State.

Buffalo to Have a Base-ball Team.

BUFFALO, Feb. 19.—At a meeting last night it was decided to put a team into the new International League to represent Buffalo. Pat Powers will probably be selected as manager.

SET HER DOGS ON HIM.

How Eccentric Miss Murray Savagely Chastised Her Secretary.

FAIRFIELD, Conn., Feb. 19.—Lieut. F. G. Barton, V. C. R. E., has brought suit for $1,000 against Miss Agnes Murray, the rich and eccentric spinster who resides on Greenfield Hill, adjoining the magnificent summer residence of Mr. Frederic Bronson, the secretary of the New York coaching Club. Since October Mr. Barton has acted as a private secretary to Miss Murray, having secured the place in response to an advertisement in a New York paper. She offered a lucrative position to a competent private secretary who would not object to living on a "model English farm" owned by an aged lady. Miss Murray took a liking to Mr. Barton, and she revealed to him many curious and questionable phases of certain lawsuits which are still pending.

A short time ago Miss Murray requested her young secretary to make certain entries in his books, which he believed were intended to defraud the persons interested, and he positively refused to do as she wished. This enraged Miss Murray, and she immediately called a pack of dogs from an adjoining room and set them on the secretary. Before he had an opportunity to defend himself they had torn both his legs terribly. Miss Murray stood by and seemed to enjoy the performance. Barton's trousers were nearly torn off, and the wounds bled in more than a dozen places.

Barton at once left the service of Miss Murray and went to New York, where he was obliged to remain in bed at the house of a friend several days. His injuries were nearly healed, when blood poisoning set in, and he at once decided to bring suit against his employer. The papers have been served by Sheriff Pike of Southport.

The Sioux Delegation Much Disgruntled.

CHICAGO, Feb. 19.—The Sioux delegation, which recently had a pow wow with the Great Father, passed through here last night much disgruntled, and say they will have to quit being friends of the whites. They say they were treated shabbily at Washington.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Union Investment Company of Kansas has assigned to its president, E. O. Parker of Boston.

Mrs. Daniel Lumbert has been arrested at Needham, Mass., charged with being the proprietress of five husbands.

Mr. Whitelaw Reid, Minister to France, is rapidly recovering from an attack of pleurisy from which he has been suffering.

A rumor is current in Cincinnati that an effort will be made soon to place the Ohio & Mississippi Railroad in the hands of a receiver.

Fears are expressed that the schooner Veteran, which left Gloucester, Mass., Jan. 7, has been lost. She carried a crew of 13 men.

The Pennsylvania Company, operating roads west of Pittsburg, has refused the demands of employes for shorter hours and more pay.

Governor Hill has appointed James E. Warner, of Brewsters, N. Y., sheriff of Putnam County, in place of W. A. Nelson, deceased.

The South San Francisco Land and Improvement Company has been incorporated at San Francisco with a capital of $2,000,000. The company will establish extensive stock yards.

William Dye and Edwin Wright have been appointed commissioners by Surrogate Ransom of New York city to procure evidence in the West as to the death of Robert Ray Hamilton.

Patrick Griffin, while drunk, fell down a flight of stairs at his home in Bellevue, N. J., and got his head under his body in such a peculiar manner that he strangled to death before aid arrived.

James B. Kinsley is under arrest at Boston, Mass. charged with the embezzlement of $54,700 from Boston banking houses. The prisoner is a wool commission merchant. In the Municipal Court he was held in $30,000 bonds for hearing on March 3.

A bill has been reported to the New Hampshire Legislature to increase the number of trustees of Dartmouth College by permitting the graduates of five years' standing of the Chandler Scientific department and the Thayer School of Civil Engineers to elect five of their own number.

OBITUARY.

Hortense Rogers.

The death of Hortense Rogers, niece of Charles Potter, Jr., of West Seventh street, and sister of Charles Potter Rogers, of the Crescent League, died at Edgerton, Wis., Saturday, Feb. 7. Her decline in health began something more than a year ago, with an attack of la grippe; and though persistent efforts were made for her recovery, slowly but surely she neared the dark river. But she was resigned to the will of her Father; and with faith from on High to sustain her, death had no terrrors.

She was born at New Market, January 2, 1865, and was the only daughter of the Rev. Lester Cortland and Josephine Wilcox Rogers. Early in life she made a public profession of religion, and continued a communicant and faithful member of the church.

She was a graduate in the first class sent by the public school at Edgerton into the busy world, and the ambitious there developed led her to enter Milton College, Milton, Wis. She continued her collegiate studies at Alfred University, Alfred Centre, N. Y. From that institution she was graduated in 1889, taking the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy. She continued in post graduate studies, and took the Master's degree the following year. She was active in the Lyceum work of the University, and was a lover and patron of art and music. Her pleasing manners and excellences of character made her friends that were true and faithful; she was universally beloved and esteemed. In Plainfield, where she was at times a visitor, she endeared herself to all who met her.

In the last months of her fleeting life she was at the home of her uncle, Dr. H. W. Stillman, Edgerton, where, attended by her mother, she received the most careful medical advice and treatment. In that home of comfort and plenty, tenderly beloved and cared for, attended by skillful physicians, she slowly sank to rest. When it became evident that human efforts to baffle the disease were in vain, the absent members of the family were sent for, her father going from their home in Alfred Centre, and her brother, Charles P. Rogers, from his place of business in this city. And thus with family and friends around her, sustained and comforted by the prospects of the life eternal, she fell asleep. The date of her death was the seventh anniversary of the death of her elder brother, Lester W. Rogers.

LEFT UNDER A CLOUD.

Serious Charges Made Against Missionary Vanderherchen.

Edward Vanderherchen, Canal Missionary at New Brunswick, and who has been a frequent visitor at the homes of Plainfielders interested in evangelistic work, has left New Brunswick under a cloud, after being asked to resign his position and dissolve his connection with the First M. E church. The charges against Mr. Vanderherchen are of a very damaging character. He was appointed Canal Missionary by the Philadelphia Board of Foreign Missions about two years ago, at the death of Father Thomas Eling, and left his studies in the Theological Seminary to take the position.

In August last Mrs. Vanderherchen, being ill, went to her home in Troy, N. Y. On the 15th of the same month a young girl went from Newark to visit her aunt residing on Neilson street, New Brunswick. It is alleged that Vanderherchen became enamored of this girl, whose name is Slater, and one day handed her a note asking her to meet him at the upper end of George street, in the outskirts of the city. His attentions to her were discovered, and she was promptly sent home. Other charges even more serious are made against Mr. Vanderherchen.

The Canal Mission is a non-sectarian work, but Mr. Vanderherchen had connected himself with the First M. E. church and made himself very prominent in church work. The developments have caused a profound sensation, not only in the church but in the various missions wherein he has been a demonstrative worker. He has a father and brother who are ministers holding charges in Philadelphia, and it is believed that he has gone there to take a fresh start in life.

In commenting on the talk occasioned in Plainfield by this case, a citizen who has been annoyed by the persistence of offensive parties says:

"As a consequence of Vanderherchen's downfall, certain parties in Plainfield who are habitually croaking about the sins of others, but who themselves make great religious pretenses, are going about town chuckling and gloating because 'another pious fraud is unmasked,' and are losing no chance to cast slurs on some very good people in Plainfield who chanced to be friendly to this holy pretender.' These carpers and scandal-mongers do not seem to realize that their own conduct in the matter is not calculated to raise them in the esteem of sensible people—that it is, in fact, utterly despicable. They do not seem to reflect that the hypocrite who makes loud pretenses concerning his own virtue, piety, purity, and salvation, and yet does all that he can to sneer at that which is good and true and beautiful, all that he can to drag religion and churches and good people into the dust, just because one man has been detected in wrong-doing, is as much a 'whited sepulchre' as the person whose true character has been revealed, whose hypocrisy affords the hypocrisy of the scandal-gloaters chance for development. The mere fact that the accident of personal association has brought an evil-doer into contact with people who are respected and honored in a community is no excuse for seeking to drag those people down into the mine of slander, reproach and villianous abuse, and the sooner certain malicious tongues stop their venomous wagging on such topics the sooner their hypercritical and hypocritical owners will be likely to gain the respect of decent people."

HOW WILL CAREY MOVE NEXT?

The Supreme Court Set Aside the Proceedings in His Case Against the Plainfield Police Board.

The Supreme Court at Trenton, this morning, set aside the proceedings in the case of ex-policeman Carey against the Police Board of this city.

The matter has been before the Court for over six months, but a decision was not reached until today. Frank S. Bergen, of Elizabeth, was Carey's lawyer, while Corporation Counsel Marsh defended the city.

The case was this: For 'using obscene, profane and indecent language" while in the di-charge of his duty as policeman, Carey was tried before the Board of Police of the City of Plainfield, adjudged guilty and suspended from duty for three months without pay, and the resolution of the Board designating him as "the regular policeman who should act as captain of police," was revoked.

Thereupon Carey appealed to the Supreme Court, and the questions raised by the reasons he assigned for reversal, were the authority of the Board of Police, the qualification of two of its members, and the regularity of the procedure.

Death of a Veteran Stage Driver.

Abraham Stevens, aged 62, died at his home in Bound Brook Saturday night. He was a native of Peapack, and from early life was a stage proprietor and driver, at different times running the lines between Basking Ridge and Plainfield, Basking Ridge and Bound Brook, and Peapack and Somerville, and conducting an express route between those points and New York. He leaves a wife, three daughters, and a son. The funeral took place yesterday.

Disorders of the throat and lungs, no matter what their origin, can be relieved and cured by the use of Hires' Cough Cure, the safest and most pleasing pulmonary remedy in the world.

News from the City Treasurer.

Much interesting information concerning municipal finances may be obtained from a careful perusal of the City Treasurer's report for the year 1890, which is published on the third page of THE PRESS to-day.

For instance, one learns from this report that from licenses during the year the city had an income of $12,336.75, the bulk of which was from hotels and saloons. Fines were received by the city—most of them the product of arrests made in consequence of the results of liquor selling—amounting to $1,125.65. So that from one point of view the tax-payers were greatly assisted by the liquor traffic in paying the annual debt demanded from property holders.

The poor people to whom the city pays alms, and many of whom have come to helpless poverty solely through strong drink, received $1,114 30 in provisions, $1,249.73 in rent, and $277.46 in coal. To meet the last earthly expenses which even paupers can incur the sum of $76 was expended.

Helpless people who merely exist and whose cost of keeping is less than the trouble they cause received board and care for which $937.88 was paid.

Through the public library, for the benefit of the local army of book-lovers, $2,180.13 was expended—a very profitable investment, as by it many minds have been broadened and richened, and the city's standard of culture greatly strengthened. The library fund has the fine balance on hand of $2,069 70—an excellent showing.

In ridding the city of worthless dogs an outlay of $216 was incurred.

Advertising was done to the amount of $1,101.46.

Laborers on the streets earned $9,261.91. Crushed stone worth $4,496.73 was spread for horses to tread on.

In keeping the streets light $7,731.30 was paid out. For gas consumed in the Council chamber and other public places $198.03 was the outlay. Rents of city offices and meeting-rooms amounted to $560.33. Fuel, stationery and other supplies cost $2,221.77.

The purchase and keeping of fire department horses caused an expense of $1,900.99. As was shown in the recent report of Chief Engineer Doane, the profit resulting from the horses' service was about equal to the interest on the amount invested, so that the horses paid for themselves.

Besides paying its own bills and keeping the city tax rate lower than the previous year, the Council of 1890 paid many bills left by the Council of 1889, as the Treasurer's report shows.

The city received $6,000 from the Water-Works Company, and paid Rudolph Hering, engineer, $3,030, retaining a profit of $2,970. Hence through the Water-Works Company has n't as yet realized any tremendous gain from its seemingly-abandoned plant, the city and Hering are both considerably in pocket, which is not a bad thing for either.

The Spanish Dance to be Introduced to Plainfield Society.

Miss Houghton has consented at the solicitation of the manager of The Crescent, to do her alluring Spanish dance next Monday afternoon and evening. This dance took the city of New York by storm, and kindled so fierce a fire of envy, and jealousy in the breast of Otero, that she assaulted the manager of the Eden Musee for engaging one who outrivaled herself. The society people of Plainfield and vicinity who have heard of this kind of dancing as the latest fad among "New York's 400," will thus have an opportunity of experiencing its bewildering charms and entrancing fascination, next Monday afternoon and evening, Washington's Birthday, at The Crescent.

The Reason of It.

The musical critic of the Central Times is either purposely unjust to tenors, or he doesn't know a fine voice when he hears it. Yesterday's issue says:

Mr. Lavin did not leave so good an impression upon the audience, and unless he was hampered in his work Monday night by indisposition, the Choral Society, which has engaged him for its next concert, has secured no great acquisition.

The fact of the matter is, Mr. Lavin proved himself the best tenor that has ever sung in Plainfield excepting W. H. Rieger. There is no question about this. Consequently one—or maybe both—of the reasons given in the opening of this article, accounts for the Times' verdict.

Plainfield Dogs Seeking Prizes.

Plainfield will be well represented in the big New York dog show, next week. C. Heimerle of Pemberton avenue, who won first prize for Great Danes last year, has entered "Irene," the winner, again, and a lot of puppies; while one of his competitors in the class is also of this city, Theodore Honnegar.

Wilson Fiske has entered a string of thirteen high bred setters, and Percy C. Obi will show a fine collie and a lot of hunters, besides other dogs.

PLAINFIELD'S CASE IS DIFFERENT.

The Question of Taxing Parochial Schools Not Yet Entirely Settled.

The idea has been advanced that the decision rendered by Judge Dixon at Paterson, Saturday, declaring that the property of the St. Nicholas Parochial School at Passaic is free from taxation, settled the dispute that arose some time ago concerning the exemption of the St. Mary Parochial School property at Plainfield. But the circumstances of the two cases are entirely different. In Passaic, as in many other cities in the State, the accommodations provided by the public schools are not adequate to the accommodation of all the children of school age in the community, but in Plainfield the accommodations are entirely adequate; and it is specifically stated, in an exhaustive review of Judge Dixon's decision by The Newark Evening News, that nothing in the decision shows that when the public schools in a community are adequate to the accommodation of all the children there is any reason whatever for exempting church or private schools, because they happen to furnish elementary instruction similar to that afforded by the public schools. All that Judge Dixon's decision does, according to The Newark News, is to establish the principle that when public schools of a city are crowded beyond their capacity, so that without the aid of other institutions they would fail to do their work, it is eminently fair that any practical school, no matter what may be its sectarian rules or requirements, is entitled to the same exemption from taxation accorded to public schools, so long as the school exempted is freely open to the public and is not private in the sense of being managed for gain.

THE PRESS does not wish to be understood that if the question of the St. Mary school exemption be taken to the courts for settlement, as has been threatened, the management of the school will not secure a decision granting immunity. It merely states that the opposition in Plainfield is made under entirely different circumstances than was that at Passaic. Of course here as in the other city no tuition fee is charged, and Protestants as well as Catholics can attend if they will submit to the requirements in regard to church attendance and the receiving of religious instruction.

In Plainfield, where there is an abundance of room in the public schools, which there was not at Passaic, and which is the important difference between the two cases, it may be urged by the authorities, in insisting on tax-payment, that because of the excellence and sufficiency of the public schools the parochial school is unnecessary, and that the necessity of all parochial school pupils obeying the school rules in regard to sectarian worship and instruction makes the institution private. Though the school is free, according to the statement of the management, to all children residing within the boundaries of the parish, the act of compelling all attendants to participate in study and worship of the Roman Catholic faith debars many from attending who might otherwise prefer the parochial system to that of the public schools, thus abridging the liberty claimed, and adding weight to the argument that under the circumstances that prevail in Plainfield the school is a private one, and subject to taxation. It is an interesting question, and a vexed one, and no one will be more glad to see it finally settled than tax assessors and collectors throughout the State.

All for the Farmer's Benefit.

The all-day meeting of the County Board of Agriculture being held at Westfield to-day, claimed the presence and attention of many farmers. There never was a time when more knowledge and skill were required to dig profit out of farm land than just at present. And there never has been a time when information of a more practical character was offered gratis. State experiment stations spend time and money, under the best management that can be obtained, to discover the best agricultural appliances. Bulletins are issued which every farmer may have for the asking. Free courses of most valuable lectures are given and the farmers fairly begged to attend, and when the farmers' clubs hold meetings the very highest authorities the State can furnish freely offer to meet the farmers and give them all the information possible. It is a marvel that, all these facts being known, so many of the Union county farmers choose to plod along regardless of all these opportunities. The all-day meetings of the Union County Board of Agriculture are, as a rule, very well attended, but the crowds that the board would like to see do not come forth. The board has long needed, and still needs, and ought to have, an enlarged membership, and these public, well advertised all-day meetings generally awaken renewed interest, and are the means of disseminating much practical and highly valuable information.

Special Bargain Days in Groceries.

Housekeepers will be interested to learn that they are to be favored with opportunity for securing genuine bargains in groceries. To-morrow R. W. Rice & Co., of Duer and Emily streets, will begin a series of bargain days. The specialty to-morrow will be hams, which will be sold at 10½ and 12½ cents per pound. Other bargain days will be announced by this house from time to time in THE PRESS. The advertisements of these bargain days will make interesting reading, as does that of to-day, and patronage of the firm offering these special prices will put money in the pockets of purchasers.

MORE MONEY FOR THE COUNTY.

But Elizabeth Would Rather Pay the Sum to Have the Race-Tracks Go Away.

When the cases of the bookmakers were carried up for trial to the Supreme Court, it was alleged by the friends of the convicted men that this would put all the expenses of the trials on Union county, while all the fines would go to the State treasury. This was but an argument to incite a vapid sentiment in favor of the book-makers.

The results of the trials in this county utterly obliterated this argument, so far as net financial results were concerned, and the conclusion of the matter was reached in Trenton Tuesday, when the Supreme Court fined the two associations and four book-makers five hundred dollars each. This adds three thousand dollars to the fines already paid, and on motion of Mr. Lindabury the court granted a rule that this money should forthwith be paid over to the county collector of Union county.

"But"—comments the Elizabeth Journal—"it must be borne in mind that while the county has come out ahead in the financial features of the prosecutions, this city has lost, in standing and character, far more than money can compensate for, by the presence and vicious influences of the race-tracks. It is a fact that families of wealth, culture, refinement and morality have been prevented from buying, building and taking up their permanent residence here, by reason of the race-track influences. They are a detriment to the city any way you choose to look at them."

A Majority for the Women.

The eligibility of women to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church has been put to a vote in a great many churches of the denomination, and as far as the vote has progressed it now stands 216,960 for admission and 132,949 against admission, which gives the women a majority of 84,011. This is considered a test vote, although not all of the most active and intelligent members of the church voted. But those who did cast votes belong almost exclusively to this class, and the women argue that the canvass represents the most devoted and progressive of the Methodist Episcopal laity on the question.

An appeal has been issued signed by hundreds of representative Methodist women that action may be taken in the matter. The appeal closes with these words: "Surely it is no more than just that two-thirds of the laity, who are always invited by their brethren to join them in toil and in gifts for the upbuilding of our church, should also be at least eligible to share with their brothers in planning for the work which all must perform together."

Worship and Business.

A Christmas story.—A poor country congregation found itself badly in want of hymn-books. The clergyman applied to a London firm, and asked to be supplied at the lowest (church) rates. The firm replied that on condition the hymn-books contained certain advertisements the congregation should have them for nothing. Necessity knows no law, and the minister sorrowfully complied thinking to himself that when the advertisements came they could be removed from the leaves. The hymn books arrived, and—joy of joys—they contained no interleaved advertisements. At the thanksgiving service the good parson joyously gave out the Christmas hymn, and the congregation sang the first verse with fervor. When they reached the last line they found that this was what they had been singing:

"Hark! the herald angels sing,
Beecham's Pills are just the thing;
Peace on earth and mercy mild,
Two for man and one for child."

The Difference Between Voting in Private and Praying in Public.

The "journalist" who writes so much about "our" Council and what "we" are informed, says:

A petition has been circulated through Netherwood, we hear, and given Mr. Spangenberg, member of the Common Council for that locality, requesting him to use his influence against increasing the number of drinking saloons in Plainfield. All the residents of Netherwood signed it, irrespective of party, the feeling being unanimous on this exciting question.

This petition, like all things, is known to THE PRESS. It is signed by about ten men and twenty-five women. Everyone of those men when he went to the second ward pole in 1889, voted against a temperance man and for Mr. Spangenberg. The particular reason for voting so was that Mr. Spangenberg was a license man.

And all these petitioners will vote for a license man again at the next election

A Big Sentence for the Plainfield Post-office Robber.

James J. McDonald, the notorious cracksman of many aliases, was sentenced by Judge VanValen, at Hackensack, to serve thirteen years at hard labor in the State Prison and to pay a fine of $1,000 and $800 costs. McDonald broke into Mettlage's store in Englewood, and his companion fired three times at Marshal Townsend. He broke jail in August and was captured in Denver, Col., after his leg had been broken by a load of buckshot. He is the cracksman on whom were found proofs of guilt of being concerned in Plainfield's post-office robbery.

I HAVE been a sufferer from catarrh for 20 years. I found immediate relief in the use of Ely's Cream Balm: since using it I have not suffered a moment from headache, sore throat or loss of sleep, from which I previously suffered, caused by catarrh. I consider your Balm a valuable remedy.—R. G. Vassar, 56 Warren street, New York.

Ely's Cream Balm is worth its weight in gold as a cure for catarrh. One bottle cured me.—S. A. Lovell, Franklin, Pa.

Notes of New York Theatres.

The Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage still continues to attract not less than 3,500 people every Sunday evening at the Academy in New York, where the eminent preacher is conducting divine services under the auspices of the Christian Herald.

Campanini has almost entirely recovered his voice and is again singing.

It is said that Sheridan wrote "The School for Scandal" in a single night. Denman Thompson and George W. Ryer were nearly two years in arranging the exquisite "Old Homestead." The former play has just been revived by Daly, while the latter betrays no sign of flagging interest, although it is now in its fourth year at the one playhouse, the Academy, New York.

Now that theatregoers of three such cities as Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago have grown enthusiastic over the merits of "The Soudan," the new English romantic drama, New Yorkers are preparing to welcome it with open arms when it goes to the Academy next September.

Barney Fagan, who is one of the principals of the new spectacular farce comedy, "A High Roller," which is to be a feature of next season's theatricals, refused, before signing with Alex. Comstock, an offer of $250 a week from a prominent minstrel manager. Mr. Fagan will be responsible for the spectacular features of "A High Roller," and his productions in minstrelsy are sufficient guarantee of the excellence of what is to come.

One of Denman Thompson's evening audiences at the Academy last week was asked to engage in a competition after the play, a money prize being offered to whoever would best ascribe the cause of the play's great success. Many lengthy theoretical, psychological and other learned reasons were advanced, but the winner, evidently from the suburbs, summed it up in the six words: "Because it's so gol darned nateral."

The vaunted glories of a star's position in a theatrical company received a rude shock in New York last week. After seven performances, the subordinates of the company were happy in the possession of their full salaries, while the boss twinkler drew from the box office as his share of the week's profits just three dollars and twenty-five cents.

The Value of Good County Roads.

[From The Elizabeth Journal.]

Supposing there were, just at this date, no telford road between this city and Rahway, none between this city and Plainfield, none between here and Summit. What would it be worth to drive a loaded wagon and valuable team to either of the places named? And what would the grand jury be likely to say at its next meeting? But with forty miles of fine, solid road, the team owners, trucksters, farmers, carters and all can ride easily and safely from one end of the county to the other. The county roads pay for themselves in comfort, to say nothing whatever of the increased value of property.

A glass factory in the State of New Jersey is said to be engaged in little else but the manufacture of bottles for Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Price 25 cts.

WORRIED THE CHAMPION.

A Negro Waiter Pours Hot Coffee Over the Astor-Pugilist.

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 19.—John L. Sullivan was the cause of great excitement at Murphy's Hotel early in the morning, before he and his troupe left for Norfolk. Sullivan closed his engagement here last night, and after spending several hours out with the boys was not feeling well. He went into the ladies' dining room to get his breakfast with Duncan B. Harrison and Miss Nelson, a member of the troupe. The big man got an idea that Walter William Miller was not stepping around as quickly as he should, so, with a double barreled oath, he ordered the negro to quicken his gait. The actor was told that Proprietor Murphy didn't allow swearing in the hotel.

At this the pugilist became furious and made a dive for the waiter. William grabbed the coffe pot and threw it at Sullivan, but missed him. The steaming hot fluid, however, spattered all over the actor's clothes. The waiter then began to defend himself with a chair, which he finally threw at the actor, striking one leg, and then escaped by a secret stairway to the cupola of the building, where he remained until the big man left the city. Sullivan hunted all through the house, swearing to kill him if found.

An English "Lord" Comes to Grief.

BANGOR, Me., Feb. 19.—Charles Oscar De Courcey, who claims to be an English Lord, and has been living at Machias, was arrested in this city at the request of Sheriff Longfellow, of Washington County. He is wanted on the charge of having duped people there to the extent of over $700. At his boarding house, after his arrest, he took half an ounce of laudanum with suicidal intent, but prompt measures saved his life.

Narrow Escape for Fifteen Men.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 19.—High water and ice in the Genesee River carried away the falsework at the new Platt street bridge at 10:30 o'clock, three minutes after 15 men had been called from work on it. The loss to the bridge contractor is estimated at $1,500.

A Mail Clerk Pleads Guilty.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 19.—Henry G. Seaman, of Harrisburg, a railway mail clerk, pleaded guilty to the charge of embezzling letters from the mails before Justice Butler. Sentence was deferred.

They Blame the McKinley Bill.

LONDON, Feb. 19.—James Wilson & Sons, of Bradford, have failed for £30,000. They claim that their failure is chiefly due to the McKinley bill, that measure having killed their formerly large cash trade in picking cases for woolens to be sent to America.

THIS IS WHY.

Ontario Center, N. Y. May 3, 1890.

F. E. C. Medicine Co., Rochester, N. Y.:

For seven or eight years my wife has been troubled with some kind of kidney trouble. She tried many different remedies but all in vain. She continued to grow worse. Last fall I induced her to try the F. E. C. Remedy, and before using one bottle she began to improve, and now, after using six bottles, she is entirely cured. I have recommended it to many and it has benefitted in every case heard from.

DAME DOROTHY.

Pretty Dame Dorothy sits in her chair,
Powder and pearls and a tortoise shell comb
In the smooth bands of her gold-gleaming hair;
Cream; lace ruffles like ripples of foam.
At her white throat, and she sits there and smiles—
One score of years and a dozen of wiles.

Pretty Dame Dorothy, back in the hall
Hangs a great picture a century old;
A beautiful lady, majestic and tall—
Face like a blossom and hair of spun gold—
Powder and pearls and a tortoise shell comb—
Creamy lace ruffles like ripples of foam.

Ages and ages before you were born,
She bloomed, a fair flower, coquettish and quaint,
You can see by that blending of sweetness and scorn
That she danced upon hearts while she smiled like a saint.
Are you like her, I wonder, Dame Dorothy sweet?
Would you tread on a heart if it lay at your feet?

With your grandmamma's jewels and creamy old lace,
And the delicate bloom of her shell-tinted cheek,
Your grandmamma's beauty and blossom-like grace,
And her costume, assumed in a summer-day freak,
Have you borrowed the arts of this belle of the past—
Could you snare a true heart but to slay it at last?

Darling Dame Dorothy, jewels and gold
Are meet for your majesty, gracious and grave;
But with manner and garb of a beauty of old,
You're a sweet modern maiden, and I am your slave.
An intangible charm is your birthright alone—
A charm that your grandmamma never could own.

HIS TYPEWRITER.

Mr. Bulles Tries to Impress Her with His Importance.

She Has the Air of a Duchess, and His Attempt Results in a Disastrous Failure—A Tale of Ambition.

MR. BULLES, the broker, had a new typewriter. He made his head clerk try the different applicants and test their skill, and engage the best one. The one the head clerk engaged was a large, impressive-looking woman of much beauty and with the haughtiness of a duchess. She dressed well and richly, and her manner when sitting before her machine was that of a grand woman of society who condescended to play occasionally on the piano. She had much the air of a woman who was employing the men in the office to take care of her millions and make out her accounts. Mr. Bulles always felt as though he ought to ask her permission to smoke, and was almost afraid to ask her to take down any of his correspondence. What work he dared to give her she did as well as it could be done, so he had nothing against her except her pride. He determined finally to break down her pride. He had been uncomfortably impressed with her dignity, now she should learn what it was to feel that way toward him.

So the next morning he called her in and, after dictating a few business letters, he said: "Now, on the smaller paper, please. Are you ready? Let me see," he mused as he bit carelessly at the top of his cigar and gazed out of the window.

"DEAR JIM, (he began.) Thanks, very much, but it will be quite impossible. I have positively refused to go into political life in any capacity, and though the position of Minister to so important a city as St. Petersburg to succeed Smith is highly complimentary, I could not leave New York and my work. Tell the President in the proper official language that he is very good, but that he must look for some one else. Give my best love to Mrs. Blaine and accept my condolence at the loss of your house. Yours.

"The Hon. J. G. Blaine, Washington, D. C."

The typewriter girl took this down with a calm, unruffled countenance; her severity of demeanor was absolutely unchanged. "Is that all?" she asked. "Yes," said Bulles meekly, "I believe that is all." He was not to be put down by a little thing like that, and called her in again during the afternoon and dictated the following note:

"DELMONICO'S: Will you reserve one of the largest private dining-rooms for me this evening and prepare supper for one hundred. I find my rooms are too small and will have to have one of yours. Serve the same supper as ordered and prepare floor for dancing. You can go to any length in the matter of decoration, but keep the cost of the flowers down to one thousand dollars. Yours truly."

The other note was:

"DEAR OLD MAN: I should be very glad to accept, but Tuesday never did agree with my digestion. Certainly, you can have all the horses you want. The two leaders are in town, but I will have them sent out to you. I think the price you offer for the coach is reasonable, and I will let you have it for that, as I am going to give up coaching and get a yacht. Yours."

The third note was:

"DEAR MR. BURGESS: The designs arrived yesterday and were beauties. I am sure if looks go for any thing, that she should beat any thing afloat. I hope you are right in what you say about her being a better boat than the Mayflower and I will certainly follow your suggestion and order her, when completed, for the cup. Yours truly."

Mr. Bulles said: "That will do. When they are finished let me see them." He thought he detected a slight unbending in the superior manner of the young woman, but he was not too hopeful. "If those don't impress her," he said, "I'll write a letter of regret to the Queen to-morrow and one to Gladstone, telling him I can't come over this summer to spend August with him." When the girl brought in the letters finished and ready for his signature he tossed them carelessly aside and said: "I will sign them later and I'll post them myself." He signed them and slipped them in their envelopes under his other papers, where the clerks might not see them, and planned more for the future. The day following he refused three invitations to dine with distinguished people, ordered an architect to call and see him about building a country house at Newport, and wrote to order a diamond necklace.

The typewriter girl began to take a little more interest, and said "Yes, sir," instead of simply "Yes," which was something. He felt that he was getting on.

But on the fourth day she appeared with even a colder and more haughty air and laid three letters down upon his desk. She always opened his mail for him and divided the private notes from the business letters. "Here," she said, "are three notes which I did not know whether to hand to you or to the clerk." Bulles glanced at the bottom of one of them and read the name "Charles Burgess." The note ran:

HENRY BULLES—Dear Sir: I am in receipt of a note signed by you and bearing the number of your office, which refers to a yacht and to an imaginary correspondence which has passed between us on the subject of such a yacht. As I do not know you or any thing of any such yacht, I can only imagine that some one is imposing upon you, and return you your letter.

"Yours truly, CHARLES BURGESS."

Mr. Bulles grew exceedingly red and dared not look up; he wondered how far the girl had read. The second note said:

"The private dining-room and supper ordered for you for Tuesday evening were prepared and in readiness for you as directed; but no one appeared. Are we to understand that there has been a mistake, or is your letter, which we have retained, to be considered in the nature of a hoax, or has some one forged your name? Awaiting your reply, etc. DELMONICO'S."

Mr. Bulles sank still further into his chair. He opened the last letter with a trembling hand. The girl still towered above him like an avenging spirit.

The letter was from a friend and contained a clipping from a newspaper.

"DEAR HEN, (the note ran), Have you seen this Associated Press clipping, and what in Heaven's name does it mean? Some one has evidently been playing a practical joke on you, and one that must strike you as a most unpleasant one."

The clipping read as follows:

IS HENRY BULLES INSANE?
THE WELL-KNOWN NEW YORK BROKER GIVES HIS FRIENDS GREAT CONCERN.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 5.—The Secretary of State is in receipt of a most remarkable communication from Henry Bulles, the New York broker, in which that gentleman refuses to act as Minister to St. Petersburg with much haughtiness. He is quite unknown to either the President or Mr. Blaine, and it is supposed here that his mind is unsettled or that he is the victim of a practical joke.

Mr. Bulles laid the clipping down and gazed desperately at the typewriter girl. "Did you post those letters?" he asked.

"Yes," said the Duchess, severely, "I found them on your desk after you had left and supposed you had forgotten them, so I posted them myself. Wasn't that right?"

"I guess," said Mr. Bulles, "that I won't need you any longer. You know too much."

"That," said the typewriter girl calmly, "strikes me as the very reason why I should remain. Don't you think so? You can say you have been made the victim of a practical joke, but if I lost my position I might say you had not. Don't you think you had better raise my salary a little and let me stay?

Mr. Bulles gazed gloomily at the newspaper clipping on the desk before him. "Yes," he said, grimly, "you had better stay."—N. Y. Evening Sun.

HOW FINNISH PEASANTS BATHE.

They Beat Each Other With Little Brooms and Then Roll in the Snow.

In the neighborhood of every little settlement stands a low, unpainted log-house, consisting of one room, with a tiny door and window. Within stones are piled, and being heated, water is then poured over them, creating the steam bath, into which whole families immediately gather, each member carrying a little rod or broom, with which they beat one another.

The bath is the most important function, partaking of a religious significance, since it is unlawful to attend the church services on the following day unpurified, and thus every Saturday afternoon in the year is devoted to the bath. Not infrequently in winter the peasants rush out quite naked from the bath and roll themselves vigorously in the snow.

In certain parts of Russia the peasants are content to take their vapor bath in the household oven in which the bread is baked! And in both countries the big whitewashed brick stove, occupying about a third of the room-space, generally comprising the entire house, is the favored spot on which children and their elders love to huddle for siestas or the long sleep of these far Northern nights.—N. Y. Journal.

REST FOR MOTHERS.

They Need It and Should Take It Every Day in the Year.

Good mother, maker of numerous pies, mender of manifold hose, overseer of a province,—rest a little. Have a chair by the stove, and, when you peep into the oven, sit while you look, yea, even a moment after. You will work all the faster for the short change of posture. While mending, have your chair in the coziest corner, where good light will come in, if possible over your left shoulder. Drop your hands occasionally and let your eyes rest, by looking at something interesting out of doors; this many a holy thought will enter the chamber of your mind and abide with you. Don't rule all the time. Drop the reins of government for only a little while and be a child with your children. These moments of sympathy with their delights will be remembered gratefully, longer than your severe disciplinings, and when commands are necessary, as they often are, they will be the more potential because occasional.

Rest a little, and gather restful things about you, that you may rest. Every woman should have a cot and an easy chair in her working-room; if this is every room in the house, then every room should have these resting appurtenances. I have known houses where there were several unmade dress patterns folded away in the drawers, bought because they were bargains, regardless of need or fitness. Yet these same houses had not an easy chair to rest the body, a book to entertain the mind, nor a convenience to lighten labor. Nor had the inmates a kindly thought or word for each other, let alone the world outside. Can God bless such homes with children? He does do it. Yet such surroundings transform the holiest blessings sometimes into what seem curses of unspeakable bitterness. These parents reap but what they have sown. Let home bring rest to each member of the family, and let it be the care of each that mother rests a little.—American Agriculturist.

DOG AGAINST LION.

The Canine Won and His Owner Pocketed Several Hundred Dollars.

The recent attempt of Texas men to get up a fight between two bull-dogs and a puma reminds me of a queer proceeding in our old mining camp in Nevada, writes a correspondent of the New York Sun. There were plenty of mountain lions prowling around in those days, and one off day we set a dead-fall in hopes to make a capture. The "fall" was a heavy log which was intended to break the lion's back, but one night a varmint was caught in such a way that he was simply held down and not a bit injured. He was full grown and as savage as a meat axe, and we had an awful time getting him down to camp and caged up. We calculated on selling him for a good round sum, but after about a week along came a man with the meanest looking cur dog at his heels you ever saw. The animal was gaunt, wild-eyed, homely and awkward, and he didn't weigh over twelve pounds at the most. The man had heard about our lion, and after looking him over he said:

"Boys, here seems to be an opportunity. I think my dog can lick your lion inside of five minutes."

You could have heard us laugh and yell a mile away, but the man preserved a very serious face and added:

"Any body kin holler, but money talks. Gentlemen, I'll bet a hundred even that my dog licks your lion!"

We jumped onto him awfully rapid under that proposition, and when he offered to make it two hundred dollars we jumped the faster. After the stakes were up we set about fixing for the fight. There was a natural sink near by about as large as a circus tent, but as we had no way to inclose it we had to get a collar around our lion's neck and send seven miles for a chain to hold him. By the use of forked sticks and blankets we got him out of the cage and chained him to a stake in the center of the sink. My! but wasn't he ripping mad! He rolled over and over—he stood on end—he howled and screamed, and none of us would have gone within reach of him for a thousand dollars.

The fight was set for Sunday, and there were four hundred men there. At nine o'clock in the morning every thing was ready, and the master of ceremonies announced:

"Gentlemen, the bet is that this 'ere dog licks that 'ere lion in five minits."

The owner of the dog advanced with the canine under his arm, and the lion screamed. The dog was flung at him, and then wonderful to relate, the lion gave him one look and turned tail. The dog ran him five times around that rink, biting at his heels, and then, scared half to death, the big beast twisted his head out of the collar, broke through the crowd and dusted for the cedars. The dog ran him out of sight, and then came back as if nothing had happened.

"Gentlemen, the dog wins!" shouted the referee, and the stakes were handed over.

We offered the man one hundred dollars to explain how it was done, but he replied:

"I couldn't do it for a thousand, 'cause I don't know. All I know is that every thing gets out of his way."

And not one of us could ever feel satisfied as to why that raging old lion turned coward the way he did.

AN INTERESTING FIND.

Historic Tablets Recently Unearthed in Upper Egypt.

According to the Washington Star the Smithsonian Institution has just received information, not yet printed or made public in this country, of the recent discovery at Tel-el-Amaria, in upper Egypt, of a number of tablets relating to the history of Jerusalem and dating back six hundred years earlier than any records hitherto known. When it is understood that these tablets of stone are letters passed between the King of Jerusalem and the Pharaoh of Egypt four hundred years before the birth of David, who was the father of Solomon, some notion will be formed of their extreme interest. Several of the letters were addressed to the ruler of Egypt by the King of Jerusalem, Abdi-Tasba. The cities of Palestine were at that time tributary to Egypt, and in one of the letters the writer says: "The Habiri people are conquering the cities of the King"—i. e., the cities tributary to the Pharaoh—"therefore the King may turn his face to his subjects and send troops. If the troops arrive this year the countries of the King, my Lord, may be saved; but if no troops arrive the countries of the King, my Lord, will exist no longer." This tremendous "find" at Tel-el-Amaria includes two hundred tablets, largely of Babylonian coneiform script, which is this discovered for the first time to have been in use at so early a period in Egypt and Palestine. Many of the other tablets are dispatches of about the same date from prefects of other cities of Palestine to the Pharaoh. Some of the inscriptions are in an unknown language, which no one has so far been able to translate. Solomon himself would have looked upon these tablets as remote antiquities.

A Seven Coincidence.

Mr. Simeon Duck, of Victoria, British Columbia, is a seventh son of a seventh son. In 1867 he left London on the seventh day of the seventh month, and arrived in this country on the seventh day of the following month at seven o'clock in the morning. When seeking election to the British Columbia Parliament he was elected by a majority of seven votes. On the following election he was defeated by the same mythical number. Mr. Duck declares the above true in every particular.

A Conscientious Tramp.

The following note left by a tramp was found on the kitchen table by a lady of Youngstown, O., the other day: "My Dear Good Lady Friend: I came here a stranger, and found nobody at home. I was hungry and took a piece of pie. I will return some day and pay you for it. Much obliged. This is all I have got. Keep them until I return." With the note was left a deck of playing cards.

FOSTER IS THE MAN

His Nomination for the Treasury Portfolio Assured.

THE EAST CLAIMS A VICTORY.

His Views on the Finacial Situation Not in Accord With the West.

The Senate Passes the Indian Depredations Bill—Mr. Ingalls Resigns as President Pro Tempore—Murderer Woods' Case Before the Supreme Court—A World's Fair Appointment.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—The President is expected to send to the Senate either to-day or to-morrow the nomination of ex-Gov. Charles Foster of Ohio as the successor of Secretary Windom. Knowing politicians say that this is to be the outcome of the controversy over the Treasuryship portfolio.

The offer was probably not unexpected. Governor Foster has been identified with the Harrison-Windom policy in finances, and his counsel has been sought by both the President and the late Secretary of the Treasury.

Since the death of Secretary Windom, it is now learned, correspondence on the subject of the succession has passed between President Harrison and the ex-Governor, and the position of the President's mind was fully settled before the conference in New York yesterday took place.

Mr. Foster is a self-made made. He began life as a poor boy. Slowly he worked his way up and in time came to be a mill-owner. A town was built up in Ohio from the money that was distributed from his mill, and that town is to-day known as Fostoria.

Although Mr. Foster will be classed as a Western man, he will be to all intents and purposes a representative of the East, as his views on the financial situation are in harmony with those held in the East. In financial matters Mr. Foster will probably follow in Mr. Windom's steps.

CONGRESSIONAL DOINGS.

The Indian Depredations Bill Passed by the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Reference having been made in the Senate to the delay in acting on the Carlisle resolutions as to trade relations with Canada, Mr. Hoar stated that the delay was due to the absence of several members of the committee through illness, but that the committee would get the matter before the Senate as soon as it could.

The credentials of Senator Vance, of North Carolina, for his new Senatorial term were filed.

The Indian Depredations bill was discussed and passed.

Mr. Ingalls, as President pro tem of the Senate in a speech, resigned the position to take effect on the election of his successor.

The House, after consuming three hours in the disposition of a claims bill, went into Committee of the Whole on the Post-office Appropriation bill.

World's Fair Appointment.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Alexander D. Anderson of this city has been appointed by Director General Davis special commissioner in charge of the Eastern Department of the World's Fair with headquarters in New York and Washington. Mr. Anderson will give immediate attention to the proposed great international naval review in New York harbor and Hampton Roads, which is to take place in April, 1893.

The Free Coinage Bill.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—The final vote on the Silver bill will be taken in the House Committee on Coinage this afternoon. The report will probably be against the Free Coinage bill which passed the Senate, and the bill will go to the bottom of the calendar of the Committee of the Whole. The vote in the Coinage Committee will probably be eight to four against free coinage, although it may be seven to five.

Murderer Wood's Case.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Attorney-General Tabor of New York has filed a motion with the clerk of the Supreme Court for the advancement of the case of Woods, the condemned murderer, brought here on appeal from the Southern district of New York. The court will pass upon the matter immediately upon the reassembling in March.

Gorman Not a Candidate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Representative Rusk has made a statement as to Senator Gorman's candidacy for the Democratic Presidential nomination. The statement is brief, and declares that there is no truth in the story that the Maryland delegation to the convention of 1892 will present Senator Gorman's name.

Lieut. Casey's Murderers.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—A dispatch from Rushville, Neb., says that Lieut. Bryson, with a detachment of troops, has reached there with the five Indians who are thought to have taken part in the murder of Lieut. Casey. They will be taken to Fort Meade, S. D., and held for trial.

Two Trains Go Through a Bridge.

ERIE, Pa., Feb. 20.—Two trains on the Erie & Pittsburg Railroad came into collision on a long bridge over the Conneaut Creek, and both trains and the bridge went into the flood. Conductor McIntyre of Ashtabula was badly hurt. Brakeman George Sewell of Jamestown, Pa., was taken out alive, but died shortly afterward.

Speaker Reed Back Again.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Speaker Reed having recovered from his illness, resumed the duties of the Chair in the House.

THE FUNERAL TRAIN

Grand Army Posts to Line at All the Railway Stations.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 20.—The funeral train reached here this morning. A tremendous crowd was at the depot.

Just after leaving this city Senator Sherman said that he would probably leave the funeral party at Columbus this afternoon and return to Washington, where the pressure of public business demands his attention.

It is the present intention of the managers of the party to leave St. Louis Saturday night, as General Howard must be in New York Monday night, and his escort will return with him.

At nearly all the large stations passed Grand Army men were drawn up in line, with heads uncovered and canes at present. At Harrisburg a brass band saluted the train as it stopped with "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

Preparations at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 20.—Should the weather prove favorable and nothing unforseen occur to interfere with present arrangements, to-morrow's funeral pageant will be one of the most magnificent ever occurring to a departed soldier in the West.

It is estimated that over 4,000 United States troops will be in line. The Grand Army of the Republic, Loyal Legion, the Sons of Veterans, and similar organizations will number 3,000. Two hundred members of the Missouri Legislature will arrive to-morrow morning. The funeral procession will start from the Union depot at 11 o'clock.

Snow and rain have fallen all day and the streets are in a very bad condition. All the city and public buildings and many business houses and residences are draped in mourning.

WHITE-CAP SENSATION.

A Village Postmaster in Connecticut Shorn of a Flowing Beard.

NORWALK, Conn., Feb. 20.—Wilton, a small town six miles north of this city, is enjoying a White-Cap sensation.

Richard H. Fitch, the village postmaster, who wears a long and flowing beard, was notified a few days ago by a letter embellished with a skull, cross-bones and coffin in blood that he must sacrifice the beard or suffer the penalty. He paid no attention to the warning, thinking it a joke, but during the morning his whiskers were reduced to a stubby beard.

Mr. Fitch refuses to explain when and where the outrage occurred, but it is hinted that it took place while he was returning home through the woods.

Charged With Manslaughter.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Feb. 20.—Dr. L. A. Harris, Louis Gerard and Elizabeth Gerard were arraigned before the recorder here charged with manslaughter in the first degree, in causing the death of Carrie Gerard by malpractice. They were remanded. Their counsel will apply to Judge Barnard and ask that bail be fixed for their appearance before the grand jury.

Examining K. of L. Accounts.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 20.—The committee appointed at the last session of the General Assembly of the Knights of Labor to investigate alleged irregularities in the accounts of the secretary-treasurer of 1883 is holding executive session here for that purpose. The result of the investigation will be publicly announced when the committee has finished its labors.

Storm and Earthquake.

VIENNA, Feb. 20.—A terrific storm passed over Presburg, Hungary, to-day, uncroofing houses, tearing up trees by the roots and doing an immense amount of other damage. The storm was followed by an earthquake which caused two large fires. One of the buildings which took fire was a girls' college, several of the inmates of which were injured by jumping from windows. No one was seriously hurt.

Coal Mines Flooded.

HUNTINGDON, Pa., Feb. 20.—The recent heavy rains together with the overflowing underground springs flooded the bituminous mines in the east Broad Top region and the whole Robertsdale district collieries are now idle. Over 500 men are temporarily deprived of work.

Mayor Cleveland Defied.

JERSEY CITY, Feb. 20.—The Police Commissioners have refused to obey the mandate of Mayor Cleveland and the police will not be called back from Kearney, where they have been guarding the property of the Clark Thread Company.

A Whole Town in Danger.

CLINTON, A. T., Feb. 20.—The Frisco River is booming and threatens to wash the town away. The river is rising a foot per hour. It is continues six hours at that rate the town is doomed to certain destruction.

The Delaware Rising.

EASTON, Pa., Feb. 20.—The Delaware river has been gradually rising for several days, and now is 15 feet above high water mark and is still rising. All the mills in South Easton were obliged to shut down.

KILLED HIS FATHER

Young Lumbert Boldly Confesses the Crime.

HOW THE QUARREL CAME ABOUT

He Says He is a Parricide Because He Defended His Mother.

After a Hand-to-Hand Fight He Struck His Father With a Club and Knocked Him Down—He Then Dragged Him Out In the Backyard and Completed the Crime With an Axe.

LYONS, N. Y., Feb. 20.—Until George Lumbert was brought here by a deputy sheriff and lodged in jail, few authentic details of the murder of William Lumbert had been learned.

At first he denied having killed his father, but being told that everybody was certain that he had committed the crime, and that every circumstance pointed to him as the murderer, he became convinced of the futility of denial, and, drawing himself up at full length, said very positively: "Yes, I did kill my father."

The Murderer's Confession.

"I quarreled with my father because he misused my mother. Our relations were anything but amicable, and my father had repeatedly threatened to have me arrested if I did not leave the house. I refused to go away, and we had frequent quarrels. On Monday evening I was in the sitting room with my father. We had some hot words about my mother, and he at length lost control of himself and came for me with his fists. I thought he was going to kill me. He struck at me several times, but I parried the blows. I did not strike back at him, but only tried to keep him away and defend myself. Then he seized a hot stove lid from the cook stove, but it slipped from his hand before he could throw it at me.

Murderous Blows With an Axe.

He continued: "I was standing near the stove on the wood-box with my head toward the east when the stove lid dropped from father's hand. I grabbed a piece of firewood and hit him in the face three or four times. He fell to the floor. I took hold of the body and made for the door. As I dragged him out through the woodshed I seized an axe, which lay near the door, and dragging him out into the back yard completed the crime with the axe. How many times I struck him with it I do not know, but I certainly hit him a number of blows. I then went into the house, washed my hands and went away. I stayed there about twenty minutes."

The murderer was born near Clyde, and would be 27 years old next April.

A TOWN SWEPT AWAY.

Riverside, West Virginia, Wiped Out by the Flood.

WHEELING, W. Va., Feb. 20.—The town of Riverside, a suburb of Parkersburg, was completely swept away by the flood in the Ohio River last night.

The town is a suburb of Parkersburg, and contained about a thousand inhabitants.

Details of the terrible calamity are meagre and it is not known whether any lives were lost or not.

Officers for the Knights of Pythias.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 20.—The Grand Lodge of the Knights of Pythias in annual convention here elected the following officers: Grand Chancellor, John Ulrich, Plainfield; Grand Vice-Chancellor, Charles Kilburn, New Brunswick; Grand Prelate, W. F. Hayhurst, Lambertville; G. K. of R. S., George E. Pierson, Woodbury; Grand Master at Arms, Dr. Joseph B. Shaw, Trenton; Grand Representative, J. E. Moon, Phillipsburg.

Marries the Bride of His Choice.

HUDSON, N. Y., Feb. 20.—Last week's social sensation has terminated in an unexpected and happy sequel, and Hudson is again agog with excitement. Fred Dubois Stott, son of the millionaire woolen manufacturer of Stottville, the bridegroom who declined to fulfill his marriage contract with Miss Caroline Haviland, and in consequence of which the invitations were recalled by the bride's parents, was married last evening to Miss Haviland at the Church of the Transfiguration, in New York city, by the Rev. O. F. Prescott.

Paid $55,000 for a Yearling Colt.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Feb. 20.—S. A. Brown, of this city, bought Antico, a yearling colt, son of the great Electioneer. The purchase was made at the sales now in progress at Lexington, Ky. The price paid was $55,000.

A Child Burned to Death.

WELLSVILLE, N. Y., Feb. 20.—The dwelling of Mrs. George Calkins on Grove street was destroyed by fire last night and a child of Mrs. Calkins was burned to death. Mrs. Calkins and three other children were severely burned.

SEVEN PRISONERS ESCAPE

They Choked and Pounded the Jailer Into Insensibility.

BRADFORD, Pa., Feb. 20.—Seven of the worst prisoners in the county jail at Smethport escaped at 7 o'clock last night.

When Jailor Dan Dwyer entered the hall to lock the prisoners in their cells for the night he was pounced upon by two of the prisoners, choked and pounded into insensibility, while other prisoners put an iron bar in the grating and prevented Mrs. Grubb, the sheriff's wife, from locking the door.

"Reddy" Mack, in for highway robbery, then seized the sheriff's wife and held her until the six criminals got away. He then threw her aside and made a flying leap through the window.

The escaped criminals are "Reddy" Mack, highway robber; Ernest Schuyler and Andy Barr, burglars; "Indian" White, assault and burglary, Thos. Powell, John Smith and one other whose name is not given. Searching parties are after the fugitives.

WILL THERE BE A STRIKE?

The Supreme Council Considering the Pennsylvania Trouble.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 20.—General Manager Woods and other officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company spent the greater part of the day in conference with the General Grievance Committee, representing the employes of the company. The reply of the company refusing to grant the requests of the men was ignored by the employes. General Manager Woods says: "So far as wages are concerned, there will be no concessions."

Messrs. Howard, Sweeney and Sargent, of the Supreme Council of the United Order of Railway Employes, are here. The other members, including P. M. Arthur, will arrive this afternoon. Conferences with the company and committees of the different organizations will be held during the remainder of the week, and the final decision of the council may not be reached for several days.

Opera House Burned in Rochester.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 20.—The Grand Opera House on North St. Paul street was destroyed by fire a few minutes before 4 a. m. Before the flames broke out an explosion in the Opera House was heard. The fire had made rapid progress before the firemen arrived. The Windsor Hotel, adjoining, was also damaged. The loss on the Opera House, which is owned by Hon. Frederick Cook, is $75,000, covered by insurance. The loss on the hotel is about $40,000. The cause of the explosion is not known.

The Bank May Resume.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—The American Loan and Trust Company at No. 113 Broadway, through the good offices of Russell Sage and some of his friends, will probably resume business within a week, but with a new President and some new directors. In an interview this morning with a press reporter Mr. Sage said that some of his friends and himself were at work on this matter and thought the company would certainly resume business within a week.

Baggagemaster Schenck a Defaulter.

HUDSON, N. Y., Feb. 20.—Jacob Schenck, baggagemaster at Mellenville, a station on the Boston & Albany railroad, near this city, is a defaulter and has fled. Schenck has been in the employ of the railroad company for eight years. During the past few months he has been dissipated. He recently confessed to a small shortage, but promised immediate restitution. Schenck left a young wife who is in a delicate condition.

Cincinnati Again Threatened.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 20.—The river is rising an inch an hour here and four inches at Portsmouth. Rain is falling. The river is rising as far up as Wheeling, so that a stage of 50 feet here is admitted, even if there should be no further rain. If heavy rains come within a few days a disastrous flood is inevitable.

Poverty Kills a Harvard Student.

BOSTON, Feb. 20.—John W. Young, a poor colored student at Harvard College from Atlanta, Ga., is dead. It is well understood that he died from excessive mental work. He was so poor that he was obliged to eke out the slender scholarship he held by working outside the college, and accordingly filled the position of night clerk at Lee's Hotel in Auburndale.

Delamater & Co.'s Creditors Compromise

MEADVILLE, Pa., Feb. 20.—Two hundred of Delamater & Co.'s creditors held a meeting here last night. One hundred and ninety-five of those present signed an agreement accepting the proposed basis of settlement, which is 50 cents on the dollar, payable in two years. It is expected that all of the creditors will sign the agreement.

Steamship Given Up for Lost.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—A dispatch received here from Lloyds at London states that the steamship Thanemore, which sailed from Baltimore Nov. 26 last for London, has been given up for lost. The Thanemore carried a crew of 15 men and six cattlemen, and had 543 cattle as her cargo.

CANADA IS EXCITED

The Charges of Treason Sweeping Over the Dominion.

A CRISIS SEEMS INEVITABLE.

The People Have Not Been So Aroused Since the Days of Fenianism.

Bitter Attacks in the Government Papers on the Liberals—One Paper Says that Canada Has an Ugly Habit of Hanging Traitors—Prof. Goldwin Smith Talks About the Treason Charges.

TORONTO, Feb. 20.—The fuel added to Editor Farrer, of the Globe, to the flames of the conflagration which is now sweeping over Canada has had its expectant effect. Never since the days of Fenianism have the people been so thoroughly aroused. No other subject is talked of in the streets and at the clubs. The dispatches containing opinions from the London newspapers have not tended to make things quieter. The lines between the Tories and the Grits are becoming more sharply drawn each day and a crisis seems inevitable.

Premier Sir John Macdonald's charges of treason are being actively used to prejudice the Liberal party, and there are bitter attacks in the government papers. One advises the writer of the pamphlet and Sir Richard Cartwright to go to the United States, adding, "Canada has an ugly habit of hanging traitors."

The unfriendly attitude of the Canadian Ministers to the United States during the campaign leads it to be feared that if the government be sustained it will precipitate hostile action toward Americans.

Prof. Goldwin Smith, in commenting on the speeches delivered by Sir John Macdonald and Sir Charles Tupper, says: "If anybody has been guilty of treason it is the duty of the Prime Minister, the guardian of public justice, to put the law in force against him, not to bawl about him for electioneering purposes. But, supposing the man guilty, how does the misconduct of a private journal affect the question of reciprocity."

PARNELL'S AMERICAN TOUR.

Arrangements for an Enthusiastic Reception Said to Have Been Made.

DUBLIN, Feb. 20.—Considerable mystery seems to surround Mr. Parnell's visit to America, but that he has concluded to go appears to be decided.

Many communications have passed between the Parnellites here and leaders in the United States who favor the cause, and all the arrangements for an enthusiastic reception have been made.

The time of Mr. Parnell's departure will depend altogether upon the exigencies of the campaign in Ireland.

During the past few days Messrs. O'Brien and Dillon were quietly removed from the jail at Clonmel to Galway, where it is expected they will complete their six months' term of imprisonment.

Bishop MacCarthy of Dromore has addressed a letter to the clergy of his diocese, in which he warns the faithful not to attend a proposed Parnell meeting at Newry. The Bishop says that he has hoped that the poisoned atmosphere of the divorce court with its filthy, disgusting and scandalous revelations would not reach his diocese.

The Baltimore Scandal.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—The Star, the Home Rule organ, referring to the baccarat scandal in which the Prince of Wales is involved, says that England is no longer the slave of royalty, and that the sovereign of England no longer rules but only reigns, and that the guilty pleasures of the figurehead ought not to be furnished by royal folly and blunders. The extreme Radicals generally applaud these utterances, but British public opinion, even among the working classes, is showing signs of sympathy with the Prince, who is regarded as having been subjected to more abuse than he deserves. Mr. Gladstone especially is said to disapprove the attacks.

A Singular Coincidence.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—The Pall Mall Gazette publishes in parallel columns a sermon which the Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon preached in 1864 and an address delivered by the Right Hon. Joseph Savory, Lord Mayor of London, at the Polytechnic Institute in Regent street. The two discourses are identical in almost every particular, long passages of the Spurgeon sermon being delivered unchanged in the Lord Mayor's address. Lord Mayor Savory, whose attention was called to this singular coincidence, says that he was unaware of the similarity, and that he had never, to the best of his knowledge, seen the sermon referred to.

The Whitechapel Murder.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—Sadler, who is held on the charge of having murdered the woman Chantry Nell in Whitechapel, declares that the police are deliberately crushing evidence favorable to him, and that they are straining every nerve to hurry forward his conviction. He denies absolutely that he either purchased, possessed or sold the knife, the ownership of which the police attribute to him.

The Cardiff Strike Becomes Serious.

MISTAKEN FOR A BURGLAR.

A Flood Victim Shot Dead by His Brother-in-Law.

WHEELING, W. Va., Feb. 20.—George Hess, of Fulton, was mistaken for a burglar by his two brothers-in-law, named Bell, at Pleasant Valley, during the morning, and was shot, dying instantly.

Mrs. Hess had been in delicate health, and her husband, fearing the flood, decided to take his family to the residence of his mother-in-law at Pleasant Valley. The party did not arrive at the Bell residence until after midnight, and Mr. Hess tried to arouse the sleeping family. With his little child in his arms he went upon the porch and called several times.

The two young men of the family saw the form on the porch, and, thinking there was to be a repetition of the attempt to enter made by burglars last Sunday night, armed themselves and went to the door. When they opened it Mr. Hess spoke and attempted to enter. Ezekiel, the younger brother, fired, and Hess, still clasping his child, fell to the porch dead. The child screamed:

"Oh, papa is dead!" and the boys ran out and discovered what they had done. The young man at once came to the city and gave himself up. There was a verdict of accidental shooting.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Kansas House passed a bill allowing women to vote.

J. A. DEMAREST, . . Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—Band rehearsal to-night, at headquarters.

—Don't fail to read new advertisement of U. T. & C. G. A. this day.

—The Rev. Charles B. Mitchell will lead the Y. M. C. A. meeting next Sunday at 4:15 P. M.

—The meeting of the Clerks Association to be held this evening, is adjourned by order of the President until next Tuesday evening, Feb. 24.

—The Normal Bible class of the Young People's League of the First Baptist church, conducted by Chas. B. Brown, meets this evening at 7 o'clock, in the church parlors.

—Councilmen Buckle, Emmons and Sebring, auditing committee, completed auditing the books of Collector H. N. Spencer and Borough Clerk Harry H. Brokaw, last evening, and found them correct.

—If the State acts on the suggestion of Chauncey B. Ripley, LL.D., to build a road from the boundary limit of Sussex county to Cape May, it will be our Colossus of Roads—Somerville Unionist-Gazette.

—"What God wants"—Prov. XXIII: 26 —will be the subject of a discourse by the Rev. C. L. Goodrich, at the Mt. Pleasant school house next Sunday evening. A very interesting service is promised, and all living in the vicinity are urged to be present.

—The talk of the town, just now, is the opening of The Crescent again, Monday afternoon and evening. Besides those who long for a skate, a great many are going to look on at the sport, enjoy Miss Houghton's exhibition, and listen to the music by the band.

—Walter A. Bass, Jr., and T. H. Keller, of this city, arrived home yesterday with a big lot of game they had shot on Long Point Marsh, Back Bay, Va., recently. Geese by moonlight and black duck, widgeons and green-winged teal by day, was some of the sport they enjoyed. The weather was so mild they shot in their shirt sleeves.

—Mme. Chargois Boutes, of 7 West Second street, is the artist who has designed and made so many of the elaborate and stylish evening dresses and tea gowns that have been so much admired in Plainfield's higher society circles this season. She is a pupil of Worth, and for many years was designer, cutter and fitter for A. T. Stewart, Arnold, Constable & Co., and Stern Bros. Some of the handsomest walking costumes seen on the streets, are from her establishment.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Eudora O. Grant, a seventeen-year-old pupil of the Plainfield High school, has contributed to the composition contest of The World.

The Crescent Band's orchestra is rehearsing the bewitching music of "Santiago," to the strains of which Miss Houghton is to do a Spanish dance at The Crescent next Monday afternoon and evening.

Miss Mary Bailey, a maiden aunt of Mrs. Counselor McClure, died to-day at her home, 83 Broadway. She was 85 years of age. Funeral services will be held on Sunday afternoon at four o'clock. Interment Monday at Greenwood.

The Rev. K. P. Ketcham is building a handsome residence on West Eighth street, adjoining the property of George F. Opdyk from whom the land was purchased. It will be finished about May 1, in time for the marriage of the pastor's daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Opdyke, of West Eighth street, will leave town in about one week, for a three month's visit to California. They contemplate beginning extended journeyings in foreign lands late in the Summer, and may be abroad two years.

The members of Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., will give a supper, this evening, in honor of the ladies of their relief corps who were recently elected as officers of the State Department. The affair will take place at the home of Isaiah McVoy, East Front street.

The Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut of this city is in great demand as a public speaker. Yesterday afternoon he addressed a convention of young people's societies in Newark, and last evening he spoke before the Epworth League of an Elizabeth Methodist church.

At the next session of the Union County School of Methods, to be held at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church March 17, Miss Clementine R. Yates, Mrs. J. C. Fernald and the Rev. W. R. Richards, with others from out of town, will take prominent part.

Opening of the Albion.

Five hundred invitations have been issued for the opening of The Albion, F. E. Miller's new hotel at Park avenue and Eighth street, to-morrow evening. THE PRESS will spoil none of the great surprise in store for the guests, by a description of the metamorphosis the former Park House has undergone. Everybody present can see for themselves, tomorrow evening from eight until eleven o'clock. A light supper will be served and there will be orchestral music.

Ladies, clean your kid gloves with Mather's glove cleaner; for sale only by Mrs. J. C. Dyer, 30 West Front street. All the latest novelties of the season in fine Millinery. Correct styles.

CAREY GETS WHAT?

Why Three Months Salary if He has Good Luck in Other Courts and Lives Long Enough.

As always, THE PRESS was the only paper to tell the truth last night as to just what the decision in the Carey case amounted to.

It had nothing to do with his standing today, and was absolutely without reference to the question raised concerning the qualifications of the two "interested" members of the Police Board.

To quote from yesterday's PRESS—The case was this: For "using obscene, profane and indecent language" while in the discharge of his duty as policeman, Carey was tried before the Board of Police of the City of Plainfield, adjudged guilty and suspended from duty for three months without pay, and the resolution of the Board designating him as "the regular policeman who should act as captain of police," was revoked.

The Court held that a suspension from office including a cessation of pay during such suspension, is a removal pro tanto within the meaning of the law which prohibits removal without cause, public trial, etc.

The Court cited the provisions of the City Charter which require the Mayor to nominate and the Council to confirm all officers not elected and which declare that such officers shall continue in office until their successors are appointed unless sooner removed by the Common Council.

The Court held that the Common Council could not delegate this power of removal to the Police Board or any other body. For this reason the proceedings of the Board were set aside. The Court declared that the conclusion above stated rendered it unnecessary to discuss the other questions raised in the case.

That was all there was to it. Carey was suspended for three months without pay by the Police Board under the authority of an ordinance adopted Feb. 28, 1882, by the votes of such shrewd and far-sighted Councilmen as Isaac Bushmore, H. B. Newhall and S. A. Ginna. The Court says that the Council has the right to remove a policeman, but that it cannot delegate that power to another body.

Consequently if the higher court to which the question may now be taken, rules the same way after another six months or so, then Carey can claim pay for three months. His subsequent expulsion from the force by the Council, was not a question before the Supreme Court. That happened after Carey began the proceedings just ruled upon. But the decision fully covers even that question, by saying that the Council has the power. The exact words of Judge Depue are: "The power to try and to remove policemen is in the common council and the proceedings of the police board must be set aside." So it will be seen that the Court rules in effect that the Police Board had no power to suspend Carey for three months, but that the Council had a perfect right to subsequently expel him.

The people who still see the sleepy sheet of Somerset street, were informed in big letters last evening that "Mr. Carey is still Chief." The utter nonsense of such a statement emanating from the vacant brain-tank of Carey's lap dog, is apparent after reading the truth of the matter given above. But even if the Court had implied by its ruling that even the Council had no right to remove Carey, his term of office expired when the new Mayor appointed his new force of police and the Council of this year confirmed them. But Carey was expelled from the force by the Common Council Aug. 4, 1890, and this action has not been set aside by the Court.

There are some circumstances connected with the ordinance under which the Police Board acted, that are not uninteresting. As originally adopted in 1882, and approved by Mayor Randolph, the Mayor had the right of designating some one of the police force to act as Captain. In 1884, however, during the last year of Mayor Maxson's reign, this ordinance was amended by another taking the privilege of appointment of Captain from the Mayor and giving it to the Board.

Councilmen Coriell, Dumont, Marsh, Ross, Wadsworth and West (all Republicans) voted for the change and it was adopted. But Mayor Maxson vetoed it, saying:

To the Honorable Common Council:

I respectfully return to your Honorable Body without my approval the ordinance amending the ordinance entitled an ordinance to create and define the duties of a Board of Police and a Police force, approved Feb. 28, 1882.

The ordinance proposes to take from the Mayor the appointing power conferred on him by the act of the Legislature "approved March 18, 1874." The first section of that act provided "That the Mayor shall nominate and by and with the consent of the Common Council appoint all officers of the City not required to be elected except the City Clerk and Janitor of the council chamber." The office of the Captain of Police is as necessary to the City as the office of Policeman and has in fact been recognized ever since the city was incorporated. I am aware that a former council for mere political or personal reasons abolished the office of Captain of the police while they in fact recognized the office under another name and another incumbent as Chief of Police. Such legislation is intended to frustrate the object and intent of the Legislature and take from the Mayor the selecting of proper agents to assist him in forcing observance of the law and the ordinance of the city and is contrary to the law of the state.

Respectfully,
WM. B. MAXSON, Mayor.

March 11, 1884.

At the meeting when this was received, Councilman F. E. Marsh spoke at some length upon the message, claiming that the ordinance did not interfere with the provisions of the act of the Legislature. He argued that the Mayor had no authority to nominate a Captain of Police. The speaker moved that notwithstanding the objections of the Mayor the ordinance be now made a law.

In answer to a question of the President, Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh gave his opinion in effect that the office of the Captain of Police was not a permanent one, and the Council had undoubted power to regulate how and by whom such officers should be appointed.

The ordinance was then adopted by the following vote:

Affirmative—Coriell, Dumont, Marsh, Ross, Wadsworth and West—6. All Republicans.

Negative—Beguelin, Gardner, Livingston, Love and Simpson—5. All Democrats.

GERTRUDE GETS RID OF THE GANG.

But the Troubles Begun in Plainfield Still Chase the "Actors" About.

Plainfielders have good reason to remember Gertrude Norman, "the celebrated English actress," and her "famous company," that played in Amphion Hall a few weeks ago. Those who witnessed the plays presented by the troupe will not soon forget how tiresome an "entertainment" it was, and those who were creditors of the company find it not difficult to recall how anxious they grew when they came to the knowledge that actors and actresses were stranded here unable to pay their debts.

When the troupe left Plainfield its troubles were by no means over. Debt followed the members about wherever they went, and only with the greatest difficulty were they prevented from disbanding. From Plainfield they went to Woodbury, where the audiences were even more impatient than had been those of this city. A word from anybody, and the people would have mobbed the players. D. O. Watkins, Mayor of Woodbury, private secretary for Dr. G. G. Green, and manager of the opera house, wrote to J. Edwin Hall of this city, who was to have his bill against the company paid with the Woodbury profits, that he was so disgusted with the troupe that he with difficulty restrained himself from ordering the gallery to assail the pretended actors and actresses with rotten eggs. He said that as soon as he took in enough money to cancel the debt owed Hall and the debts owed the house he sent the people out of town. Gertrude Norman herself did not appear but a part of the time, and it was currently reported that since the row at Plainfield she had hard work to keep her companions in misery grouped about her. At Woodbury they parted company all together, and at Millville, the next place where they were billed, she did not appear at all.

In The Millville Transcript appeared the following concerning the case:

"Big bills announcing that 'Gertrude Norman, the celebrated English actress and her own company' would play at the Opera House every evening during the week commencing February 9, were posted all over the city last week.

"The troupe arrived on Sunday evening, but Gertie did not accompany them. It was said that she and the troupe parted company at Plainfield.

"On Monday evening the troupe gave 'Apple Orchard Farm' to a fair sized audience and the next evening were to have appeared in the 'New East Lynne,' but they didn't, owing to a little disagreement among the actors.

"The audience waited patiently for the curtain to go up, but it continued to stay down, and after a long wait a gentleman came out and announced that no performance would be given that evening.

"A reporter went back of the curtain and was informed that the trouble was caused by George Reno and his sister, two members of the company, making a demand for money, which was refused.

"About ten o'clock an attachment was put on Mr. Reno's sister's trunks, and the next morning the lady slapped back by putting an attachment on the trunks of the other members. This made lively times for a couple of Justices of the Peace and Constable Bullock, for a while, but finally everything was settled satisfactorily, both attachments were lifted and Reno and his sister left town."

Reno and his sister are the two who caused the most trouble at Plainfield. There are still unpaid debts of the company's in this city.

A Plainfield Man's Discovery.

A western man who was formerly a Plainfielder writes that John Hanson Craig, of Danville, Indiana, enjoys the distinction of being the heaviest weight in the world. He weighed 11 pounds at birth, 77 pounds at 11 months, 206 pounds at 2 years, 302 at 5 years, 405 at 11 years, 601 at 19, 725 at 25, 792 at 28, and 907 at 35, his present age.

Forty-one yards of cloth are required to make him a suit of clothes, and half of the hide of a steer to make him a pair of shoes, yet he is represented to be a light eater.

Imagine his mother saying to him at the tender age of 5 (weight 302 pounds), "Now, Johnny, go a daydee with papa, and if you's tired papa will carry you."

Papa is a man about 150 pounds weight.

A dray was used as a baby carriage, and papa did n't push it along either; and when baby tripped on a loose plank in the sidewalk and fell, the neighborhood was shaken as by an earthquake.

One shudders at the horrible suggestion that there might have been twins.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT REPORTED.

Two Passenger Trains Collide in a New York Tunnel and Burn Up.

[Special to THE DAILY PRESS.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—A serious accident occurred this morning on the New York and New Haven Railroad in the 86th street tunnel.

It was caused by a collision between the Boston express and a local express. The wreck is now on fire.

A number of people are injured, and several reported burned to death.

The fire and police reserves are called out.

As the trunk line telephone wires to New York are still down, THE PRESS's long-distance circuit is cut out of communication with that city. Therefore later particulars of the above casualty wired this morning, are not at hand. It is probably not so terrible as first reported.

Entertaining the Boys Again.

The third entertainment of the course will be given the members of the Boys' Club and their friends, to-morrow evening at 7:30 o'clock. The new piano, which has recently been purchased for the club, will be used for the first time; the "Edwards Guards" will give an exhibition drill, and E. C. Pease, of North Plainfield, will speak.

Attention, Democrats!

A primary meeting will be held in the School House, FRIDAY EVENING, FEB. 20, at eight o'clock, sharp, for the purpose of nominating a Democratic Township and Borough ticket. All Democrats are requested to be present.

NO TAX FOR PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS.

Father Smyth Claims that the Question Is Settled for Plainfield as Well as for Other Cities.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In last evening's edition of THE DAILY PRESS under a heading "Plainfield's Case is Different," you comment upon Judge Dixon's late decision in favor of exempting from taxation the parochial school of Passaic, and taking the Newark News as your authority, you assign a reason for the Judge's decision, viz., the lack of public school accommodation in Passaic. I would not notice your article were it not that you go out of your way to raise an issue long since settled about St. Mary's School of this city and make statements which I consider unfair.

First—the reason you assign seems to have no existence save in the minds of the editors of the Newark News and Plainfield DAILY PRESS. The lack of public school accommodation was not even referred to by the Judge or opposing counsel. The decision as reported in the Paterson Daily Guardian and Paterson Daily Press—copies of which I send you—was based upon the Judge's interpretation of the law, and not on the crowded condition of the Passaic public school. I quote from the Press:

"Judge Dixon in giving his decision says that he would approve of the report and sustain the cancellation of the taxes, not on the ground given by the Commissioners that the schools were a public benefit, for many things are public benefits and still subject to taxation, put because the law provides that schools shall be exempt from taxation. The fact that the schools were only for children living within the boundaries of a certain parish did not deprive them of their public character, being merely a territorial limitation such as existed even in schools supported by the public and attended by children within certain limits."

The Daily Guardian says: "According to Judge Dixon's views the schools referred to are institutions of learning just as the public schools are, and being duly incorporated as such are exempt from taxes." Such are the reasons assigned by these two journals of opposite political views, and it does not appear that the lack of accommodation influenced the Judge in his decision in any way whatever, and Plainfield's case is not different.

Second, you add: "In Plainfield, though the school is free, the act of compelling all attendants to participate in study and worship of the Roman Catholic faith debars many from attending who might otherwise prefer the parochial system to that of the public schools, thus abridging the liberty claimed, and adding weight to the argument, the school is a private one and subject to taxation." Here you do us a manifest injustice, and we challenge a proof that we ever compelled a Protestant child to "participate in study and worship of the Roman Catholic faith," though we have had Protestant children attending our school.

With regard to the "sufficiency" of public school accommodations in Plainfield, I merely state a well-known fact that before St. Mary's school was established many of our poor children were refused admission to the public schools or at best were admitted for only one session on account of want of accommodation. The citizens of Plainfield are therefore indebted to us for two benefits: that we are, at no expense to them, educating all our own children; and have opened the public schools to their children who otherwise might not have been admitted for insufficiency of accommodation.

P. E. SMYTH,
Superintendent St. Mary's School.

Lewis Van Nest's Pardon.

[From The New York World.]

Investigation of the case of Lewis Van Nest, of Plainfield, shows that the ground of his application for pardon was innocence of the crime of arson, of which he was convicted. It appears that John M. Jackson, who was convicted and sentenced at the same time, has claimed that Lewis Van Nest was not concerned in the crime. Van Nest's petition for pardon was numerously signed by citizens of Plainfield, and favorable action upon it was taken by the New Jersey Board of Pardons Dec 31, 1889. The Board was also undoubtedly influenced by evidence as to Van Nest's previous good character, which was presented. This statement is made in justice to VanNest, who feels that a previous publication in these columns, in which allusion was made to his case, has done him an injustice.

Tariff Talk at the Y. M. C. A. Rooms.

A large audience was much interested in the debate on tariff at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, last evening. James E. Martine represented tariff reform and Mr. Coward spoke for protection. The audience dispersed about ten o'clock after tendering a vote of thanks to the speakers for their interesting remarks.

Next Thursday there will be a reception at the rooms, to which all are invited. The large audience present at the reception held one month ago will need no assurance that the gathering will be a success.

A Creditable Showing, and a Superb Supper

At the inspection of Alert Hose Company last night the Boards of Engineers and other dignitaries were present, and the members and officers acquitted themselves admirably. The supper was excellent, and the festivities in every particular highly enjoyed.

MAYOR PLACE RE-NOMINATED.

Borough and Township Republicans Frame Their Tickets for the March Election.

The Republican voters of North Plainfield met last evening and put into the field for the coming election the following tickets:

BOROUGH.

For Mayor—Charles Place.
For Councilmen — H. E. Needham, George H. Fairchild.
For Collector—H. N. Spencer.
For Freeholder—Jacob Long.
For Commissioners of Appeal—James Lunger, Randolph G. Silvers, John Clawson.
Appropriation for use in the borough—$4,000, $1,000 to be set aside for use on Somerset street.
Appropriation for borough purposes—$1,000.
Appropriation for Board of Health—$300.

TOWNSHIP.

For Town Clerk—Horace J. Martin.
For Assessor—Justus H. Cooley.
For Collector—H. Newton Spencer.
For Freeholder—G. W. Bullman.
For Overseer of the Poor—J. W. A. Bauersachs.
For Justice of the Peace—Wm. Van Horn and Wm. Boe.
For Commissioners of Highways—Michael Powers and John Goodwin.
For Commissioners of Appeal—James Lunger, Randolph G. Silvers and John Clawson.
For Constables—Thomas McDonald, Samuel Taynor and Wm. Baldwin.
For Pound-keepers—Samuel Hudson, Samuel Taynor, Godfrey Reick and John Stine.
For Town Committeemen (unexpired term)—Wm. C. Smith.
For Town Committeeman (full term)—E. A. P. Voorhis.
Appropriation for repair of roads outside the borough—$1,000, $400 to be left in the hands of the Town Committee.
Appropriation for support of the poor—$1,200, $300 to be left in the hands of the Committee.
Salary of each Town Committeeman—$50 per year.

It was decided to hold the next township election and town meeting in Spencer's Hall.

The only contests were over the nominations of Freeholder and Overseer of the Poor. Against G. W. Bullman J. W. Codington was nominated. Mr. Bullman received fifty-two votes, a majority, and was declared the nominee. Against J. W. A. Bauersachs David Weaver was nominated. Mr. Bauersachs received sixty-one votes and was declared the nominee.

WANT TO GET RID OF THE BOROUGH.

Dunellen Residents Clamor for a Change that Will Bring Them Annexation to Plainfield.

To judge from the frequent angry mutterings of the people of Dunellen, the life of that borough is in imminent danger. The residents have for a long time been dissatisfied with the existing state of affairs, and are now getting themselves into that state of mind which savors of mutiny. One of the most prominent citizens of that place tells THE PRESS that few of the people of Dunellen ever really liked the borough method of government after they once got a taste of it.

"We are disgusted with the system"—he says. It might be a good government for that place which is more torrid than the equatorial regions of the earth. At that famous Winter resort I am sure they have just such a government, and I think that the commissioners have ordered the roads and walks widened, for I read in the good Book that 'Broad is the way.'

"We too"—he continues—"have a borough form of government. But"—with a threatening shake of the head—"we won't have it long. What shall we do? Overthrow it—speedily, emphatically, completely. We have given the head animals running this menagerie very nearly all the rope they need. Now we are getting ready to put an end to the place as a borough, and a lively circus will be the result. When the fur gets through flying you'll see us settle down to the most model sort of government and become a flourishing, prosperous community.

"The fact is, the main point and aim of a borough government is to burrow into the pockets of the tax-payers, get all the money they can, and give as little as possible in return for it. Mayor Place in North Plainfield has done no more nor less than was expected of him, situated as he is. Dr. Brakeley, our own chief executive, is a good man, a good neighbor, and a good physician. He is good in fevers and good in fits. But we are going to take a hand ourselves at doctoring, and in applying the remedy of good government to the sickly, dwindling borough of Dunellen we shall probably give the old borough fits that even Dr. Brakeley cannot cure. One thing is certain: The borough as a borough must go. We are tired of it. We pay big money, and get no return for it. What we want is a government that will cause us to grow till we are big enough and a sufficiently desirable acquisition to warrant a petition for annexation to the city of Plainfield."

Thanks to the First Baptists.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The ladies of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union desire to publicly express their thanks for the generous offering taken at the First Baptist church, last Sunday evening. In behalf of the Union.

MAY TOMLINSON, Cor. Secretary.

Driven Out by Black Damp.

HAZELTON, Pa., Feb. 20.—Another effort was made to reach the victims of the Jeanesville mine, the point selected being the locality where Ward and Porter worked. Entrance was effected and considerable progress made when the exploring party came in contact with a volume of black damp which extinguished their lights and compelled a retreat.

Fitzsimmons Issues a Challenge.

NEW YORK Feb. 20.—Bob Fitzsimmons' manager called on R. K. Fox, of the Police Gazette, and authorized him to cable to the National and Pelican Clubs that Fitzsimmons would fight the winner of the Burke and Pritchard fight under the auspices of either of the above clubs for $5,000 a side and a purse of $5,000.

Nettie Clark Again in Court.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 20.—Nettie Clark, the young woman who was tried last fall for forging Produce Dealer Tourtelet's name for $5,000, was in court again last evening, having been surrendered by one of her bondsmen. Attorney General Slocum accepted the surety of Mr. H. C. L. Dorsey, and Miss Clark was once more liberated.

Normal School Professor Dead.

BROCKPORT, N. Y., Feb. 20.—Prof. H. G. Burlingame, late professor of mathematics in the Brockport State Normal School, died at 8:30 o'clock last night, aged 55 years. He had been a member of the faculty of the Normal school in this city for over 30 years. He leaves a widow and four sons.

HOW TO FIND A MINE.

Different Sorts of Mines Are Discovered in Various Ways.

Few people in this part of the country have any idea of the difficulty of finding a mine. A man who follows it for a living must thoroughly understand the nature of the district in which he is. Different sorts of mines are found in different ways, says a writer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. If you are in a placer district, of course, you have nothing to do except to walk along a stream with a pan in your hand, and test the soil by washing till you come to pay dirt. But if you know nothing about it you will waste a great deal of time testing dirt that an experienced prospector would know at a glance contained no gold. In a true fissure or contact district the experienced prospector will walk along the bottom of the gulches looking for "floats," although he expects to find the mine far up the mountain side. The float is vein matter which breaks off with the settling of the mountain and rolls down its sides. The prospector who is acquainted with the district knows it at once, and when he finds it climbs the mountain till he ascertains where it came from. A tenderfoot would never know what it was.

But sometimes a tenderfoot strikes it richer than anybody. The Silent Friend mine at Pitkin, Col., which showed a nine-foot vein of solid galena at the grass roots, was found by two Swede railroad hands who didn't know what the mineral was, and gave away three-fourths of their interest before they discovered its value. Experienced prospectors had been over the ground thousands of times, but there were no external evidences of the lead. The Swedes found it by rolling a bowlder down the mountain. The mineral cropped out from the place where the bowlder had been.

The great carbonate fields of Leadville were found by a man who was thought insane for sinking a shaft where there were no external evidences of mineral. He found the carbonate in a "blanket vein," lying level as a sheet of water, a great distance below the ground. A regular prospector would never have sunk a shaft there. But where one tenderfoot strikes it that way a hundred thousand get broke and go home disgusted.

REVOLUTIONARY WIDOWS.

Venerable Women Whose Husbands Had Fought in the War.

The last revolutionary soldier died years and years ago. But the revolutionary widows are still with us. Twenty venerable women whose husbands "fit" for American independence are carried upon the pension rolls. It is amazing how the widows of soldiers hold on. At the present time, says a Washington letter, Uncle Sam is disbursing $38,847 a year to the old soldiers of the war of 1812. But the widows of the old soldiers of the war of 1812 are drawing in pensions the snug sum of $1,263,239 annually. When we get down to the Mexican war we find the survivors a little the best of it. They draw $1,728,027 a year. The Mexican war widows get $695,054. But the widows are creeping up on the survivors. It will be only a few years until the Mexican war widows will be drawing more pension money than the survivors. That is the way the pension laws work out. At the Pension Office this is well understood. It is explained in a few words. The old pensioners marry young wives, and leave them their blessings and pensions. The pensioners of the civil war will reach their maximum in numbers eight or ten years from now if there are no more pension laws enacted. But the widows' list will keep on growing for a quarter of a century. Fifty years from now there will not be a Grand Army man living. Seventy-five years from now a grateful Republic will still be reimbursing widows for what their husbands suffered at Gettysburg and Chickamauga. Women are yet to be born who will become widows of old soldiers and draw pensions for their husband's services in the war of 1861-5.

There are to-day over 100,000 widows on the pension rolls. The pensioners number 400,000. These figures will be reversed in twenty years. Ninety-eight thousand widows draw $12 a month. Last year the civil war pensioners drew $71,877,619. The civil war widows drew $19,006,857, more than one-fourth of the magnificent total.

Y. M. C. A. Convention.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., Feb. 20.—The State Young Men's Christian Association convention opened here at the First Presbyterian church with a large attendance of delegates, about 500 being present. Bishop Vincent delivered the opening address.

I have been cured of a bad case of rheumatism by using one bottle of Salvation Oil, and I cheerfully recommend it as the best liniment ever made.

MARY CLARKE, Walthy House, Baltimore, Md.

Beware of Counterfeits! See that you get the genuine Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Price 25 cents.

New Officers for the Ayer Bank.

AYER, Mass., Feb. 20.—William D. Higgins, of Chelsea, has been appointed cashier of the National Bank. He comes from the Atlantic National Bank, of Boston, having served 13 years there in various positions. The trustees of the bank met and appointed Sadie T. Tuten treasurer. She has been a school teacher here for 10 years and is a good accountant.

Desperate Attempt at Suicide.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Feb. 20.—William H. Cooke made an attempt at suicide by firing two shots in his body with a revolver, one in his throat and one into his left breast, in the house of a neighbor where a game of whist was in progress. One bullet lodged in his mouth, the other penetrating his left lung above the heart. The injuries will probably prove fatal.

NEURALGIA. RHEUMATISM.

What Causes Most of Our Pains and Aches and How to Cure Them.

Stiff and Lame From Rheumatism.

Half the world suffers from pains and aches when there is not the slightest reason for so doing. Headache is alarmingly frequent and leads to serious results. Back ache is most common and keeps thousands in misery. Neuralgic pains of side or chest torment myriads of victims. All this suffering is unnecessary, and can easily be removed. Speaking upon the subject, the well-known Mr. James Rown, 27 Market st., New York city, said to the writer: "I have been under the care of many doctors for neuralgia and rheumatism, which I had terribly in my back and side. So badly did I suffer that I was unable to attend to my business for three years, before I came across the right remedy to cure me. This remedy is Dr. Greene's Nervura, and I have been perfectly and completely cured by this wonderful medicine."

Perhaps the most terrible case of neuralgia, and the most wonderful cure on record was that of Mrs. Louise T. Knight, of 436 Broadway, Chelsea, Mass. She suffered from an alarming attack of sciatica, and for eleven months the pain was so frightful that she could not sleep over ten minutes at any one time. "My heart-felt thanks," she said, "are due to Dr. Greene's Nervura, for the great benefit I received from that most wonderful remedy. I cannot say enough in praise of it. Before taking up the second bottle there was great relief, and now I am cured, am gaining in strength every day, all due to this good medicine. I wish I could tell every suffering one about its curative powers, and I will answer letters in regard to it, or see any one who would like to inquire about it."

OH, MY BACK!

Alonzo Patchin, Esq., of Boiceville, Ulster county, N. Y., spoke with unbounded enthusiasm concerning this remedy: "I suffered," he said "for many years with a terrific neuralgia in my head and neck, and oh, dear, how it pained me all through! I took Dr. Greene's Nervura and it cured me completely of the fearful pain. I think Dr. Greene's Nervura is the best medicine I ever saw or used.

Doubtless headache torments more people than any other difficulty, but the most aggravated case was that of Mrs. Mary Green, of Bastin st., Norristown, Pa. "For over 20 years," she said, "my life was made miserable by frequent and terrible headaches. At times they were so severe I feared I would go insane. I was treated by nearly every physician in this city, but none could cure me, or even relieve me, except by large doses of morphine. My head would shake so badly it had to be held. No one could suffer more than I did. At last I bought a bottle of Dr. Greene's Nervura, and the very first bottle stopped the headaches, and I have never had any trouble with my head since that time. After suffering for 20 years I was cured by Dr Greene's Nervura."

Another remarkable cure by this same remedy which has come to our attention, is that of Mary M. Dunlap of West Hempstead, N. H., who suffered recently with that very distressing complaint nervous and sick headache. After telling of her wonderful cure, she added: "I think Dr. Greene's Nervura is the best known remedy for neuralgia and sick-headache, and I earnestly recommend it to all."

That Nervous Headache.

From the above it is plainly evident that no one need suffer, when by using Dr. Greene's Nervura, which can be procured at any druggist's for $1.00 per bottle, a cure is absolutely certain. This remedy is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless, and can be used by all without the slightest hesitation.

Dr. Greene, of 35 West Fourteenth St., New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled.

N. B. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write Dr. Greene about your case, and a carefully considered letter, fully explaining your disease and giving you a perfect understanding of all its symptoms will be returned, free of charge.

UNFULFILLMENT.

I can not have them back,
My ships that sailed so long ago;
For wild waves tossing to and fro
Have turned them from their track.

They sailed so fair and free,
With towering masts and canvas white,
Out from a bay of dreams, all bright,
Out on a trackless sea.

Perhaps in regions far
They sail, those early ships of mine,
Perhaps their hoarded treasures shine
Like some fair glittering star.

Perhaps in unmapped seas
They float, with hulls dismantled, bare,
The sport of angry wave and air,
The toys of wanton breeze.

No more I look and long,
No more I watch with faint unrest
For shadows on the river's crest,
For boatman's homeward song.

No more I strain my ears
For some returning signal blown,
Some message from the vast unknown,
That held my hopes and fears.

And if I could again
Espy once more those freighted ships,
Which once I watched with smiling lips,
The pleasure would be pain.

For youth has slipped away:
And if those eager ships once more
Came sailing home from unknown shore
Into my quiet bay,

I could not joy in truth,
For hopes that built fair towers in Spain
Which crumbled into air again
Have perished with my youth.

I do not wish them back.
The best of life to me remains
I count my early losses—gains—
Content I do not lack.

O yearning soul! whose sight
Is set for unreturning sail
That ne'er shall catch a landward gale,
Nor sound the harbor light,

Be cheered. The better part
Is thine. The fretful waves are stilled,
The ghosts of hopes all unfulfilled
Shall never vex thy heart.

Fulfilment may not be
Thy ships piled high with answered hopes,
Yet still adown the sunset slopes,
Some treasures wait for thee.

MR. BOWSER.

Mrs. B. Tells a Wonderful Story of Surprises.

How She Was Overcome by Unwonted Kindness and Solicitude—Growing Better and Better Every Day—The Cook's Opinion.

"I HAS been a fortnight of surprises to me and I hardly expect the public to believe what I am about to relate.

The other morning, as we were seated at at breakfast, Mr. Bowser suddenly observed:

"You don't look exactly well, Mrs. Bowser, and it has worried me for the last three or four days. Are you ailing?"

"It's that—that same tooth, you know," I replied. "I think the filling will have to come out and the work be done over again."

"Too bad! If there's any thing on earth to make one miserable it's the toothache. I'll go down with you this afternoon if you wish."

I looked up at him in the greatest amazement. Mr. Bowser is not a cold-hearted husband, but, like so many others, he is prone to keep much of his tenderness and most of his praise for himself. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred his reply would have been:

"Tooth aching again, eh? Well, if you don't know any better than to get your feet wet or to sit in a draught you must take the consequences. I've got sixteen hollow teeth and yet none of them ever ache."

Mr. Bowser's kindness and solicitude surprised me and touched my heart, but there was more to come. When he was ready to go down-town he asked:

"Any thing I can send up from the drug store? No? Well, better make up your mind to go down to the dentist's this afternoon. My! but how that boy of ours does grow! And, say, I have been watching him for the past few days, and I must praise you for the tidy manner in which you dress him, and for his respectful and genteel manners. So long, little one—home by twelve."

"PIGS AND PIPERS."

Well, I stood and looked after him, and then I sat down and stared at the wall, and then I tumbled on the lounge and began to boo-hoo like a girl who had lost her first beau. The cook came in and caught me at it, and raising her hands to heaven, she exclaimed:

"Pigs and pipers! but he's been walking all over you again! If I had such a husband I'd put rats in his bed!"

It was no use to tell her that I was crying because Mr. Bowser had not walked all over me, and she withdrew declaring that she almost felt it her duty to mix rough on rats with his pudding.

In a day or two there was another surprise. At noon Mr. Bowser observed:

"You haven't been out of the house an evening for two weeks. Suppose we go to the theater to-night?"

I looked at him in wonder.

"It's a play I know we shall both enjoy, and we'll take Harry along. He's old enough to realize something about it, and he won't be the least bother."

"Do you mean that we shall all go—go—go—"

"Go to the theater, Mrs. Bowser. Just make your arrangements accordingly."

When he had gone I stood up and shed tears. Then I sat down and cried. Then I fell over on the lounge and indulged in some more boo-hoo, and I hadn't got through when the lady next door ran in of an errand and caught me, and exclaimed:

"Mrs. Bowser, I wouldn't stand it another day! I'd get up and assert my independence even if I had to go out and do washing at fifty cents a day! The idea of that man sitting down on you the way he does is something shameful!"

We went to the theater, and Mr. Bowser praised the play, the actors, the house and everything else. He even permitted five different men, who had forgotten to bring their beer in bottles, to get up and crowd past us three different times to go out and guzzle. On the way home seventy-nine of us were packed into one street-car, because the company had no oil to grease the wheels of any more. I expected that Mr. Bowser would exclaim, explode and inveigh, and end by calling upon everybody who preferred death to tyranny to leave the car, but he didn't. On the contrary, he seemed to enjoy the crush. They trod on his toes, rubbed the hind buttons off his coat, jammed his hat over his eyes and elbowed his ribs, and yet Mr. Bowser smiled and remarked:

"JUST GET SOMETHING TO PLEASE YOURSELF."

"Rather tight quarters, but if we all preserve our good-nature we shall pull through all right."

I lay awake more than two hours that night, puzzled and mystified and wondering if Mr. Bowser contemplated suicide or was going crazy. I finally decided that he was all right. All husbands run in streaks, like pork, and this happened to be the beginning of a new one. I didn't know whether the end was reached or not, and was, therefore, somewhat anxious next morning. Imagine my surprise, after breakfast, when Mr. Bowser said:

"You were speaking about a new carpet for the front chamber. Better run down this morning and pick out something."

"But you—you—"

"Oh, I'll trust it all to you. There isn't a woman in this town with a better eye for colors and harmony. Just get something to please yourself and you will please me."

I looked after him with open mouth as he went away, and I stood staring so long that Harry came and pulled at me and called:

"Ma! Ma! Do you think papa is going crazy?"

Well, I had to sit down and cry, and just as I had reached the boo-hoo part of the performance, in came the cook to know whether she should stew or bake the chicken. She caught me fairly, and, standing before me with arms akimbo, she exclaimed:

"And he's been walking all over you again! Mrs. Bowser, why don't you appeal to the police? If you say so I'll go right out now and call the patrol wagon!"

That evening, after supper, Mr. Bowser laid down his paper and said:

"Come, let's have a game of euchre."

"But you—you—"

"Oh, I'm not much of a player, but I'll do the best I can."

I was in dread of an explosion when I won the first game, and I noticed that cook had posted herself in the back hall, to be on hand in case foul play was attempted, but Mr. Bowser indulged in a hearty laugh and said:

"You were too many for me that time, old girl."

To my surprise as we played on, he did not contend that the queen of hearts was higher than the ace of spades as an "off" card, or that the jack of hearts could take the jack of diamonds when clubs were trump. He even let me take his right bower with the joker without calling me a fraud, and when I had won five straight games he pushed back with a laugh and said:

"First time we have an hour to spare I'll have you learn me how to play euchre. Better arrange to have a little card party some night this week. They are very pleasant affairs, and I'll do all I can to make things go pleasantly."

That was three days ago, and Mr. Bowser hasn't "backslid" yet. On the contrary, he is growing better and better every day. The cook came upstairs this morning to say to me:

"I'll tell you just what it is, ma'am. The whole caboodle of 'em goes by fits and starts. One day they walk on you, and the next day you can pull their noses. He's just got one of his good fits on, but you look out. I expect nothing less than to hear him breaking up the furniture the first thing in the morning."—Detroit Free Press.

NAMING MOUNTAINS.

Titles Recently Given to High Peaks in New Guinea.

There has been so much slaughter in recent African explorations that nobody has cared to bestow much attention upon the geographical snobbery which has accompanied them. Amid all the butcheries, torturings, floggings and cannibalisms which our pioneers of commerce and Christianity have perpetrated or permitted or winked at, it seems a small matter that they should have chosen to call all the rivers, lakes, mountains and waterfalls which they met by the names of British royalties or nobodies. But in New Guinea, where there has been little crime, critics are free to give their minds to the comic aspect of the explorations. "A gentlemanof the name of MacGregor—Sir W. MacGregor—I find, has been over there making a perfect burlesque of the local nomenclature," says Henri Labouchere. "Here is an abridged list of the mountains (very fine mountains, I am given to understand, before they were re-christened). The names, it is only fair to say, are not all the MacGregor's. Here and there he mentions a peak which had suffered at the hands of a previous "Arry."

But here is the list: The Owen Stanley range, Mount Victoria, Huxley's Pinnacle, Mount Musgrave, Mount Knutsford, Mount Henry Forbes, Mount Albert Edward, Mounts Scratchley, Gillies, Cameron, Douglas, Forbes, Parker and Jack Tanna. Some of these mountains are over eleven thousand feet high. Is not that rather big for the gentlemen whose names are tacked on to them? "Who tied Dolabella to that sword?" Will not posterity a few hundred years hence be asking some such impertinent question with regard to Messrs. Huxley and Henry Forbes?

Cremation Abroad.

Cremation is becoming daily more popular abroad. In Baden the Offenberg and Heidelburg city councils have decided to erect furnaces. The government in Basel has formally granted to all citizens of the canton the right to choose between being buried and being burned. A crematory is being erected in Manchester at a cost of $37,500. The Italian friends of cremation have recently assembled in Milan to consider the best means of burning bodies and of spreading propaganda for their ideas. This is the second congress of cremationists that has been held in Italy since the Italians, and more especially the Milanese, took the lead in pushing the cremation movement.

Immigrants to Turkey.

The mountain tribes of the Caucasus are emigrating in large numbers to Turkey. Russian settlers are not slow to take possession of their lands. The Government has been petitioned by such settlers to divide the lands that were vacated by the Caucasians into regular settlements and to establish proper judiciary circuits there. But the Governor of the Kooban district has informed the petitioners that their demands can not be fulfilled, that the time has not come yet for the central government to take into possession and to dispose of the lands of the abo-

A STRANGE STORY.

A Utica Young Ladys Dream and Its Denouement in Chicago.

A certain lady of letters, well known to some in Utica, in company with a number of congenial companions, was passing the summer at a mountain resort in this State, says the Utica (N. Y.) Herald. She and her companions, who were also ladies engaged in literary pursuits, agreed that each morning they would meet and relate their dreams of the night before, both for the purpose of making scientific observations and for the interest of the thing itself. Doubtless if the ladies had pondered the maxims laid down by the father of his country, and had understood that one in which he forbade the revealing of dreams, they would have followed his illustrious example. But if they had this anecdote would never have been told.

The symposium was held regularly every morning and was a source of considerable amusement. One day, however, the lady first referred to, who may be called Miss Gale, came down with a troubled countenance, and when her friends demanded the records of her sleeping hours she refused to tell them. She had a dream of very bad omen and did not wish to depress them as she had been depressed by its recital. There was a flutter of excitement, of course, but the refusal was final.

On the morning after Miss Gale appeared still more disturbed, and in answer to the questions of her friends she said that the dream had been repeated. She still refused to reveal it, but when the vision appeared on the third successive night, she became quite nervous about it, and was persuaded to make it known.

"The dream that I have had three times, now," said Miss Gale, "is this: I seemed to be sitting at my window in the upper story of the house, where my home is, watching the passers in the street. Soon a line of carriages appeared coming up the street, and when I looked more closely I saw that it was a funeral procession. I regarded it idly, but became more interested when it halted in front of the house where I was. I noticed distinctly the appearance of the train, the drivers with their black hats and gloves and the hearse. The hearse backed up in front of the door, and the undertaker's assistant, who was sitting up in the seat with the driver, jumped down and opened the door. Then he looked up at me and I saw that in the front of his cap was the number '9.' He had a deep scar across one cheek. 'Are you ready?' asked the man. I was greatly startled, and while I was trying to say something in reply to the question, I awoke."

The effect of the story upon Miss Gale's listeners was depressing, but after awhile one of them remarked upon the saying that "dreams go by contraries," and the unpleasant thoughts were laughed away. The dream was not repeated again. The vacation passed pleasantly, and their remembrance of the dream grew indistinct, and when Miss Gale returned to her home and the cortege of her vision did not materialize, she quite forgot it. Several months later she had occasion to visit Chicago, and while there took advantage of an opportunity for inspecting some of the public buildings. One day she left her friends on the first floor of one of these buildings, and went up to the fifth story to see some particular object of interest. Having finished her inspection she waited with several other people for the elevator to take her down again. When it came the others got in quickly enough, but the man who had charge of the elevator thought Miss Gale was too slow.

"Well," he said, "are you ready?"

Like a flash the memory of her dream came back, and she looked at the man, astonished. Then she saw the scar upon his face and the number "9" in his cap.

"No, no, not yet," she said, involuntarily.

The man slammed the door impatiently and the heavy laden elevator started downwards. It had not reached the next floor before the steel cables parted and the whole machine crashed to the basement. Four persons were taken out of the wreck, dead.

QUEER IDEAS OF AMERICA.

The Germans Think It Is Not a Large Country.

Americans who leave the beaten track of travel in Germany are always objects of more or less interest to the people, says the New York Tribune. There is the curiosity due to the great distance that the visitors have come from, and besides a German who has not a relative or at least a friend in this country is a rarity. The traveler is asked all kinds of questions about the United States, and often a most lamentable ignorance is displayed by the Germans about the distant country. A case in point is related by a New Yorker who spent some time one summer in a village in Hanover, at some distance from a railroad. He was visiting a physician whom he had met at Berlin in the university days of both of them.

One afternoon the physician, accompanied by his friend, drove to a farmhouse to visit a sick child. When he alighted the American remained in the vehicle. In the course of his call the physician happened to mention that his companion was from the United States. As they drove away an old lady rushed out of the house, gesticulating wildly, and calling on them to stop. They did this, and she ran up, all out of breath, shouting:

"How is my son? He is in America."

She did not hear of the New Yorker's nationality until after the physician left the house, and ran to make inquiry about her son, who had been in America for fifteen years. The woman had received no word from him or about him for several years. She thought, of course, that every one in America knew every one else there. The foreigner had much difficulty in explaining that he had never heard of her son, who was in Minnesota when he wrote his last letter. For some time the good woman believed that the New Yorker was an impostor and that he did not come from America at all.

"CAN I ASSIST YOU, MADAM?"

This is an every-day occurrence; she is taken with that "all-gone" or faint feeling, while calling or shopping. The cause of this feeling is some derangement, weakness, or irregularity incident to her sex. It matters little from what cause it may arise; instant relief may always be found by using

-OUR STORE-

Will be open evenings until 8 o'clock—nine, if necessary. We don't want to sit down and do nothing; we want you to come and make it lively for us; we have always advocated the early closing movement, but two or three of the merchants in our line don't believe in it; so after this we shall keep our store open. Don't forget that our prices are lower the year round than the so-called BARGAIN PRICES.

BURNED TO A CRISP.

Six Lives Lost in a Tunnel Collision in New York.

THE WRECKED CARS TAKE FIRE.

Failure of the Signal System the Cause of the Calamity.

Citizens Render All Possible Assistance to the Tortured People—Taking Out the Dead and Wounded—Railroad Officials Disagree About Responsibility—Engineer Fowler Arrested.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—A rear end collision between a "shop special" and the New Haven local in the Fourth avenue tunnel at 84th street at 7:20 a. m. was the direct cause of the death of six persons and the maiming of three others. The deadly car stove was the indirect cause of the fatalities, as it communicated its fire to the wrecked cars, and increased the horror of the calamity by literally roasting to death victims of the collision. The list of dead and injured is as follows:

The Dead and Injured.

The following is a corrected list of the dead and injured: Dead—John Hancke, aged 30; Michael Mullane, aged 15; Mrs. Nellie Supple, Mrs. Ellen Fay, John Murray, aged 49, all of this city, and an unknown colored man. The injured—William F. Brown, a brakeman, injured internally; D. M. Culbreth, colored cook, suffering from shock, Engineer Fowler and Brakeman Lynn, slightly hurt.

Who is to Blame?

So far as the details are ascertainable, the responsibility narrows itself down between an engineer on the Hartford road and the operator at the signal station at 72nd street.

The engineer says that, notwithstanding the fact that a train was in the tunnel only a few blocks ahead of him, he was given the signal of "clear track" at 72nd street. In this he is sustained by his fireman and conductor. The operator, on the other hand, asserts that the signal was clearly set at "danger," but that, disregarding this, the engineer ran by. The trackwalker confirms this statement, and the New York Central officials are inclined to hold the operator free from any fault on the strength of an investigation which they made, and which they claim shows that the engineer ignored the signals that were hoisted.

Crushed and Bruised.

Wherever the blame lies, the result of the carelessness displayed was most shocking. In the narrow confines of the dark tunnel one train loaded with passengers dashed into the rear end of a storage train.

By a miracle no one was injured on the crowded passenger coaches. But on the other train death came in the most horrible form to six poor working people, car cleaners, bound for their day's work at Mott Haven. They were maimed and crushed under the shattered ruins of the car in which they were riding, but their sufferings on this account were as nothing compared with what followed.

Fire broke out among the wreckage and the helpless creatures were roasted alive. They could see the flaming death crawling near them, and could feel the terrible heat of the fire on their cheeks for some time before the blaze reached their pinioned bodies. They cried out for help in a wild agony of fear and horror, but their cries could bring them no succor. All around were the walls of the dingy tunnel, lighted up now by the hungry fire, which transformed the scene into a regular underground furnace. Through this mass of flame raging there no one could venture to the rescue until the firemen had conquered fire with water.

Succor Came Too Late.

And then it was all over with the imprisoned victims. Fire, smoke and the crash of the fatal engine had done their work. The unfortunates had died shrieking for aid—aid that was only a few feet away, but from which they were as effectually barred by the great walls of brick and stone as if buried a mile underground in a burning coal mine.

The bodies of the dead and dying were brought up in the 86th street station of the railroad, where they were laid out side by side. The dead were covered with blankets, while priest and surgeon administered to the injured. They were then transferred into the ambulances and taken to the hospital.

The Engineer Arrested.

Louis C. Fowler, the engineer of the New Haven train, was arrested and taken before the coroner, who committed him without bail. Fowler has been 21 years with the railroad and is considered a careful engineer.

Superintendent Shepard of the New Haven road says that Fowler and his fireman reported to him as soon as possible after the accident. Both claimed that the signals showed clear and that they were the white lights. Neither of them knew of the existence of the yard train until their engine crashed into it.

THE FIGHT IN CANADA.

Goldwin Smith Replies to an Article in the Government Organ.

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 21.—The Empire, the leading Conservative organ, asserts that it has learned, upon undoubted authority, that correspondence has been carried on between the leaders of the Liberal party and "their allies or masters" at Washington, with the result that the long talked of Hitt resolution or something to the same line will be passed by the House of Representatives one week hence in order to give an air of veracity to the Canadian Liberal claim that the United States Congress and people are in favor of bringing about unrestricted reciprocity.

"This movement," the paper adds, "will not be sprung until a week before the election, and such a scheme bears its own foolishness and futility upon its face. The United States Congress now sitting is a moribund body. Motions passed by it now no more represent public sentiment than the decrees of the Shah of Persia. Its life expires in a few days.

"The Republican party which control it were hopelessly wiped out at the polls in November last, and the immense Democratic majority which will succeed them will feel themselves in no way bound by the action of their predecessors. No resolutions passed by such a Congress are worth the paper they are printed on."

Prof. Goldwin Smith Retaliates.

TORONTO, Feb. 21.—Goldwin Smith, replying to an article in the Empire seeking to implicate him in the Farrer affair, flatly denies all the allegations, declaring on his honor that he never saw or heard of Farrer's pamphlet, and that he had nothing whatever to do with its composition.

He charges the Empire with fabrication in its statement respecting his instruction to the printer. He denounces the whole article, so far as he is concerned, as a tissue of falsehoods, disgraceful alike to the editor of the Empire, and to his patron and supporter, Sir John Macdonald.

SMUGGLING CHINAMEN.

Three Arrests Made by Government Officers in Northern New York.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Feb. 21.—William and Robert Graves, brothers, of Hounsfield, have been arrested here, and William Mather has been arrested at Johnstown, N. Y., charged with aiding Chinamen to cross the Canadian frontier.

About two months ago they came from Kingston to Grenadier Island, and thence to Sackett's Harbor, where they made a perilous landing on the ice, having to be helped ashore in a half frozen condition. They were accompanied by three Chinamen, and some valises were also brought over which are said to have contained opium. The men claim that their passengers were half breeds and deny having any opium. Special Treasury Agent William Furness, of Ogdensburg, has been investigating the case which resulted in the arrest of the three men.

May Accept the Troy Crib Club's Offer.

BOSTON, Feb. 21.—George Dixon's backer, Mr. O'Rourke, has written a letter to the Secretary of the Crib Club, at Troy, N. Y., in regard to its offer of $4,000 for the fight between Dixon and McCarthy. If the Club will put the money in Al. Smith's hands and guarantee to forfeit the same if the match is stopped or interfered with by the police, O'Rourke will allow Dixon to fight McCarthy before the Club. Mr. O'Rourke has written to the backer of McCarthy asking if the latter will fight Dixon in or near Boston for a stake.

Legislation to Help Miners.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 21.—The bill providing for the appointment of a commission to revise, amend and make such changes in the mining and ventilation laws of the anthracite coal regions as will secure greater safety to human life and property was finally passed by the Senate.

Dr. Harris Secures Bail.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Feb. 21.—Judge Barnard fixed the bail of Dr. Harris, who is under arrest for malpractice, charged with causing the death of Carrie Gerard, at $5,000, and that of Mr. and Mrs. Gerard at $1,500 each. Dr. Harris secured bail and was released.

Two Murderers Want Reprieves.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 21.—John Crouch and Henry March, two murderers who are to hang next Thursday, have applied to the Governor for reprieves. Crouch is represented to be in a critical condition physically, and Marsh is alleged to be insane.

Asphyxiated at a Hotel.

SHERMAN AT REST

The Warrior Buried in the City He Loved So Well.

A GRAND FUNERAL PAGEANT.

Great Outpouring of Veterans and Friends from Several States.

Fully 25,000 Men in Line—The Procession Several Miles in Length—The Services at the Grave Conducted by the General's son—The Funeral Party to Return East To-Night.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 21.—The funeral train bearing the remains of General Sherman to his last resting place arrived here at 8 o'clock this morning. There was a large crowd at the station, which was heavily draped in mourning.

The casket and funeral party remained at the depot until 11 o'clock when the procession to the cemetery took place.

The city that the dead General loved so well made his obsequies an event memorable in the annals of the nation and a funeral pageant that was worthy the fame of the last great triumvirate of American generals.

Prominent among those in the procession were Hoyt Sherman, jr., of Omaha, a nephew of the deceased, Col. W. F. Cody (Buffalo Bill), who served under General Sherman as a scout on the plains a quarter of a century ago, Col. Forsythe of Fort Leavenworth, Hon. Amos Townsend from Ohio and Governor A. J. Smith from Leavenworth, and delegations from Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, Kansas, Iowa and other states.

The procession was in five divisions and several miles in length. The number of men in line was fully 25,000. The following were the local pallbearers: Military—Maj.-Gen. John Pope, Brevet Maj.-Gen. Amos Beckwith, Brevet Maj.-Gen. A. J. Smith, Brevet Maj.-Gen. John W. Turner, Brevet Maj.-Gen. Willard Warner, Brevet Brig.-Gen. John W. Barringer, Commander Charles E. Cotton, U. S. A. Citizens—Judge Samuel Treat, Col. J. L. Leighton, Col. Charles Parsons, Byron Sherman, Daniel F. Harrison, Isaac H. Sturgeon, Thomas E. Tutt, R. T. Tansey.

Brief funeral services took place at the grave, and were conducted solely by Father Sherman, who declined the offers of co-operation and assistance tendered by members of the local priesthood, and said that he desired to use his own discretion with respect to the character of the services and to perform them himself.

Amid the booming of artillery the General was laid to rest beside his wife and children, and a military guard will watch the grave.

The funeral train from the East will leave here at 7 o'clock to-night on the return trip.

THE POPE'S PLAIN TALK.

He Accepts the Republic of France and Rebukes the Monarchists.

PARIS, Feb. 21.—The Figaro says that Bishop Freppel has handed to the Pope a letter signed by the Duc de la Rochefoucauld, M. Paul de Cassagnac and 45 members of the Right and has had two audiences with the Pope.

The Pope declared himself in a better position than any one else to judge as to the best course, and since he accepted the republic he saw no reason that any Catholic, even a bishop, should reject it. On two points, he said, no misconception was possible: First, that the government must be acknowledged, and second, that the Church must hold aloof from political parties.

Great Relief for France.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—The French government is immensely relieved by the departure from Paris of the Empress Frederick and her daughter, the Princess Marguerite. Notwithstanding that no hostile demonstration was made, the authorities were in continual apprehension lest some fanatic should make an attempt to injure the Empress. Detectives in large numbers were employed to keep a watch for dangerous persons, and anyone who approached the imperial carriage was closely inspected. While the Empress was dining at the British embassy ten police agents in plain clothes kept guard outside, and no one was permitted to loiter on the street in the vicinity.

The French Budget.

PARIS, Feb. 21.—The increase from customs is expected to cover the loss from the reduction of the railway traffic duties, which came into operation on April 1. No fresh taxes are needed.

Ex-Governor Sibley's Funeral.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 21.—The funeral of the late General Sibley took place from St. Paul's Church at 2:30 p. m. All the State, county and city offices closed in honor of the deceased. The Legislature adjourned at noon, and attended the funeral in a body. The funeral pageant was the largest ever seen in this city

LA BLANCHE WHIPPED.

Knocked Out in the Twelfth Round by Young Mitchell.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 21.—George La Blanche, "the Marine," and Johnny Herget, better known as "Young Mitchell," contested before the California Athletic Club last night for a purse of $2,500.

Mitchell had the advantage in height and reach and was a slight favorite in the betting. Both men trained faithfully for the fight, but in the Marine's case some fears were expressed that he had drawn too fine. He felt confident, however that he would win.

The pugilists were loudly cheered by their friends. In the first, second, third and fourth rounds the fighting was tame but in Mitchell's favor.

In the next seven rounds there was some hard fighting. Mitchell easily stopped the Marine's rushes and sent him to the floor several times.

About the middle of the 12th round after a few blows had been struck, Mitchell hit the Marine lightly on the jaw. The Marine dropped and rolled over on his face. He remained in this position until counted out. A storm of hisses greeted him as he left the ring.

FAMILIES HOMELESS.

Fire and Explosion Cause a Panic Among Tenement Dwellers.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Feb. 21.—Fire broke out last night in a row of tenement houses in that part of the city known as Peterstown. The tenements are occupied principally by Italian families who became greatly excited and narrowly escaped losing their lives in trying to save their effects. The fire started by a clerk carelessly dropping a lighted match between some oil barrels in the cellar of John Blum's grocery.

The flames spread rapidly and several of the barrels exploded. The neighborhood is thickly populated, and at one time it seemed as if a great amount of property would be destroyed. The loss is about $15,000. About 30 families were rendered homeless.

Legislators Threatened by White Caps.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 21.—The Speaker laid before the House a communication dated Elizabethville, Pa., address to the State Legislature, protesting against an increase in the school term on the ground that six months is a long enough term, and that farmers' children are needed at home. Threats are made to resort to white cap methods if the protest is not heeded, and the request is made that all the members be informed of the intention of the signers. The reading of the communication created considerable amusement. The Speaker referred the communication to the Committee on Education.

Charges Against a City Treasurer.

UTICA, N. Y., Feb. 21.—In the common council last night charges were preferred against city treasurer Edmond A. O'Brien by Alderman Barnes. O'Brien is charged with absenting himself from his office, with failure to make his annual report, and with being in default $1,178. This deficiency was shown by the report of George D. Dimon, an expert, who has been examining the treasurer's books for some weeks. O'Brien has been living rather fast of late, and his books have not been posted for over a year.

New Silver Mining Company.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 21.—The certificate of incorporation of the Pyramid Silver Mining Company was filed in the County Clerk's office here. The company will carry on its mining operations in New Mexico. The principal office is to be in this city. The capital stock is $2,800,000. The stockholders are T. S. Reynolds, G. C. Buell, James Jackson, jr., of Lockport; Marsenus H. Briggs and Isaac W. Moore.

About the Coal Trade.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Feb. 21.—The coal output still continues to exceed that of last year, being now 900,000 tons in excess of the same period a twelvemonth ago. It is also evident that the production for the first two months of 1891 will exceed the 5,000,000 tons agreed upon unless there is a radical curtailment of the production during the last two weeks of this month.

Bodies of Two Women Washed Up.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Feb. 21.—The bodies of two flood victims were brought here that were found along the river bank below Ninevah yesterday. They were washed up by the recent high water and are in a good state of preservation. They are both elderly women, and will be kept at the morgue several days for identification.

Disastrous Fire.

WATKINS, N. Y., Feb. 21.—A disastrous fire occurred here about 6 a. m. destroying the Watkins Democrat block, the Kendall Hotel and two other three-story buildings occupied by H. Considine. The fire communicated to the Fitzgerald block and Cole's bottling works, which were also destroyed. The total loss will amount to about $25,000.

The Hearing Adjourned.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—The motion of William J. Gardner in behalf of Attorney-General Taber for the appointment of a receiver of the assets of the American Loan and Trust Company in the suit brought to dissolve the corporation and to annul its charter, has been adjourned until Tuesday, owing to the efforts being made to set the concern on its feet again.

Death of Ex-Judge Cable Green.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 21.—Caleb Smith Green, ex-Judge of the New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals, is dead, aged 72 years. He was born near Trenton and was graduated from Princeton College in 1837. He was admitted to the bar in 1841 and for 30 years was prominent in public life.

Jugiro Failed in His Appeal.

NEW YORK Feb. 21.—Jugiro, the Japanese murderer, has failed in his appeal to the United States Supreme Court to escape the penalty of electrocution. The Court has denied the writ of habeas corpus applied for by his counsel.

This is 1890.

A Wise Choice.

NEW YORK, July 23, 1890.

All other reports on Baking Powders signed by me or purporting to be signed by me are based on investigations made several years ago.

In view of the present controversy as to the purity and wholesomeness of baking powders, I have been requested to make a chemical examination of the leading brands found in the market.

My analysis of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder verifies the statement on the label, that the only ingredients used are cream of tartar, bicarbonate of soda (both of the highest purity), and a little flour to preserve the strength.

My analysis also shows that "Cleveland's Superior" is free from ammonia, alum, or other substitutes.

Owing to the purity, strength, effectiveness, and constancy of composition of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder, I have adopted the same for use in my home.

A NEWSPAPER STORY DENIED

The Ex-President Writes a Letter Declining a Nomination

Lively Scenes in the House Over Increasing the Number of Circuit Judges—The Democrats Go Out to Prevent a Quorum—The Colonel Committee Report Against Free Pipe.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—The published statement that Grover Cleveland had determined not to be a Democratic candidate for the Presidency in 1892, has led to considerable talk and discussion here.

The report, Mr. Cleveland's friends and admirers say, does not come from sources particularly friendly to the ex-President, and they are loth to credit it. On the other hand the anti-Cleveland men seize upon the story eagerly. Some of Mr. Cleveland's closest friends in Congress, however, say they know nothing of any declaration on his part to decline the nomination, and do not believe it. Congressman Tracey, of New York, says that a short time ago Mr. Cleveland thought of retiring himself out of the field, but frankly insisted that he should not do so, and that his duty was to obey the command of his party, and so the ex-President will not to withdraw and let the fight shape itself.

Ex-Secretary Whitney, who is in the city, when asked about the published story that he had a letter from Mr. Cleveland declining to be a candidate, said: "The story is without any foundation of truth whatever."

Mr. Cleveland's Statement.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—A reporter called on ex-President Cleveland and asked him if he intended to write a letter refusing to allow his name to be used as a candidate in the next Presidential campaign, Mr. Cleveland said:

"My ideas on this subject are quite well understood by all with whom I have conversed and who are entitled to be called my friends.

"If it be true that there has been a consultation of my Democratic friends at which conference my name was mentioned, I know nothing about it.

"I may say that I have such confidence in the unselfish Democracy of my friends that whatever they determine on I am sure will be for the good of the party. I have not expressed to them any settled determination touching my relations to the next campaign, and there has therefore been no reason for them to attempt to have me change such a determination."

DEMOCRATS WENT OUT.

Another Fight in the House Over the Circuit Court Bill.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—The House Committee on Rules brought in a special order providing for the immediate consideration of what is known as the Circuit Court bill.

The bill calls for the appointment by the President of 13 additional Circuit Judges.

The Democrats wanted time to debate the bill and to have it committed until the Appropriation bill should have been disposed of.

Failing to carry either point they left the chamber in a body.

The roll call which followed showed only 150 Republicans present, 16 less than a quorum.

The Hungarian Extradited.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—An extradition warrant has been received by the Hungarian Consul in this city from Secretary of State Blaine in the case of Josef Chrisotoffy, alias Howack, a fugitive from justice. The accused was taken from jail and delivered to Captain Ruich of the German steamer Fulda. Christoffy was chief collector of taxes in Hungary and embezzled a large amount of the funds. He fled the country, came here and was arrested. He confessed his guilt and agreed to return to Hungary.

BAD FOR THE PEACHES.

Delaware Farmers Alarmed by the Unseasonably Mild Weather.

WILMINGTON, Del., Feb. 21.—The warm, moist weather of the past few days has so swollen the buds on the peach trees in this State that some trees in Sussex County are nearly ready to bloom. A continuance of such weather would so forward the buds that a cold snap would work irreparable injury.

It is this unseasonable weather during the winter months that causes the peach grower so much anxiety, as whenever it prevails for several days in succession it almost invariably starts the sap flowing in the trees and leaves them susceptible to complete ruin, so far as bearing fruit is concerned, when the cold weather returns. It was the unexceptionally mild weather a year ago that caused the failure of the peach crop last year, although the trees also encountered the deadly disease known as the peach yellows, which eradicated the few that survived the vicissitudes of the winter.

The failure of this year's peach crop would mean financial ruin to many of the farmers on the Delaware Peninsula. There are thousands of acres devoted to peach culture, and when it is considered that the peach crop of 1889 was a measure one, and the crop of 1890 a complete failure, the anxiety over this year's prospects is readily understood.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The subsidy features of the Nicaragua Canal bill were strongly opposed in the Senate.

Sir John Macdonald, the Canadian Premier, is said to be contemplating a proposal for an imperial fiscal union.

John Eichlic, a very wealthy bachelor farmer of Holland, Hunterdon County, N. J., has been missing since Feb. 7. Foul play is suspected.

"Jocky" White, who lived near Wellsburg, N. Y., was committed to jail at Towanda, Pa., on a charge of criminally assaulting his 14-year-old daughter.

The rooms of the Broadway Club in Boston were raided during the night, and about $11,000 worth of gambling implements were seized. The proprietor of the place and four habitues were arrested.

Three vacant houses belonging to the Pennsylvania railroad, and situated near the Bristol (Pa.) depot, were fired during the afternoon by incendiaries. Two of the houses were entirely consumed. Loss not known.

There will be a meeting of the Clark strikers at Kearney, N. J., to-day, and a committee will be appointed to wait on the firm and ascertain exactly the terms which the latter offer for the return of the spinners.

A commission has been appointed by the Russian government to initiate a system of credit advances to aid farmers hampered by the stagnation resulting from prohibitive duties on imported farm machinery.

Samuel Post, the man who was shot by his mistress, Ellen Nelson, in their apartments at West Twenty-eighth street, New York city, on Wednesday night last, died during the morning at St. Vincent's Hospital. His murderess is in custody.

Annetta Leach, aged 48, housekeeper for Henry Kimball of Ellington, Conn., died yesterday of hydrophobia, the result of the bite of a cat on the forefinger of the right hand last November. She was taken with spasms February 10, and has suffered terribly since.

While coasting in Burlington, Vt., a traverse with 15 persons ran into a snow bank near the railroad track, throwing the coasters in all directions. A projecting rod of a switch pierced Mrs. Fennell's left eye and entered the brain, causing instant death. Mrs. Lizzie Wyne sustained a broken collar bone and three others were slightly injured.

William Morey, who was arrested at the Clinton Hotel at Kingston, N. Y., on a charge of robbing Isaac S. Cox of Carthage, N. C., of $900, waived examination and returned to Jersey City with the officers without a requisition. Cox had been in the regular army, being stationed at Fort Hamilton for several years. Sunday he was discharged and received his pay. He was on his way home when it is alleged Morey fell in with him and robbed him of his money.

Attempt at Assassination.

BUENOS AYRES, Feb. 21.—An assassin fired a revolver at General Roca, wounding him slightly. The assassin was immediately arrested and precautions taken to prevent a rising against the government.

The meeting is called for eight o'clock and is in the interest of the proposed prohibitory constitutional amendment.

PROPOSING A LIQUOR MONOPOLY.

18 Men and 18 Women Ask That the "Number" of Saloons in Plainfield be not Increased.

Below is published in full what is certainly one of the most novel and startling petitions ever created, considering its source. A number of the most respectable people in Netherwood propose a liquor trust for a favored few dealers. They ask that the number of licenses be not increased. The only result to be obtained by such action, would be to grant the certain few a monopoly and increase their receipts.

To Mr. Spangenberg:—The undersigned residents of Netherwood respectfully request you to use your influence against increasing the number of places where liquor is sold in Plainfield:

A Good Man's Sudden Death.

A most sudden death was that of William Colthar, of 149 Duer street, North Plainfield, last night. Mr. Colthar had been working at his trade of carpentry all day, and in the evening had been assisting his son to deliver copies of THE PRESS on his newspaper route. He retired at about nine o'clock, feeling in perfect health. About an hour later his wife was awakened by a peculiar noise in his throat. She tried to rouse him, and found that he was utterly unconscious. Dr. J. H. Carman was summoned, and ascertained that the man was in a state of coma, and could not be roused. The physician realized that the end was near, but did all that was possible to restore life. Mr. Colthar died, however, at half-past ten, without having regained consciousness. He leaves but one child, and a wife. He was a man of exemplary character, industrious at his trade, devoted to his home and family, and a faithful Christian. He was a member of the Trinity Reformed church, and belonged to Wetumpka Lodge, Knights of Honor.

The funeral services will be held Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. Members of Wetumpka Lodge will attend in a body.

Rural Admiration.

The New Market correspondent of the Bound Brook Chronicle says that "Ed. Schenck is the busiest newly-married man in these parts. After running a Plainfield milk route in the morning he has another through New Market and Dunellen, on which he delivers milk in the afternoon. Ed. is a hustler."

Maggie Johnson Worries Her Parents and Astonishes the Police by Her Escapades and Romancing.

The Elizabeth police listened to a strange story from a North Plainfield school girl yesterday. The girl is Maggie Johnson, whose father is Edward A. Johnson of 37 Steiner place. Edward works for Street Commissioner Conover. Maggie's elder brother, Gifford E., sixteen years of age, is in the office of M. Marvin Dunham, 7 East Front street. There are two younger brothers, and a younger sister. All of these children are well-behaved, and fond of their home, but Maggie seems strangely addicted to running away.

Thursday evening Maggie presented herself at the boarding house of Mrs. Emma C. Packard, No. 211 Union street, Elizabeth, and acted so queerly, and told such a singular story, that Mr. Packard went to police headquarters and told the Chief about the case. The girl was kept at the home of the Packards over night, and in the morning the Chief interviewed Maggie, who repeated without variation the story she had told to Mrs. Packard.

Thursday afternoon—she said—a tall, well dressed young man, with black hair and mustache, called at the North Plainfield public school and asked the principal, Chas. E. Boss, if Maggie Johnson went there. The principal referred the visitor to Miss Claypoole, the girl's teacher, who on being informed that Maggie was urgently wanted by a lady at Elizabeth, and that he was sent to take her there, let the girl depart with the stranger, who took her to the station, bought her a ticket to Elizabeth, wrote on a scrap of paper the address, 211 Union street, and told her to go there. He put her aboard a train, gave her $1, and told her that he would take the next train to Elizabeth. She spent ten cents of the money to buy cake to eat on the train. When she got to the station at Elizabeth—she concluded—she walked around it, found Union street without any trouble and without making any inquiries, and went direct to her destination.

The Chief naturally scouted the idea that anyone of Maggie's tender years could go direct, without making any inquiries, to a residence in a city she had never been in before, and this part of her narrative made him suspicious that the whole story was a fiction. He detailed officer Decker to take her home and investigate her tale. When asked if she was ready to go home, Maggie said: "Just as you say. I am not particular."

The girl was brought to Plainfield by the policeman on the 11:58 train. When Decker went back it was with the information that the girl had been indulging her imagination and that what she had told in such careful detail never took place.

Not only did no young man call at the school for Maggie Thursday, but she was not at school herself. Where she got the dollar from her parents did not know. She had run away four times before—twice when the family lived in Bayonne, and twice since they came to Plainfield. Each time she stayed away from home merely over night, sleeping in doorways and other sheltered places, and wandering about the streets till found and taken home. The parents are greatly worried about the girl, and cannot account for her freaks. Her age is thirteen years.

The City's Progressing Boom.

Another enterprising citizen has arisen to give Plainfield another push along the stream of prosperity it has been gliding so swiftly over for the past year or so. F. H. Martin has just completed the purchase of 480 feet front on West Front street, adjoining the late residence of ex-Councilman Clark. The property is 429 feet deep and on the railroad side of Front street.

Two or three streets will be cut through at once, and flagged, curbed and macadamized. Lots will be offered for sale from $500 to $1,500, but Mr. Martin, with Jeremiah Manning as a joint owner of the property, will begin the erection of a number of handsome homes thereon.

They Named the Next Mayor of North Plainfield.

The North Plainfield Democrats had a very auspicious and harmonious meeting last evening. John Bodine was chairman, and Frank P. Storr secretary. Amid much enthusiasm ex-Councilman Fred M. Slater was nominated for Mayor, and Charles Dresselt and Stewart C. Shann, for councilmen.

Although it is not yet known officially whether Mr. Slater will accept, yet it is understood that his nomination is authorized. He will surely win. A full ticket of minor officers was also nominated.

Welcoming the Bride.

A wedding reception was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Angerbauer at the residence of the groom's parents, Sycamore street, Wednesday evening. A large gathering of friends was present from Long Island, New York, Netherwood and Plainfield, and a bountiful repast was spread for all. The guests highly enjoyed the affair, and indulged in dancing until early morning. The gifts were many and valuable. As the people departed to their homes they wished great joy and happiness to the bride and groom.

No Bacilli in Cars.

Whether or not Dr. Koch's lymph distributes the bacilli through the system, is still a question among the doctors, but there are no bacilli in the business system adopted at Collier's, where everything in the jewelry line is A. 1, and inciting a healthy sale. Seeing this in the PRESS, of course it's a go.

E. P. WILLIAMS SAYS

He Thinks Mr. Fountain Did Not Intend to Misstate the Facts, and That Mr. Hawkins Conceals Them.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Ex-Secretary Hawkins, in his letter of the 17th inst., based upon hearsay, shows more zeal than discretion or courtesy. My address at the Sunday night Baptist Church Meeting, was a voluntary protest in support of the resolutions of the Society of Friends recently, denouncing the Plainfield Liquor Traffic in toto, and pleading against granting any licenses to liquor dealers during 1891.

The chief points of my address were: First—That to obtain $11,200 from 16 saloons during 1890, as a corruption fund in the City Treasury, the people of Plainfield became responsible for an estimated expenditure therein of doubtless $250,000, which was worse than wasted, producing vice, poverty and misery among their neighbors, and larger public expenditures. There is little doubt that the saloons average more than $50 business per day, and 16 times 50 times 313 amounts to $250,400. This assumes that these saloons did not (?) violate the law on the 52 Sundays of the year.

Second—That the contest is not merely with 16 or 18 unscrupulous men, desiring to be "rum" dealers and with their debauched customers, but is in fact a struggle against the whole brewery and distillery power of the state and nation.

The Society of Friends believes the home is as sacred as any church edifice, and that saloons are iniquitous wherever located. This Hope chapel experience was given as a striking and lamentable illustration of how liquor saloons wherever located uproot and destroy the results of church labor. My careful statement was that, "out of more than 150 who had been induced to sign the pledge at the Hope chapel temperance meetings, over a year ago, Mr. Fountain states that he and a friend are unable to fix upon more than 3 who are known to have kept the pledge then taken." This information was first received from one formerly a member of the Reform Club, who gave Mr. Fountain as his authority.

Desiring to be "very sure" about it, I interviewed Mr. Fountain, repeating carefully as above, what he was reported to have said, which he then confirmed stating it in sorrow, and also mentioning that one of the three had recently died. I regret that Mr. Fountain was not more careful then to explain that of the over 150 signers referred to, some had not been addicted to the drink habit. I am sure that Mr. Fountain did not intend to misstate the facts, and his recent explanation should be accepted.

Mr. Hawkins states that "A large number did violate their pledges," but gives no information that weakens my indictment of the saloons, or impairs its force as an illustration of the miserable folly of licensing saloons. His malicious effort to create hostility among the workmen who are my neighbors, was not justified by anything said. He admits some of them do spend their money in saloons. Doubtless either Mr. O'Neill or Mr. Watson could enlighten him considerably on this point, and Mr. Watson is quite sure he can afford to pay $700 during 1891, and take his chances in that neighborhood, notwithstanding the well-known fact that many men everywhere prefer to frequent saloons which are not in the vicinity of their homes, especially at night.

Mr. Hawkins should remember that no good purpose is served by a concealment of facts, and should be exceedingly careful lest his misguided zeal operates in favor of the saloons.

E. P. WILLIAMS.

He Has a Small Opinion of Our Sarcasm, but Great Faith in Mr. Spangenberg.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—As an effort for sarcasm your article of the 19th inst., headed "The Difference Between Voting in Private and Praying in Public," is poor, but considering how little you had to work with perhaps your effort should not be criticised. You also have committed the slight error of misrepresenting the facts. The facts are, the petition was signed by every man and woman in Netherwood that could be seen, with the exception of one man who objected; the signers were thirteen men and eighteen women.

You are probably right in your impression that "the majority of these men voted for a license man in 1889, and would do so again," but they feel that the granting of licenses has been carried far enough; any more would be a detriment to the city; the fair name of Plainfield is at stake!

Again you are right in saying that "it was the votes of these men who elected Mr. Spangenberg." When he asked for their votes he promised to fairly represent the wishes of Netherwood irrespective of party, and they believed him then, and do so now; hence his election by the combined votes of democrats and republicans. They still feel that his promise holds good, and that when the question comes up in the City Council as to granting additional licenses, he will be found representing the almost entire community of Netherwood both men and women by voting No as they have requested him both by petition and in person. B.

Doctor and Parson Indicted.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 21.—The grand jury at Catskill indicted the Rev. Henry W. George and Dr. D. D. Erway for manslaughter in the first degree, thus holding them equally responsible for the death of pretty Lottie Townsend, whom George adopted and ruined, and who was made the victim of a criminal operation to conceal her disgrace.

Classmen in Trouble.

ITHACA, Feb. 21.—The Cornell sophs made a desperate attempt to break up the freshmen's banquet. They succeeded in kidnapping the toastmaster before the police arrived on the scene.

I HAVE been a sufferer from catarrh for years. Having tried a number of remedies advertised as "sure cures" without obtaining any relief, I had resolved never to take any other patent medicines, when a friend advised me to try Ely's Cream Balm. I did so with great reluctance, but can now testify that after using it for six weeks I believe myself cured. It is a most agreeable remedy.—an invaluable Balm.—Jos. PUBLIC LIGHTS IN THE BOROUGH.

Councilmen Speak Their Minds on the Subject, and Better Service is Promised.

The street lighting troubles of the borough of North Plainfield were freely ventilated at the meeting of the Borough Council last night. The Mayor and all of the Councilmen were present, and all took part in the discussion.

Vice President Hughes, of the Edison Electric Light Company of North Plainfield, was at the meeting, and was requested to give some information as to the prospects of speedily perfecting the new street lighting system. He said that the company were doing their best to get everything in proper shape. They were giving the public all the light they could. Bad weather had greatly interfered with the work of construction. The company would not charge a cent for the service till it was all satisfactorily completed and all the lights were turned on.

After Mr. Hughes sat down the Councilmen were full of questions.

Mr. Emmons wanted to know, if he might be permitted to make a few remarks, why the company had n't kept the gasoline lamps burning, dark nights, when the electric lamps were n't ready. Mr. Hughes said that the company had done the best they could, and that their charges for such gasoline service as they had rendered would be moderate.

Mr. Hegeman inquired why the electric lamps had been grouped together so peculiarly in certain sports, while other portions of the borough had been neglected altogether. At one place, where the Mayor and two Councilmen lived, six lights had been grouped, which might to some people look very suspicious. Under the new electric contract a number of new lamps were gained without any increase of cost over the old expenditure. Why were not those extra lamps distributed through "Bull Frog City" and other outlying sections? Judgment ought to be used in distributing the lights, and no one locality ought to be especially favored.

Mr. Sebring, chairman of the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps, reported that no one need blame him for any fault in the matter. He didn't locate any lamps, and he'd rather not have any in front of his house, if he had his say.

Mr. Buckle asked if any arrangement had been made to extend the light system through "Bull Frog City."

Mr. Sebring said that poles had been erected, but that no lamps had as yet been attached. Judging from the present outlook, it would be impossible to enter any new territory with the lights, as the placing of extra lamps on streets hitherto poorly-lighted would probably exhaust the number provided for.

Mr. Hegeman stated emphatically that there were too many lights around his house. He didn't want the public to think that he was responsible for putting them there. His hitherto unsullied reputation demanded protection; the acts of the Mayor and two Councilmen of that neighborhood were not such that they needed light turned on them.

Mr. Emmons remarked that if he might be permitted to participate in the conversation he would like to ask Mr. Hughes why it was that such of the lights as burned at all didn't burn but half the night.

Mr. Hughes impatiently exclaimed that that charge was all hearsay.

Mr. Emmons responded that if he might be permitted to beg to differ it was not hearsay. He himself always went home early and slept all night, but other people—referring to several whose complaints have already been published in THE PRESS—reported to him that the lamps went out at early morning hours and stayed out. Besides, members of his own household were up and about the house at various hours, and saw for themselves that the streets were in darkness; and he rather guessed he could rely on their word.

Mr. Hughes apologetically remarked that he did n't know that the lights burned only half the night—that it was news to him.

Mr. Buckle interposed that he did n't blame the company for any short-comings. Whatever fault there was belonged to the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee. The company were doing the best they could, and while their system remained unfinished the committee ought to make arrangements with them to provide other suitable light.

Mr. Emmons suggested that if he might be permitted to make a few remarks the company had contracted with the city to light a certain number of lamps all night every night in the year, and had promised to begin that service days and days ago. If the company found that they could n't fulfill the contract it was their duty to inform the committee, not the committee's duty to hunt up the company.

Mr. Buckle threw out a sarcastic hint that a certain member of the committee was in constant communication with the company, and ought to be thoroughly familiar with all the details.

Mr. Emmons said that as he was a member of that committee he would like to have Mr. Buckle specify.

Mr. Buckle answered that he referred to the chairman [Mr. Sebring, about whose close connection with the company there are various stories].

Mr. Sebring was quivering with anger as he arose, waved his hand with a series of jerks through the air, and said that he was surprised to have so much fault found. Then he sat down and angrily tore up a quantity of paper on his desk.

Mr. Buckle at this point moved to adjourn, and Mr. Sebring promptly seconded the motion, which was speedily lost.

Mr. Hegeman said that before adjournment the light question ought to be settled. He appreciated the fact that the company was doing a public service in establishing competition, but he also appreciated the fact that the people in the unlighted districts were getting tired of darkness, and that something ought to be done.

Mr. Smalley suggested that the company do the best they could to get matters in proper shape, and not begin to charge anything against the borough till March 1.

Mr. Emmons thought that a fair proposition, and remarked that that would give the company a chance to get their lights in the habit of running all night. He said that the new light was a fine light so far as it went, and was much brighter and better than the light furnished the Plainfield streets, but something satisfactory ought to be arranged at once.

Mr. Hughes announced that beyond all question all the lights would be in order by Monday night, Feb. 23, and that perfect service would be begun then. As for charging the borough, no charge would be made before Feb. 25.

Mayor Place said that there was a legal aspect to the case, and asked Borough Counselor Reed to define it.

Mr. Reed said that it would be unwise and dangerous to make any agreement with the company at variance with the terms of the contract. Under that contract, which provided for forfeiture in case of non-fulfillment, and which was secured by a $10,000 bond, the Council could enforce any proper rebate when the company presented its bill.

Mr. Hughes renewed his promise to have all the lights burning Monday night, and to treat the borough fairly in the matter of charging, and so the matter was left.

The routine business of the meeting included the reading of the annual reports from the various officers and committees. These showed already and gratifying advance in the matter of street macadamization and repairs, improvement in fire department, borough lock-up and street lighting affairs. They will be published in the daily papers and also in pamphlet form, by order of the Council. Careful perusal of them will show that the borough is being left by the outgoing Council in better condition than ever before.

Mons. and Mme. Herrmann Coming.

Nothing less than the new and brilliant entertainment of the ever-popular Herrmann will be the attraction at Music Hall, Thursday of next week. The younger who has not seen Herrmann does not know the surpassing delights of enchantment, and cannot realize what charm there is in mystery. The oldest who has not seen Herrmann has not found the happiest way to renew his youth. This incomprehensible, this deft, this illusive and surprising Herrmann, is an enchanter with seemingly inexhaustible resources. See him every night and you are in no danger of being made a victim of monotony, for he is always devising some new mystery of fitting new clothes on an old mystery.

There is nothing chestnuteque about Herrmann. Even in his friendly talks with his public he avoids the stereotyped, being ready-witted enough to seize upon the incident of the moment for the purpose of enlivening his quaint conversation, and he invariably does it with the happiest tact and rare address. There is much pleasure for the spectator in Herrmann's manner of doing a thing, as in the thing he does. His skill is amazing. He never fumbles, and though the eye of much experience be fastened on him he never fails to make his illusion good. In genuine sleight he is the king of magicians now prominently before the public. His programme this season includes his latest illusion "Strobelka," "New Black Art," "Florine, Child of the Air," "A Slave Girl's Dream," Abdul Kham, oriental necromancer, Prince Awata, royal Japanese juggler, and others.

A Specimen of Bound Brook Intelligence and Taste.

After the fool-killer finishes his big contract in Somerset street, he'll take the first train for Bound Brook and give his undivided attention to the case of the misguided one who publishes the following in the Chronicle:

The Supreme Court have decided in favor of Chief Carey, who will receive his full pay for the time he was out of office and still act in the capacity of Chief. We congratulate Chief Carey whose motto is "Dare to do Right."

Our contemporary on the banks of the canal, should read his DAILY PRESS more carefully. The Supreme Court decided this and nothing else: That Carey's suspension by the Police Board for three months without pay, was technically a "removal" for that time and that only the Council had a right to remove. Consequently if upon subsequent hearings, higher courts sustain the decision in years to come, then Mr. Carey can collect three months salary. That's every iota the decision covers.

We explain this again merely to correct an error. As to the editor's congratulation of Mr. Carey, who dares to curse and blackguard the President of the Council and other members, and dares to tell the Chairman of the Police Board that it's none of his bankity-blank business why he doesn't go on duty, that is no one's else affairs. If the editor admires such people, that gratification is no begrudged by decent folks.

"There are millions in it," said a druggist when asked about Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Price 25c.

For some time past I've been a rheumatic. I recently tried Salvation Oil, which gave me almost instant relief. I sincerely recommend it as it has entirely cured me. JAMES GORDON, Balto., Md.

DUNELLEN'S SALVATION.

A Thirty-Year Resident Tells What a Borough Government Has Brought About.

A PRESS reporter interviewed Christian Schepflin, this morning, for the purpose of obtaining some facts in answer to the irresponsible statements of another Dunellen citizen quoted in these columns of yesterday. Mr. Schepflin has resided in Dunellen for the past thirty years, and has contributed more time, energy and money towards its prosperity than all other men combined. It's a saying old and true, in that neighborhood—"If there had been no Christian Schepflin there would have been no Dunellen."

The reporter found him justly indignant over the false statements of the other Boroughite. "He is a man," said Mr. Schepflin, "whom we are compelling under the power of a Borough government, to put down a decent sidewalk along his property. That's one reason he is against that form of government, and there are many similar reasons in his case. Until Dunellen was a Borough nothing could be done for its improvement. Since then Front street has been macadamized from end to end of the Borough boundaries and flagged on both sides; four other roads have been macadamized; Prospect avenue and the New Market road have sidewalks all along them, and like improvements for the comfort of everybody are added every year solely because Dunellen has a Borough government."

When such a man as Mr. Schepflin makes such a statement as this, that settles it. There is no further argument of any use in the matter. He is the largest tax-payer in the Borough, and if such a form of government was not economical and beneficial, he'd suffer the most. Yet although he is very emphatic in his views, and of a strong opinion that the citizen who spoke in these columns yesterday, is a detriment to any community and entitled to no consideration or respect, yet he has no objection if those who are opposed to the Borough government go to work in a proper and honest way to change it.

Gertrude Claims the Body.

Annie G. Nell, who as "Gertrude Norman" has played at Amphion Hall, this city, in "Apple Orchard Farm" and other alleged comedies, now poses as an identifier of the body of the Astor House suicide as that of George H. Edgar, and seeks to bury it under that name. She says that her home is at 141 West Fifteenth street, and wants some one to identify her so that the police will accept her identification of the dead man.

SUNDAY SERVICES.

Brief notices will be inserted under this head free of expense, but must be delivered at this office not later than eleven o'clock on Saturday morning to insure publication.

The Workers' Training Classes will meet to-morrow at the Y. M. C. A. rooms as usual at 9:15 A. M.

In the Trinity Reformed church, to-morrow, the pastor, the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, will preach at 10:30 A. M., and 7:30 P. M. The subject in the evening will be: "Grasping the Horns of the Altar." A cordial welcome is extended to all.

Services in the Park Avenue Baptist church to-morrow will include preaching by the pastor, the Rev. Asa Reed Dilts, at 10:30 A. M., on the subject, "Escape for thy Life," a sermon to young men. Sunday-school will meet at 2:30 P. M. All are welcome, and seats are free.

At the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Clinton avenue, the Rev. Dr. Taylor rector, the services next week will be as follows: Sunday, Feb. 22, morning service and sermon at 11 o'clock, and Sunday-school at 3 o'clock. Services also on Wednesday and Friday at 4 o'clock P. M.

At the First Church of Christ of Plainfield at Vanderbeek's Hall, to-morrow, the usual morning service will be held. Sunday-school will meet at 2:30. In the evening Mr. Cleaver will review, by request, Dr. Lewis's sermon on why he is a Seventh-Day Baptist. All are welcome.

At the Congregational church, West Seventh street, the Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor, will conduct morning service to-morrow at 10:30. Sunday-school will meet at 2:45 P. M. The hour of the Christian Endeavor meeting is 4:20 P. M. Communion will be celebrated March 1.

At the Methodist Episcopal Church to-morrow, the pastor, the Rev. Chas. B. Mitchell, will preach at 10:30 A. M. Sunday-school will meet at 2:30 P. M., and the Epworth League at 6:45 P. M. Evening sermon by the pastor at 7:30. Subject—"Who is responsible for lost souls?"

To-morrow being the anniversary of the dedication of the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel at Washingtonville, there will be preaching by the Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut at 10:30 A. M.; Sunday-school at 2:30 P. M.; and a song service at 7:30 P. M., under the direction of T. E. Hazel, assisted by singers from Plainfield, and an address by W. D. Murray, President of the Young Men's Christian Association.

At the Warren Union Mission the following services will be held to-morrow: Sunday-school at 2:30, praise service at 7:30, devotional exercises at 8 P. M., conducted by Frederick Moon. The Christian Endeavor Society consecration meeting will be held Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. Everybody is cordially invited to attend all of these services. The Friday evening prayer and conference meeting will be discontinued for the present.

At the Church of the Holy Cross, the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, rector, will preach to-morrow. The Sunday-school will meet at 9:45 A. M. There will be morning prayer and sermon at 11 A. M., and even song at 4:30 P. M. There will be services every afternoon during the week at 4 P. M., with the exception of Wednesday. On Wednesday Holy Communion will be celebrated at 10 A. M., and on Friday evening at 7:30.

Disorders of the throat and lungs, no matter what their origin, can be relieved and cured by the use of Hires' Cough Cure, the safest and most pleasing pulmonary remedy in the world.

Setback for Free Coinage.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—The Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures of the House decided by a vote of 8 to 4 to report adversely the Senate Free Coinage bill. Messrs. Wickham, Walker, Comstock, Knapp, Taylor, Tracey, Wilcox and Vaux voted against the bill, and Carter, Bartine, Bland and Williams for it.

Poughkeepsie's New Postmaster.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—The President settled the struggle for the Poughkeepsie postmastership by the appointment of ex-Assemblyman John I. Platt, editor of the Daily Eagle.

GREAT LOSS BY FLOOD.

Water Fifteen Feet Deep in Several Towns in West Virginia.

WHEELING, W. Va., Feb. 21.—Reports received from all points on the river in West Virginia show flood damages amounting to nearly $500,000.

At New Cumberland the immense fire-brick and pottery works of McMahon, Porter & Co., Smith, Porter & Co., Freeman's and others were drowned out. The entire loss will be about $50,000.

At Wellsburg and New Martinsville it is reported that the water was 15 feet deep through most of the towns, and dozens of residences were ruined. In the Eureaka oil fields at Belmont and St. Mary's the loss was heaviest. No fewer than 60 oil derricks were washed away and the tools left in the holes. It is impossible to compute the loss, but it will not be less than $100,000.

The mills here and at Martin's Ferry also suffered severely.

Trouble Over Opening the Bank Safe.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—The officials of the National City Bank, at 52 Pine street, were unable to open the safe during the morning, and had to borrow money to carry on the day's business. The fact that the bank could not make its clearances gave rise to the rumor concerning its solvency, which were, however, set at rest when the facts became known. The bank is one of the oldest in the city. The safe was opened after five hours' work by experts.

Moonlight Outrage.

DUBLIN, Feb. 21.—A serious moonlight outrage is reported from Cappoquin, Waterford County. The residence of Major Chearuley at Salterbridge, near Cappoquin, was attacked by six moonlighters, who rode up on horseback. The major fired on them from a window, wounding one. The moonlighters fled, and the major and his servants pursued them, but without overtaking them. They were all afterward arrested.

Lady Campbell Attempts Suicide.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—A constable last night discovered a woman standing on the Thames embankment weeping bitterly and making such motions as indicated her intention to commit suicide. He placed her under arrest and at the police station it was ascertained that she was Lady Lyang Campbell. Shortly after her arrest Lady Campbell's husband made his appearance, and after he had furnished surety for the future good conduct and safe-keeping of his wife, the lady was permitted to depart with him for home.

Terrible Torture.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 21.—Theere is intense excitement here over the horrible accounts received from Warsaw of torture inflicted in the examination of political prisoners. Poles arrested on a charge of being interested in a revolutionary propaganda were flogged severely and questioned at intervals in the flogging. One of the victims was intentionally deprived of sleep in order to drive him into delirium, during which he might make acknowledgements.

King William Is Worried.

BERLIN, Feb. 21.—The Kaiser is worried over the rumors that his health is such as to necessitate his spending four months in the milder climate of Italy. These rumors are accompanied by the assertion that during the alleged contemplated absence of the Kaiser from his capital his brother, Prince Henry, will be placed at the head of the regency. It is officially stated that the rumors are baseless.

Lord Churchill's Intentions.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—Lord Randolph Churchill is expected to address his electors within the next ten days. It is said that he does not intend to take any active part in Parliament this season and will be much absent from London.

More Commodious.

A Western newspaper which announced a "removal into more commodious quarters" had to own up, when driven to the wall by a rival, that it had simply gained one more coathook and twelve inches more elbow room for the devil to shove the roller. It was a gain, however.—Detroit Free Press.

Eminently Qualified.

Judge—Can you remember nothing of what took place? Try to recall some of the circumstances.

Witness—I have tried, your honor, but I can't. My mind is a perfect blank.

Judge—You may step aside, but don't leave the court-room. We may need you for a juror.—Chicago Tribune.

OUR DAUGHTER.

I see her as a tot of a child,
Who in the sunshine laughed and smiled,
Enjoying life without pretense—
A picture of pure innocence.

I see her in her early youth,
Her face the very home of truth
And sweet unselfishness, that strove
To lose itself in acts of love.

I see her in her maidenhood,
When knowledge of the higher good,
The truer life, endowed her face
With softer light, more tender grace.

I see her in her matron days,
A sunbeam in Life's darker ways—
Such sympathy she ever had
With sick and desolate and sad.

I see her in her later years,
Passing through many a vale of tears,
And yet withal you e'er could trace
Peace written on her wrinkled face.

Now, leaning on a daughter dear,
And a wee Annie playing near,
Just as she once had loved to do
She passes down the avenue.

And a glad smile is on her face
That lights it still with old-time grace
For, lo! she fears not coming night:
"At eventide there shall be light!"

A MIDNIGHT STRUGGLE.

Two Girls' Encounter with a Treacherous Intruder.

My sister Julia was always very courageous. In our youth the country was wilder than now; but it might truly be said of her that she was not brought up in the woods to be scared by an owl. She would traverse the most unfrequented paths, wondering at my timidity.

There was nothing masculine, however, in Julia's appearance; she was simply a sweet, joyous child, with an absence of fear in her character and a consequent clearness of perception in all cases of supposed or real danger.

When I was sixteen and Julia eighteen, my father hired a laborer named Hans Schmidt, a Hessian, who had been in the British service, and who, at the close of the war, had deserted from his regiment. He was a powerful man, with a heavy inbruted countenance; and both Julia and myself were struck at the very first with an intuitive dread of him. The feeling in Julia hardly took the character of fear, but was one rather of loathing; yet, if she could have feared any thing, I think it would have been that man, for she had an intuitive perception that he was demon-like, even beyond what his looks demonstrated. One evening she read of a horrible murder that thrilled our blood, and upon turning her eyes from the paper they encountered those of Hans Schmidt. There was something terrible in his glance, and from that moment she resolved that the villain should be turned away. As her wishes and opinions were always of much weight with my father, the latter gave the Hessian his discharge. Soon after this, Julia and I were left alone in the house, both our father and mother being absent on a visit until the following day, and we happened to be without a female servant at the moment (for we only kept one). So Julia and I had been remarkably busy since early morning making various household arrangements with which we intended to surprise and please the old people upon their return, and being unusually weary proceeded to our chamber at an early hour in the evening. We had partially disrobed ourselves when Julia turned hastily to the window.

"I declare," she said, "the evening is so pleasant that it is a pity to remain indoors. I don't feel a bit sleepy; let's go down upon the lawn."

We descended the stairs. How little I imagined what was in Julia's heart! Harry Irving came up just as we reached the lawn. He was only casually passing the house. Julia engaged him in conversation and he came and joined us. My sister was more than usually lively and engaging.

"Where are Tom and Edgar, and Will?" she asked, alluding to his brothers.

"Oh," replied Harry, "they are over at uncle's. They will be coming back soon."

His uncle's farm was a mile off, and his own house was about half that distance. The three young men soon appeared upon the road; and, to my surprise, Julia arose and proceeded to meet them. Then she returned to Harry and me, and called us aside from the door.

"Now, Mary, you need not be nervous," she said. "Keep quiet and do not speak above your breath. There is a man under our bed—there—there!" and she clapped her hands over my mouth "—a man under our bed, and the young Irvings are going up to secure him!"

They all provided themselves with heavy sticks; and then, guided by Julia, ascended the stairs.

As to myself, I could not follow them, but remained trembling and moaning upon the doorstep. Never did I experience a greater sense of relief than when the assaulting party descended, looking partly ashamed and partly amused, having found nothing to justify their sudden armament. Julia was in an agony of mortification and wept piteously, for, although but half convinced that her apprehension had been groundless, the idea that she, who had never till now feared any thing, had placed herself in a light so ludicrous in the eyes of those young men, was insupportable. The man, she said, must have taken the alarm and fled out of the back door, for she could not have been so deceived. Our young friends, more in pity for her mortification than from any belief in the reality of the night intruder, offered to remain in the vicinity till morning, but she would not listen to the proposal, and they thus took their departure.

I was very sorry to see them go, and watched their forms till they were out of sight, for the affair of the evening had almost frightened me into hysterics. Julia, however, at once rushed to the chamber, and flinging herself on the bed, continued bitterly weeping. She had exhibited herself in a character which she despised, and her man under the bed would be the talk of the neighborhood. I followed her, but neither of us could compose ourselves sufficiently to sleep.

The clock on the mantel piece struck eleven; and then "tick, tick, tick," it went on for the next dreary hour. Julia at length ceased weeping and lay in thought, only an occasional sigh betraying her wakefulness. Again the clock struck, "ting, ting, ting;" but it had not reached the final stroke when Julia, springing lightly from the bed, flung herself upon an immense chest at the further end of the room.

"Oh, Mary!" she cried, "quick! quick! He is here! I can not hold the lid—he will get out! Quick! quick!"

There was indeed some living thing inside the chest; for, in spite of Julia's weight, the lid was lifted, and then, as with the instinct of self-preservation overcame my terror, I sprang to her assistance. Whom or what had we caught? Imagine yourself holding down the lid of a showman's box, with a boa-constrictor writhing beneath; or keeping a cage top in its place by your weight alone, with a hyena struggling to tear his way out and devour you. But we were not long in suspense. Horrid execrations, half German, half English, chilled our very hearts, and we knew that there, in the midnight, only the lid of an old chest was between ourselves and Hans Schmidt. At times it started up, and once or twice his fingers were caught in the opening. Then, finding our combined weight too much for his strength, it would become evident that he was endeavoring to force out an end of the chest. But he could not work to advantage. Cramped within such limits, his giant power muscle was not wholly available; he could neither kick nor strike with full force, and hence his chief hope rested upon his ability to lift us up lid and all. Even then, in the absolute terror that might have been supposed to possess her, a queer feeling of exultation sprang up in Julia's heart.

"I was right, Mary," she cried; "they won't think me a fool now, will they? I shan't be ashamed to see Harry Irving!"

Poor Julia! Under the circumstances, the idea was really ludicrous; but nature will everywhere assert herself, and Julia hated a coward. Thump! thump! thump! Lid, and side, and end alternately felt the cramped but powerful blows. Then came the lift—the steady, straining, desperate lift; and Julia cheered me when the cover shook, and rose, and trembled.

"He can't get out, Mary, we are safe; only keep your full weight on the lid; and don't be nervous either; it's almost morning."

She knew it was not one o'clock. But one o'clock came. How I wished it was five! And two o'clock came, and three; and we hoped that our prisoner had finally yielded to a fate which must now appear inevitable. A small aperture at one end of the chest, where there was a fracture in the wood, supplied him with air; and hence we could not hope that he would become weak through suffocation. He was evidently resting from the very necessity of the case, for his exertions had been prodigious. There was a faint streak of morning in the sky; and there, upon the chest, we sat and watched for the gleam to broaden.

Suddenly there was a tremendous struggle beneath us, as if the ruffian had concentrated all his energies in a final effort. At my end of the chest there was a crash, and immediately the German's feet protruded through the aperture that they had forced in the board. So horrible now appeared our position that I uttered a scream, such as I do not think I ever at any other time have had the power to imitate. I did not know that I was about to scream, so terrible was the fright of which this was the involuntary outburst.

To get off the lid, in order to defeat the movement through the chest-end, would have instantly been our destruction; therefore, still bearing our weight on the cover, we caught at the projecting feet. In doing this, however, we partially lost our balance, and a sudden bracing up of the muscular shape below so far forced open the lid, that the head, arms and shoulders of Hans Schmidt were thrust forth, and, with a fearful clutch, seized Julia by the throat. Horrified by the spectacle, I threw myself forward, bearing down with all my might upon his head, as I lay partially upon the chest.

Just then a heavy crash was heard at the door below, the foot-tramps springing toward us as if some person were tearing up the staircase with the full conviction that this was an hour of need. The dim daybreak hardly revealed its identity, as he rushed into our room, but I had a faint perception that young Harry Irving had come to us in our peril. Some time during the morning I found myself in bed, with Julia and several of the neighboring women standing about me. Julia clasped me in her arms and cried, she was so rejoiced that the fright had not killed me.

"We are safe, Mary," she said. "Harry Irving was near the house all night. He returned after seeming to go home. It was not right, he said to himself, for us to remain alone here all night, especially as our father was known to have money in the house. So he kept out of sight, but remained near. The least scream he would have heard as he at last heard yours; but I am glad you did not scream before, for now we have had an experience, and know what we can do. It was tedious; but I don't wish to be thought afraid of my own shadow, and I'm glad we had to hold the chest down a good while."

Hans Schmidt had evidently decided upon the chest as a safer hiding place than that in which Julia first discovered him. Upon the very morning on which Henry Irving stunned and secured the ruffian in our room, the officers of justice were searching for the old Hessian scoundrel as a supposed murderer, and he was soon afterward convicted and hung.

Julia became the wife of Henry Irving, and a most excellent wife she was. Magnanimous and unrevengeful, she was perhaps the only one who felt no gratification at the fate of old Hans Schmidt, but rather a pity for the ignorance which had steeped him in crime.—N. Y. Evening World.

THE MATCH PUZZLE.

It Has Bothered the Ingenuity of Many an Architect.

Split slightly the end of one match, says the Boston Globe, then cut slantingly the end of a second one, which is to be inserted in the divided end of the first, forming an acute angle. Place them on the table, the summit of the angle at the top, leaning against a third match, as represented below.

These are all the preparations needed.

Give a fourth match to any one present, asking him to lift, by the aid of the first three matches which form the angle. This is the problem which is to be solved, and the figure held by the hand in the illustration shows the solution of it.

It is only necessary to press the fourth match lightly against the first two in order to allow the third to fall on the one you hold, also to lower the hand so that this third one may drop into the hollow of the angle formed by the first two. Then lift the match that you hold in your hand, on which rests the combination of the three matches.

Like all puzzles, this is very simple to those who know it, but I have seen many an eminent architect's patience tried severely while doing it.

ANILINE IN MEDICINE.

Wounds and Sores Completely Sterilized with the Drug.

It is a well-known fact in biology that bacteria and bacilli absorb aniline and are killed by it. Two German observers—Stilling and Wortmann—have recently considered the possibility of utilizing this property in medical treatment (Humboldt). The diffusibility and harmlessness of violet aniline dyes (called, for brevity, "methyl violet") without arsenic, in small doses, were first demonstrated on rabbits and guinea pigs. Then certain eye disorders were produced in those animals, and treated with aniline solution, the results being excellent. The authors proceeded to operate on the human subject. A skin ulcer on a scrofulous child, which had been treated for a month with the ordinary antiseptic agents without success, was gradually healed by daily dropping a little aniline solution on the sore; and similar good results were had with bad cases of eye disease. It soon appeared that many surgical cases were open to successful treatment in this way; and that, in general, wounds and sores developing suppuration could be terilized with aniline. It is also thought that cases of internal inflammation, as in pleuritis and peritonitis, may prove to be not beyond the reach of this order of treatment.

UNDER THE BED.

The Woman Who Looked for a Burglar Rewarded at Last.

"You've heard of that burglar under the bed," said Mrs. Westside. "Well, I've just had the greatest scare of my life. I've been looking for that burglar under the bed ever since I was a school girl, and my grown children long ago joined in the hunt."

"And found him at last?"

"Wait—I'll tell you. The other day I went to visit some friends in Washington. I stopped at the home of a couple of old maids—the nicest people in the world, you know—who had been recently bereft of a loved relative. He had died in the house. During the evening the conversation naturally turned upon the character and last illness of this man. It was only a casual conversation. Nothing was remarkable about it and the subject was quickly lost in the flood of other talk. We sat up late, and when we arose to retire one of the girls laughingly inquired whether I was afraid to sleep alone.

AFTER THE DISCOVERY.

"'Because, she said, 'we have no man about the house now. If you're the least bit timid you can sleep here, though the best room is ready for you.'

"'Dear me,' said I, 'I'm not a child,' and I was shown up to a handsome bedroom.

"'You know I'm not a bit afraid of a man.' I'm more afraid without one. I'm not at all superstitious—wouldn't be afraid to raise an umbrella in my room, to walk under a ladder or through a graveyard.' I began to disrobe without ceremony as soon as my friend bade me good-night. Her last remark recalled the conversation about the man who died there, 'probably in this very room,' I thought, looking around—'perhaps in this bed.' But even if I had been certain of this the fact wouldn't have disturbed my rest. So I went on with my preparations. Before I jumped into bed and turned out the gas I did just what I had done from girlhood—threw up the overhanging coverlet and looked under the bed for that burglar.

"Heavens! The sight that met my eyes fairly froze my blood! I was rooted to the spot with horror!

"The long-expected burglar? No. At that moment I would have welcomed the most desperate burglar who ever lived. I would have embraced him. I saw a long, cloth-covered box, with brass drop-handles on the side and studded with brass-headed tacks along the edges.

"I was so frightened, so utterly astounded, I couldn't scream, or I should have yelled loud enough to raise the neighborhood. Fortunately I heard a footstep at that moment and a tap at the door. It was the other sister come to bid me good-night.

"'Good gracious!' she exclaimed, seeing my white face. 'What in the world—'

"I—I—oh, dear! As soon as I could find my tongue. 'Why do you k—k—keep that co—cof—fin under the bed?'

"She burst into a hearty laugh. Running quickly to the bed she pulled the thing out. It was a dress-box. We sat down on the floor and laughed together. I think I cried. I don't care. It would have scared a mule! Even after I knew what it was I couldn't sleep soundly a single night while there for dreaming it was a coffin!"—N. Y. World.

Two Bottles Cured Her. 6
CARROLL, IA., July, 1889.
I was suffering 10 years from shocks in my head, so much so, that at times I didn't expect to recover. I took medicines from many doctors, but didn't get any relief until I took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, the second dose relieved me and 2 bottles cured me. S. W. STOCK.

Spent a Small Fortune.
134 Mahony City, Schuylkill Co., Pa., May, '90.
My son, who is now sixteen years old, had epileptic fits for about four years. I spent a small fortune for doctors and medicine to get him cured, but to no avail until he took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic. It is a year now, since he is perfectly cured, has not had the symptoms of a spell since. I am therefore very thankful for this medicine, and recommend it to all sufferers.

FIVE RESCUED ALIVE

Jeanesville Miners Saved When Given Up for Dead.

DEATH CHEATED OF HIS PREY.

The Victims Imprisoned Eighteen Days Without Food.

Nothing Like It Has Been Known in Pennsylvania's Coal Fields—The Men Huddled Together When Found—Too Weak to be Removed—Doctors Summoned to the Underground Prison.

JEANESVILLE, Pa., Feb. 24.—This place was thrown into a fever of excitement at 11:30 last night when it was announced that five of the men who were entombed in the mine here 18 days had been found alive.

Their names are John Tumaskusky, Joe Mastuskowich, John Berno, Bosco Frinko and an unknown Hungarian who was visiting Berno on the day of the disaster.

These five, with the 13 bodies recovered, makes every one of the missing men accounted for. How they survived is a miracle. Nothing like it has been known or heard of in the anthracite coal fields of Pennsylvania.

The Rescuers Heard a Slight Tapping.

At 9 o'clock last night there came to the ears of the workers in the deepest shaft the sound of a faint tapping from an abandoned position of the mine. The workers listened intently and the tapping was resumed. It was recognized as a signal from their imprisoned brothers who were still alive. The news was sent to the mouth of the mine and it created the wildest excitement. At 10 o'clock the rescuing party had gotten so near the imprisoned men as to be able to converse with them. The men were located in an overhead passageway, and could not possibly be reached until the foul gases and impurities had been removed. Every effort was exerted, and preparations for receiving them were made.

Huddled Together to Keep Warm.

At 11:30 the five fortunate men were reached. They were lying in various positions all huddled together in their efforts to keep warm.

Careful examination revealed the fact that all were still alive. They were so weak that, with one exception, they could not be removed. John Tumaskusky's excellent strength left him in better shape than any of the rest and he was able to be moved to the bottom of the slope. There he was cared for by physicians, who had been hurriedly summoned, while the other men were cared for where they lay.

To Remain Underground.

The men will not be brought to the surface for several days. Careful nursing will be given them and every effort put forth to save their lives so that their terrible tale may be heard.

PROBABLY 120 DEAD.

Appeal for Aid for the Widows and Orphans at Spring Hill.

SPRING HILL, N. S., Feb. 24.—An appeal has been issued for aid for the orphans and widows of the miners who perished in the terrible mine disaster of Saturday.

This appeal will be sent broadcast, and the necessity for a prompt response is great. The first subscription to the relief fund was telegraphed from J. W. Clendenning, president of the Acadia Coal Company, New York. It amounts to $500.

There will be nearly 200 beneficiaries to be provided for out of subscriptions in this cause.

There are given out the names of 120 miners who are probably all on the list of the dead, though the bodies are not all yet found.

Most of those whose bodies have been found evidently died of suffocation.

Four Race Track Bills.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 24.—In the House Mr. Ketcham, of Essex, presented a protest signed by 17,500 women against any legislation to legalize pool selling or permit Sunday liquor selling. The signatures were gathered in every part of the State. A few moments later Mr. Campbell, of Monmouth, introduced four race track bills designed to permit racing on regularly accredited courses of the State, and to prohibit it when not properly licensed. The bills have been agreed to by the managers of the leading racing associations.

Banquet of Veterans.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—The Association of the Eleventh Army Corps of the Army of the Potomac, Cumberland and Georgia banquetted at Delmonico's last night. Gen. O. O. Howard, president of the society, made a happy speech of reminiscence. Hon. Carl Schurz delivered the speech of the evening. A. C. Hamlin, of Bangor, Me., gave a history of the corps. Gen. Franz Sigel also spoke.

Judge Hines Recovering.

RUTLAND, Vt., Feb. 24.—Judge C. C. Hines, of New York, formerly law partner of President Harrison, who was stricken with paralysis at his summer home at Proctorville several months ago, and who has been reported dead several times, has so far recovered as to be able to travel. He left for New York to-day. His entire recovery is now probable.

Worcester's Exhibition Opened.

WORCESTER, Mass., Feb. 24.—The Industrial and Mechanical Exhibition opened last night with an address by H. H. Bigelow. The mayor pressed the button and set in motion the electric motors which run the machinery of the exhibition. The exhibition will continue until April 1.

THE PINKERTONS FLED.

Striking Cokers Become Violent and Join in a Big Demonstration.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., Feb. 24.—The coolness of John McSloy, worthy foreman of the Knights of Labor district to which the striking cokers belong, alone prevented wholesale destruction of property at the Paull and Fort Hill plants of W. J. Rainey & Co. during the day. It is doubtful whether any number of leaders can prevent serious trouble much longer.

Two thousand strikers surrounded the Paull and Fort Hill plants, their object being to induce the cokers at work there to join the strike. When the strikers appeared the men at work and the Pinkerton men employed to guard them ran to the hills. Most of the invading party were Hungarians, and these, and many others were armed. They discharged their weapons in the air and started a rush to destroy the ovens.

McSloy, who was in command of the expedition, gathered a few men about him, stopped the advance and persuaded the strikers to go to a field near by, where a meeting was held. Here McSloy and the others advocated moderation, but they were overruled, and the mob decided to camp where they were and force a suspension of work. They call it persuasion, but if there are no broken heads to-morrow it will only be because the Rainey men do as the strikers wish. Mr. Rainey says he is dertemined to protect his men and will call on the sheriff for aid.

HE DEMANDS $50,000.

That is the Amount Brakeman Stevens Wants for the Loss of His Legs.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 24.—The giving away of a brake chain at Spring street, on a Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad train Feb. 19, 1890, resulted in an accident by which Brakeman George L. Stevens was deprived of both of his legs. Stevens, who is an old railroad man, although but 25 years of age, fell directly beneath the first car, and the entire train of nine cars passed over his legs.

Stevens, who now gets about fairly well on cork legs, received a proposition from the railroad company looking to a settlement of the matter. This was refused on the grounds that Mr. Stevens valued his legs at a far higher figure than did the company. Stevens, who lives at 583 Broad street, has employed Bob Ingersoll and C. E. P. Howard to bring suit against the company, and the trial of the case will come up in a short time.

A FIENDISH ACT.

Train Wreckers at Work Again on the Bald Eagle Valley Railroad.

ALTOONA, Pa., Feb. 24.—A fiendish act was perpetrated on the Bald Eagle Valley Railroad near Milesburg during the morning. Some unknown persons placed a stone in the switch, and as the passenger train passed over it the engine left the track, followed by several of the coaches.

Fireman Gazette, of Tyrone, jumped from the engine and was instantly killed. The engineer did likewise, but escaped injury. None of the passengers were injured, but all were badly shaken up.

On three occasions lately passenger trains have been wrecked at this point.

Society of the Cincinnati Banquet.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—The Society of the Cincinnati of New York State celebrated Washington's birthday by a banquet at the Plaza Hotel last night. Secretary Halford sent regrets on behalf of the President. Governor Hill also sent regrets. Among those present were John J. Varick, of Manchester N. H.; Cornelius Van Rensselaer, of Hudson, N. Y.; John Crofter, of Washington, and Felix Warly, of South Carolina. Hon. Hamilton Fish presided. A number of patriotic speeches were made.

Trouble With World's Fair Employes.

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—A crowd of about 3,000 men and boys, mostly idlers, by threats and intimidation compelled 25 men employed in Jackson Park by World's Fair contractors to cease work. Two patrol wagons filled with policemen were called to the scene and the crowd soon fell back and was excluded from the park. There was no shooting and no one was injured. Only a portion of the frightened laborers resumed work after order had been restored.

Caught by a Train.

CHESTER, Pa., Feb. 24.—A Reading engine caught a party of young men on the trestle work near Ridley Creek bridge last night. John McClosky, aged 16, was struck and instantly killed, and William P. Powell was so badly injured that he died during the morning. The others of the party escaped by leaping into the muddy bed of the creek.

Will Demand that Wages be Reduced.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 24.—The Railroad Coal Operators' Association of the Pittsburg district decided to demand from the miners that wages be reduced on May 1 next, when the present agreement will expire. No decision was reached about the amount of the reduction to be asked.

SILVER THE ISSUE

Senator Blackburn Will Oppose Mr. Cleveland.

HIS LETTER CREATES A STIR

He Says No Man Opposed to Free Silver Coinage Can be Elected President.

The House Passes the Postoffice Bill—A Report that Secretary Tracy Was Offered the Treasuryship and Declined It—Russia to Send a Grand Exhibit to the World's Fair.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Considerable of a sensation has been caused here by the publication of a letter from Senator Blackburn to Col. John C. Noble of Paducah, Ky., in which the Senator says:

"In the light of the publication of Mr. Cleveland's letter antagonizing his party upon the silver question, I do not believe there is a Democratic member of the Senate who would favor his nomination for the Presidency, or who believes that it would be possible to elect him in '92 if nominated. No organization is effected or attempted here hostile to him, but there is now but one opinion as to his lack of availability.

"I have no personal objection to Mr. Cleveland in the world, but I do not believe that any man can be elected President in '92 who is opposed to free silver coinage. The people have been trifled with long enough on this subject. The truth is that for 25 years past New York has not furnished a Democratic leader who has not been in thorough accord with Wall street and at variance with the masses of the people. This was as true of Mr. Tilden in former years as it is to-day true of Mr. Cleveland.

"I have longed to see the day when the Democrats might elect a President of this country without paying the tribute that New York has always levied. I think that time is at hand. I have no favorite candidate, but only insist that he shall be a fair and honest representative of Democratic sentiment."

CONGRESSIONAL DOINGS.

The Postoffice Appropriation Bill Passed by the House.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—In the Senate a number of petitions were presented and referred.

There was quite a discussion over the proposition to print 100,000 copies of the agricultural report on "Diseases of the Horse." Mr. Gorman inveighed against the extravagance in the public printing, and predicted that an increase of taxation would be necessary to meet the expenditures of the government. Finally an amendment fixing the number of copies at 50,000 was agreed to.

The Senate went into executive session and after referring the nomination of Charles Foster, of Ohio, as Secretary of the Treasury to a committee, and confirming a number of nominations, reopened the doors and proceeded with the consideration of the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill.

In the House the journal was read and approved without objection on the part of the Democrats.

The conference report on the bill providing for the allotment of lands in severalty to the Indians was agreed to. The House then went into Committee of the Whole on the Deficiency Appropriation bill, but without disposing of it the committee rose.

The Postoffice Appropriation bill was passed and the Immigration bill was taken up for consideration.

RUSSIA'S GRAND EXHIBIT.

To be Represented at Chicago by a Display of Magnificent Proportions.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Authentic advices just received here indicate that the Russian exhibit in the coming World's Fair at Chicago will surpass anything of the kind ever attempted by the government and the people of that country, and that it is likely to be the most extensive and varied of all the foreign exhibits.

A company has been formed of leading citizens, bankers, merchants and manufacturers of St. Petersburg and Moscow, who have already subscribed half a million pounds for this purpose.

The Russian government will contribute another half a million pounds, and will co-operate with them in preparing and bringing to Chicago an exhibit of unusual proportions, which, among other things, will include an ethnological exhibit, representing the condition, mode of living, religion, as well as the manufacturing and agricultural products of the 162 races and tribes of that vast empire.

Bureau to Promote Silk Culture.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—The Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, through Mr. Blair, made a favorable report to the Senate on the bill introduced by Senator Mitchell for the establishment of a bureau in the Agricultural Department for the promotion of the silk culture industry. The committee added a provision authorizing the Secretary of Agriculture to establish experimental stations in such places as he sees fit.

AWAITING AN ANSWER.

The Chiefs of the Pennsylvania Railroad Organizations Ready for Business.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 24.—In the office of General Manager Wood of the Pennsylvania Railroad there are now assembled with Mr. Wood General Superintendents Charles Watts of the Northwest and J. F. Miller of the Southwest systems, 13 superintendents of divisions, superintendents of motive power and of the telegraph departments of the company.

Each article of the grievances filed by the men is being taken up in turn and considered for adjustment by the general officials and the superintendent upon whose division the grievance is cited. The object of this conference is to make uniform the entire operative practices of the systems as nearly as possible, and, where consistent, to abate the local grievances of the men. It is not expected that the conference will adjourn before to-morrow.

Members of the General Grievance Committee of the Pennsylvania Railroad have arrived, and are prepared to confer jointly with the committee representing the Pennsylvania Company and the grand officers of their organizations and will then wait for the company's reply.

Grand Chiefs Arthur and Sargent are in Cleveland, O., in conference with other high officials of railroad employes' organizations. Messrs. Arthur and Sargent and other members of the Supreme Council of the United Order of Railroad Employes will return to Pittsburg to-night and remain until the officials of the Pennsylvania Company have submitted their answer to the demands.

LYNCHED THE NEGRO.

He Begged Piteously for His Life But His Entreaties Were of No Avail.

PETERSBURG, Va., Feb. 24.—Some days ago Hugh Hammock, a prominent farmer, residing near Mellville in Ottawa County, was assaulted and robbed of $36 while passing along the highway by a burly negro named Scott Bishop. Bishop escaped at the time, but was arrested Saturday night and brought to Blackstone yesterday.

Hammock died yesterday from the effects of the assault, and the people were very much excited over the affair.

At 4 o'clock in the morning a mob took Bishop from the officers and hanged him to a tree near the town. The negro begged piteously for his life, but his entreaties were of no avail.

ORDERS TO BISMARCK.

Emperor William to Call the Prince Before a Court Martial.

BERLIN, Feb. 24.—The latest report is that the Emperor has decided to bring Prince Bismarck before a court martial to which, as he holds an army rank, the Prince is amenable. He will be asked on his honor to state whether he is the author of certain articles attacking the government. Prince Bismarck has declined an offer of the town of Harburg to nominate him for the Reichstag. His refusal is based upon the ground that domestic circumstances would prevent a conscientious performance of his duties as a member.

A Large Meteor Bursts Over Madison, Me.

MADISON, Me., Feb. 24.—At about a. m. a large meteor, apparently about the size of a full moon, was observed in the sky. It burst with a loud report over Madison village, blazing fragments scattering in every direction. Houses were shaken as if by an earthquake, and hundreds of people were awakened from sleep by the concussion, which reverbrated for some moments, sounding like heavy rolling thunder, while the shooting particles seemed like so many flashes of lightning.

The Skin Grafting Operation Failed.

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—Sir Knight J. O. Dickerson, on whom a skin grafting operation was tried some months ago, 132 brother Masons contributing skin from their arms to be grafted on a cancer wound in the hope of saving the patient's life, died at the Emergency Hospital last evening. Mr. Dickerson seemed to improve and gain strength after the operation was performed until a week ago, when his stomach refused absolutely to take any nourishment.

Rev. Harry George Changes His Plea.

CATSKILL, N. Y., Feb. 24.—Rev. Harry George was brought into court during the day for sentence, he having pleaded guilty when previously arraigned. The court room was thronged. When George was directed to stand up for sentence he withdrew his former plea and plead not guilty. He was then held in $10,000 bail for trial which he was unable to furnish and was remanded to jail. The cases of George and Dr. Erway will be tried at the next Court of Sessions in April.

Gov. Hill Did Not Attend.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 24.—All danger of a scene was averted at the Chamber of Commerce banquet last night, and the members breathed freer when a letter of regret was received from Governor Hill saying that he could not attend. Speeches were made by Chauncey M. Depew, the Hon. Joseph Tait of Toronto, Charles J. Bissell, Eugene T. Curtis, Senator Fassett and Davis J. Hill.

The Woman's Council.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—The session of the Woman's Council was well attended and several interesting addresses were delivered. Mrs. Belgarney of London, the delegate of the Woman's Council of Great Britain, made a few remarks and was followed by Rev. Milo Francis Tupper on "Woman's Status in the Church Today." Miss Frances Elliott and Mrs. E. Grannis, of the Christian League, also read papers.

Mr. Wike's Resolution.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—In the House Representative Scott Wike, of Illinois offered for reference to the Committee on Judiciary a long resolution looking to the impeachment of Speaker Reed.

THEY SHOT TO KILL

Desperate Affray in a Crowded Street in Columbus, Ohio.

EDITORS MEET AND FIGHT.

Tragic End of a Newspaper War in Which Two Lives Were Lost.

One of the Victims an Innocent Bystander—Bullets Flying Recklessly and Several Persons Wounded—Two of the Participants Arrested and Lynching Threatened—The Jail Closely Guarded.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 24.—W. J. Elliott, editor of the Sunday Capital, and his brother, P. J. Elliott, met F. W. Levering, editor of the Sunday World, and A. C. Osborne, one of his reporters, in High street shortly after noon and a fusillade of shooting began.

Osborne was instantly killed by a shot. P. J. Elliott was hit in the head and arm and W. J. Elliott was injured.

A bystander named Hughes was instantly killed.

The trouble arose from articles appearing in the papers named, and the shooting was done in the midst of a crowd watching the passing of a parade.

Elliott Fired to Shoot.

Accounts differ as to how the fusillade began or who fired the first shot. So far as it can be ascertained it is believed W. J. Elliott was the first to shoot. He was seen to dive in his pocket pull his gun and blaze away. The fire was returned and from seven to fifteen shots in all were fired, the witnesses differing as to the number.

Be that as it may it is certain that enough shots were fired to end suddenly the lives of two men, one of whom was in no way connected with the disgraceful affair.

Osborne was about 33 years of age, and was formerly editor of the Capital under Elliott. He was a single man. The Sunday World was started by Senator Brice's organ, and was started during the Senatorial campaign.

Origin of the Feud.

The feud had its origin in a quarrel between W. J. Elliott and Osborne over business rivalry and personal feeling, growing out of the former relations of the two men as employer and employe. When Osborne became city editor of the World recently, newspaper wars ensued, and soon developed into a contest too foul for the columns of a reputable newspaper. Elliott accused W. F. Levering, editor of the World, of lifting and publishing the World upon the proceeds of a house and lot assignment, run by himself and a woman, whom, it was alleged, he had ruined.

The principals seem to have stood their ground at first, while the spectators, attracted in that direction by the first report of the revolver, made frantic efforts to retrace their steps. The jam was so dense that those who were near the spot were hemmed in as if surrounded by a stone wall. Immediately a circle formed, giving the belligerent murderers all the space possible. W. J. Elliott stood in the center of this circle firing his revolver, which was answered by his adversary. After repeated shots W. J. Elliott fought himself through the crowd. Osborne made a break for the door of a hat store. Elliott turned as he ran into the store. From the fact that Osborne was shot in the chin he must have received his death wound before retreating to the store.

Besides the two killed John Reese, formerly of the Adjutant-General's office, and C. W. Sullivan were wounded. The two former were in no way connected with the causes leading to the tragedy.

Public Excitement Runs High.

Both of the Elliotts are locked up, Patrick being in the hospital.

Public feeling runs very high against the Elliots and trouble is feared.

Threats of lynching are freely made, and their is an ominous silence which bodes ill for the prisoners.

The jail officials are taking every precaution against surprise. A double guard has been put on, and a system of signals arranged to summon assistance from police headquarters at the least sign of a riot.

PARNELL'S CAMPAIGN.

He Says that Victory is Secure on a Constitutional Platform.

DUBLIN, Feb. 24.—Parnell is continuing his campaign in Ireland. The little town of Strokestown was thronged by thousands, several times its ordinary population, who had gathered to meet Parnell with an enthusiastic procession.

He repeated in substance his speech at Roscommon. At Longford he again spoke, meeting with a very cordial reception. He said:

"I do not ask you to be carried away by an outburst of enthusiasm. I do ask you to believe that victory is secure on the constitutional platform on which I will stand until the last plank is torn away. I do not ask you to come in conflict with British interests, but should I ever ask you to take that risk I will take the risk as your leader."

Earl Dudley's Big Income.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—It is authoritatively announced that William Humble Ward, the youthful Earl of Dudley, is about to sell the family estates and iron works to a joint stock company and sever his connection with the commercial world. It is also stated that Lord Dudley will marry one of the daughters of the Prince of Wales, although his Royal Highness has hitherto opposed the match on account of the young nobleman's eccentric habits. Lord Dudley's income is now stated at $2,000,000 per annum.

Three Men Frozen to Death.

JEANESVILLE, Pa., Feb. 24.—The exploring party in the Jeanesville mine found the bodies of Gerhard McCloskey, James Griffith and a Hungarian laborer near the entrance to the east gangway.

BANCROFT'S BODY FOUND

The Missing Professor at the Bottom of Dyer's Pond

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 24.—The body of Prof. Bancroft was found at an early hour in the morning at Dyers' Pond, Cranston.

The body, considering the time it has been in the water, was not badly decomposed.

It is generally believed that he wandered into the pond while in a state of temporary derangement of mind.

The remarkable disappearance of the professor of rhetoric and English literature of Brown University occurred on Monday, December 8, 1890. He had not been feeling well for some time, and on arising in the morning complained to his family of feeling so ill that he wanted rest. He asked his daughter to take a walk with him in the suburbs, but on account of other duties the young woman did not go.

He was advised by Mrs. Bancroft to go and see a doctor and not to attend his classes that day. He left his home, No. 13 Greene street, about 8 o'clock, but did not go to see his physician nor did he go to the college.

Inquiries for him began Monday evening, and Tuesday night the newspapers were informed of his disappearance.

The publication of the mystery brought forth a dozen or more stories, some of which were extraordinary, many people saying that they had seen him.

One of these only was worthy of note. Conductor Chace of the Cranston street car line conversed with a man answering his description on a car running from Arlington to the Cranston Print Works at 9 a. m. that day. The stranger said he had not been sleeping well nights and wanted to have a walk and exercise. He said he was going to ride to the print works and walk to Olneyville.

So far as known, Chace is the last person who spoke with Bancroft.

Timothy Thiting Bancroft was 58 years old. He graduated at Brown University in 1859. He taught school in Massachusetts a few years and in 1868 was called to Brown as professor of rhetoric and English literature.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

New York's demand for a recount was reported on adversely by the House Committee.

State Senator Francis Hendricks, of Syracuse, N. Y., says he is not a candidate for re-election.

The postoffice at Red Hill, East Vincent, Chester county, Pa., was burned with its contents last night.

John Long, an old and popular farmer of Clarence, N. Y., committed suicide by hanging at an early hour.

A cable dispatch from Rome says that Cardinal Gibbons has been summoned to a conference with the Pope.

James Owens, 60 years old, a guest at the Coleman House, New York city, was found dead in his room during the morning.

It is reported by cable that the main object of Empress Frederick's visit to Paris was to obtain the Duchess Galliera's bequest of $2,000,000.

An unknown boy about 14 years of age was struck and killed by an Erie express train at Rutherford Park, N. J. The body was mutilated beyond recognition.

Mr. Louis Danzig, a retired merchant of New York city, died suddenly of apoplexy at the Casino at Monte Carlo. His remains will be taken to the United States by his widow.

A Montreal dispatch says that it is stated on the best authority that the priests of the Province of Quebec have received confidential instructions to use all their influence to secure a victory for Sir John Macdonald in the present election contest.

On account of the recent heavy floods in the Ohio Valley not less than 15,000 men have been thrown out of employment. This will entail great suffering. A close observer who has passed through the inundated district estimates the loss at $4,000,000.

A Carlisle, Pa., dispatch says the bad weather of late is responsible for an epidemic of grip among the Indian children of the Indian School there. One hundred and twenty-five are down with it. A large number of Dickinson College students are sick with the disease.

Charles Cross, who was indicted at the last September term of the Grand Jury at Dover, N. H., for murder in the second degree, in killing Frank Liberty of Great Falls last August, was in court during the morning and his plea of guilty of manslaughter in the first degree was accepted by the court. Sentence was deferred.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

WANTED—A Printer that has had one or two years experience at Jobbing, &c. Young man preferred. Apply at THE DAILY PRESS OFFICE.

BY THE WAY.

—A meeting of the Clerks' Association will be held to-night at eight o'clock. Business of importance will be transacted.

—A regular meeting of Ivanhoe Council, American Legion of Honor, will be held to-night. Several candidates will be initiated.

—One of Carl Kaerth's drivers has a fractured arm and a cut head, the result of being thrown from his wagon seat by a shying horse.

—B. C. Runyon, who has been for some time past engaged in the collection business in this city, has started a collection agency in Clark & Reed's law office on Front street.

—William J. Ford wants to thank the German American insurance company, and its agent in this city, James C. Pope, for the prompt settlement in full of his loss of $700 on his furniture during a recent fire.

—The playing of the Plainfield Cornet Band, at The Crescent, yesterday afternoon and evening, was almost as much of a feature as Miss Houghton's skating. Over two thousand people were present, and all highly praised the music. Miss Houghton's imitation of the Spanish dancers, Otero and Carmencita, was very clever.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Evan Jones is seriously ill.

Miss Schmidt, of Washington, is visiting at the home of Mrs. Craig A. Marsh.

Sheridan F. Fox is very ill with inflammatory rheumatism at the home of his mother, Mrs. Emma Fox, 52 Hillside avenue.

The Rev. J. P. Taylor of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Evona, conducted the services at Holy Cross church, yesterday afternoon.

William John Smith, stock clerk and purchasing agent for The Pond Machine Tool Company, resigned his position last Saturday.

George Hessiman, a member of the Buffalo Fire Department, and Eli Lewis, of Newark, spent yesterday with Charles Johnson, of East Third street.

Mrs. Elizabeth Powell Bond, Dean of Swarthmore College, will read a paper on "The Elements of Happiness," at the Unitarian rooms, 4 Second place, to-morrow evening, to which all are cordially invited.

Mrs. P. Minturn Smith gave a tea at her home on Madison avenue, yesterday afternoon. Besides the large circle of her friends of Plainfield, there were present guests from New York, Philadelphia and other cities.

The fair for the benefit of the Children's Home, last Saturday, at 71 East Fifth street, realized $52.72, all of which was a result of the earnest efforts of Miss Helen Brainerd, assisted by the Misses Mabelle C. Phillips, Eva Noe and Grace Rowland.

Councilman and Mrs. Emmons, of North Plainfield, celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of their wedding, last evening. There was a jolly houseful of company, and one of those generous spreads that Mrs. Emmons knows so well how to set forth, was provided.

The New York Daily Continent records the illness of a Plainfielder as follows: "Bret Harte's popular son, Griswold Harte, who has a legion of friends among newspaper men and theatrical people about town, is seriously ill at his mother's home in Plainfield, N. J. 'Gris' Harte, as he is generally called, outwardly resembles his famous father in a remarkable degree, and though still young, gave promise in his work on the Sun and other papers of sharing the great storyteller's genius."

Death of Peter G. Kline.

Peter G. Kline, of Summit avenue, died at 1:10 Sunday afternoon. He had been complaining since New Year's Day, but took to his bed less than a week ago. He was perfectly conscious till the end came, and rejoiced that he was "going home" on such a beautiful Sabbath day. He died as he had lived—a Christian man. He leaves a wife, but no children. His age was forty-one years. He was a member of Trinity Reformed church. Jerusalem Lodge, No 26, F. and A. M., with which he was affiliated, will attend the funeral at his late residence at 1:30, and at the Trinity Reformed church at two o'clock, Wednesday afternoon.

Members of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., will also attend the funeral in a body.

Ran a Race in Mud Ankle-Deep.

The Plainfield Workingmen's Athletic Club held their first out-door event yesterday afternoon, when forty of their members gathered at the Gentlemen's Driving Park and witnessed a half-mile running race. D. Wilson won the contest, in 2:45, defeating Johnson by about 10 feet. Considering the condition of the track, which was ankle-deep in mud, this speed was remarkable.

Ladies, clean your kid gloves with Mather's glove cleaner; for sale only by Mrs. J. C. Dyer, 38 West Front street. All the latest novelties of the season in fine Millinery. Correct styles.

A LUXURIOUS HOTEL.

The Reconstructed Park House Opened by The Albion Hotel Company, is one of the Finest in the Country.

The very disagreeable weather of last Saturday evening prevented a large number of the invited guests from attending the opening of the new hotel just reconstructed at the corner of Park avenue and Eighth street by The Albion Hotel Co., of which F. E Miller, owner of The Netherwood, is treasurer and general manager. In spite of the storm, however, over 200 were entertained including many from New York and Brooklyn who were so pleased that they never went home until yesterday. There was orchestral music and supper.

An unstinted expenditure of money is apparent everywhere. The halls and stairways from top to bottom of the house, are carpeted in heavy velvet. The parlors, and ladies' reading room are carpeted in moquette, and the guests' rooms, of which there are 60 single and en suite, are in brussels.

The French windows opening from the parlors to the spacious veranda, are hung with Florence curtains, and the portierres are of silk chenille tapestry in pale colors. The parlors are furnished in Louis XVIth style, and are undoubtedly the most elegant rooms of their kind in the country. The bedrooms are furnished in quartered oak, and each is heated with steam.

The wall decorations throughout the hotel, also evidence the exquisite taste of the Treasurer's wife who selected all the carpets, furniture, curtains and wall papers. Not a trace of the old house is left. New paint and paper covers woodwork, walls and ceilings. Every piece of carpet, every stick of furniture and every scrap of bedding and linen found in the old house, was destroyed. The plumbing was torn out everywhere, and new bath and toilet rooms built on every floor.

Not a vestige even of the old table crockery remains. The finest decorated porcelain in sets furnishes the guests' rooms, and the table china, glassware, silver and linen, are beautiful.

Many of last Summer's staff at The Netherwood, are on duty. In the office is Frank Bowman, genial and popular. He is Treasurer Miller's right-hand man. Isaiah, in grey velvet and gold buttons, springs up as spry as in August, at the cry of "front." There is a new chef, Condi, late of Pinard's, New York, but Steward Chatfield is on duty again. Mrs. Jemmert is the housekeeper.

The painting of the new hotel, outside and in, is the work of A. T. Ayers's men. A. M. Griffen did the plumbing and steam fitting. The wall decoration was done by W. S. Chase. The Sloanes, of New York, furnished the carpets and curtains. The furniture was manufactured in Grand Rapids.

Despite all these luxuries and comforts, and their great cost, the terms at The Albion are not at all high and already there are a number of applications for rooms. It will be but a month or two before the hotel is filled, and then it will remain so all the year round.

JOHN MOORE WINS AGAIN.

Now Another Step Will Be Taken Towards Turning All the Land Over to "Uncle Billy's" Heir.

Last Friday, Judge Cowenhoven of New Brunswick made application in the Supreme Court at Trenton, before Judges Depue, VanSyckel and Scudder, for a new trial in the Moore will case. He maintained that the verdict rendered by the jury in favor of John C. Moore was contrary to law and against the great weight of testimony and against the charge of the Court. He read the whole of the charge of Chief Justice Beasley and abstracts from the testimony. Craig A. Marsh replied on behalf of John C. Moore, and contended that the jury were the sole judges of the facts of the case, and that there was not a single error in point of law from the beginning to the end of the case. He urged that if the evidence were insufficent to support a verdict in favor of the plaintiff the Chief Justice would not have allowed the case to go to the jury at all. The Court directed the papers to be handed up, and reserved its decision. At the opening of Court this morning, the decision was announced from the bench. It is in favor of John C. Moore. The application for a new trial is denied. Mr. Marsh immediately moved for judgment, and the motion was granted. Several other ejectment suits will be brought at once, and proceedings will be taken to close out the receivership and turn all the land over to Johnny Moore.

A Panic Among the Wagons.

A horse owned by Marsh Bros., left standing at the corner of Peace street and North avenue Saturday evening, took fright and ran away. After galloping up Peace street it turned into Front, and caused somewhat of a panic among the people crowded about the post-office. Wagons were jammed together in a bad tangle, and several had their wheels smashed or were otherwise damaged. A Miss Smith of Dunellen was thrown out of her carriage, and had her head severely cut. Her wound was dressed in Miller's drug store. Miss Smith's horse also ran away, and galloped homeward.

A Wedding.

Horace L. Doty and Josie Taylor, both of North Plainfield, were married by the Rev. W. E. Honeyman Saturday, Feb. 21.

MR. BOWEN VS. MR. MILLER.

The Latter is Disgusted With the Attempt of the Former to Close up The Albion and Ruin the Company.

A correspondent in another column talks right out loud to his fellow citizens of Netherwood who with others are trying to ruin The Albion that has just been opened at such great expense. The handful of men he talks to, headed by H. E. Bowen, are petitioning Councilman Spangenberg to vote against any new license applications, and thus keep the business in the hands of a chosen few.

This would compel the closing at once of the elegant new hotel just opened at the corner of Park avenue and Eighth street; and eventually in May, when an application appeared for the Hotel Netherwood, it would also be thrown out because the "number" decided on by Mr. Bowen and twelve other men, was complete.

A PRESS reporter questioned F. E. Miller, Treasurer of the Albion Hotel Co., and owner of The Netherwood, regarding the action of Mr. Bowen and the rest. Mr. Miller was naturally disgusted and vexed about the matter. He knows that the petitioners are well aware of the fact that during the year the city refused licenses, the Hotel Netherwood's guests were annoyed and indignant at being compelled to suit their tastes and comforts, and order their meals, at the dictation of a half-dozen men of Plainfield, total strangers to them. The Hotel lost money, and its guests gave notice that the next year they should seek their Summer recreation elsewhere.

"These very petitioners," Mr. Miller said to the reporter, "are always clamoring for me to keep open all Winter and boom their property. Yet now that I and others have spent money and taken a great risk on our shoulders, in order that the city shall have a high-class Winter hotel, they are praying that Mr. Spangenberg will refuse any more licenses and ruin my business again."

MOST MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.

A Man Prominently Associated With One of Plainfield's Best-Known Enterprises, Drops Out of Sight.

Last Thursday evening a well-known gentleman, residing not many miles from THE PRESS office, donned his evening dress and sallied forth from his domicile, merely remarking that he was going to New York "on business," and would not be back till late. Some surprise was occasioned next morning by the discovery that he had not yet returned; but the family concluded that he had spent the night with some of his friends in the metropolis, and would soon appear, in order to exchange his dress suit for business attire; but as the day wore on and he did not come, serious fears for his safety were expressed, and as they have seen nothing of him up to the present writing the members of the family are greatly concerned. As he wore conspicuously displayed in his immaculate shirt front a brilliant solitaire diamond, and had stated before his departure that he expected to receive quite a large sum of money, there would seem to be some grounds for suspecting foul play.

It seems almost incredible that a man dressed as he was could so completely disappear; but his distracted relatives have not yet obtained the slightest clue to his whereabouts.

Until some trace of him is secured, it is considered best to withhold his name, suffice it to say that he is prominently associated with one of the best known enterprises of Plainfield.

Washington Park Home Club.

Subscriptions towards the amount estimated as necessary to start the swell club in North Plainfield—exclusively told of in THE PRESS—for the last week or so lacked just $500 of the total required to be pledged before anything should be done. All was at a stand-still until the other day, when Mrs. Jane Roome, with her usual generosity and earnest desire to advance public improvements and multiply attractive features in the Borough, subscribed the full amount.

The money now being within call, the bondholders will meet and organize, Thursday evening, in the chapel of the Church of the Holy Cross. Architect Smith will present at that meeting plans for the club house. The site is decided on and already secured, but THE PRESS has promised not to tell where it is, just yet. The name of the organization will probably be, "The Washington Park Home Club."

How One Plainfielder Spent Washington's Birthday.

Ex-School Trustee John W. Murray and wife, of this city, were so fortunate as to celebrate Washington's Birthday at Winter Park, Fla. They were diverted by such old-fashioned amusements as the greased pig, the sack race, and digging for gold in a Florida mud hole. The main celebration took place on Saturday and began with a tennis tournament at 10½ A. M., at the grounds of the Seminole Hotel. Mr. Murray and other guests contributed towards the prizes for competition. At 3 P. M. there were double and single scull races, a tub race, and walking a greased pole extended over the water.

He said: "My love, I am sorry to disappoint you about the picnic, but my trotter has a lame foot." That's nothing! We've got plenty of Salvation Oil.

The Detroit Free Press Fiend has been punning on Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. His is only gratitude, for all thinking men know its merits.—(Exch.)

DIVORCE FOLLOWS DESERTION.

Though Wife and Husband Both Were White, She Ran Away With a Negro.

John R. McCall, of Dunellen, was last week, through the efforts of his counsel, Messrs. Jackson & Codington, granted a divorce from his wife.

McCall is an engineer on the Jersey Central railway, and is known among railroad men throughout the State. His business of course keeps him away from home a great deal, and his wife took advantage of his absence and entertained strange men in the house. For months she practised her duplicity before he found her out. She had two regular callers—both of them negroes.

When her husband discovered her faithlessness she saucily told him that she preferred the society of the negroes, "who were gentlemen," to the society of himself, "who was a common workingman." Then she promptly packed up her goods and fled with her favorite of the two colored men.

The wife did not present herself to contest the application for a divorce. The testimony against her was of a highly unsavory character.

Buried Beside His Wife.

Funeral services over the remains of Abraham Runyon, father of Chancellor Runyon of Newark, were held at the Methodist Episcopal church Saturday. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. Parsons of Newark, who paid high tribute to the personal qualities of the deceased and to the old New Jersey family of which he was a member. The Rev. C. B. Mitchell and the Rev. Dr. Serah also participated in the ceremonies. The body was laid away to rest by the side of Mr. Runyon's second wife in Evergreen Cemetery.

THEY WOULD RUIN A FRIEND.

One of Netherwood's Majority Points Out How Ten Petitioners Would Close The Albion.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I notice the publication in your paper, Saturday, of a petition signed by 13 men of Netherwood requesting Councilman Spangenberg not to vote for any increase in the number of licenses. Of those 13 men two are foreigners not entitled to vote, and one other, at least, signed "out of courtesy," he says.

I am a resident and voter of Netherwood myself, and claim as much right to rule Mr. Spangenberg's judgment and control his vote as any of those petitioners. Therefore I would say that if he would represent his people it is his duty to pay no attention to the petition of ten voters out of 50. The opinion of the 40 who did not sign the petition is certainly of more weight than the opinion of 10—just four times as heavy.

As to the petition itself, how silly it is. It asks that the "number shall not be increased," but does not designate who should be cut off. Shall The Albion application be refused and the hotel closed after $26,000 has been spent on it to attract the richer classes to Plainfield? Shall the Miller Bros., on Front street near the Methodist church, be refused a license, or the Miller on Second street near the Trinity church? Why didn't those petitioners of Netherwood make out a list of just those they would particularly choose to sell liquor?

I would like to say a word in reply also to your correspondent "B," of Saturday. He says: "When Mr. Spangenberg asked for their votes he promised to represent fairly the wishes of Nethewrood." Now I know that Mr. Spangenberg made no pledges on the license question to anybody, nor was he asked to. The people voted for him because he was a license man and because Mr. Lovell who ran against him was not. Mr. "B," and the rest of the ten petitioners, did not "understand" that he was to vote for only twelve, or only thirteen, or only any number. We all understood that he was of the same mind as ourselves—that the best way to control the sale and sellers of liquor, was by making the latter secure a proper recommendation and pay a fee so high that they would carefully obey the hours of closing and other provisions of regulation and restriction. He was elected to grant no certain number, but every proper person properly applying.

The names of the few Netherwood people signed to the petition you publish, will long be remembered by the rest of us for one thing, at least, and that is for their effort to ruin F. E. Miller and J. J. H. Poillon in their new venture, The Albion. Those two men have done more many a day for the prosperity of Netherwood and its neighborhood, than "B" or the "petitioners" will ever do in all their lives added together. Yet if Mr. Spangenberg does as the petitioners want him to, and votes for "no increase" in the number of licenses, Messrs. Miller and Poillon will lose thousands of dollars, and the city of Plainfield will be without a high-class hotel again.

A NETHERWOOD VOTER.

"Bill" Aten Will Pick the Banjo.

One of the features of the programme at the Young Men's Christian Association reception next Thursday evening will be banjo solos by William Aten of Somerville, who is familiarly known as "Bill" Aten, of engine No. 169, and who, as has been told in THE PRESS, for years ran the fastest trains on this branch of the Philadelphia and Reading and Baltimore and Ohio railroads. He made the fastest time on record in this country, and probably in the world. The admission will be free, and all men are invited.

He Will Go Over the Subject in Westfield.

North Plainfield, N. J., Feb. 19, 1891.

Mr. Alfred E. Pearsall, Editor of The Union County Standard:

MY DEAR SIR:—Replying to your favor of Febuary 17, I am pleased to say that I will be at Arcanum Hall, Westfield, next Thursday evening, February 26, to go over the subject of Borough Government with your citizens.

Yours truly,
CHARLES PLACE.

Hall's Benefit To-night.

J. Edwin Hall anticipates a large and generous house at his benefit performance in Music Hall to-night. Besides the specialties of Fayette Welch, and the other attractions, there will be, to please the people, little Dottie Pine, the star of the occasion, of whom the Norfolk, Va., Landmark says "An attractive little lady in appearance, and as graceful as many soubrettes of riper years."

An Inkstand That's Always Shut.

The one and only practical and satisfactory inkstand for a business man's desk, is the Dain auto-pneumatic. It is always closed; dust can never enter to thicken, nor air to dry, the ink. The last drop is used and that last drop is as free-flowing and clear as the first. The Royal Novelty Company, in which Charles H. Smith of Grove street is a director, are the manufacturers.

The proprietors of Hires' Cough Cure certainly do not let their light shine under a bushel. They know they have a good thing, and they know they are bound to let the world know it. They believe in printers' ink, and printers' ink believes in Hires' Cough Cure.

THAT ENGINE HOUSE GANG.

A Crowd of Loafers Who Will Bring the Entire Borough Fire Department into Disrepute If Not Speedily Checked.

The gang who find it more to their liking to spend their time loafing about Warren engine house than to indulge in more creditable and useful employment, and whose conduct in the lobby during Borough Council meetings THE PRESS has had occasion frequently to censure, have been behaving themselves more discreetly since the publication of the sharper criticisms, but are beginning again to break loose from the bonds of restraint. During the past few meetings they were quite orderly in the lobby, and did nothing worse than to assail with objectionable and abusive language the people who have incurred their wrath by reproving their continued flagrant discourtesy to the Mayor and the Council and their repeated public breaches of good order, as those people passed up and down the stairs to the Council chamber. Last Friday night, however, they fully demonstrated the extent of their gentlemanly qualities, good breeding, and honorable characteristics generally, by assaulting with bunches of oily waste, wet, greasy sponges, and the like, the person of those who were passing quietly in and out, who were attending to their own business in a quiet way, and who were committing no offense whatever. The loafers who indulged in this sort of thing of course did not do it openly, but sneaked out of sight and cowardly assailed their victims behind their backs, seriously damaging clothing, and causing other injury. Their malicious and contemptible conduct will receive appropriate attention at the hands of those in authority.

It might be added, by the way, that THE PRESS is in possession of information concerning the nature of the quiet doings of what is known as the "engine house gang," and will at the proper time record some highly interesting facts concerning some very damaging charges.

It is of course understood that the conduct of certain firemen who more or less frequently visit the house because such business as cleaning the apparatus calls them there is not at all deserving of reproach, and THE PRESS does not wish to be understood to be casting any reflection against those firemen (or such of their friends as are like them) whose deportment is upright and decent; but there is a certain element that makes the engine house its headquarters, and that is fast bringing the entire place into disfavor. That is the element meant in the use of the term "engine house gang," and not until that gang is abolished will the borough fire department be safe from scandal and disgrace.

ONE NAME SOUTH, ANOTHER HERE.

Frank Wood and Justice Hardy Undoubtedly the Same, Says Mr. Macon.

Gold Leaf, a newspaper of Henderson, North Carolina, re-publishes from THE PRESS the story of the departure of James Hardy, Borough Magistrate and Justice of the Peace, from North Plainfield, and says:

"The people of Henderson have a very distinct recollection of Frank Wood. By many he will be remembered chiefly by the debts he contracted but did not pay, and by others as a pleasant, affable, half-fellow-well-met kind of a man who impressed himself as an active, energetic, stirring, fellow, shrewd, sharp and quick, a superior mechanic, and a contractor and builder who thoroughly understood his business. In short, he was a man who made friends and gained the confidence of the people, and was capable of making for himself an honorable name and enviable reputation as a citizen and business man. People were quick to recognize his talents and abilities in his particular sphere, and no man was accorded a more cordial welcome. He was a useful man in the community, a man who stood high as a workman, and his private acts and intentions were judged of men by his outward acts and appearances. But they soon had cause to look beyond, or, rather, below, these. He contracted debts he did not pay. People began to grow suspicions. His conduct and affairs were inquired into. He skipped the town, claiming that he was going off for a short while on important business. He did not return, and his wife followed. Our citizens are familiar with the whole matter, the amount of Wood's indebtedness, etc. Where he went from Henderson no one knew, but it was afterwards reported that he had been seen in Philadelphia. It appears that he located in Plainfield, New Jersey, where he has since lived as James Hardy. He played about the same part there, and had just left for fields new and pastures green. Mr. Hunt Macon, who lived in Henderson at the time Frank Wood did, is now living in Plainfield, where he met and recognized Wood. The accompanying article, taken from the Plainfield Daily Press of February 14, for which we are indebted to Mr. Macon, throws some light on the career of Frank Wood since he took his departure from Henderson about four years ago. It will no doubt be read with a keen degree of interest by many of our townspeople."

"You Were Right, as Usual."

Chauncey B. Ripley sends slips from THE PRESS and the New York World, telling of his recent fire. The former puts the loss at $200 and the latter at $4,000. Mr. Ripley writes: "The fact is, I was insured for $150, and that covers my loss except about $50 in fences and timber. You were right, as usual."

THE SHERMANS AT HOME.

The Family Thank the Public for the Many Tokens of Sympathy.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—On the return to this city of the funeral train which carried the body of General Sherman to St. Louis for burial, one of the first acts of the family was to express in the following letter to the public their appreciation of the honors paid to their beloved dead and the nation's hero. The letter was signed by Rev. Thomas E. Sherman on behalf of the family. It reads as follows:

"It is fitting that some public acknowledgement should be made by the family of General Sherman of the very many heartfelt tokens of sympathy which they have received in their bereavement. We can only say that such universal and such evidently profound sorrow manifested, as it has been in a thousand ways, sustains and comforts us in our desolation. For the entire nation by its generous expression of condolence has lightened the burden of our grief and helped us to bear our irreparable loss.

"The friends of the family are asked to accept this slight token of our grateful appreciation in lieu of any more direct personal communication which, while it would be more gratifying to us, we have not now the strength or courage to offer to each and all."

PARALYSIS!

Fearful Increase of this Terrible Disease.

Read This and You May Prevent Becoming One of Its Victims.

It is an alarming fact that paralysis is becoming more and more common, and the medical profession have discovered at last a remedy which is almost certain to cure this terrible disease, if taken in time. What started the furore for this medicine among FAILED TO HEED THE physicians was the wonFIRST SYMPTOMS, derful and almost miraculous cure of Alexander Horn, of the Marine Asylum, Philadelphia, Penn. Thousands of physicians all over this country are today prescribing the same marvellous remedy which cured him and made him able to walk again when for twenty-one years before he had been so paralyzed that he had not lifted his foot from the floor!!! Some doctors recommend and prescribe this medicine openly, others secretly. At any rate, it seems unfair that sufferers should pay a fee to physicians when they can purchase at any druggist's for $1.00 per bottle this wonderful remedy, which is acknowledged at the present day as the greatest paralysis cure and preventive.

The remedy is Dr. Greene's Nervura, and J. S. Phillips, Esq., the prominent notary public of Philadelphia, was the first to certify to Mr. Horn's remarkable case, and thus bring it before physicians and the public.

In talking with the well known John S. Doremus, Esq., 283 Ellison st., Paterson, N. J., he referred to the really astonishing curative powers of Dr. Greene's Nervura in the following emphatic terms: "Miss Pauline Roe had a terrible stroke of paralysis, and having myself received such great benefits from Dr. Greene's Nervura, I persuaded her to use it as a last resort. She did so, and the change since taking this medicine has been most remarkable. Surely through the mysterious effects of this wonderful curative remedy, Dr. Greene's Nervura, Miss Roe has received a new lease of life. I shall be ready at any and all times to testify to the remarkable restoration to health of this lady, and the wonderful effects of Dr. Greene's Nervura."

PARALYZED.

Afterwards Miss Pauline Roe, of 805 7th ave., New York, herself substantiated the facts. "The suffering I endured," she said "was unbearable. My speech was impaired, my mouth drawn to one side, and the pains in my head were maddening. I used Dr. Greene's Nervura, and before I had used a bottle I felt a marked improvement, and now I feel myself again. It gives me great pleasure to recommend all troubled with nervous complaints to use this really wonderful medicine."

Mrs. J. Fisher, of 44 Vanderbilt ave., Brooklyn, was restored from paralysis by the same remedy in a no less wonderful way.

Now that all may recognize the approach of this treacherous disease and take it in time to surely prevent it, the first or premonitory symptoms are given. Paralysis is curable, and it can always be prevented by Dr. Greene's Nervura if taken in time.

Among the first symptoms will be noticed a nervousness and restlessness, with weak and tired feeling in the limbs and general sense of exhaustion; any unwonted exertion will be followed by great fatigue and the weakness will be very marked. These symptoms will often be accompanied by bad feeling in the head, and the person often wakes each morning more tired and languid than on retiring.

As the disease progresses Sudden Stroke, there will be a coldness and bad circulation in the feet and limbs, followed after a time by a slight numbness or tingling, at first hardly noticeable, but gradually becoming more marked. Among the first symptoms, also are weakness, tired feeling or trembling of the limbs, with an exhausted sensation.

Proofs like the above cures are almost certain guarantee that all similarly effected can be cured by Dr. Greene's Nervura. Do not hesitate for a moment when perfect restoration to health is within reach. By no means neglect the first symptoms, for they surely lead to prostration and paralysis. Save yourself from the terrible disease while there is time by the use of this wonderful remedy and prevent a serious or fatal issue. Dr. Green's Nervura is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless, and is for sale at druggists for $1.00 per bottle.

Dr. Greene, of 35 West Fourteenth St., New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled.

N. B. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write Dr. Greene about your case, and a carefully considered letter, fully explaining your disease and giving you a perfect understanding of all its symptoms will be returned, free of charge.

Corporation Notice.

Plainfield, N. J., February 16, 1891.

Notice is hereby given that James J. Day has applied to the Common Council of the city of Plainfield for a license to sell spirituous, vinious malt or brewed liquors in quantities from one quart to five gallons at No. 97 West Third street in the Fourth Ward, which application is signed by

Patrick Moran, Matthew Kilpatrick
Michael Newman, Charles McGinley,
John Kane Florh Wodsaser,
Maurice Shannon, Pati Hafferty, citizens and freeholders. All persons knowing of any reasons why such license should not be granted are requested to make known the same in writing to the City Clerk on or before the 9th day of March next.

Done in accordance with the requirements of the ordinance to license inns and taverns, and to regulate and prohibit the sale of spirituous and fermented liquors.

ROMANCE OF THE ROSE-BUDS.

"If you love me as much as you used to," she wrote,
At the close of a poor little heart-broken note,
"Send me six rose-buds, pure and white,
Kissed by your lips before six to-night."

He read, and he laughed to himself to see
How fond and how foolish a woman can be;
But he stopped at the florist's. "I love her 'far more,
Yet how can I tell her so? Ah, yes, I know."

The rose-buds were bought, and the rose-buds were kissed;
Her street and her number and house were not missed.
She counted the buds with love's haste and love's grace—
Not six, but twice six, smiled up in her face.

White buds make white roses; they opened and died.
Again: "Do you love me as ever?" she sighed.
In rose-buds he answered her, kissed as before;
"Not six, nor twice six, but twice dozen buds more."

And so, in this city of music and dance,
Two hearts have their own pretty rose-bud romance,
And when she grows sad through the long lonesome hours,
"Though absent, I love you," he whispers in flowers.

Ah! Love will have seasons of sadness and doubt,
So sure as the spring puts her tender buds out;
But Love will find language for questions and answers,
So long as the Rose lives the Queen of Romances.

STORIES OF THE STAGE.

A Stranded Troupe and a Modern Good Samaritan.

"Don't you find it rather lonesome here?"

"O no!" answered the stage doorkeeper. "Some of the actors generally come back here to smoke their pipes and chat."

"You must hear them tell some amusing experiences of stage life."

"Any number of them. The other night Wm. Harris, of Rhea's company, told me of an incident that happened when he was supporting Charlotte Cushman. They did 'Henry the Eighth' in a small place one night, and after the play was over the audience still remained in their seats. 'Henry the Eighth' is in five acts, but in Charlotte Cushman's version it ends with the death of Katharine, that scene closing the fourth act.

"Mr. Harris was playing Cardinal Woolsey and as he finished in the third act had time to change his dress before the performance was over. Seeing that the audience had no intention of leaving, Miss Cushman called to him:

"'Mr. Harris, you must go out and make an announcement; the audience do not know the play is finished.'

"The late Cardinal stepped before the curtain: 'Ladies and gentlemen—I am sorry to inform you the performance is over. The play concluded with the death of Queen Katharine. If you are waiting for the funeral, that will not take place until next week.'

"I'll warrant he made a 'quick exit' after that. But tell me some of your own experiences, you were on the stage, were you not?"

"Yes—for one season."

"Then you must have a number of amusing reminiscences stored away in your hat."

The stage door-keeper shook his head. "No; nothing of a humorous nature took place that trip. We played in too hard luck. I tell you," he went on, earnestly, "that was the hardest four months I ever experienced, and is we hadn't struck one man with a heart in his body I don't know what would have become of us all."

"Who was he? How did it happen?"

"It was down in Richmond, Ind. We were to play there two nights—New Year's and the Saturday following. We had been playing to bad business ever since we started and came into the town on our trunks. New Year's night we thought would certainly bring us a big house, but it didn't. There was a local minstrel show in town, and we played to empty seats. The night following we played to four dollars. After the performance we held a consultation and decided to close and go to Cincinnati on our trunks. We could not pay our board bill and the landlord of the hotel threatened to attach our baggage. Sure enough, when we got up early Sunday morning and went down to the depot we found the trunks in charge of a sheriff. That effectually prevented our leaving town.

"There was nothing to do but go back to the hotel and wait until something turned up or the landlord turned us out. Back we went, and the manager tried to argue the matter with the proprietor, while the rest of us gathered around the stove in the office. The landlord was inflexible. Unless we could pay him his money he would hold our trunks. 'I run this hotel for money, not as a charitable institution, and I don't want you people around here any longer,' he exclaimed.

"At this moment a benevolent-looking old gentleman with long white whiskers entered the office. He was the landlord's father and part owner of the hotel.

"'What's the trouble?' he asked.

"His son explained.

"'Well, you people are in hard luck and I'm sorry for you,' said the old gentleman, kindly, 'but let's see what can be done.'

"We all felt grateful to him at once. He paused a moment to consider the situation, then asked: 'Have you had breakfast?'

"'No, sir.'

"The younger man had not permitted us to enter the dining-room that morning.

"'Then all of you go in and eat, and Charles' turning to his son), let them have the rooms they occupied last night.'

"Charles started to make some objections, but the kind-hearted old gentleman stopped him.

"'I'm not going to see these people turned into the street on this cold day, there's women and children among 'em and they stay here until to-morrow at least.'

"'But father,' the son persisted, 'they wont be any better off to-morrow and we'll have them on our hands.'

"'No matter! Besides, I'm going to do something for 'em right away. Now all of you go in and get breakfast and I'll be back shortly.'

"He was gone for three hours and when he came back he had a paper signed by the mayor and a dozen of the most influential citizens of the town, telling of our position and asking the people of Richmond to give us a benefit Monday night.

"'All the men whose names are on that paper,' he explained, 'are not going to do any thing to-morrow but sell tickets for you. We will get out some hand-bills in the morning and if hard work will fill the house, to-morrow night it will be packed.'

"He kept his word to the letter. The theater would not hold all the people that came, and a better disposed audience I never saw. They applauded every thing and everybody. After the fourth act our manager went before the curtain to make a speech, and before he finished half of the audience were in tears. Every word of thanks that he uttered came from his heart. He was a well-educated man, but he didn't try to use any big words. He simply told them how grateful he and every member of the company were to them all. We were crying back of the curtain, and when he spoke of the landlord's father we all cheered and the audience cheered with us. After the performance was over the audience crowded on the stage and we were kept busy shaking hands for the next hour. They felt they had done a good action and they fairly overflowed with kindly feeling toward us. The manager's wife had her little girl in her arms and all of the ladies kissed the child and the men tucked money into her hand. When the landlord's father came upon the stage she rushed up to him and made the child put its arms around his neck and kiss him and then she kissed him and everybody cheered. The splendid old fellow couldn't keep the tears back and he just stood there with the child in his arms and made a speech.

"'I tell you, neighbors,' he said, 'if you all feel as happy over what you have done for the people here as I do, you won't be ashamed of your tears. I have kept a good many show folks in my time and I know that they are just like other people. They have all got feelings, and every one of this troupe will remember this evening with gratitude as long as they live.'

"I don't believe such a scene ever took place on a stage before."

"Did you get away all right?" I asked.

"O, yes. The benevolent old gentleman took charge of the money for us, paid every thing we owed and we had enough left to buy us all tickets to our homes."

"He was a modern good Samaritan."

"He was that; for when we were leaving I heard him say to his son: 'Here, Charlie, put this money in the safe; it's them show folks' board for three days, thirty-six dollars. You see, my son, the old man knows a thing or two yet. If we had kept their trunks we wouldn't have got five dollars on the lot.'"

I put into my pocket the handkerchief with which I had vainly sought to check my tears during the pathetic recital.—Edward Weitzel, in Detroit Free Press.

AN ANCIENT AMERICAN TOWN.

Some of the Queer Features of Laguna, New Mexico.

Laguna is built upon a rounded elevation of rock. Its appearance is exactly that of a Syrian village, the same cluster of little, square, flat-roofed houses in terraces, the same brown color, and under the same pale blue sky. And the resemblance was completed by the figures of the women on the roofs; or moving down the slope, erect and supple, carrying on the head a water-jar, and holding together by one hand the mantle worn like a Spanish rebozo. The village is irregularly built, without much regard to streets or alleys, and it has no special side of entrance or approach. Every side presents a blank wall of adobe, and the entrance seems quite by chance. Yet the way we went over the smooth slope was worn here and there in channels three or four inches deep, as if by the passing feet of many generations. The only semblance of architectural regularity is in the plaza, not perfectly square, upon which some of the houses look, and where the annual dances take place. The houses have the effect of being built in terraces rising one above the other, but it is hard to say exactly what a house is—whether it is any thing more than one room. You can reach some of the houses only by the aid of a ladder, which brings you to the roof, that is used as the sitting-room or dooryard of the next room. From this room you may still ascend to others, or you may pass through low and small doorways to other apartments. It is all hap-hazard, but exceedingly picturesque. You may find some of the family in every room, or they may be gathered, women and babies, on a roof which is protected by a parapet. At the time of our visit the men were all away at work in their fields. Notwithstanding the houses are only sun-dried bricks, and the village is without water or street commissioners, I was struck by the universal cleanliness. There was no refuse in the corners or alleys, no odors, and many of the rooms were patterns of neatness. To be sure, an old woman here and there kept her hens in an adjoining apartment above her own, and there was the litter of children and of rather careless housekeeping. But, taken altogether, the town is an example for some more civilized, whose inhabitants wash oftener and dress better than these Indians.—Charles Dudley Warner, in Harper's Magazine.

Prof. Dana concludes that during the glacial period Long Island Sound, instead of being, as it now is, an arm of the ocean twenty miles wide, was, for the greater part of its length a narrow channel serving as a common trunk for many Connecticut streams and a few from Long Island. In these circumstances the supply of fresh water for the Sound river would have been so great that salt water would have barely passed the entrance of the Sound.

His Father Got the Wrong End.

There was a big buzz-saw boxed up and ready to go on shipboard at one of the South street wharves the othef day, when a colored man was noticed walking around it, and eying it with the greatest interest.

"It isn't running," finally remarked a shipping clerk.

"I kin see dat much," was the ready reply.

"Then what are you afraid of?"

"I isn't 'fraid of nuffin'. Ize simply sorter anxious.

"Ever see one of these things before?"

"Can't say as I hev."

"Then what are you anxious about?" persisted the man.

Economical Translation.

A young man called upon a retired school-teacher not long ago, to consult him about studying French. He wished to learn the language, but could not afford to take lessons of a regular teacher, and asked what books would be suitable to enable him to acquire a reading knowledge of French.

The old pedagogue fixed him out with a simple book for translation, a vocabulary and a grammar and left him to work out the problem for himself. A few weeks later they met again.

"How are you getting on with your French?" asked the teacher.

"Oh, first-rate! first-rate! Why, yesterday I translated two whole pages of that book you told me to buy. I got out the meaning perfectly, and had a lot of French words left over!"—Youth's Companion.

He Had an Object.

"Look here," said a Sixth avenue druggist to a boy who had come in and gone out of the store and left the door open each time, half a dozen times in one afternoon. "You must be a very careless boy. I have had to shut that door after you each time you have gone out."

"I know it," replied the boy.

"Then it was done purposely on your part?"

"Yes, sir. My brother has patented a door spring, and my object was to call attention to it. Put you one on for a dollar which will shut that door a million times and never skip a cog."—N. Y. Sun.

PASTOR KOENIG'S

Two Bottles Cured Her. 6

CARROLL, IL., July, 1889.

I was suffering 10 years from shocks in my head, so much so, that at times I didn't expect to recover. I took medicines from many doctors, but didn't get any relief until I took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, the second dose relieved me and 2 bottles cured me. S. W. PECK.

Spent a Small Fortune.

334 Mahony City, Schuylkill Co., Pa., May, '90.

My son, who is now sixteen years old, had epileptic fits for about four years. I spent a small fortune for doctors and medicine to get him cured, but to no avail until he took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic. It is a year now, since he is perfectly cured, has not had the symptoms of a spell since. I am therefore very thankful for this medicine, and recommend it to all sufferers. PAT. CAMPBELL.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

TOO WEAK TO TALK

The Rescued Miners Taken to the Surface.

THEIR RECOVERY WILL BE SLOW

Tenderly Cared for by Friends in a Public Hall at Jeanesville.

A Procession of Miners Sing the Doxology—Impossible to Get a Statement from Any of the Men—They Are So Weak that a Simple Movement of the Head is Impossible.

HAZELTON, Pa., Feb. 25.—The four miners who were drawn as from the grave in the dark recesses of the Jeanesville mine, were brought to the surface at 5 o'clock, and taken to the Sons of Temperance Hall at Jeanesville.

It was indeed a strange but glad-hearted procession. Many of the miners had not had their clothes off for days and weeks, so vigorously was the search prosecuted. The hall is about one mile from the slope, and the road passes the residence of J. C. Haydon, the proprietor of the mine. When the procession of men with lamps burning on their mining hats arrived in front of their employer's home some began to sing the Doxology, and the company of miners and people joined in the refrain, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

Used Her Camel's Hair Shawl.

Mrs. Haydon and family came outside and accompanied the party to the hall, where, upon the beds, blankets and comfortables were placed over and around the men, and in the excitement of the moment Mrs. Haydon took from her own body a heavy camel's hair shawl and wrapped it around one of the men. A rag moistened with lime juice was placed to their lips and they eagerly grasped it. Then small doses of brandy and milk were given them, but only a spoonful at a time. In a short time the four men were quietly sleeping.

Too Weak to Talk.

Of course, it is simply impossible to get a statement from any of the men. Their weakened condition prevents it, and the physician in charge has positively forbidden any conversation with them. All the men are so weak that a simple movement of the head is impossible. How they lived through the 19 long weary days is the question. The dinner in their pails would have been sufficient to sustain life for eight days, perhaps, if dealt out sparingly. What they lived on the remainder of the time is variously conjectured. The oil in some of their lamps was not entirely consumed, but in the terrible torture of hunger they overlooked that fact.

The Miners' Future Movements.

The terrible tale of their suffering will hardly be made public for several days, as with the most favorable improvement hoped for none of the men will be strong enough to talk. Much comment is heard as to the future movements of the rescued men should they be returned to health and strength. Already parties are eager to secure them and exhibit them from place to place and have them relate the sufferings of that awful time.

All reports of interviews with the rescued miners are pure "fakes." They are resting quietly, but cannot talk. The pulses of all but "Big Joe" have improved in the past few hours. He appears to be growing weaker. Two professional nurses have arrived and will look after the men.

BURYING THE VICTIMS.

Two Hundred Men Digging Graves for the Dead Miners.

SPRING HILL MINES, N. S., Feb. 25.—The work of recovering bodies from the wrecked mines proceeded all night, and a number were brought up after midnight. At the cemetery during the morning 200 men were digging graves. Several of the graves were being made large enough to hold two or three bodies, and are intended for those of the dead who were relatives or who belonged to the same family. A large grave 16 feet square has been dug for the strangers.

The mayor received a telegram from Queen Victoria, which reads as follows: "Her Majesty has heard with much regret of the Spring Hill colony disaster, and desires to convey an expression of sympathy with the injured and with the relatives of those who have lost their lives."

Secretary Foster's Assistant.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Although ex-Secretary Charles E. Coon, of New York, is believed by many to be slated for Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, in official circles it is though the place will be filled by a member of the present House, that being the only explanation for the failure of the President to make the appointment. Representative Gear, of Iowa, who has been many years in Congress, is being urged by his friends for the place, while Baker, of New York, Owen, of Indiana, and Cannon, of Illinois, and others are "on the card" for something of this character.

Senator Jones Knew of No Pool.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The Silver Pool Investigating Committee examined Senator Jones of Nevada. He testified that he did not know of any silver pool, nor had he any dealings in silver growing out of the effect of pending legislation. This probably closes the examination of witnesses.

The Women Discuss Temperance.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The morning session of the Woman's National Council was devoted to the general subject of temperance. Mrs. J. Ellen Foster read a paper entitled "The Non-Partisan National W. C. T. U," which was followed by Matilda B. Carse on "The Temperance Temple."

WILL THERE BE A TIE-UP?

The Pennsylvania Railroad Employes Very Restless.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 25.—Despite all protestations to the contrary, the tension between the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and its disaffected workmen is rapidly approaching the breaking point.

The determined refusal of the company's officials to meet Arthur, Sargent, Ingram, Clark and other workmen's officers in their official capacity, and the printed reply to their demands for a redress of grievances, refusing everything asked for, has exasperated the workmen, who declare that unless the company manifests a disposition to compromise matters the system will be tied up from its eastern to its western terminus.

The company's officials say they do not expect and neither do they fear a strike, but are prepared for anything. The delegation of employes of the Pennsylvania road has investigated the demands made by those of the Pennsylvania Company and has approved them, thus assuring the co-operation of the men east and west of Pittsburg if a strike be declared.

ESCAPED BY ROPES.

Several Men Injured by the Burning of a Cotton Mill.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Feb. 25.—The Burlington Cotton Mills were burned last evening. The wind blew sparks across the river, setting fire to Mason's lumber yard in Winowski. Several tenement houses were also burned.

The loss to the mill owners is $160,000; insurance, $136,000. The flames spread so rapidly that the employes were compelled to escape by ropes. In doing this John Taylor was badly and perhaps fatally burned. Nelson Young was also badly burned, and Joseph Portoin sustained a bad cut on his thigh by a fall from a rope.

At one time it looked as though the whole village of Winooski must go, but aid from Burlington finally put the fire under control. The loss in Winooski is $30,000.

Two hundred hands are thrown out of employment by the burning of the mills.

A MODERN SOLOMON.

The Remarkable Sentence Pronounced by a Pennsylvania Judge.

HUNTINGTON, Pa., Feb. 25.—Justice James Kelly, of this city, imposed this sentence upon a couple tried before him:

"The verdict of the court is that the wife retire to her usual place of abode, and lock the doors so that no strangers can be admitted for a period of six days; that the husband for the same length of time board with his next door neighbor and sleep in the barn, and that each party pay half the costs and stand committed until the sentence is complied with."

The wife had kissed a man not her husband, and her liege lord had soundly thrashed her for it.

New York's G. A. R. Encampment.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 25.—The 1,400 delegates to the 25th annual Encampment of the Grand Army, State of New York, which began here this morning, are now in the city. The principal matter of interest will be the selection of a general commander for the ensuing year. The Women's Relief Corps will also elect a president. Many of the public buildings and hotels are gaily decorated with flags.

Bishop Bowman Will Attend.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Feb. 25.—Fifty members of the East Pennsylvania Evangelical Conference, have arrived in this city. Among them is Bishop Bowman, whose opponents have decided that he shall not preside. This will precipitate a crisis at the opening of the conference. Depositions are being made in the equity suit of Rev. A. M. Sampsel and others against Bishop U. J. Esher.

Conger Gets the Office.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Feb. 25.—In the case of the contested election of Conger against Convery for the office of County Clerk of Middlesex County the Supreme Court ousted Convery, a Democrat. An appeal will be made. The election took place in November, 1889, Convery being declared elected by 16 votes.

Harry Wright Will Manage the Phillies.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 25.—Harry Wright, who last week tendered his resignation as manager of the Philadelphia League Club, has been induced by President Reach and Secretary Rogers to withdraw it and sign a contract to continue as sole manager of the club for the next three years.

An Old Naval Officer Dead.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 25.—Captain Charles Thomas, a retired officer of the United States navy, brother of ex-Gov. Thomas, and for many years a companion of Admiral Porter, died last night. He entered the naval service in 1829.

Molders May Strike.

PATERSON, N. J., Feb. 25.—The molders in the foundry of the Rogers Locomotive Works, this city, have been notified that they will be paid by piece work hereafter. They threaten to strike.

SECRETARY FOSTER

He Will Take the Oath of Office at the Capital To-Day.

SENATOR CAMERON'S OPPOSITION

No Serious Attempt to Defeat the Confirmation of the New Secretary.

Senator Wilson of Maryland Dies Suddenly of Heart Disease—Pension for Admiral Porter's Widow—Senator Jones the Last Witness Before the Silver Pool Committee—The Woman's Council.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—A dispatch from New York says that Secretary Foster will arrive here this afternoon to take the oath of office.

Senator Don Cameron did not attempt in executive session to defeat the confirmation of the nomination of Mr. Foster to be Secretary of the Treasury. The report that he did so grew out of the fact that Mr. Cameron in conversation announced his enmity to Mr. Foster and said, in a casual way, that he would like to see him defeated. The man who did postpone action on the nomination in executive session was Senator Teller, who acted merely in a perfunctory way in order to make known the opposition of the silver men to the selection of a man holding Mr. Foster's financial views.

The family of the new Secretary of the Treasury will be a decided acquisition to the official circle. An intimate friend of the Fosters describes the Secretary's wife as a very sweet and gracious woman, with wavy gray hair and an intelligent and handsome face. She has a lovely family, and their home life has always been particularly delightful. She is a careful housekeeper, and is devoted first of all to her home and family. Although of a retiring disposition, she has always yielded to the social demands imposed by reason of Mr. Foster's official positions, and she is well qualified to maintain the dignity of a position in the Cabinet circle.

It is not expected that the family of the new Secretary will take a house here until next season.

DOINGS IN CONGRESS.

The Direct Tax Bill Passed by the House After a Long Discussion.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The House after routine business took up the Direct Tax bill and after a long discussion it was amended, passed and a conference committee appointed.

The nomination of Charles Foster as Secretary of the Treasury was confirmed.

The conference report on the Naval Appropriation bill was agreed to.

The Senate passed the House bill, with a substitute, to establish a United States Land Court and to provide for a judicial investigation and settlement of private claims in Utah, New Mexico, Colorado, Nevada and Wyoming.

The Sundry Civil Appropriation bill was considered and several amendments adopted, and after disposing of 64 of the 115 pages of the bill Mr. Cameron presented resolutions of sorrow at the death of the late Representative Watson of Pennsylvania. Brief eulogies were delivered.

DEATH OF SENATOR WILSON.

Carried Off by Heart Disease Last Night in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Senator E. K. Wilson of Maryland died here last night at 10:05, in his apartments in the Hamilton House, of heart disease, in his 70th year.

Mr. Wilson was in his seat in the Senate chamber last Saturday apparently in good health and the news of his death came as a shock to the community. He complained of not feeling well on Sunday and yesterday, but his condition was not regarded as serious until late last night when he had a sinking spell but he revived and was thought to be out of danger. Later he grew worse and hovered between life and death until about 10 o'clock when the end came.

Senator Wilson was born at Snowhill, Md., December 22, 1831. He was educated at Washington Academy, Princess Anne, Md., and was graduated as Jefferson College in Pennsylvania. He studied law and practiced the profession for 20 years. He was a member of the Maryland House of delegates as far back as 1847.

In 1885 he was chosen to the United States Senate as a Democrat, succeeding James E. Groome. His term would have expired March 3 next. He was re-elected in January. He was one of the patriarchs of the Senate.

Pension for Admiral Porter's Widow.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The House Committee on Invalid Pensions reported a bill granting a pension of $2,500 per annum to the widow of the late Admiral Porter.

Gen. Banks Will Get the Pension.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The President has approved the bill granting a pension to Gen. Nathan P. Banks.

THE COLUMBUS TRAGEDY.

The Coroner's Inquiry Shows that the Elliotts Were the Murderers.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 25.—The awful tragedy in which W. L. Hughes and Al C. Osborn lost their lives and seven others wounded, is the sole topic of conversation here.

A large number of witnesses have been examined by Coroner Eagan in the inquest on the bodies of the two murdered men. The majority agree upon the statement that Patsy J. Elliott killed Osborn, and that Hughes and the inoffending bystanders were struck by stray bullets.

Nearly all the witnesses swear that W. J. Elliott began the fusilade by firing upon Osborne, who stood with his hands in his pockets less than 10 feet away, and that the first shot took effect in Osborn's chin.

The Elliotts are locked in C corridor together, but not in cells. They had many callers, among the first being Father Mulhearn of the Cathedral, who called in his ecclesiastical capacity. Their attorneys visited them also. The charge is still suspicion, though it may at any time be changed to murder. The police have established beyond a doubt that Bill Elliott fired the first shot, and they think that both the Elliotts shot Osborne. It is impossible to see the visitors without an order from the chief, this being given should anyone have important business with the men. The outside and inside doors are locked so as to prevent trouble should a mob organize, as there have been threats of so doing.

GOV. HILL'S ACTION.

He Refuses to Honor a Requisition from Gov. Bulkeley.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 25.—Gov. Hill, who is always very careful in the granting of requisitions, has taken a course that will no doubt lead to a sensation in Connecticut and elsewhere in the country.

The Governor very emphatically refused to recognize Morgan G. Bulkeley as Governor of Connecticut, who is now the "hold-over" Governor of that State.

A requisition bearing the date of Feb. 21, 1891, and signed by Morgan Bulkeley as Governor of Connecticut was presented to Gov. Hill for the delivery of Charles E. Fardon, who was charged with the crime of burglary committed in New Haven County in January last. The Governor declined to honor the requisition on the ground that he did not recognize Bulkeley as Governor of the State.

THE STRIKE SPREADING.

More Coke Workers Ordered Out—Pinkerton Men Guarding Rainey's Plants.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., Feb. 25.—At a mass-meeting here the 700 coke workers of the Loyalhanna, Unity, Monastery and other Latrobe Works were ordered to strike.

The Frost Hill and Paull plants of W. J. Rainey are still running. The works are heavily guarded by Pinkerton men.

At Mount Pleasant 200 strikers marched to the Morewood Coke Works where a number of men are working by the day and compelled them to stop work.

Buddensieck's Son Killed.

RAHWAY, N. J., Feb. 25.—Arthur Buddensieck, the eleven-year-old son of the well-known New York builder of "Buddensieck" houses, while playing with several companions in the barn of the former, which is about a mile from Hackensack, fell through a hatchway and was instantly killed. Charles A. Buddensieck, the lad's father, is serving out a ten year's sentence in Sing Sing. He has been notified of the sad event and may be permitted to attend the funeral.

Playing Marbles on a Railroad Track.

WAVERLY, N. Y., Feb. 25.—During the morning, 10-year-old Archie Moore and Emory Northrup were playing marbles on the Lackawanna tracks. Two trains approached, and the boys in trying to escape ran in front of one of them. Young Moore had both legs cut off and was otherwise injured. He will die. The Northrup boy received a severe scalp wound and other injuries, but may live.

Military Circles Excited.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Feb. 25.—Military circles are excited here over the confinement in the county jail of L. H. Barnes and David Nichiel, members of the 15th Separate Company, who were court-martialled for non-payment of dues and fines. They refused to pay and were committed. They must serve 76 and 64 days respectively.

The St. Louis Club.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 25.—President Vonder Ahe, in an interview, gives the make-up of the St. Louis Browns as follows: Boyle, Munyan and another man yet unsigned, catchers; Stivetts, Neal and King, pitchers; Comiskey, Egan and Lyons on the bases; McAleer, Hoy and McCarthy in the field and Fuller at short.

Arrest of a Notorious Burglar.

TROY, N. Y., Feb. 25.—John Murphy, alias "Liverpool Jack," one of the most notorious burglars in the country, has just been arrested here. He was in old times a pal of Jim Brady and Jimmy Irving, the bank robbers, and with them operated in New York and elsewhere.

An Old Lady Instantly Killed.

CORNING, N. Y., Feb. 25.—Mrs. Hannah Ostrander, aged 70 years, was thrown from her carriage by the running away of her horses near here last night, and was instantly killed.

Suicide With a Pair of Suspenders.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 25.—Amand Noffles, in jail for disorderly conduct, tied a pair of suspenders around his neck during the forenoon, threw himself over a chair and choked to death.

SWEEPING LIBERAL VICTORY.

They Elect Their Candidate to the Ontario Legislature and Are Jubilant.

Lord Salisbury Working to Drive William O'Brien Into Bankruptcy—President Barillas Ready to Flee from Guatemala—The Empress of Austria to Make a Pilgrimage to Jerusalem.

TORONTO, Feb. 25.—Sir Charles Tupper, at Windsor, read two private letters addressed to Mr. Erastus Wiman and Hon. R. R. Hitt, the well-known Congressman, by Mr. Farrer of the Toronto Globe. Sir Charles pronounced Farrer's letters treasonable.

Farrer, in a letter which appears in today's Globe, says that he wrote the letter attributed to him and declares that he favors political union of Canada and the United States and invites the Dominion government to arrest him if it considers him a traitor.

Victory for the Liberals.

HAMILTON, Ont., Feb. 25.—Ex-Provincial Secretary of Ontario Hon. J. W. Gibson (Liberal) was elected to the Ontario Legislature by a large majority. He was defeated at the last general election by a Conservative candidate, but the latter was unseated for corrupt practices. The Liberals are jubilant, and predict a sweeping victory at the general election.

BARILLAS READY TO FLEE.

The President of Guatemala Mortgages His Entire Estate.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—News just received from Guatemala says that President Barrillas fears an outburst of popular resentment against his rule and that he has made arrangements for leaving the country.

Barrillas has sold his coffee crops for the next three years for $600,000 cash, beside which he has mortgaged his entire estates for $2,200,000 to a German syndicate, so that in case he is forced to leave the country his property cannot be touched. He has a secret egg of $30,000,000 deposited with the Bank of England.

Barillas is extremely unpopular in Guatemala and he is hated and feared by every one not too strong to be out of the reach of his persecution.

TO BANKRUPT O'BRIEN.

Salisbury Trying to Drive the Irish Leader Out of Parliament.

DUBLIN, Feb. 25.—Immediately after Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien had been sent to Clonmel jail, a Dublin solicitor, acting for the Marquis of Salisbury, took out a summons for £2,000 in the Court of Bankruptcy against Mr. O'Brien, that sum being the costs which the Marquis was awarded by the Manchester Courts in the libel suit, O'Brien vs. Salisbury. Mr. O'Brien was served with the summons in his cell in Galway jail.

The meaning of this proceeding on the part of Lord Salisbury is that Mr. O'Brien shall be made bankrupt and thereby deprived of the privilege of sitting in Parliament, unless cause be shown within three weeks. Great indignation will be aroused in Ireland should Lord Salisbury follow out this action to the end.

Austria's Empress to Visit Jerusalem.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 25.—Great preparations are being made at Jerusalem for the reception of the Austrian Empress, who will be the second lady of imperial rank to visit the Holy Sepulchre, the first having been the Empress Helena, mother of Constantine the Great. Ibrahim Pasha, governor of Jerusalem, will receive the Empress at Jaffa, and conduct her with a large military escort, to the Holy City. The Empress considers her pilgrimage a penance, and it is said, her main object in going is to offer up prayers for her dead son Rudolph.

Talk About the Next Pope.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—A dispatch from Rome says that the talk about a foreign Cardinal being elected Pope is rubbish. A large majority of the college are Italians, and would not think of electing anyone but an Italian. If a choice fell outside of Italy, it would probably be on the Corsican Cardinal Bonaparte, who is, of course, of Italian descent. Cardinal Monaco la Valetta is the favorite, however. The present Pope is in good health and there is no early prospect of a vacancy. Newspapers which discuss the subject are kept from the Pope.

Cardinal Gibbons Summoned.

ROME, Feb. 25.—The statement published in "Italie" that Cardinal Gibbons had been summoned to Rome for a conference on church questions in the United States is denied in Vatican circles. It is also stated that there is no question pending which would require his presence in Rome. Two Bishops from the United States are expected here at Easter.

Dillon and O'Brien's Health.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—In the House of Commons this evening Arthur Balfour, Chief Secretary for Ireland, stated, in response to a question, that Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien were in the infirmary of Galway jail, but that a detailed medical report had been furnished which showed that their health was being satisfactory.

Puddlers' Wages to be Reduced.

POTTSTOWN, Pa., Feb. 25.—The Pottstown Iron Company has notified the puddlers in their employ that, beginning March 9, their wages will be reduced from $3.75 to $3.50 per ton.

GOV. BULKELEY'S DILEMMA.

He Sends a Message to the Connecticut Senate Which is Not Received.

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 25.—Governor Bulkeley sent to the Senate a message renominating O. R. Fyler as Insurance Commissioner, and appointing W. Sidney Downs of Derby and R. B. Chalker of Saybrook Fish Commissioners, and R. Trowbridge and George B. Martin Harbor Commissioners at New Haven. The communication was not received by the Senate.

The Senate adopted and sent to the House a reply to its inquiry of last week whether the Senate was intending to proceed to business. The reply says their is no need of answering until the occasion arises, but it says the Senate is ready "to discuss in conference any matter proper to be considered in such manner." The House has not yet acted on the reply.

Gov. Bulkeley sent a message to the House saying that he sent to the Senate Feb. 19 the renomination of Judge Loomis to the Supreme Court and no action has been taken upon it by that body. He also sent to the House the renomination of Judge Sanford of New Haven to the Superior Court. Both nominations were referred to the joint standing committee on executive nominations to be raised.

NOW'S YOUR CHANCE.

EVERYBODY HAS BEEN WANTING TO SIGN AN APPEAL LIKE THIS.

Move the Freight House—Lay Out a Park—and Provide a Safe and Attractive Approach to the Station From the South.

To the President and Board of Directors of the Central Railroad of New Jersey.

GENTLEMEN:—The undersigned citizens of Plainfield and patrons of your road, would respectfully present to your attention the following condition of things, and request for it all a thorough consideration, followed—at the earliest possible moment—by such remedial action as will be most consistent with your ideas of policy, justice, and frugality, most conducive to our comfort and safety, and that would add most to the attractiveness of Plainfield's main station.

The only blot upon our fair city to-day and the greatest obstruction to its growth, is your freight house and yard. We beg of you to remove it, not only because it is so distasteful to our sight and so repugnant to the eye of the stranger within our gates, but because it daily menaces the limbs and lives of almost every inhabitant of Plainfield. Of our city's total population but a handful, comparatively, live on the North side of the track. The masses then, if they have only a minute to spare, climb a steep and muddy bank on the South side and jump across the track in front of a "coaler" to catch their train. If they have two minutes to spare they pick their way through the dirty freight yard and dodge between the shifting cars or climb over them. If they have three minutes to spare they pass down under the bridges to the North side of the track, and travel around the block to reach the station.

This latter way you will say is the only safe and proper proceeding. But it takes time which we do not always have; and again, those of us who ride do not dare to go that way, for just as we passed under the bridge our train or another would rush over the horses' heads with a noise that would cause them to run away and kill us or ruin themselves forever.

In spite of this handicap you keep upon us, we yet lead in the race for growth and increase of wealth. Still you are hurting us without helping yourselves. Your freight facilities are not adequate where they are and you own many sites further from the city's centre and out of your patrons' way. As to its "convenience" for shippers and receivers, that is only a question that effects a few truckmen who can as well drive a few blocks further; though, when you think of it, wherever you move you bring yourself so much nearer to somebody. The question we are presenting to you effects the whole community—its well-being and prosperity.

If it is because there are no macadamized streets leading to such new sites as you have in mind, we can safely promise the city will build them. If you feel you cannot afford to make the alterations necessary for an approach to the station from the South side, we can confidently assure you that a subscription from the people will be forthcoming. Talk it over, at least, won't you?

Very sincerely yours,

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Frank French and Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Valentine are visiting Washington.

Harry VanEmburgh made the score of 236 on the Olympia bowling alleys Monday. This is the best local record of the season.

R. B. Keys of East Sixth street was elected chairman of the executive committee of the New Jersey Chess Association Monday.

Gen. Robert McAllister, who died at Belvidere Monday, was a warm friend of the late Job Male, at whose home he was at times a visitor. He had acquaintances and admirers among all the old soldiers here, and those will as far as possible attend his funeral Friday.

The New York Daily Continent in a recent issue contained a cut of Wilton Randolph, formerly a Plainfield Councilman from Netherwood, in connection with an article on the New York Southern Society, and says: "Wilton Randolph, formerly of Virginia, and for a number of years with the Mutual Life Insurance Company, is a worthy representative of the society of the old Southern family whose name he bears."

BY THE WAY.

—You will find Peck at his new store, 68 West Front street.

—Whitlock & Hulick, carpenters, will remove, Saturday, from their present location, No. 11 Somerset street, to No. 30 Somerset, formerly James Hardy's shop.

—Three other banjo players from Somerville will be on the programme with "Bill" Aten at the Y. M. C. A. reception to-morrow evening. The admission will be free.

—The usual Thursday afternoon meeting will be held in the W. C. T. U. rooms, to-morrow, at 3:30 o'clock. There will be a programme of readings arranged by Mrs. Fernald.

—The suit of Martin vs. Drake, to enforce a lease between landlord and tenant, was won by the plaintiff, through Jackson & Codington, his counsel, yesterday, before Justice Hetfield.

—The State police bill was passed by both Houses yesterday, and puts in the hands of the Governor of this State an effective, economical and civil instrument for the quelling of incipient riots and disorders.

—Prof. Smock, the State Geologist, has begun a new survey of the State. It is expected to take five years. It will deal particularly with the surface, and aid in opening the vast pine lands of South Jersey to valuable uses.

Public Sentiment Not to be Defied.

Democratic Assemblyman Lane, of Union county, ought to be in a position to understand what are the intentions of the State Legislature in regard to important measures now pending before it or likely to be presented later in the session. Mr. Lane is the editor of the Summit Record, and this is what that paper says about the prospects of legislation favoring the interests of saloon-keepers:

"It may be that the course being followed by the clergymen will have a good effect in awakening the moral sentiment of the State to a sense of the enormity of the requests of the Hudson county liquor-dealers, but we speak with some authority when we say that these ministers are wasting their energy in opposing the absurd demands of these irresponsible men. If there is one subject on which the Legislature has come to a tacit understanding, it is that no such laws as those referred to shall be enacted by the present Legislature. There is a well-defined public sentiment against the enactment of such laws, and we know whereof we speak when we say that the Democratic majority will not attempt to defy that sentiment, and we doubt whether any member of either House will have the temerity to introduce any of the proposed bills. Should any attempt be made to carry out the measure of the Hudson county liquor dealers its life will be so completely crushed out that its sponsors will wish it had never been born."

All the License Applications to be Granted and Carey to be Paid Three Months' Salary

The Committee of the Whole met last evening, and perfect good feeling prevailed. All of the Councilmen were present, and Mayor Gilbert.

They talked over the license question, water-works, the Carey matter and everything else. The licenses will all be reported as correct in form and will all be passed at to-morrow evening's meeting of the Council. Councilman See will probably vote for the hotel bars, but not for the "Elkwood" or other saloons.

The Court having decided that the Council had no right to give the Police Board power to suspend an officer, a resolution will be presented by one of the members of the Police Board himself that Carey be paid the amount of the three months' salary withheld from him.

Those Who Are Responsible, Take Warning!

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Who is responsible for the disgraceful condition of the sidewalks on either side of Richmond street between Second and Third streets? On the west side is mud, ankle deep, which holds you fast in its grip. On the east side is broken boards which compel you to walk in the roadway and dodge their way between vehicles. If the property holders are responsible for such a state of things, why do not the city officials compel them to remedy these evils. Let those who are responible take warning and see to it!

A RESIDENT.

[Jack Frost is responsible, just now.—ED.]

Funeral of William Colthar.

Funeral services over the remains of Wm. Colthar were held from his late residence, 149 Duer street, North Plainfield, yesterday afternoon. The house would not begin to hold the people who went to pay their last respects to the departed. The Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of the Trinity Reformed church, of which deceased was a member, preached the funeral sermon. The remains were carried from the house by D. N. Force, George Ball, Peter Doeringer and George S. McGinnis, fellow-members of Wetumpka Lodge, 3401, Knights of Honor, to which Mr. Colthar had belonged. Interment was made at Bound Brook.

"Does your mother know you're out?" said a boy to his little brother. "Yes, she does," was the answer, "for one bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup has knocked my cold into a cocked hat, you bet."

A few applications of Salvation Oil will instantly relieve stiffness in the neck or joints. 25 cents.

JENNIE WILEY'S SAD ENDING.

The Terrible Plight of a Young Woman Closely Connected With a Well-Known Plainfield Family.

Jennie Wiley, a young woman of about 22 years of age, possessed of an attractive face and figure and a polished education, is imprisoned in the jail at Elizabeth awaiting the action of the Grand Jury under a charge of murder.

She is the daughter of Clinton Wiley of Jersey City, is a niece of Franklin Wiley late of this city, and is a granddaughter of Alexander Wiley for many years one of Plainfield's wealthy residents. The girl for many months visited her uncle in Plainfield and made many acquaintances here.

This girl brought up in luxury, educated at the finest schools of the State and in her early life associating with the most refined, is accused of beating a little child, 5 years of age, to death. This child was the daughter of an ordinary looking black man with whom Jennie has been living for a year or two past since his colored wife, the child's mother, died.

Jennie Wiley was interviewed in the jail by a PRESS reporter, and she told her story with a broken voice. She said that when she was turned out by a hot-tempered father because she persisted in wanting to marry a man who was not his choice, she was driven to shame to save herself from starvation. Her uncle Franklin, she said, who has an office on Wall street, refused her help and she was picked up by a woman who gave her food and shelter and gained her affection, before tempting her into the life she led herself.

Jennie was arrested many months ago in the house of Minnie White, a notorious woman of Elizabeth, where a number of white women live but where only colored men congregate. After serving a time in the county jail she was released with the hope that a lesson had been taught her, and that after being separated so long from her bad companions and having realized in her solitude the wickedness of her career and the surety of a terrible fate, she would try and be a good woman thereafter. She did for a few weeks take a position as a servant in a family living at Linden, but the work was too heavy for her and she drifted right back to her former life and into even lower depths of it.

She told the reporter that she was "housekeeper" for the colored man whose baby she is accused of killing. She said the child had some blood disease that brought out blisters all over it, and that the restfulness of the child in bed "during the fever of which it died," caused the blisters to break. That is the way she accounted for the "bruises" which the coroner and his jury found all over the child's body, and which a colored neighbor of Jennie's swore were caused by her daily beatings of the child with "a club as thick as her arm."

The father of the child is a common laboring man living in a few rooms in a low neighborhood near Elizabeth. To a question of the reporter's, Jennie said that there were eleven other white women living with colored men in that vicinity, and that some of them were "lawfully married." She said she had not married her "employer" because she was hoping to get together enough money and clothes, some day, and leave. "Now," she says, "there is nowhere left for me to go, except into the river."

A Mass Meeting Called in Music Hall.

Monster petitions—similar to the one presented in the House of Assembly at Trenton, Monday night, signed by 17,500 women of Essex county—are being circulated all over the State and almost universally signed by everybody, protesting against any new laws to legalize race track gambling or to permit Sunday liquor selling.

Mrs. Elizabeth Tiffany, of this city, has entered heart and hand into the work, and Mrs. J. K. Myers is also deeply interested. They have consulted ex-Mayor Randolph and other leading men of the city, of broad views and wise counsel, in relation to a public movement in the direction they are working. As a consequence, it is proposed to hold a mass meeting at Music Hall, Sunday afternoon at four o'clock, and talk about it. The speakers are not yet decided on.

This is a movement that all can take a hand in, and indorse with their names. Be a man for high license or low, for "all or none," yet he can conscientiously sign a petition against giving the liquor sellers and gamblers any more privileges than they have.

A Hustler Who Goes to Both Extremes at Once.

George Williams, of the Crescent Pharmacy, is proving himself to be such a hustler as Plainfield has not seen in many years. Although he has only recently put in the most extensive and elaborate hot-soda apparatus in the city, yet to-day he is also offering iced cream soda, the first of the season.

—Railroad men say that the eighteen-foot clock on the river front of the Central ferry house is not only the largest in the country but is one of the most accurate as well.

A COLD of unusual severity developed into a difficulty decidedly catarrhal in all its characteristics, threatening a return of my old chronic malady, catarrh. One bottle of Ely's Cream Balm completely eradicated every symptom of that painful and prevailing disorder.—E. W. Warner, Rochester, N. Y.

WHEN I began using Ely's Cream Balm my catarrh was so bad I had headache the whole time and discharged a large amount of filthy matter. That has almost entirely disappeared and I have not had headache since.—T. H. Sommers, Stephney, Conn.

Shooting Contests.

There will be an interesting pigeon shooting match at Three Bridges, Huntardon county, March 14, between Frank Creeley, of Somerville and Abe Case, of Three Bridges. The match is at 25 live birds each for $100 a side.

The shooting events at Fanwood on the 22d, were interesting. The members of the Fanwood Club did everything in their power to make it pleasant for their visitors, including the making of good scores at blue rocks. At Campbell's Club House there was also a good attendance and the live birds furnished all of the best quality.

The Republican Contestant Wins.

In the Supreme Court, yesterday, the Middlesex county contested election case of John H. Congar vs. Patrick Convery was decided. Convery was declared elected County Clerk by the Board of Canvassers one year ago last Fall, and he has occupied the office since. He is a Democrat, and Congar, the Republican candidate, has contested his right to the office. The Circuit Court decided in favor of Congar, but the case was carried to the Supreme Court. The Circuit was affirmed yesterday, and Convery must vacate the office unless he carries to the Court of Errors.

The proprietors of Hires' Cough Cure certainly do not let their light shine under a bushel. They know they have a good thing, and they know they are bound to let the world know it. They believe in printers' ink, and printers' ink believes in Hires' Cough Cure.

CHRISTIANS NOT RESPONSIBLE.

Dr. Lewis Gives Some Interesting Facts Concerning Plainfield's Churches and Saloons.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The New York Independent of Feb. 19, 1891, says: "Plainfield, N. J., a city of about 12,000 inhabitants, had a year without any licensed saloons, which resulted in the reformation of many drinking men. One mission alone gathered in more than a hundred of them, and they were regarded as safe, until the saloons were allowed to re-open. Now nine-tenths of them, it is said, have succumbed to temptation, and gone back to their drinking habits. The privileges of the saloons are being enlarged and new ones are to be licensed. The policy of the City Council seems to be to serve the saloon at the expense of all other interests. While it proposes to extend the time of closing the saloons from eleven o'clock till twelve at night, it is at the same time planning to restrict the privileges of hackmen and increase their license fee. Plainfield is an eminently Christian city, and has the power to prevent it, and yet it allows the saloon to dominate. The responsibility lies with the Christian."

If the above means, as some assert, that there are Christian voters enough in the city of Plainfield to control legislation on the liquor question by direct vote, the statement is at once inaccurate and unjust. The pastors of Plainfield looked into the matter some years ago, and found that the church members formed but a minority of the voters in the city. In some churches the larger share of members who are voters live in North Plainfield, outside the city limits. Since the above appeared in the Independent the writer has made a careful canvass of the question. The official figures are as follows:

The number of voters registered at our last municipal election, Dec. 1890, was 2,466. The whole number of votes cast at that election was 1,995. The number of voters who are members of Christian churches in the city of Plainfield is: Protestants, 864. The records of the Roman Catholic church are not kept as they are in Protestant churches, but the following from the pastor of St. Mary's gives the facts:

To the Rev. Dr. Lewis

The number of voters in my congregation is about 220.

Yours respectfully,
P. E. SMYTH.

The figures show that if the Protestant church members voted together, without exception, on a full vote they would lack at least 370 of a majority. If Protestants and Catholics united there would be 150 less than a majority. In view of these facts, every reader will see that so far as the number of votes is concerned, "Christian men are not responsible" for the situation.

That the Christian people of Plainfield have not exerted the influence they ought against the domination of the saloons, I believe. That they can in time overcome the rum power, I also believe; but it cannot be done in a moment nor directly at the polls. The remedy for our political evils, and the solid basis for permanent reform is found in an enlightened and Christianized public opinion which will make a situation like the present, impossible. If any of your readers desire to know more of my opinions on this subject, they will be welcomed at the Seventh-Day Baptist church next Sabbath, Feb. 28, at 10:30 A. M.

A. H. LEWIS.

CONVERTED BY THE PRESS.

Mr. Bowen Changes His Mind and is in Favor of Just One More License.

The following letter, it is the privilege of THE PRESS to publish:

Netherwood, N. J., Feb. 24.

Mr. Frank E. Miller.

Dear Friend:—I trust the articles appearing in to-night's PRESS will not lead you to think that your friends in Netherwood are trying to prevent you obtaining a license for your beautiful new hotel, Albion. Far from it!

The protest hits the saloon, of which we have enough. Plainfield cannot refuse your application and I wish you good fortune with your new undertaking.

Sincerely,
HENRY E BOWEN.

Three New Laws.

Governor Abbett yesterday approved assembly bill No. 153, which authorizes the comptroller of cities of the first-class to appoint and suspend all clerks and assistants employed in or about the business of his office, provided the Board of Finance or Finance Committee agree thereto.

Assembly 123, authorizing second-class counties to issue bonds not exceeding $100,000 for the purpose of rebuilding bridges, was filed without approval. The same course was taken with Senate No. 10, which enables boards of commissioners to pass ordinances regulating driving on the public streets and to fix penalties.

Constant Activity in Real Estate.

Mr. Baving has purchased from Wm. Flanders a six-acre farm, with buildings, on Clinton avenue, beyond the city limits. The price paid was $6,500. The sale was made through the agency of E. C. Mulford, who reports the real estate business fully as lively as it was last Spring, both as regards renting and selling. Negotiations are in progress for the transfer and development of other property.

—Peck's store and stock are supremely superior to all others.

A VILLAGE ON BELLAMY'S PLAN.

In the Outskirts of Plainfield Is Being Projected a Co-operative Settlement.

Plainfielders who have had their curiosity aroused by the appearance of a big sign-board bearing the word "Graceland", and rearing its head in solitude alongside the Jersey Central railway tracks midway between the Westfield and Fanwood stations, will be interested in the following information concerning the plans of the "Graceland" projectors.

The spot where the big sign stands is surrounded by ordinary farm land. During the past week a party of surveyors and civil engineers have been mapping this out for building purposes.

The land was subdivided and courses were laid for street-makers. There was much speculation about the work at first, as the engineers were reticent, but it is now learned that the land is being laid out for a co-operative settlement to be called Graceland. The work is going on rapidly, and contracts for a complete system of water-works and asphalt drives and walks have been already given out.

There will be a co-operative store, opera house, public library, water-works, roads and all other public institutions, on a plan similar to that suggested by Bellamy and other advocates of co-operation. Speculation will be discouraged as much as possible, the management having declared that no one shall be allowed to purchase any of the building lots for speculative purposes, and every one who buys must build at once or forfeit his claim to land in the settlement. The plans for the opera house provide for an elaborate two-story building, the ground floor of which will be occupied by the co-operative store. These institutions will be managed by a committee selected by the settlers, and no profits will be allowed above the cost of management.

An attempt is being made to keep the settlement quite an exclusive one by a rule which provides that no residence shall be erected at a cost of less than $1,500, while the houses erected on the principal avenue must cost at least $3,000. Then there is a system of sick benefits for the members of the settlement who may be in financial distress, and in case of a member's death his family will be given a receipt in full for the amount of his indebtedness. The projector says that the settlement is to be founded and carried on on the principle that landlordism should be abolished, as it is a menace to the happiness and high development of the human race.

Herrmann, Mme. Herrmann and Florine.

The attraction at Music Hall, Thursday evening, will be the famous Herrmann, the eminent prestidigitateur, aided by Mme. Herrmann, in his marvelous entertainment of magic, mirth and mystery. His programme this season includes many new and startling wonders. In sleight-of-hand tricks Herrmann has no equal, and his illusions are wonders to behold. Chief among which is his latest sensation "Strobelka." The story of the trick is rather romantic. It tells of the escape from the chains of a Russian torture chamber of a condemned officer of the guard, the escape being accomplished by the substitution of the officer's sweetheart. Another novelty will be that of the aerial floating fairy, "Florine," which is said to be an agreeable deception. A female figure goes through a series of evolutions in mid-air. She dances, marches, turns somersaults, jumps through a hoop, and changes her costume seven times, while standing on nothing, in full view of the audience. Abdul Khan, an oriental fakir, and "New Black Art." The allegorical illusion, "A Slave Girl's Dream," and Prince Awata, royal Japanese juggler. The pretty figure and the agreeable face of Mme. Herrmann, supplemented by a charming manner and refined taste in dress, add sensibly to the spectators' enjoyment of these entertainments.

Senatorial Neighbors.

Senator William J. Keys, of Somerset county, loves fleet horses, and he has the means to gratify his taste. He owns and lives upon the Ellis stock farm at South Branch, and he has in his stables $60,000 worth of trotting stallions. His favorite in the string is Governor Abbett, a magnificent big animal, which he keeps in an upholstered stall, attended by a special groom. When the Senator rides out on the country roads he turns out in style behind the finest teams in Somerset county.

Not far from Senator Keys's home is the country residence of United States Senator John R. McPherson. The house is a modern frame structure, cosy rather than elegant, surrounded by hundreds of acres of rolling farm land. The Senator owns only a few horses, and they are all too slow for anything but the van of a plough. But he has the finest cattle in the State and a well-kept game preserve. The cows are almost all Jerseys and Holsteins, and they support themselves and yield an annual revenue. The game preserve costs the Senator $4,000 or $5,000 a year. Mr. McPherson is not a sportsman, and he does not indulge in wild animals or fighting feathered stock. His preserve is filled with fancy chickens, ducks, guineas, peacocks, turkeys and other domestic birds.

MEMORIAL ANNIVERSARY.

The Dedication of the Wilson Chapel at Washingtonville Enjoyably Celebrated.

The anniversary of the dedication of the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel, at Washingtonville, took place Sunday.

The service in the morning was conducted by the Rev. J. L. Huribut, D. D. The sermon, from Acts XXVI, 18, was listened to by a deeply interested congregation. The Sunday-school was also largely attended although no especial effort was made for the day. This Sunday-school work is indeed the main feature of the mission at Washingtonville. The efforts of E. L. Bonney of this city, and his corps of efficient teachers, to attract and keep all who do not attend other places of religious instruction, has been a great success. The cordial invitation and hearty welcome extended to all, gives a homelike feeling to those who may attend the beautiful chapel situated among the Wachchung mountains.

Sunday evening's anniversary exercises were of the character of a praise service, under the management of T. E. Hazel, of North Plainfield, who with a male choir of eleven voices rendered some very fine singing.

William D. Murray, President of the Y. M. C. A. of this city, gave a short address in which in well chosen words he reviewed the work of the chapel association, congratulating them on the work done as well as on the future which opens under more favorable conditions than ever before. New lines of work are to be taken up that were out of reach under former less favorable circumstances.

The social programme marked out for the anniversary exercises, was enjoyed by a crowded house of the friends of the school. The entertainment was gotten up by a committee whose good taste and care was evident by the satisfactory manner in which it was carried out. After the programme refreshments were enjoyed by all. The committee of the evening's entertainment were Mrs. George Bullman, Mrs. George Winans, Miss Tillie Spencer, and Messrs Andrew Wilson and Isaac Winans. The programme was as follows:

Piano Selection.....Mrs. Luersson
Recitation—"How Girls go Fishing".....Harry Coddington
Song—"Where the Rippling Waters Flow".....by Quartette
Recitation—"Cup Bearer".....Minnie Smalley
Recitation—"Inquiring Yankee".....Miss Beeching
Piano Selection.....Mrs. Luersson
Recitation—"How to Kill a Cat".....Eddie Clark
Song—"In Old Madrid".....Miss Georgie Spencer

Accompanist—Miss Katy Stam.

Food for Thought Inside, so They Don't go Out.

Now that the long run of "Men and Women" at Proctor's theatre, Twenty-third street, New York, is drawing to a close, the theatre is thronged nightly and at the matinees. Noticeable among the large audiences are beautiful young ladies with their escorts who sit and watch the action of the play from scene to scene, never for a moment taking their gaze from the stage. In the strong emotional scenes the ladies grasp the arms of their companions at the realism of the acting and frequently their eyes are suffused with tears.

There is no play house in the metropolis where the audiences are of a more refined nature than those seen at Proctor's theatre, particularly since the run of "Men and Women." Fortunately the stereotyped habit on the part of the gentlemen of going out between the acts is not indulged in to such an extent as seen in other theatres. The play causes food for thought during intermission. Very little time is left now to see this truly great picture of every-day life, as it must be taken off soon to make room for the sparkling comedy "Mr. Wilkinson's Widows."

Ladies, clean your kid gloves with Mather's glove cleaner; for sale only by Mrs. J. C. Dyer, 38 West Front street. All the latest novelties of the season in fine Millinery. Correct styles.

Following His Father's Example.

HONESDALE, Pa., Feb. 25.—Frank Gabel, who was recently re-elected tax collector of Texas township has disappeared, leaving a balance of $22,000 owing to the county. He left a letter saying he intended to go away, and, like his father before him, put an end to his life.

Bishop Paddock Seriously Ill.

BOSTON, Feb. 25.—Right Rev. Benjamin H. Paddock, Bishop of the Episcopal Church, is in a critical condition. It was stated at his residence that, though he was likely to live some days, a sudden turn for the worse might end his life at any time.

Big Storm Coming.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The signal officers predict one of the ugliest storms that has come this way for many weeks, and the cold wave that is following in its wake will doubtless take rank among the most severe cold waves of the season.

A National Bank Goes Down.

WINDSOR, Vt., Feb. 24.—The Windsor National Bank, capital, $50,000, has gone into liquidation on account of heavy Western losses. It is said that depositors will be paid in full and that stockholders will realize one-half.

Prize-Fighter McGlone Dead.

NATICK, Mass., Feb. 25.—Henry, or "Fox" McGlone, prize-fighter, died here early in the morning, and there is an idea that his death is due to his recent battle with John Burns of Marlboro, who, though winning the fight, was so terribly punished as to be unable to leave his bed for a week. An autopsy will be held.

Action Against the B. & O.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 25.—A big legal fight has been commenced. The Attorney-General of the United States has brought suit against the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for encroaching on the Monongahela River. He asks for an order to compel the railway to restore the river channel to its former condition, which means the razing of its handsome new depot.

The Tunnel Accident.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Carl Schurz, William Steinway, Jordan L. Mott and many other prominent men, were summoned by Coroner Levy to serve as jurors in the tunnel accident inquest, but some of them were excused. The inquest began with the testimony of Engineer Fowler, who swore that none of the signals in the tunnel indicated that there was a train ahead of him.

Strike in the Singer Works at Glasgow.

GLASGOW, Feb. 25.—Owing to the dismissal of a number of employes belonging to a trades unions from the Glasgow establishment of the Singer Sewing Machine Company, about 200 of the employes are on strike, seriously obstructing the output of the works.

Deposed by His Brother.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—According to advices from Zanzibar the Sultan of Witu, who succeeded the late Fumo Bakari, has himself been deposed by his insane brother, Fumoomari.

Prince Napoleon Bonaparte Ill.

ROME, Feb. 25.—King Humbert paid a visit to Prince Napoleon Bonaparte, who is seriously ill with nephritis.

The La Blanche-Mitchell Fight.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 25.—The directors of the California Athletic Club have deferred final action in the La Blanche-Mitchell affair until next Tuesday evening, when, it is stated, further evidence will be forthcoming. Outstanding bets will be decided by the action of the directors.

Shay is a Murderer.

RED BANK, N. J., Feb. 25.—Mrs. Nora Shay, who was brutally beaten by her husband, John Shay, in their home at Oceanic a week ago, died last night of her injuries. Shay is under arrest.

The Illinois Senatorial Fight.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 25.—The are no developments apparent in the Senatorial situation. The Democrats vote solid for Palmer, and the Republicans are divided between Streeter and Oglesby.

The Best Man.

Gentleman—I hear you're going to get married next week, Pat.

Pat—Indade, sir, I am, an' to the foinest girrul in the country.

Gentleman—Who'll be the best man, Pat, at the wedding?

Pat—Barrin' his riverince, sorr, it's mesilf that will be the best man that iver put fut in a church.—Harper's Weekly.

Two Wise Men of the East.

Oriental Sage—It is better, friend, to wear a patched coat than to beg a new one.

Oriental Mendicant—Perhaps so, O Light of Wisdom! But when it's as hard to get a needle and thread out of your economical reverence as it would be to borrow a sealskin ulster, what's the matter with giving you a good, stiff bluff?—Puck.

Six Months After.

She (bitterly)—If you had been frank in the first place, you might have avoided this unhappiness.

He (thinking of unsuccessful rival)—That's so. Frank had a narrow escape.—Jury.

Coming Out of the Theater.

Mr. Guzzleton—You seemed to be much moved by the performance.

Mrs. Guzzleton—Not so much as you were. You moved out at the end of every act—Judge.

SCIENTIFIC NOTES.

A Swedish engineer claims to have invented a new machine for making horseshoe nails out of iron rods, the machinery making 140 strokes per minute, each stroke producing two nails.

It is proposed making engines of aluminium to develop thirty-four horse power, and to be used for directing the movements of a French war balloon of 3,000 cubic metres capacity, experiments with which are to be made in April next.

Attention is being given to lengthening the life of incandescent lamps. Discolored lamps can now be opened and cleaned without interfering with filaments or mountings. When the lamp is re-exhausted and sealed it is as durable as when new.

The method of treating wine by electricity, devised recently in France, destroys the fermentation. It is thought that light wines that can not be exported, owing to being ruined by fermentation, can by this process be sent abroad without danger.

A new apparatus for measuring the mean level of the sea has lately been installed at Marseilles. It is based on the principle that when a liquid wave traverses a capillary tube or a porous partition, its amplitude diminishes and it is retarded in its phases without the mean level of the wave changing. It consists of a glass tube, the lower end of which communicates by a flexible pipe with a plunger which is lowered beneath the lowest water level. There are two cells in the plunger, the lower being filled with sand and open to the sea, the result being that the column of water in the tube rises and falls very little with the tides, and the mean sea level can be read from a graduated scale.

An Important School Law.

According to an amendment of the school laws of the State of Michigan, children suffering from consumption or chronic catarrh must be excluded from public schools. The circumstance is interesting as a first step toward the public recognition of a most important truth, the fact, namely, that the disorders of the respiratory organs can be propagated by direct contagion, and that the atmosphere of a consumptive's sick-room, unless constantly ventilated, is apt to become a virulent lung poison.

AN INDUCTION COIL.

How Electricity May Be Made to Render Effective Service in Illness.

In rheumatism, neuralgia and nervous diseases, electricity often is of great benefit. If it does not effect a cure, it may still render important service in alleviating the sufferings of the patient. The electricity employed is what is termed induced electricity, and, to be effective, must be supplied in a series of rapid shocks.

Instruments which can be used for this purpose are, as a rule, quite expensive; but the amateur may easily construct one for himself. The instrument is but a slight modification of an electric bell.

Around a round stick, three-eighths of an inch in diameter, wind two or three thicknesses of paper, sticking them together with flour paste. After they have been dried, remove the hollow paper cylinder, previously cutting it to a length of two and a half inches. In one end of this fasten, by means of glue or sealing-wax, a piece of three-eighths round, soft iron, half an inch long, allowing an eighth of an inch to project. Then attach at each end a button of pasteboard an inch and a quarter in diameter.

On this paper spool wind four layers of silk insulated No. 22 copper wire, connecting the ends as shown in cut, and as was done in the case of the electric bell. Outside of this coil, and not connected with it, wind a large number of layers of the finest silk-covered copper wire that you can obtain; No. 34 would be the proper size. Fasten the coil, thus wound, to a base, by means of a strap of tin plate. Connect the two ends of the fine wire with two binding-posts.

Cut a number of straight pieces No. 16 iron wire, two and a half inches long. Bind them together into a bundle having a diameter a little less than three-eighths of an inch, and so that it may be easily slipped in and out of the paper cylinder.

After the coil has been fastened to the base, place on the side of the end containing the solid piece of iron an interrupter the same as on the electric bell. This consists of an L-shaped piece of wood, in a slit in which is inserted the bent end of a piece of spring brass which has been bent back upon itself.

On the end of the spring which is next to the coil is bound by fine wire a piece of soft iron, an eighth of an inch thick by one and a half long. The other end of the spring rests against the point of a brass screw, which passes through the longer arm of the L.

One end of the battery is connected with this brass screw, and the other end goes to one end of the inside winding of the coil. The brass spring is then connected with the other end of the inside coil. The battery causes the spring to vibrate, which in turn opens and closes the main circuit. Each time that it vibrates it produces an induced current in the outside coil of fine wire, which is led to the body of the patient. The strength of this current can be regulated by pushing the bundle of iron wires in or out of the hole in the center.

Electrodes, with which to apply the electricity to different parts of the body, may be made by attaching small sponges to a round wooden handle. These can be kept in place by a few turns of bare copper wire, leaving one end of wire long enough to attach to the binding-posts.—Youth's Companion.

The most beautiful woman in New York said that she "ascribed her good health and rosy cheeks to the occasional use of a tablespoonful of pure whiskey before meals. It increased the circulation, sent a warm glow through the system, and gave her a hearty appetite." That is the experience of all who drink pure whiskey moderately. A. R. Tudor's Rye Whiskey is warranted absolutely pure and ten years old.

THE INMATE.

POVERTY leaves me no choice. I live in a cell. Respectability demands a reputable place. A reputable place forsooth? This den is known to the landlady as a hall bedroom. My meager purse reduces me to this, a room six by ten, a folding bed, a stationary washstand, a chair, and a small table squeezed in at the end of the bed next the window. I really am amazed at the capacity of this room.

The landlady forbids many things. Cooking among them. Fortunately tea and crackers have no telltale odor, and I brew me a cup every night over the gas jet, then carefully wrap up my tin cup in a paper sack and she is none the wiser. It may be dishonorable, but it is economical. Then, too, I cheat the laundress and do wash out my handkerchiefs when I am unusually short of funds, which happens too often for comfort. For amusement I take a cable ride, or sit in my window and sing to myself. I also watch the cat on the roof and try to coax it in. It is getting tamer. A cat is very good company, much better than none. Of course my window opens on a alley. Of late I have noticed a man who seems to have taken the rear room in the opposite house. Manlike, he lights all the burners of his chandelier and stalks around his room coatless, whistling, totally oblivious that there may be a gaping public. Yesterday when I was singing the "Home Sigh" in the dusk he came to the window. I could see him on account of his general illumination; he, of course, couldn't see me. He leaned out and looked, and looked! He is very bald. One of those complacent beings—only found in the male sex, thank Heaven!—who thinks any stray glance or smile of a woman is a tribute to his charms.

This morning (Sunday, too!), as I was hanging up my handkerchiefs to dry before the landlady was astir, he happened to come to the window. I had the kerchief by the corners and was gently shaking it to take out the wrinkles while it was wet. He immediately smirked in the most disgusting manner. It is needless to say I took in my washing. I think him an old fool; his hair is quite gray.

PART II.

"THE OLD FOOL."

I like a rear room, especially when it is large and well-lighted. There is more privacy. I have just moved into this place and think I shall like it. The house is quiet, the outlook not bad, as the yard is still green and well-kept. A few tom-cats on the roofs. Must try my revolver on them some night. Yes, Pipe Stone avenue is eminently respectable. The rear view of the houses on Nebraska avenue is not particularly objectionable. The inmates of the house are quiet. Hold, not all of them are!

This evening I heard a soft, sweet voice singing something mournful, a dirge or something. I never went much on music. The song was entirely too sad for such a youthful voice. Some poor, half-starved girl, I suppose. It makes a fellow feel confoundedly mean to see nice, refined girls shut up in a cell not much better than those at "Bridewell." But what can he do, he can't take them all under his protection!

Sunday is a day I particularly enjoy, but this has not been altogether pleasant. I arose rather early to write home before I forgot it. I was thinking how pleased mother would be at the dress I sent her yesterday, and I suppose my "speaking countenance" reflected my thought with that diabolical grin nature has been pleased to give me instead of a smile. I stepped to the window to dust my coat at that unhappy moment, and a girl just opposite was hanging something white on the shutter, evidently just washed from the limp way it dangled. She caught sight of me, and my blood fairly ran cold in my veins from the look she gave me. She can't be the singer. I know she must have a bad temper, and no woman that scowls so could sing. She is incontrovertibly a modern Katherine. Evidently another example of the proneness of the sex to jump at conclusions. She undoubtedly thought the smile was intended for her.

PART III.

THEY MEET.

It was blowing fearfully! Two long black objects waved mournfully or lashed wildly as the wind willed, against the shutters of a rear window of a house on Nebraska avenue. The occupant of a large back room of a boarding-house on Pipe Stone avenue caught sight of them as he was peacefully smoking his pipe near the window. Their gyrations fascinated him. He wondered what the deuce that mourning was hanging out the back window for. A fiercer blast loosened them, and they sailed triumphantly aloft only to fall plump under his window. He saw them fall, and with a natural impulse looked at the window where they had erstwhile dangled. He saw at that window the anxious countenance of her he had dubbed the modern Katherine; then it disappeared. And in a few moments the girl came out into the alley. He saw her try the gate which led into the back-yard of his boarding house. It was locked. She looked at the fence as if she meditated climbing it. It was too high; she could not. She stood a moment in perplexity when she heard a voice say: "I will get them for you." Not long after a hand reached over the top of the high fence, between the thumb and index finger of which, held gingerly, were her best black silk stockings neatly tacked together as she had hung them up.

"Thank you," she murmured, blushing very unnecessarily; for he could not see through a two-inch board fence, nor over a seven-foot one. "You are very kind to take that trouble."

"O! it is nothing," he replied, with his fatal smile, which, fortunately for him, she could not see.

She reflected: "He has a pleasant voice, and can't be as old as I thought him."

He thought: "She must be the singer, her voice sounds musical. She must be very poor," and he sighed as he went back into the house. Before he reached it, however, he spied a handkerchief.

"O! flimsy rag, what mischief have you not done in the history of mankind, from the foolish, blinded Moor down to this poor 'old fool!'" He picked it up. Neatly written in the corner was the name "Kate Bradly." He said: "I can't call her back. I'll take it to her."

He dressed carefully and about five o'clock presented himself at No. 2899 Nebraska avenue. The servant was so impressed by his manner, or his garments, she seated him in the parlor and went for Miss Kate with alacrity. She soon appeared and immediately recognized her neighbor. She neither blushed nor faltered, but he did both. When he presented the little square of white she broke into a laugh and said: "You seem to be the master of the wardrobe, like Queen Elizabeth's man, I've forgotten his name."

Embarrassment with man is transitory, so he replied: "A very desirable office in some cases, eminently so in this I should think." At which Kate blushed, and tried to look severe. It was not long until he applied for that among other offices, and got it. Kate says it is such a relief to have a regular laundress, it saves one so much anxiety and mortification. SIDNEY KNOX.

Betrayed.

People who are sly should also be discreet. A lady who had a servant somewhat given to curiosity, inquired, upon returning from a visit one afternoon:

"Did the carrier leave any mail, Mary?"

"Nothing but a postal-card, ma'am."

"Whom is it from, Mary?"

"And did you think I'd be reading it, ma'am?" said the girl with an injured air.

"Perhaps not; but any one who sends me messages on postal-cards is stupid and impertinent—that's all."

"You'll excuse me, ma'am," said the servant, loftily, "but that's a nice, purty way to be talking about your own mother!"—Youth's Companion.

First Porter—He handed me a five-dollar bill this morning an' actually ast me to git it changed.—Munsey's Weekly.

—A Prudent Man—An Elkton, Md., man feared that he might be buried before he was really dead, and he therefore directed in his will that his body should be kept for forty days in a shed built for the purpose. He wanted a bottle of water beside him, a latch on the inside of the door and a roof slanting to the west. He is now lying in the shed.—Detroit Free Press.

Jolly Entertainment.

The funniest things at the theater very often do not occur on the stage. One of them is the advent of a man who is half full, and who stumbles over several ladies in reaching his seat. This is always very mirth-provoking. Then some one very often sits on your hat. It is so funny you always laugh. It is extremely comical to discover that you can not see the stage on account of the size of some lady's hat immediately in front of you. But the most hilarious experience is to sit behind a couple of your acquaintances who are unconscious of your presence, and who occupy themselves with criticising your foibles. That is an evening's amusement in itself.—Bostonian.

FROM THE PAST.

Mrs. St. Clue (visiting her son at Harvard)—Who is that coarse, horrible-looking female over your mantel?

Mr. St. Clue, Jr.—Oh, that's what Grandma Niles sent me. I believe she said it was you, when you were a little girl.—Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper.

Perplexity.

A popular young Washington man had a peculiarly weary look on his face when a friend met him and inquired:

"What is the matter? You look troubled."

"I am," he replied. "It happened during the holidays. I had concluded to swear off smoking on New Year's day, and I received four boxes of fine cigars from my friends. I haven't yet been able to make up my mind which to stick to, the resolution or the cigars."—Washington Star.

A Costly Question.

"Good morning, children," said a suburban doctor, as he met three or four little children on their way to school; "and how are you this morning?"

"We dursen't tell you," replied the oldest, a boy of eight.

"Dare not tell me?" exclaimed the doctor. "And why not?"

"'Cause papa said that last year it cost him over twenty pounds to have you come in and ask us how we were."—Judy.

"No," replied the operator, "there is something written down on one corner of the page that I couldn't quite catch, so I put it aside till I got time to study it over. Can you make it out?"

"Yes; I wrote it myself. It's 'Rush.'"—Washington Post.

Explaining It.

Some Causes of Forest Fires.

Moss is a great fire-carrier and will grow where hardly any thing else will. In Maine and New Brunswick moss often occurs in great quantities in spruce and fir lands, while it avoids hardwood growths. The moss among the former trees will, in dry weather, carry fire for days, and that only in a smoldering manner, liable to burst into a blaze at any time. Thus it often eludes notice, and while a party of men with switches can often arrest and completely extinguish fires running in hardwood lands, when they once get under way among moss-surrounded spruce trees they are only to be conquered with the greatest difficulty, since you may think that you have succeeded in quenching with water every trace of fire in such a growth, and when you come back to the same spot two or three days after find that fire, which you had taken such pains to put out, again bursting forth. The causes of fires in Eastern forests are various sometimes, but rarely are they the result of lightning. Generally, however, they are caused by the carelessness of men, and could have been quenched by a little care and attention.—Lumber Trade Journal.

About Telegraph Poles.

The Southern Lumberman says: It is estimated that 7,365,000 poles are required to carry the telegraph lines in the United States. This figure does not include the poles used for telephone, electric light, fire alarm and district messenger lines, etc. The poles used are chiefly cedar, and the growing demand for poles of this kind ought to be explanation enough of the constantly appreciating value of all cedar lands.

HILL AND BULKELEY

The Connecticut Governor Returns His Compliments.

HE SENDS A LETTER TO ALBANY

Two Hundred Convicts Ready to be Turned Over to New York.

The Political Situation Remains Complicated—Prisoner Fardon Still Held in New York—Why He Changed His Name. It is Believed the United States Courts Have Jurisdiction.

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 26.—The refusal of Gov. Hill, of New York, to honor a requisition for Charles Fardon, of Waterbury, accused of theft, on the ground that Morgan G. Bulkeley, who signed the requisition, is not Governor of Connecticut, is the sensation of the week in Hartford and throughout the State. Everybody is talking about it, and it was the subject of conversation on all incoming trains.

When Gov. Bulkeley received official advices and the New York papers, and read of the rather outspoken statements by Gov. Hill explanatory of his action, he was thoroughly aroused, and instructed his clerk to mail at once the following letter:

Gov. Bulkeley's Reply.

Governor DAVID B. HILL:

DEAR SIR.—Understanding from your official action, as reported to me officially, that criminals from sister States and especially from Connecticut, are safe from arrest and return for prosecution when they have entered the gates of the City of Refuge, embraced only in your jurisdiction, I desire to inform you that there are now in Connecticut State prison about 200 convicts that Connecticut can safely and with propriety turn over to you.

I have no doubt that every one would prove a loyal subject and rejoice to avail himself of the freedom of the State of New York and the protection of the Executive.

Express trains are here frequently. Awaiting your orders to forward such available reinforcements for your service, I have the honor to remain, respectfully,

MORGAN G. BULKELEY,
Governor.

Political circles are busy with this letter with opinions varying according to party feeling as to whether it was judicious. Speculation is rife as to what Gov. Hill's reply will be.

The question is, What can be done? It is believed that the United States courts have jurisdiction. But if taken there, it would incidentally carry to court the whole question of Connecticut's struggle over her State officers, and this is an issue no United States court would care to pass upon.

The Political Situation.

HARTFORD, Feb. 26.—Both parties will hold general caucuses to-day to consider whether general business or final adjournment shall be the line of action. The deadlock has reached a stage where a speedy decision of some kind appears inevitable.

FARDON STILL IN PRISON.

He Denies His Guilt and Tells Why He Left Waterbury.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Charles E. Fardon still occupies a cell in the Essex Market prison, and seems utterly unconcerned as to how the interstate row may terminate. He is about 28 years of age, and was employed by Elkins & Wake of Waterbury, Conn., whose safe was broken open a few weeks ago.

"I haven't the slightest objection," he said, "to going back there and meeting the charge, whether extradition papers are sent or not. I am entirely innocent, and there cannot be a particle of evidence against me. Suspicion was probably excited by my leaving Waterbury two days after the burglary, and afterward living in this city under an assumed name. As I explained before, I did this only to escape from a woman whom I had married without knowing her real character. I changed my name to throw her off the scent and prevent her from following me."

Calling Out the Police in Times of Riot.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 26.—The debate on the bill authorizing the Governor to call on any city police force squad to put down riots was bitter. The Republicans attacked the bill as investing the Governor with powers dangerous to the State at large and to those cities which might be stripped of their police forces to quell riots in different sections of the State. The Democrats replied that it was ridiculous to suppose that the Governor would withdraw enough police from any one city to cripple its home force, and that in case a riot assumed such large proportions, the military would be called out. The bill was passed by a vote of 32 to 22, party lines not being strictly drawn in the vote.

An Unknown Man's Body Found.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—About noon the body of an unknown man, about 28 years old, was found in a lot at the corner of Sedgwick and Boston avenues. Near by lay a revolver with one chamber discharged. There was a bullet hole in the head. In one of the pockets of the dead man an envelope postmarked "Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 9, 1890," on which was the name, "William Flinte, General Delivery, Savannah, Ga.," was found. A horrible feature of the case was the discovery that one side of the body had been eaten away, it is thought, by the dogs of the neighborhood.

An Alleged Murderer Arrested.

PUTNAM, Conn., Feb. 26.—Officer Roberts, of Inspector Byrnes' staff, arrested in Ironston, Mass., William Lloyd, who is alleged to be wanted in New York for the murder of a companion in a saloon last month.

NO TARIFF ON MARRIAGES.

Eloping Couples Will Not Be Interfered With by the Peevey.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 26.—Camden's reputation as the Gretna Green of Pennsylvania couples has been saved.

A school teacher at Cape May had a bill introduced in the Legislature which compelled the couples intending to marry to go before the clerk of the Common Pleas Court and swear to a lot of inconvenient questions. They were to pay a tax, too.

Assemblyman William Cole, of Camden, rose to the rescue of the blushing couples and the Camden clergymen. He asserted that the bill restrained the liberty of private citizens. Eloping couples might do worse than go to Camden to get married. He protested against taxing couples for what their grandparents had done with impunity. The bill was aimed at one of Camden's best industries, and he didn't want the industry of marriage interfered with.

Assemblyman Eagard also defended Camden, but Assemblyman Mullone, of Hudson County, put himself on record against the Gretna Green industry.

The result was the defeat of the bill by just five votes.

ANOTHER MURDER CHARGED.

To be Arrested at the Close of a Long Imprisonment.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 26.—James Ward, who on Saturday will end an 11-year term at the Western Penitentiary for the murder of Jane Means, in Westmoreland County, will be arrested as he steps from the door for the murder of Ellen Means, a sister of his previous victim.

On the night of Nov. 13, 1881, Ward attempted to rob the residence of these two aged sisters. Ellen was 83 years old and Jane somewhat younger. They resisted and were so desperately beaten that Jane died a few months afterward. Ellen lingered until 1882, when she died at the residence of Mrs. McLean, 150 Taggart street, Allegheny. The warrant has been prepared for the arrest.

HORSEWHIPPED BY A GIRL.

A Norwalk Woman Takes Revenge on a Connecticut Slatther.

NORWALK, Conn., Feb. 26.—Miss Kittie Moore, accompanied by her fiance, Alonzo W. Smith, walked into David R. Swords's meat market last evening and gave him a severe wallpping with a heavy rawhide whip.

The cause of Swords's chastisement was that he was supposed to be the author of an article which appeared in a local paper reflecting upon the character of Miss Moore.

The only resistance made by Swords was to seize a cleaver and threaten to strike Smith if he should interfere. Miss Moore is employed in Roth & Goldsmith's corset factory and Smith is a well-known hatter.

Paying Dollar for Dollar.

CLEARFIELD, Pa., Feb. 26.—Senator William A. Wallace is now paying off dollar for dollar to the depositors in his bank who were preferred creditors. The amount paid out to these depositors is about $3,000. The balance of $3,000 under this head is not due but will be paid in full as soon as it is. Mr. Wallace has turned over his half interest in the Maschic building here to an unsecured creditor. It is now generally believed that Senator Wallace will be able to meet every obligation in full.

Senator Chandler's Charges.

CONCORD, N. H., Feb. 26.—Senator Chandler, in a double-leaded editorial over his own signature in the Monitor, reiterates his charges that Senator-elect Gallinger, W. H. Greene and other Republicans entered into a series of bargains with Hon. Frank Jones (Hon. C. A. Sinclair and other prominent Democrats, and further states that of the truth of these charges he will soon endeavor to satisfy the public.

Mrs. Lyons' Assailants.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 26.—Mrs. Mary Lyons, who was outrageously assaulted at her home, No. 84 Suffolk street, this city, by John Bradley, of New Brunswick, went to New York and identified Bradley. He had been arrested by one of Captain Slevin's men. Bradley will be brought here for trial. He was a special officer at the Clark thread mills at Kearney, and is charged with several other crimes.

The Case of Miss Gardiner Postponed.

ORANGE, N. J., Feb. 26.—The case of Miss Gardiner, the young woman who was indicted in December last on a charge of grand larceny by Stern Brothers of New York, and whose trial was to have begun in the District Court at Newark to-day, has been postponed until the next term of court, owing to the illness of Judge Fitzpatrick.

Sixteen Thousand Men Out.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 26.—Fifteen hundred men of the Hostetter Coke Company have joined the strikers, making the total number out in the Connellsville region 16,000. Both sides are very firm, and there are no prospects of a settlement until there is improvement in the iron trade and a renewal of the demand for coke.

A SERIOUS ACCIDENT

Six Persons Killed on the Pan Handle Railroad.

OVER FORTY PEOPLE WOUNDED.

The Cars Roll Down an Embankment and Are Soon on Fire.

The Flames Were Quickly Extinguished—All the Killed Were in the Smoking Compartment of the Sleeper—The Train Was Running at the Rate of Forty Miles an Hour When the Accident Occurred.

RICHMOND, Ind., Feb. 26.—A terrible accident occurred on the Richmond Division of the Pan Handle Railroad at Hagerstown, 16 miles from this city, last night, in which six persons were instantly killed, one mortally wounded, two seriously, possibly fatally, and a large number more or less injured.

It was the fast train between Chicago and Cincinnati, which was coming down a steep grade into the town, when the framework of engine No. 494, in charge of W. W. Bartlett, engineer, and Noah Dunn, fireman, broke and derailed every car. However, they passed the station and came to the canal bridge, where there is a 15-foot fall, and where it came near proving even more terrible, as the cars caught fire, but the flames were quickly extinguished.

The smoker first turned on its side and the day coach and parlor car Eugenia, the smoking compartment of which contained all the killed, breaking away from the smoking car, but holding together, rolled over twice in their descent of the embankment.

Meanwhile the derailed baggage car had hung to the engine and away beyond the other cars had struck a guard at the road crossing, again mounted the track and escaped almost uninjured, but the engine, though holding the rail, was about as badly wrecked as the parlor car and day coach.

The train was running at the rate of 40 miles an hour and the cause of the accident is in doubt.

So far as known the killed are: C. B. Case, engineer; O. F. Deal, fireman, George Needham, attorney for the Pan Handle, M. E. Reeves, president of the First National Bank, Richmond, Ind., and two unknown men.

A later dispatch says there were over 40 persons wounded, several of whom will die.

THE ENGINEERS READY.

If There is a Strike on the Pennsylvania All the Trainmen Will Go Out.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 26.—The conference of the Pennsylvania officials to arrange a schedule of wages is still in session, and will not adjourn until this afternoon. The men are awaiting the company's proposition, and nothing will be done until after it has been presented.

The company does not anticipate that the new operative schedules will be satisfactory to all the men, for the reason that the contemplated equalization will reduce the pay of some of the men. This may have the effect of creating differences in the councils of the grievance committees.

While the company appears to feel secure on the strike question the attitude of the men is directly opposite. They are as firm in their sentiments to-day, even more so, than they were a week ago.

Forty engineers, representing the Brotherhood enginemen of all the Pennsylvania Railroad organizations, have decided to act with the other organizations in their efforts to secure higher wages. This action was declared at the engineers' conference yesterday. It means that engineers, firemen, conductors, trainmen and switchmen on the entire system concerned will act as a unit.

Carroty Neil's Funeral.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The city during the afternoon was the scene of a most remarkable spectacle in the funeral of the Coles woman, otherwise known as "Carroty Neil," whose murder has created such excitement. The woman, who could not have mustered half a dozen friends before the tragedy, was followed to the grave by an enormous multitude of mourners. The crowd made an angry demonstration against the police, whom they seemed to regard as in some way responsible for the crime, or at least for not having captured "Jack the Ripper" before he had claimed so many victims. The woman's coffin was deluged with flowers. It was with difficulty that the police prevented a serious demonstration of popular anger.

Another Ousted for the Standard.

LIMA, O., Feb. 26.—The Standard Oil Company has purchased the refining plant and oil territory of the Geyser Oil Company for $800,000.

Dr. Liebreich's Remedy.

BERLIN, Feb. 26.—Dr. Liebreich's remedy for lupus and tuberculosis of the larynx is cantharidate of potash in very small doses injected subcutaneously.

SIR JOHN'S LAST SCHEME.

An Appeal for Votes to be Made by the Quebec Bishops on Sunday.

OTTAWA, Feb. 26.—On Sunday next Sir John Macdonald will play his trump card in the Quebec section of his colossal contest.

It is stated on reliable authority that the Roman Catholic Church has as yet only sounded the first note, and that a collective pastoral letter signed by all the archbishops and bishops in Quebec, defining their attitude, will be read in all the Catholic churches of the province on Sunday. It is believed that this letter will powerfully influence the whole Catholic electorate of the province.

It is also claimed that every Conservative candidate will be authorized to assure his supporters that after the elections, and within the statutory time, the legislation of the Manitoba Assembly regarding separate schools in that province and the dual language question will be disallowed. This is said to be the price the church has demanded for its support of the government.

A CASE OF LEPROSY.

Poor House Officials in Pennsylvania Want a Foreigner Sent Home.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—The poor house officials of Lima, Pa., have made application to the Treasury Department for passage for a foreigner now in the Lima poor house with leprosy, so that he can be returned to his native country in Europe.

The officials state that the man is in an advanced state of the disease and the health of the community is menaced by his presence in their midst. No information is given as to how long the man has been in this country, nor the country from which he came is not stated.

The Treasury Department has directed an investigation of the matter and if possible will compel his return home. In the meantime measures will be taken to secure his isolation and protect the citizens of Lima from contracting the dreaded disease.

SWEPT AWAY BY FLOODS.

Several Lives Lost in California and Many Houses Destroyed.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 26.—Reports received up to noon show that at least six persons have lost their lives in the floods of the past few days, and perhaps many more who have not been accounted for have perished.

Among these is the family of Charles Watts, who lived near Downey. The Wells family, consisting of three persons, was drowned at Duart, and the bodies of two Mexicans were found in the same neighborhood. S. Laurens was drowned at Wilmington.

The worst of the flood was at Downey and vicinity. The old and new Gabriel Rivers broke from their banks and ran together, making a great inland lake, six to 10 miles wide and 17 miles long. Many houses have been swept away, and their occupants are missing.

The Vassar College Case.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Feb. 26.—Cyrus Swan, counsel for Vassar College, said that the report that the executive board of the college met in New York and ratified an agreement with the heirs-at-law of John Guy Vassar to settle a suit against the college involving $700,000, was untrue. The executive board has no power to act in the matter. Mr. Swan said the case had not been settled and nothing will be done until the board of trustees consider the proposition to settle at their meeting on March 4.

The Keystone G. A. R. Encampment.

ALTOONA, Pa., Feb. 26.—At the morning session of the State G. A. R. Encampment the time was principally occupied in balloting for officers and hearing reports of committees. Lieut. Geo. Boyer, of Harrisburg, has been chosen Department Commander, Rev. Sayres has been chosen Chaplain, and Dr. A. S. Williams, of Coatesville, Surgeon-General. It is unofficially announced that Captain Mackie, of Post 400, has been elected Vice-Commander.

Babcock to be Married at Last.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Feb. 26.—James L. Babcock, the young man whose uncle in 1888 left him a fortune of $500,000 on condition that he marry within five years, is about to take a wife. The bride-elect is Miss James, a sister of C. B. James, a prominent merchant of Waukesha, Wis. Mr. Babcock has been the recipient of more love letters and proposals, probably, than any other young man or woman of his time.

Will Abolish Car Stoves.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company has arranged for the equipment of its passenger cars with steam heating appliances. Col. W. G. Rice, president of the company which will equip the cars, says that the road has been making these arrangements for some time, and had not begun simply on account of the tunnel disaster.

Guarding Sherman's Grave.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 26.—The military guard of honor at Gen. Sherman's grave will be kept on duty six months. The temporary guard will be replaced by a troop of cavalry in a few days. A sentinel will be kept over the grave until the troop is finally relieved, when the grave will be left in the guardianship of the cemetery authorities. The present guard belongs to the Second Cavalry.

The Sewer Contractors Secure a Stay.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 26.—The eleven sewer contractors, convicted of conspiring to defraud the city, were arraigned for sentence during the morning, but on the request of their counsel, who stated they would probably appeal to the General Term, sentence was deferred until Monday next.

Brazil's New President.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—A cable dispatch received here says that at the election in Brazil Deodoro was chosen President.

RUSHING THE WORK

Night Sessions Now for the Senate and House.

THE SHIPPING BILL UP TO-DAY.

The Senate is Behind the House With the Appropriation Bills.

Renewed Predictions of an Extra Session—The Late Secretary Windom's Will Filed—He Left $175,000 to His Family—Mr. Foster in Charge of the Treasury Department.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—The Senate adjourning upon the announcement of the death of Senator Wilson, of Maryland, chopped off one of the few remaining days left the Senate to transact the business that it must get through with before March 4 if an extra session is to be avoided.

The Senate is much behind the House in work upon appropriation bills. This condition of affairs has brought out renewed predictions of an extra session. Their character is, however, purely spasmodic.

Mr. Allison, the chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, and Mr. Cannon, the chairman of the House Committee, both say that while it would require pretty sharp work to get through the business, they do not fear the result of such a result being reached. There will, however, be involved in the reaching of this end, night sessions of both Houses. These sessions commenced in the House last night, and will commence in the Senate to-night. By means of them, it is said, by 12 o'clock on the 4th of next March we will find Congress ready to adjourn.

The only business now possible outside of the appropriation bills is the Shipping bill, which was made a special order for to-day and to-morrow. The bill differs materially from the bill that has heretofore passed the Senate.

The House bill will be abandoned, it is said, and the Senate measure put in its stead. The House will be remembered, proposed to subsidize both steam and sailing vessels. The Senate bill subsidizes only steam vessels.

There is no chance for the Copyright bill being passed. Mr. Reed has it on his desk in its amended form as it came from the Senate, and refuses to appoint conferrees.

MR. WINDOM'S WILL.

The Late Secretary Finally Left an Estate of About $175,000.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—A dispatch from Minneapolis says that the will of the late Secretary Windom has been filed in the Probate Court at Winona. The instrument gives one-third of all the testator's property and the family residence, in addition to the widow. The balance of the property is to be divided equally among the testator's three children.

Mrs. Windom is named as executrix. The gross value of the estate will be from $150,000 to $175,000, which, when all debts are paid, will probably yield an annual income of $5,000.

Mr. Windom held an interest in the Windom Block in Minneapolis, and owned land in the Red River Valley in Dakota. He sold some of the land, notes being taken in payment. In connection with Senator Davis, Mr. Windom owned some property in the coal regions of West Virginia. He also had a small property in Colorado and a little at Rochester, Minn. He also held stock in the Winona & Southwestern, the Green Bay & Winona, and the St. Paul railways.

Services Over Senator Wilson's Remains.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Services over the body of Senator Wilson were held at the Hamilton House at 10 o'clock this morning. Rev. D. Burtt, of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, was the officiating clergyman, assisted by Dr. Butler, the chaplain of the Senate. The services were brief, and at their conclusion the body was taken under an escort of Capitol police to the Pennsylvania Railroad station, whence the funeral train left at 11 o'clock and will arrive at Snow Hill, the late Senator's home, this evening. The interment will take place at Snow Hill to-morrow.

Internal Revenue Collections.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—A statement prepared by Internal Revenue Commissioner Mason shows that for the first seven months of current fiscal year the collections for internal revenue amounted to $87,000,984, an increase over the same months last year of $7,487,412. The principal items of increase were: Spirits, $3,819,942; tobacco, $1,172; fermented liquors, $1,390,068; oleomargarine, $1,000,000. The collections for January, 1891, were $867,753 greater than for January, 1890.

Foster in Charge To-Day.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Secretary Charles Foster arrived in Washington last night. He assumed his duties as Secretary of the Treasury to-day.

Horatio Seymour Dead.

BOSTON, Feb. 26.—News has reached here of the death in Lisbon, Portugal, on the 23d inst., of Hon. J. Perry, who was for twenty years Secretary of the United States Legation at Madrid. He served as Charge d'Affaires in Rebellious days, and made several important treaties. He was in the Mexican War and married a noted Spanish poetess, the first instance of a mixed Catholic and Protestant marriage in Spain. He was born in Keene, N. H., in 1806, and graduated at Harvard in 1844 in a mixed class. He was 67 years old.

The Stanley-Jameson Quarrel.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Major Jameson claims to have discovered evidence in Zanzibar throwing an entirely new light on the quarrel between Emin Pasha and Stanley.

IRISH POLITICAL AFFAIRS.

The Inactivity of the Factions Bothering the Tories and Liberals.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The inactivity of the Irish party is the subject of some anxious discussion in the lobbies of the House of Commons. There are no signs that the Dublin Journal, organ of the anti-Parnellites, will not be ready for publication in March, as promised.

The Radicals in Parliament have decided to oppose by every method in their power the final passage of the Balfour Land Purchase bill, on the ground that it means a large gift of money to the landlords at the expense of the British treasury. Mr. Parnell, on the other hand, approves the bill in its general outlines, and wishes to see the land question settled by making every farmer an owner.

The government has decided not to entreat the bail of Dillon and O'Brien's sureties.

Parnell's friends say that if he decides to send delegates to America they will represent his personal policy, and the funds they collect will be subject to his control in futherance thereof. He is being strongly urged by friends to send such a delegation.

Encountered Much Field Ice.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The steamer City of New York, just arrived at Queenstown from New York, reports that last Saturday she encountered such heavy field-ice that she had to steer south for some distance to avoid it. She passed ten large icebergs during the voyage.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Opdyke left town to-day for their visit to the West. Their address will be North Ontario, California.

This afternoon at the home of the bride, Mt. Vernon, New York, took place the wedding of George S. Rockwell, of this city, and Miss Mattie E. Conkling, the Rev. Dr. Simmons officiating.

The following gentleman will represent the Plainfield Association during some portion of the State Y. M. C. A. convention that opens at Trenton this evening, W. D. Murray, George S. Beebe, Stephen Cahoone, A. C. LaBoyteaux, Wm. Thompson, A. B. Beers, James E. Murray, C. B. Brown, J. H. Manning, J. A. Goodhue, John Whiting, Stacey Reynolds, George Fuller, Geo. L. VanEmburgh, C. T. Kissam, Seeley Edsall and L. W. Randolph. The 3:20 P. M. train from New York on Friday will arrive at Trenton in time for the parlor conferences.

Plainfield Birds Are Crowing.

A cocking main took place Tuesday night in the suburbs of Newark at which "Old Hat's" pyle muffs won the main for Plainfield against Paterson. The main was for $250, and fifteen showed up. Twenty dollars was staked on the result of each battle.

In the first battle Paterson showed up a five-pound black hackle, Plainfield a white hackle. Paterson won, and also the second fight, when a 3-pound 14-ounce black hackle encountered a similar bird of Plainfield's. The latter won the next battle, showing a black against a 4-pound 6-ounce Paterson black hackle. A brown red represented Paterson in the fourth fight, Plainfield winning with a pyle. Paterson won the fifth fight with a 4-pound 2-ounce gray against a 4-pound 13-ounce pyle, and also the next fight with a brown red against Plainfield's 4-pound 12-ounce red.

The excitement ran high when Plainfield won the next two fights, taking the first with a 3-pound 15-ounce brown red against a 4-pound red, and in the second they turned up a Dominick against a 4-pound 3-ounce brown of Paterson. The battles were then even. Heavyweights were presented to decide the main. A pyle weighing 4 pounds 11 ounces represented Paterson, and one of "Old Hat's" pyle muffs battled for Plainfield. It was a pretty fight, and Plainfield carried off the "honors."

Plainfield Appreciation Envied Abroad.

[From The New Brunswick Fredonian.]

A few weeks ago some of the musical people of this city thought they would like to attend the concert given by the Musical Association, of Plainfield. One of the members wrote to a friend at that place and received the following reply:

"You can inform your musical friends that every seat in the house was sold before the first concert was given and there is a standing offer of $5 a seat for any one of the concerts. They would better remain at home, for they could not get inside the Opera House at $10 apiece."

Such appreciation is creditable in the people and most encouraging to a society which cultivates so ennobling and elevating an art. The Musical Association of this city is certainly worthy of the same appreciation and encouragement as their Plainfield friends.

Where Conclusion-Jumping Will Land You.

Our only esteemed contemporary in this city, the Central Times, is jumping at conclusions again. Yesterday's issue said:

No better comment on the public men of this country can be found than the fact that Mr. Windom left at his death but $6,000. He handled millions, but there was no glue on his hands.

This plainly says, if he had left more it would have been money dishonestly gained. That is hardly fair treatment from a Republican paper under any circumstances, and in view of the fact that Mr. Windom left about 175,000, it is very bad treatment.

I've been a sufferer from rheumatism for years and have been unable to obtain any relief at all. Salvation Oil gave me entire relief and I heartily recommend it. HENRY WINKEL, Baltimore, Md.

MR. CHASE'S RUINED EYE.

Accident Insurance Policies Contested, and Damages Awarded.—What is Meant by "Total Disability."

Richard F. M. Chase, of "Edgewood," Somerset street, North Plainfield, has just secured a verdict in his suit against the United Life and Accident Insurance Company to recover damages for the loss of an eye. Mr. Chase held two policies of the Company, on each of which they had agreed to pay to him the sum of $25 for loss of time, not exceeding twenty-six weeks, arising from "total disability," caused by external, violent or accidental means. As they disputed his claim of being totally disabled he brought suit in the Superior Court of New York, where the case was tried at the Trial Term, without a jury, and decision announced yesterday.

On Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 29, 1888, Mr. Chase was loading a gun. The cap exploded and destroyed his right eye, which was afterward removed, and a glass one was inserted in its place. The question to be determined was how long he was totally disabled.

He was engaged in the purchase and sale of patents and the collection of royalties thereunder, and used his eyes in examining models, drawings, and conducting correspondence. Aside from the injury to the right eye, his faculties were unimpaired. The glass eye was substituted Jan. 5, 1889, and from this time onward the plaintiff attended his place of business, but under disadvantageous circumstances. In his decision, Judge McAdam said:

"That he suffered from inability for many months thereafter is evident. That the sight of the right eye will never return is true, but this is 'partial' disability only, as he has the full use of the other eye. The liability of the defendant commenced with the 'total disability' and ended as soon as that condition ceased. The disability contemplated commenced with the accident, but when it ceased is not so easily determined.

"It is impossible in the nature of things to fix the precise day or hour when the change occurred, and the question must be determined by the court just as a jury would have disposed of it if the action had been tried by them. Upon the evidence adduced, aided by the inherent and attendant probabilities, I find, as a matter of fact, that the plaintiff was totally disabled, within the contemplation of the policies, for eight weeks, and that the total disability then ended. For this period he is entitled, on the two policies, to $50 a week, making $400, for which sum, with $49 interest thereon, aggregating $449, the plaintiff is entitled to judgment."

The accident which caused Mr. Chase the loss of his eye was a very singular as well as extremely painful and dangerous one, and the public will be interested to read again the following story of how it happened, from THE PRESS of Nov. 30, just after the occurrence:

The hosts of friends of Mr. R. F. M. Chase of North Plainfield, will deeply regret to hear of the serious accident that happened to him yesterday, and which resulted in the total loss of his right eye. Mr. Chase is the owner of "Edgewood," the handsome residence and grounds situated on the side of the mountain terraced up from Somerset street just at the entrance to the "Notch."

He is a most hospitable gentleman, and that day as usual he had a number of friends at his home whom he was exerting himself in many ways to entertain. About noon they were engaged in the skillful sport of breaking glass balls and bottles by shooting them with a rifle, and Mr. Chase had proved himself the best shot of all. He probably could not have been excelled by any amateur in the State.

The rifle he was using was a breech-loader, shooting cartridges of 32-calibre. About half-past twelve he had just placed another cartridge in the breech of the barrel, and he raised the gun to his shoulder as he was relocking it. The cartridge, however, had not been pushed far enough into the barrel, and as the stock struck it an explosion followed. The ball passed out of the mouth of the gun and sped harmlessly through the air, but the back end of the cartridge was blown off and entered Mr. Chase's eye.

A reporter of THE PRESS examined this little missile after I was taken from the dissected eye. It is a round bit of thin copper, slightly smaller than a silver three-cent piece, stamped with a letter U. It passed through the ball of the eye to the posterior, where it rebounded and imbedded itself in the ball again.

The pain caused by the wound was most excruciating. Surgeons were summoned by telephone at once, and Drs. Probasco and Endicott arrived as soon as possible. Dr. Probasco decided immediately that no risks must be run, nor any delays permitted. The diagnosis and treatment of the most skillful specialist must be secured at once. If such an one was sent for he could not arrive probably before the next morning, and Dr. Probasco thought that then it might be too late to save either of the unfortunate man's eyes, or, possibly, his life.

The removal of the patient to New York was decided on, and, accompanied by Dr. Probasco, he was taken to the private hospital, at 45 West 12th street, of Dr. Herman Knapp, undoubtedly the most renowned and skillful eye specialist in the United States. Mr. Chase was put under the influence of a narcotic, and the entire eye was removed.

It was not until then that the intense suffering ceased. The motion of the carriage to the station, and even the vibration of the railroad care, increased the terrible pain, and the attending physician thought at one time during the journey that the patient would die of the shock. Mr. Chase will remain for a week or two at Dr. Knapp's, for the proper after treatment and after nursing necessary for the healing of the socket. Dr. Knapp has removed and successfully treated over 800 eyes, and the prompt placing of Mr. Chase in his hands probably saved the sight of the other eye, and possibly the patient's life.

The King of Illusionists.

Herrmann, the wonderful, the world's famous magician, aided by Mme. Herrmann, will be seen at Music Hall, this evening, and will, in all probability, attract all lovers of wonders. As an exponent of the "Black Art" Herrmann has always been away up at the top of the tree. He comes now with a wonderful array of new tricks and illusions, such as has never been produced here before, among them being "Strobeika", his latest and greatest illusion, "New Black Art", "A Slave Girl's Dream", "Florine, the Child of the Air", Abdul Khan, the oriental fakir, Prince Awata, a royal Japanese juggler, and others.

"Strobeika", Herrmann's latest illusion, seems to be very difficult to expose, as no reasonable explanation of the clever illusion has, thus far, been given to the public.

Funeral of Peter G. Kline.

Funeral services over the remains of the late Peter G. Kline were held yesterday from his late residence, 72 Summit avenue, and from the Trinity Reformed church. Members of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M., and of the Berean Class, attended in a body. The Rev. Cornelius Schenck preached the funeral sermon. The church was well filled with mourners. Interment was made at Hillside Cemetery.

To-Day the Day for Soaps.

Change of advertisement of R. W. Rice & Co., the enterprising North Plainfield grocers, was received too late for insertion to-day. The special bargains this house intended to offer for this day were in soaps. All five-cent cakes have been reduced to four cents, and Acme four-pound bars, worth twenty-five cents, have been reduced to twenty cents. Other bargains are offered, all of which are desirable.

It's Dull Surely, Without Him.

A New York paper says: "Yesterday's market was so dull that even the larger traders took no interest in it. Mr. Kirkner seemed to prefer the outside air and a cigar to the Board room."

Cartwright Tells About Louis Riel.

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—Sir Richard Cartwright has written a letter in which he indignantly denies the assertion that he is conspiring to force Canada into annexation. He says: "The assertion should be accorded only the same belief as that of any other utterance of the man (Sir John Macdonald) who publicly declared that he wished to God he could catch Louis Riel, having six months previously supplied the same Riel with funds, through Archbishop Taché, to enable him to live in comfort in the United States."

Meeting of Boulangists.

NOW'S YOUR CHANCE.

EVERYBODY HAS BEEN WANTING TO SIGN AN APPEAL LIKE THIS.

Move the Freight House—Lay Out a Part—and Provide a Safe and Attractive Approach to the Station From the South.

To the President and Board of Directors of the Central Railroad of New Jersey.

GENTLEMEN:—The undersigned citizens of Plainfield and patrons of your road, would respectfully present to your attention the following condition of things, and request for it all a thorough consideration, followed—at the earliest possible moment—by such remedial action as will be most consistent with your ideas of policy, justice, and frugality, most conducive to our comfort and safety, and that would add most to the attractiveness of Plainfield's main station.

The only blot upon our fair city to-day and the greatest obstruction to its growth, is your freight house and yard. We beg of you to remove it, not only because it is so distasteful to our sight and so repugnant to the eye of the stranger within our gates, but because it daily menaces the limbs and lives of almost every inhabitant of Plainfield. Of our city's total population but a handful, comparatively, live on the North side of the track. The masses then, if they have only a minute to spare, climb a steep and muddy bank on the South side and jump across the track in front of a "cooler" to catch their train. If they have two minutes to spare they pick their way through the dirty freight yard and dodge between the shifting cars or climb over them. If they have three minutes to spare they pass down under the bridges to the North side of the track, and travel around the block to reach the station.

This latter way you will say is the only safe and proper proceeding. But it takes time which we do not always have; and again, those of us who ride do not dare to go that way, for just as we passed under the bridge our train or another would rush over the horses' heads with a noise that would cause them to run away and kill us or ruin themselves forever.

In spite of this handicap you keep upon us, we yet lead in the race for growth and increase of wealth. Still you are hurting us without helping yourselves. Your freight facilities are not adequate where they are and you own many sites further from the city's centre and out of your patrons' way. As to its "convenience" for shippers and receivers, that is only a question that affects a few truckmen who can as well drive a few blocks further; though, when you think of it, wherever you move you bring yourself so much nearer to somebody. The question we are presenting to you affects the whole community—its well-being and prosperity.

If it is because there are no macadamized streets leading to such new sites as you have in mind, we can safely promise the city will build them. If you feel you cannot afford to make the alterations necessary for an approach to the station from the South side, we can confidently assure you that a subscription from the people will be forthcoming. Talk it over, at least, won't you?

Very sincerely yours,

They Learn a Man's True Inwardness by Cutting Under the Surface.

Said a bank note engraver—of whose profession George F. Smillie, of Central avenue, is the most expert portrait artist—"First impressions are not always to be trusted. Sometimes a photograph of a bank or railroad President comes in, and at the first glance the face is attractive. But on taking its lines to the plate, day after day, a different feeling rises up. Long and close inspection detects the man a sneak, or a bully with a varnish, or a chap who would do anything to gather dollars. Then, again, a hard, homely face comes along. The introduction is not pleasant; but as it keeps itself before you for a fortnight or so the features grow friendly and show a man to tie to. Yes, engraving a man's picture is a good deal like knowing the man himself. Intimacy brings out the truth about him."

Insane from Grief.

Mrs. Catherine Noe, of Oak Tree, a village on the Lehigh Valley railway just outside of Plainfield, was taken dangerously ill last week Tuesday. She is 82 years of age.

When her husband, Clarkson Noe, who is 87 years of age, was told that his wife was not likely to live long, his mind gave way, and he is now a helpless imbecile.

He sits and looks at his wife and laughs and weeps alternately as his thoughts run at random through his brain. Neither is expected to survive more than a few days.

The proprietors of Hires' Cough Cure certainly do not let their light shine under a bushel. They know they have a good thing, and they know they are bound to let the world know it. They believe in printers' ink, and printers' ink believes in Hires' Cough Cure.

WHERE THE BOROUGH MONEY GOES.

Interesting and Comprehensive Reports for the Year Just Ended.

Herewith are published the annual financial reports of the Borough of North Plainfield, presented at the last meeting of the Borough Council. The reports are highly interesting and instructive, and show that public affairs in North Plainfield have been conducted the past year economically, carefully, and better than ever before.

Fearful Increase of this Terrible Disease.

Read This and You May Prevent Becoming One of Its Victims.

It is an alarming fact that paralysis is becoming more and more common, and the medical profession have discovered at last a remedy which is almost certain to cure this terrible disease, if taken in time. What started the furore for this medicine among FAILED TO HEED THE physicians was the wonderful and almost miraculous cure of Alexander Horn, of the Marine Asylum, Philadelphia, Penn. Thousands of physicians all over this country are today prescribing the same marvellous remedy which cured him and made him able to walk again, when for twenty-one years before he had been so paralyzed that he had not lifted his foot from the floor!" Some doctors recommend and prescribe this medicine openly, others secretly. At any rate, it seems unfair that sufferers should pay a fee to physicians when they can purchase at any druggist's for $5.00 per bottle this wonderful remedy, which is acknowledged at the present day as the greatest paralysis cure and preventive.

FIRST SYMPTOMS. The remedy is Dr. Greene's Nervura, and J. S. Phillips, Esq., the prominent notary public of Philadelphia, was the first to certify to Mr. Horn's remarkable cure, and thus bring it before physicians and the public.

In talking with the well known John S. Dorenus, Esq., 283 Ellison st., Paterson, N. J., he referred to the really astonishing curative powers of Dr. Greene's Nervura in the following emphatic terms: "Miss Pauline Roe had a terrible stroke of paralysis, and having myself received such great benefits from Dr. Greene's Nervura, I persuaded her to use it as a last resort. She did so, and the change since taking this medicine has been most remarkable. Surely through the mysterious effects of this wonderful curative remedy, Dr. Greene's Nervura, Miss Roe has received a new lease of life. I shall be ready at any and all times to testify to the remarkable restoration to health of this lady, and the wonderful effects of Dr. Greene's Nervura."

PARALYZED.

Afterwards Miss Pauline Roe, of 805 7th ave., New York, herself substantiated the facts. "The suffering I endured," she said "was unbearable. My speech was impaired, my mouth drawn to one side, and the pains in my head were maddening. I used Dr. Greene's Nervura, and before I had used a bottle I felt a marked improvement, and now I feel myself again. It gives me great pleasure to recommend all troubled with nervous complaints to use this really wonderful medicine."

Mrs. J. Fisher, of 44 Vanderbilt ave., Brooklyn, was restored from paralysis by the same remedy in a no less wonderful way.

Now that all may recognize the approach of this treacherous disease and take it in time to surely prevent it, the first or premonitory symptoms are given. Paralysis is curable, and it can always be prevented by Dr. Greene's Nervura if taken in time.

Among the first symptoms will be noticed a nervousness and restlessness, with weak and tired feeling in the limbs and general sense of exhaustion; any unwonted exertion will be followed by great fatigue and the weakness will be very marked. These symptoms will often be accompanied by bad feeling in the head, and the person often wakes each morning more tired and languid than on retiring.

Sudden Stroke.

As the disease progresses there will be a coldness and bad circulation in the feet and limbs, followed after a time by a slight numbness or tingling, at first hardly noticeable, but gradually becoming more marked. Among the first symptoms, also are a weakness, tired feeling or trembling of the limbs, with an exhausted sensation.

Proofs like the above cures are almost certain guarantee that all similarly effected can be cured by Dr. Greene's Nervura. Do not hesitate for a moment when perfect restoration to health is within reach. By no means neglect the first symptoms, for they surely lead to prostration and paralysis. Save yourself from the terrible disease while there is time by the use of this wonderful remedy and prevent a serious or fatal issue. Dr. Green's Nervura is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless, and is for sale at druggists for $1.00 per bottle.

Dr. Greene, of 35 West Fourteenth St., New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled.

N. B. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write Dr. Greene about your case, and a carefully considered letter, fully explaining your disease and giving you a perfect understanding of all its symptoms will be returned, free of charge.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS.

CAPTAIN KING'S novel, "Between the Lines," has won high praise from the foremost military authorities in Great Britain.

EMILE ZOLA has been paid $6,000 for the right to publish his new novel, "Money," in one of the Paris evening papers.

ELI PERKINS has written a book of reminiscences of famous men he has met on his lecturing tours, and just published under the title of "Kings of Platform and Pulpit."

LUCY LARCOM, the authoress, is superstitious in that she believes it a bad omen to speak of her future literary work to even her most intimate friends; "If I did," she says, "I should never go on with it."

TOLSTOI'S niece has prepared an edition of "War and Peace" for the blind. This edition will be printed entirely in raised letters, and each copy will contain about seven thousand pages. The preparation of the work has lasted five years.

MRS. SOUTHWORTH is the author of eighty novels, "Retribution," the first story, being published in 1849. That is big work for a woman's hand and brain, and the world none the worse for it, either. The latter fact is her crowning triumph.

AN old schoolmate of Rider Haggard says that at college the future author of "She" was not accounted clever. He was a plain, matter-of-fact boy, who lived simply. He had a preference for traveling, however, which he indulged immediately after graduation.

AFTER fifty-nine years of labor, Barthelemy Saint-Hilaire has finished his translation of Aristotle, a work in thirty-five volumes. For the last twenty years the translator has also been very active in politics as Secretary to Thiers, Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Senator.

ON OR NEAR THE THRONES.

QUEEN VICTORIA has presented a richly-caparisoned Indian elephant to the Emperor of Morocco.

DURING the forty-nine years of his life the Prince of Wales has drawn $16,500,000 from the public treasury of Great Britain, and his debts, it is said, now amount to about $8,000,000.

THE finest specimen of physical manhood on a European throne is King Oscar of Sweden, in whose royal veins there runs very good red plebeian blood, with but little of the real blue article mixed in it. His ancestor was Napoleon's marshal, Bernadotte.

IN spite of the advancing years and increasing flesh of the Empress of Russia, she has not lost her taste for dancing, but indulges in that pastime nearly as freely as she did in her youth, when her devotion to it won her the name among her friends of "the grasshopper."

LILIUOKALANI, who becomes Queen of Hawaii by the death of Kalakaua, her brother, is the wife of an Englishman, Lieutenant-General John O. Dominis. Her designation as heir apparent was due to the fact that she was the only member of the royal family who had children.

THE German Emperor is now a landowner in Norway. A few weeks ago he made a contract with Holm Munthe, a well-known architect of Christiania, for the erection of five villas and a hunting lodge on his estate. The Norwegians believe that it is the Emperor's intention to visit his Northern home each summer.

Turkey Stuffing.

City Boy—Do you like turkey stuffing?

Country Boy—Naw! Nobody eats turkey stuffing.

"Guess you don't know what it is."

"Yes I do. It's the half a pound o' corn that you stuff into its crop, after it's dead, to make it weigh heavier."—Good News.

A TWILIGHT STORY.

"Auntie, will you tell a story?" said my little niece of three,
As the early winter twilight fell around us silently.
So I answered to her pleading: "Once, when I was very small,
With my papa and my mamma I went out to make a call;
And a lady, pleased to see us, gave me quite a large bouquet,
Which I carried homeward proudly, smiling all along the way.
"Soon I met two other children, clad in rags and sad of face,
Who grew strangely, wildly joyous as I neared their standing-place.
'Twas so good to see the flowers! 'Give us one —oh, one!' they cried.
But I passed them without speaking; left them with their wish denied.
But the memory of their asking haunted me by night and day.
'Give us one!' I heard them saying, even in my mirthful play.
"Still I mourn, because in childhood I refused to give a flower;
Did not make those others happy when I had it in my power."
Suddenly I ceased my story. Tears were in my niece's eyes—
Tears of tenderness and pity—while she planned a sweet surprise;
"I will send a flower to-morrow to those little children dear."
Could I tell her that their childhood had been gone this many a year?
—Mary J. Porter, in Harper's Bazar.

TOLD BY A FAKIR.

The Many Tricks in the Street Man's Life.

Last evening, says a writer in the New York World, a man stood in a a buggy selling prize packages by the blaze of a huge paraffine lamp. He wore a frock coat, a shiny silk hat, clean linen, a benevolent smile and half a dozen badges.

"I've been faking for twenty years," he confided to a reporter after he had replaced prize packages with $45 and thrust it into his inside pocket.

"I've traveled the country from Maine to California," he continued, "and I know every city, town and village where there's a dollar. I either get a permit or a license at each place, and so I'm known to all the mayors and chiefs of police from Florida to Oregon. I'm 40 years old, and have been a street man just half my life.

"No, it doesn't matter what a fakir has to sell, he'll sell it if he only knows how. It's the gift of the gab, a solid front, nerve and judgment, that succeeds; and the goods have nothing to do with it. To be successful you must be grammatical, newsy and brief. If a man will only wait until I get through talking I'll have his quarter. If he goes home he misses my breezy conversation, and his wife gets the money; mine does when I go home, I know.

"In prohibition States I advocate free license, and in Chicago high license for saloons. If I strike a town where there has recently been an elopement I tell them an elopement story, and get 'em laughing. If it's a pious town I look austere; tell sober, pathetic stories, and stealthily wink at the policeman, who usually goes away and chokes. If the town is Democratic I talk Democracy, or if Republican I advocate the principles of the g. o. p. and nod to the Democratic coroner.

"Some audiences I have worked with a carriage and pair and with a colored driver. An hour later, in the same town, I am selling to a different crowd, mounted on a soap-box, with a soft felt hat, a blue flannel shirt and overalls. I sell the same goods to both crowds, but out of the carriage I get a quarter and off the soap-box I only get a dime. However, I clear as much money in an hour from one crowd as from another, as the stuff I sell does not cost me over three cents, and if I sell 100 boxes at 10 cents, and 50 at 25, I have done well, even after paying for the carriage, which costs say $2 in a small town. I handle almost every thing, but medicines pay best. I was once in a town with a big stock of jewelry and could not work it off. I thought if I only had some medicine to sell I might pay the hotel bill. I went out skirmishing and found a sawmill where they cut up a good deal of mahogany and some ebony. I got a paper bagful of the dark sawdust and soaked it all night at the hotel. We had a beautiful medicine next day, and my wife bottled it while I went to the printer's and had some labels struck off. Each bottle was the size of your little finger, and cost 30 cents a gross, the labels cost 50 cents and the sawdust nothing. I sold $9 worth at noon at 25 cents a bottle, and that night I took in $37 in cold cash. People who felt all kinds of things at noon had gone home, taken some, felt better and recommended it. See?

"The first street man I ever saw was 'Dr.' McBride, the original 'king of pain,' who resided in Chicago up to the time of his death. He made many thousands of dollars, and at one time showed me his bank book with $40,000 to his credit, but he died penniless. Gardner, the original street soap man became wealthy, and old man Clark, the pioneer street indestructible pen man, is still selling on the street at the age of 78. Charlton, the impression-paper man, became a minister, and is now pastor of a New England church. By the way, Clark the pen man recovered heavy damages for injuries received in the Ashtabula disaster in Ohio, and enjoys the distinction of holding a life-pass over the road on which he was injured. As he is now 76, it would be interesting to know how old he might have become if he had not received those injuries.

"Every lawyer and broker downtown will remember Smith, the razor-strap man, who was recently buried with Masonic honors. Prescott, the man who handled galanga root, is settled in Maine in good circumstances, but although 70 years of age, the old nomadic spirit comes over him at times and he lights his big lamps and talks at country cross-roads as glibly as ever. Bigelow, the street man who sold patent medicines for years, is now connected with a very large patent-medicine house in New Haven. The original glass-cutter man was C. H. Thompson, now in the insurance business in Boston.

"Old man Dow, who made a specialty of novelties, is still on the road with a big Cheap-John notion wagon in Massachusetts, and Marvin, the razor-paste man, is practicing medicine in Boston. King still sells blacking in summer and juggles with paper at the dime museums in winter.

"As for myself, I commenced on bird whistles in the street. They cost me $3 a thousand, as I made them myself, and I whistled like Mrs. Shaw, so I readily sold one for a quarter, although now you may buy them anywhere for 1 cent each.

"After that I sold cheap jewelry—six pieces for a quarter, including brooch, ear-rings, finger-rings and a scarf-pin. Twenty cents profit on each sale! Later I sold steel pens, buying ten gross lots and carrying with me samples of pens in their different stages of manufacture. After that I sold 25-cent packages of stationery. These packages contained six sheets of note-paper, six envelopes, three Faber 'steamboat' pencils, one of which had a rubber top; six pens (brass), a nickel penholder, a pair of cuff-buttons, one collar-button, two finger rings, one gilt chain, one key-ring, six magic parlor tricks on pasteboard, a box of blacking, a bottle of ink and a bottle of mucilage, with a brush. On this 25-cent package I realized 9 cents profit, and sold the boxes as fast as I could hand out the goods and make the change.

"Notwithstanding the fact that I often cleared $20 a day, I wanted to sell something that was all profit. One day in Sarnia I saw a fakir in a carriage who talked to the people about the anatomy of the hands and feet, and offered his salve and liniment as a cure for every ailment, from a compound fracture of the ankle to corns and chilblains. From a carriage I sell at 25 cents and from a dry-goods box or flour barrel at 10 cents. In good weather I travel with a gypsy wagon. My wife dresses as a Sioux princess and plays a cornet when not playing a parlor organ. In order to get my audience interested I take a common newspaper, and, while folding and tearing it into Jacob's ladders I give them the history of paper, showing how it is made and telling how useful it is, from wrapping a red herring to bearing the death warrant of a criminal, the will of a deceased person, the check of the millionaire, or a marriage certificate. Then I give them statistics. After this I take this piece of stiff yellow paper which my wife cut out, and I juggle with it. I can turn it into over 100 different shapes, including a poke bonnet, a Parisian hat, a coal hod, a bread basket, a flower vase, a card receiver, a cruet stand and a cradle. All this catches the crowd. Then I throw the paper down and 'turn the joint,' which is fakir for opening the sale. I must have eyes, ears and mouth open at the same time. My wits must be alert, so that if somebody in the crowd makes a remark calculated to hurt my sale or make fun of me, I can reply as quickly as a flash with something that turns the laugh on him. He sneaks away and my smiling but sarcastic reply brings out a deluge of quarters from those who have heard the colloquy.

"Unless you have sold medicines you would never believe what a lot of ailments people have. Some of them never suspect it themselves until they have heard me talk. In an hour in some places I take in $20 or $25, and as it is mostly profit and I'm no hog I close my sales for the day. I have a dollar to spend and a dollar to lend, and the latch-string hangs out to my friends and my wife's relatives. I've a dollar for charity, one to loan on good security, one to spend for the benefit of my family and another for my own cigars. No, never mind my name. All the first-class fakirs and most of my country customers will recognize me from what I have said."

SWISS UNIVERSITIES.

They Are Run Upon a Co-Educational Basis.

The Swiss universities are broad and liberal in the highest degree. Statutes are passed in their senates with simple reference to elevation of character and usefulness, and with no apparent thought of the sexes as separate. These statutes, when presented in council, are treated in the same spirit, and the question as to the advisability of co-education came first in every university after women had already entered and studied. The original statutes excluded no one, and consequently when—after generally a remarkably long time—women applied for admission, their names were taken exactly as those of their brothers were taken; they took their places among these and worked there undisturbed until some other consideration brought the question forward. It is difficult to see why it should have been so long after the establishment of the universities before women asked to work in them. In Zurich it was thirty-one years, in Berne thirty-eight, while Basle was disturbed first last year by the question. Lausanne, however, which just begins its career as a university, begins with women students. In Zurich and Berne it may have been the development of the universities from schools originally founded for the aid of callings as yet unthought of for women which caused the indifference on the part of women toward them. However that may be, when in the sixties women applied for admission in Zurich—the first one was a foreigner—no question was raised; she entered and took her degree. Ten years later; when so many, chiefly Russians, came with insufficient preparation, a new law was passed regulating the admission of "students" into the university, and formally recognizing women.—Flora Bridges, in Popular Science Monthly.

—At the Dressmakers—"So you say you want seven buttons on this waist, Miss Susy. Must I put another on?" "Well, yes, I think so. You see, with six, it never comes right when I say 'He loves me—he doesn't love me.' I think I must have one more button."—Fliegende Blatter.

—"Chews your weapon" might be a proper form of invitation to one of the old-fashioned melo-dramatic duels in which poison pills are used.—Washington Post.

THE LATEST PROJECTILE.

It Is Rotated by the Explosive and May Prove of Great Value.

In the projectile shown in the illustration, which has been patented by Mr. William Bowman, of Atchison, Kan., it is designed that a portion of the gases generated by the explosion shall pass through transverse and horizontal passages of the projectile, and, bearing upon the walls of the passages, act to turn the projectile, on the principle of the Barker mill. Fig. 1 is a perspective view, showing in dotted lines the passages through the projectile, Fig. 2 representing the butt end of the projectile, in the edges of which is the usual gas check, held in place by set screws. Two or more bores are made from the forward end of the projectile to a point not far removed from its base, where they are intersected by smaller transverse bores, tangential to an imaginary circle concentric with the peripheral face of the projectile, the other end of the smaller bores opening into bores extending forward from the butt of the projectile. The transverse bores may be made, as shown in the cross sectional view, Fig. 3, by boring in from the outside of the projectile, and afterward in-serting plugs to close the exit of the gases except through the longitudinal passages, or such transverse bores may be made diagonally from openings in the base, thus avoiding the use of plugs. The necessity of rifling or grooving gun barrels is designed to be obviated by the use of this projectile, to which the necessary rotary motion may be given by the force of the gases of explosion acting on the walls of the passages.—Scientific American.

A SIMPLE EXPERIMENT.

With a Little Care You Can Make It Very Successful.

Choose six keys of graduated sizes, says the Boston Globe, which we will number from one to six, so as to facilitate explanation.

Place on the table the bits of the two larger keys, No. 1 and No. 2, and put into the ring of key No. 1 the ring of key No. 2, as shown in the illustration. These two keys, 1 and 2, will form a very wide angle, and in pressing your hand on the rings you must be sure that they stand so firmly that they will not slip on the table, as they are to serve as a base. Then put the bit of key No. 3 into the ring of key No. 2; after that, in succession, the bits of Nos. 4, 5 and 6 into the rings of keys Nos. 3, 4 and 5. Look from the top to see that the axis of your several keys are in a vertical position. If the hooking of the bits in the rings has been carefully done, which you can be sure of by pressing on the last key (No. 6) nothing will be more simple than to place on the rings of keys Nos. 5 and 6 (the last one being horizontal and almost flat) sundry articles of the most fragile kind, so as to make the experiment more attractive, plates, bowls, decanters, bottles, etc.

If a bottle, it must be half full of water so that its center of gravity may not be too high, which increases the steadiness of the combination, or, rather, decreases its unsteadiness.

To Test the Quality of Belting.

A London journal says that to test the quality of belting, a sure method is to take a piece, say 8x2 inches, and cut it down four inches into two strips, each one inch wide, and submit the leather to a tearing strain; if of the best grade with respect to quality of hide and quality of tanning and currying, it will have great power of resistance, but if torn, then most of the fibers will not pull out, but will break, because they are thoroughly united to each other by gummy oil; and if, in the tearing strain, the fibers pull out to a great extent, that is an indication of imperfect or incomplete currying, though the original quality of the tanned leather may have been good, for a poor piece of leather tears easily and a majority of the fibers break short off. A final and conclusive evidence consists in testing the fibers themselves, by seizing them with the fingers at the place of rupture and subjecting them to a breaking strain. In a piece of material which is of really poor quality the fibers have little strength, and this is easily perceptible.

Neutralizing Lightning Pains.

A singular phenomenon of the lightning flash is that its chief effects are observable only at the points of its entrance and exit. Thus a flash which entered a school-room injured only the first and last child on the form, those between escaping unhurt. The most effective treatment of lameness and other ailments due to lightning is the application alternately to the head, trunk and limbs of a large horseshoe magnet. In case of a quite recent stroke the clothing should be unfastened, the patient laid with the head high and quietness and fresh air should be secured. If consciousness does not return the head should be exposed to a stream of cold water.

DIDN'T SURPRISE HER.

She Got Onto His Jag and Was Prepared for the Worst.

"The suddenness of my avowal, Miss Pinkie," the young man said, feverishly, "may have taken you by surprise."

"No, I can not say—"

"It is true I had no right to address you in such terms. You had given me no reason to hope that you looked upon me in any other light than that of a friend. Yet I was carried away. I acted on impulse. I—I made a fool of myself."

The young woman nodded.

"Yet I did not surprise you?"

She shook her head.

"H'm! I am at a loss to understand you, Miss Pinkie. Maddened by your intoxicating beauty I lost control of myself. I presumed upon an acquaintance of only a few weeks and declared a passion that I ought to have held in check. Your prompt rejection of my suit is a merited rebuke to my audacity. Yet I have endeavored to soften the blow by the reflection that I was only premature—that I took you unawares—that I surprised you. And you say I did not?"

"You did not."

"Then, Pinkie Billmore," he exclaimed, "have you been trifling with me? Have you artfully led me to a declaration for the sole purpose of rejecting me scornfully? I never breathed a word of love until this evening. I have studiously concealed my feelings. How does it happen," he went on, holding tightly to the back of a chair as if to steady himself, "that my sudden burst of passion did not take you by surprise?"

"Because, Mr. Longshot," gently replied the young woman, in whose lovely blue eyes, moist with a tender sympathy, there shone the clear light of truth itself, "because I saw when you came in that you had a tremendous jag on."—Chicago Tribune.

Distressing Oversight.

The most famous view in the Yosemite valley is that from Inspiration point, where the traveler gets his first sight of the whole valley. It is a splendid bird's-eye sweep, in which are gathered more scenic wonders than are contained in an equal space elsewhere in the world.

A gentleman who has recently visited the Pacific coast describes the hush which fell upon the occupants of the stage-coach as the driver pulled up his horses at this point. Their delight and enthusiasm were too keen to be put into words.

The silence lasted for a minute or two. Then a woman on the back seat suddenly exclaimed, with a mighty sigh, expressive of the deepest feeling:

"Oh my! I wonder why they don't have lace curtains at the Wawona Hotel!"—Youth's Companion.

Business.

Slick (to Blossom)—Is this Mr. Bloomer's office?

Blossom—No. His office is across the hall.

Slick (leaving the door open as he walks out)—Thank you, sir.

Blossom—Hey! Come back and close that door! Haven't you any doors in your house?

Slick—Yes, sir; but they all have springs on 'em. Allow me to show you, sir, my patent, double-back-action door spring. It closes the door without a bang, and is warranted to last a life time.—Life.

A Series of Explosions.

Mrs. Fatwood—I can not allow you to light the fire with kerosene.

Biddy—Sure, an' I always used it in my last place.

Mrs. Fatwood—And did you never get blown up?

Biddy—Yis, mum; most ivery day—by the missus, mum.—Puck.

True Enough.

Cumso—I think it must be true that women exerts a refining influence on man.

Mrs. Cumso—Of course it is.

Cumso—Now, there's Jaysmith. His wife's scolding has driven him to drink, and he's been fined and refined for disorderly conduct.—West Shore.

More Frightful Than Guns.

Friend—I should think you would find hard wood rather an expensive fuel these days.

Suburban Resident—That wood-pile is not for fuel. It's for protection against tramps.—Good News.

Couldn't Hide It.

Mrs. Crimple—Yes, but he had to do it. I gave him a diamond pin for Christmas.—Life.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

Two Bottles Cured Her. 6

CARROLL, Ia., July, 1889.

I was suffering 10 years from shocks in my head, so much so, that at times I didn't expect to recover. I took medicines from many doctors, but didn't get any relief until I took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, the second dose relieved me and 2 bottles cured me. S. W. PECK.

Spent a Small Fortune.

134 Mahony City, Schuylkill Co., Pa., May, '90.

My son, who is now sixteen years old, had epileptic fits for about four years. I spent a small fortune for doctors and medicine to get him cured, but to no avail until he took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic. It is a year now, since he is perfectly cured, has not had the symptoms of a spell since. I am therefore very thankful for this medicine, and recommend it to all sufferers. PAT. CAMPBELL.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

ICE GORGES BREAK

Railroad Tracks Under Water in New York State.

DANGEROUS FLOOD IN ALBANY.

Rowboats Used in the Streets and the Freshet the Highest in Years.

The Lower Part of Schenectady Under Water—Families Near the River Leaving Their Homes—Mills and Houses in St. Lawrence County Carried Away—The Susquehanna Rising.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 27.—The freshet in the Hudson river in the vicinity of this city has continued to grow for the past two days, the water invading the streets of the city on the east side and causing a suspension of traffic except by rowboats in these streets.

At 3 a. m. the water was 15 feet above mean low tide, being the highest of any freshet in five years. At noon the water crossed Broadway at the steamboat square and the Broadway electric cars were compelled to stop their trips at that point.

The pressure against the Columbia street bridge caused by the ice jamming up against it threatens to carry it away. Should the bridge go the damage that would result to many boats—steam, sail and canal—would be very great.

Superintendent Bissell said that the New York Central-Hudson Railroad tracks were under water, both south and west of here and that the water was rapidly creeping upon the West Shore tracks. If the flood continued much longer rising trains could not be run over the West shore very long.

GOING ABOUT IN BOATS.

The Mohawk Steadily Rising and Much Damage Feared.

CANAJOHARIE, N. Y., Feb. 27.—The water in the Mohawk River is very high. The New York Central Railroad tracks are completely blocked with water and ice between Fort Plain and Johnsville.

There is an ice gorge at Fort Plain, and the water is running through the streets to the depth of two or three feet. People are going about in boats. The water is steadily rising and much damage is feared. The telegraph wires are down all through the valley. The New York Central trains running on the West Shore tracks are two hours late. A bridge near Ames over the Canajoharie Creek was swept away last night.

The two ice gorges in the Mohawk River above Schenectady broke early, but reformed a mile below the city, flooding the lower portion of the town. A number of horses and other animals perished in the flood. Nearly all manufacturing concerns have had to close down.

The water is rising very rapidly again and many families at Spraker's, who live near the river, are moving out.

The Susquehanna Rising.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 27.—The Susquehanna River is seven feet above the low water mark, and the highway is inundated about three feet. This is the fifth flood of the season. It came very suddenly and is still rising. The lumbermen have calculated that there would be no more floods this season, and have been preparing their product for market. Great damage will be done to their stock by the flood.

Mills and Houses Carried Away.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Feb. 27.—The towns of Canton, Raymondsville and Norfolk in St. Lawrence County, and Copenhagen in Lewis County, are suffering from floods caused by the rising rivers. Several mills and houses have been carried away and considerable damage done to bridges and railroad tracks.

The Flood in Arizona.

YUMA, Ariz., Feb. 27.—The water at Adonde, 30 miles east of Yuma, is rising one foot an hour, and is higher than ever, running into the telegraph office. The water is expected to reach Yuma today. The relief committee is kept busy assisting the sufferers.

May Settle the Big Coke Strike.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., Feb. 27.—Secretary McBride of the United Mine Workers had a conference with Superintendents Lynch and Brennan and it was decided to have a conference of the scale committee and coke operators on Monday next, at which an attempt will be made to effect a settlement of the great strike in the coke regions. The situation is growing more alarming hourly.

The National Pool Tournament.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Feb. 27.—The fourth day of the National Pool Tournament witnessed some close and exciting play. Interest in the event is increasing. The results were: First series—Kuntzsch, 150; Saborido, 117. Second series—Ward, 150; Buddington, 124. Third series—De Oro, 150; Sherman, 112. Fourth series—Clearwater, 150; Struwe, 88.

The Ill-Fated Mine and Miners.

JEANESVILLE, Pa., Feb. 27.—Coroner Buck, of Carbon County, and his jury, accompanied by guides, entered the ill-fated mine during the morning on a tour of inspection. The coroner has begun taking evidence. All the survivors are doing as well as can be expected. The men will probably be removed to St. Luke's Hospital Sunday.

More Will Appoint Them.

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 27.—Governor Bulkeley's executive secretary has been informed that Judge Morris will soon send in nominations for the four commissioners—insurance, banks, labor and railroad—whose nominations must be forwarded to the General Assembly within 60 days after the meeting of the Legislature.

WHITE CAPS AFTER HIM.

The Chief of Police Struck and Warned to Mend His Ways.

CHATHAM, Mass., Feb. 27.—The bitter rivalry that has been going on in East Harwich between Deacon Smally and Deacon Buck for the affections of Deacon Smally's pretty wife shows no signs of abatement. Since publicity was given to the scandal the popular sympathy is all with Deacon Smally.

A night or two ago a band of White Caps armed with stout switches and carrying a pail of tar and a bag of feathers, visited Deacon Buck, but he was not at home. The unwelcome visitors left word that they would call again unless the deacon mended his ways.

The scene in Deacon Smally's house hold assumed a new phase yesterday, when Mrs. Smally ordered her sister out of the house. This sister is as fair a maiden as her married sister, and Deacon Smally is authority for the statement that Deacon Buck was smitten by the sister's charms. This made Mrs. Smally very jealous, and after Buck had taken her sister to ride a few times Mrs. Smally sent her home, thus having Deacon Buck all to herself.

Deacon Smally says he has frequently caught Deacon Buck kissing his wife, and she told him that she cared more for Buck than for him. There will probably be a church investigation.

THE BISHOP KEPT OUT.

Trouble Feared Between the Church Factions at Allentown.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Feb. 27.—The Eastern Pennsylvania Evangelical Conference convened in the Ebenezer Church at 9 a. m. with presiding Elder Heil in the chair. During the night the church was guarded by officers, who were employed by the trustees, and authorized to keep Bishop Bowman from the building. It was feared that the Bishop would attempt to enter during the night.

At the hour for calling the meeting Bishop Bowman attempted to enter the church but was refused admission. Shortly afterwards the Bishop offered prayer from the steps leading to the church and a hymn was sung by those assembled, who numbered at least a thousand.

The meeting outside was then adjourned and the Bishop requested those who desired to attend the session to proceed to the Emanuel Church, where an organization would be effected.

The feeling existing between the two factions is great and the fight is not yet ended.

AGAINST THE ELLIOTTS.

The Coroner Finds Them Responsible for the Columbus Murders.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 27.—Coroner Egan returned his verdict in the inquest on the two men shot by the Elliotts on Monday.

He finds that W. L. Hughes, the innocent bystander, was killed by a ball fired from Editor W. J. Elliott's revolver, while the latter was with premeditation engaged in shooting at Osborne. He also finds that Osborne was killed by P. J. Elliott, aided and abetted by W. J. Elliott.

The feeling is still strong against the prisoners, and if justice is delayed by legal quibbles a lynching is not at all improbable.

Verdict in the Shay Case.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Feb. 27.—An inquest was held at Red Bank in the case of Mrs. Norah Shay who was beaten to death by her husband, John Shay. Witnesses testified to seeing Shay jump upon his wife and other times beat and maltreat her. Dr. A. A. Armstrong testified that he had performed the autopsy and found the right breast crushed in upon the lungs and six ribs broken. The jury rendered a verdict that the woman's death was caused by her husband's violence.

Death of Colonel McKibbin.

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., Feb. 27.—Col. Chambers McKibbin is dead at his home here, aged 92. Colonel McKibbin was postmaster of Pittsburg from 1845 to 1850, and owned the Exchange Hotel of that city in 1848. Subsequently he became proprietor of the Merchants' Hotel and the Girard House at Philadelphia, and Assistant Treasurer of the United States at the same place. In politics Mr. McKibbin was a Democrat.

Mr. Huston's Resignation.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Neither the President nor United States Treasurer Huston will deny or affirm the report that the Treasurer has tendered his resignation. The impression prevails, however, that he has tendered his resignation.

Senator Voorhees in Poor Health.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Senator Voorhees has left Washington for Hot Springs, Ark., where he will spend some time for the benefit of his health. From Hot Springs he will go to Indiana and will probably remain there until Congress convenes in December.

$2,000,000 for a Mint Building.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—On motion of Mr. Cameron, the Senate bill appropriating $2,000,000 for a new mint building at Philadelphia was passed.

TO-DAY IN CONGRESS

A Vote to be Taken on the Shipping Bill To-Night.

BRISK DEBATE IN THE HOUSE

The Senate is Considering the Three Big Appropriation Bills.

The President Appoints a Number of Consuls and Postmasters—Philadelphia Gets $2,000,000 for a New Mint Building—Senator Quay is Very Ill—Mr. Huston's Resignation.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—The day of the battle in which the fate of the American merchant marine is to be determined finds the Capitol and hotel corridors thronged with champions and enemies of the Farquhar Shipping bill. The former, though exceedingly sanguine that victory is assured, are losing no possible chance to strengthen their lines, while the latter are fighting desperately to defeat the bill.

The debate to-day was exceedingly brisk, and at times very bitter language was exchanged between the champions and the opponents of the bill. The bill is being discussed by paragraphs, and the previous question will be ordered at 5 p. m.

THE APPROPRIATION BILLS.

The Three Big Measures Now Before the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Senator Allison from the Committee on Appropriations reported to the Senate the Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation bills.

The principal changes made in the bills as passed by the House relate mainly to the amounts appropriated for clerical hire in the different departments, and do not materially affect the total appropriation in the bills.

The committee provides for 25 clerks for the Civil Service Commission in place of those now detailed to that bureau from other departments of the government. The committee also provides for an increase from 30 to 39 of the number of clerks to Senators, and places them on the annual roll.

The requirement that the carriage of mails for the two Houses shall be by contract made to the lowest bidder, an outcome of the recent investigation in the House, was stricken out.

FOR WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Opening of the Twenty-second Annual Convention at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—The 22d annual Washington convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association began its sessions in Albaugh's Opera House at 10:30 a. m., and is to continue day and evening up to and including Sunday next.

The programme is attractive and includes an address by Jeanne Brooks Greenleaf, president of the New York Association. Among others Mrs. Julia Ward Howe of Massachusetts, Isabella Beecher Hooker of Connecticut, the Rev. Antoinette Brown Blackwell of New Jersey and the Rev. Henry Blanchard of Maine will also deliver addresses.

There will be executive sessions held at the suffrage parlors, No. 1417 G street, and some real work behind closed doors is expected. Mrs. Spofford is to give a reception to the officers of the National Council of Women and visiting delegates to-morrow evening.

Presidential Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—The following nominations were sent to the Senate by the President: Postmasters—Maine, F. E. Durtal, Mechanic Falls. New Hampshire, J. G. Jewett, Laconia. Vermont, G. B. Blake, Swanton. Massachusetts, W. A. Bartlett, Stoneham; Cyrus Knox, Palmer. Rhode Island, S. H. Cross, Westerly. New York, F. N. Mann, Troy; John Harvey, Irvington. Pennsylvania, J. A. Nash, Huntington; B. F. Mann, Bedford; C. G. Smith, Wrightsville.

Senator Quay Far from Well.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Private advices from Florida, whither Senator Quay went in search of health, indicate that his condition has in nowise improved, and that, if anything, he is not so well as when he left Washington. His friends believe he will never be a well man again. It is expected on this account that Senator Quay will at the next meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Republican Committee tender his resignation as chairman.

Cannon and Fithian Exchange Words.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—An altercation took place in the House between Mr. Cannon and Mr. Fithian, in the course of which Mr. Fithian said that he would not have his face published in the papers as the gentleman's had been, to which Mr. Cannon retorted that he had sufficient character to defend him against such assault. There was much confusion dur-

ANNA DICKINSON INSANE.

The Well-Known Lecturer Taken to a Lunatic Asylum.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 27.—Miss Anna Dickinson, lecturer, author and actress, has been taken to an Insane Asylum. Her mind has been unbalanced for some time.

Miss Dickinson is a representative woman. She is a Quakeress, and in her girlhood days preferred scrubbing Philadelphia doorsteps for a small remuneration to being dependent on her mother. Her first prominent appearance was as an anti-slavery speaker.

Until 1861 she taught school for a living. Next she occupied a position in the United States mint, but was discharged for a political declaration.

In 1862 she spoke on the "National Crisis" in Boston, and in that same year, on election night in Hartford, Conn., a reception was given in her honor and a gold watch was presented to her.

In 1863 she canvassed Pennsylvania for Gov. Curtin, and her speech before Congress in '64 won her a national reputation. In 1876 Miss Dickinson left the platform for the stage.

GHASTLY HANGING SCENE.

The Rope Broke and the Victim Had to Be Strung Up Again.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Feb. 27.—William West, colored, was hanged here at 2:30 p. m. West was carried from his cell to the scaffold strapped to a plank.

When the rope was adjusted and the trap sprung West's body fell a distance of four feet. The rope snapped, and the victim fell on the ground.

The spectators rushed forward and assisted in carrying the body of the gasping, struggling criminal to the scaffold.

The rope was again adjusted and three minutes after the first drop West again swung off, dropping a distance of two feet, where he hung until dead.

The body was given to Basil West, a brother of the murderer. It was taken to his home and will be buried at Centerville.

Previous to the execution Basil West was searched and a 44-calibre revolver was taken away from him. He turned to the sheriff and said: "I'm glad you got that gun for you've saved me from committing a crime."

STRIKERS SHOT.

Non-Union Workmen at the Braddock Wire Works Fire Their Revolvers.

BRADDOCK, Pa., Feb. 27.—A serious shooting affray occurred during the morning at the Braddock Wire Works. A body of the strikers sauntered past the works, and, according to the strikers' story, asked the non-union men what kind of a day's work they were turning out. The answer was a volley from the workingmen's revolvers.

John Hobday and John Trainer, two of the strikers, fell, and were carried away by their comrades, who retreated out of range. Hobday was hit on the forehead and is expected to die. Trainer is wounded in the side and his condition is critical.

The wire mill men assert that the strikers were there with mob intentions. The injured men were removed to their homes.

Three non-union men are now in jail for the shooting. The excitement among the strikers is intense.

The Will Contest Goes On.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—In the Fayerweather will contest P. H. Butler, the lawyer who drew up the codicil of Nov. 11, which was destroyed, was the first witness after recess. He declined to state the conversation had with Mr. Fayerweather or the nature of the instrument executed. When the surrogate ordered him to answer he asked for and was granted time to take counsel as to his rights. The case was then adjourned until Monday.

A Deadly Sauerkraut Barrel.

CAMDEN, N. J., Feb. 27.—Mary Hennecker, a 12-year-old girl living near Crawford, a small village in Burlington County, was fatally injured by the bursting of a sauerkraut barrel. Mary was sent to the cellar to get a dish of kraut for dinner. The gases which had accumulated in the barrel caused an explosion when the girl attempted to remove the lid. One of the staves of the barrel struck her in the eye and temple.

Conference of Early German Settlers.

LANCASTER, Pa., Feb. 27.—The descendants of early German settlers of Pennsylvania held a conference here to consider the formation of the Pennsylvania German Historical Society. Nearly all the counties of Pennsylvania were represented, and it was decided to issue a call for a meeting in this city on April 15 next, when a permanent organization will be formed.

Only One Body Missing at Spring Hill.

SPRING HILL, N. S., Feb. 27.—The body of James Nairn has been recovered from the exploded mine. This is the third of the Nairn family taken out dead. This makes 122 victims, including the injured who have since died, and leaves only Manager Swift to be accounted for. A searching party is at work looking for his body. All the dead have been buried and the wounded are doing well.

Indicted for Murdering His Brother.

RONDOUT, N. Y., Feb. 27.—James Morrissey, who caused the death of his brother Joseph last October by setting fire to the bed in which the latter lay sleeping, was indicted for murder. His counsel has entered a plea of insanity. The prisoner is worth several thousand dollars and is strongly addicted to the use of intoxicants.

Death of a Rich Hermit.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 27.—Henry Beck, the Watsessing hermit, who was found dead in bed, owned a great amount of real estate both in Newark and Bloomfield, and was worth fully $800,000. He has no relatives living, and was 70 years old. It is not believed that he left a will, and if not his property reverts to the State.

READY FOR THE FRAY.

Great Excitement in Canada Over the Election.

THE NOMINATIONS ALL MADE.

Liberals Jubilant Over the Unopposed Return of Three of Their Candidates.

Berlin Newspapers Resent France's Treatment of the Empress Frederick. She Leaves Paris To-day for England. Parnell to Make an Appeal to America. A Mysterious Lady Joins Boulanger.

OTTAWA, Feb. 27.—Never in the history of Canadian politics has the battle for accession to power waged so determinedly as in the campaign now going on. One week from to-day the result will be known. Sir John dissolved Parliament with a majority of 49 at his back, which it is now confidently believed will not only be wiped out, but will be transformed into a Liberal majority of 15 in the new Parliament at least.

Yesterday was nomination day, and the latest advices say that of the Liberals and an equal number of Conservatives have been returned by acclamation. This has no significance, as in such case the constituencies were impregnable strongholds beyond the reach of opposing forces. From all quarters the most encouraging reports of general success are being received by the leaders of that party.

The Liberals think their unexpected good luck is an indication that they will carry the country by a small majority. The contests in all the important constituencies and the leaders in all the provinces outside of Quebec have narrowed down to the trade relations with the United States, and the Liberals are more hopeful since Archbishop Fabre said in his letter on loyalty to England that he had been misinterpreted to the injury of the Liberal party.

Mr. Blair's Side of the Case.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—It is very probable that Mr. Blair of the Committee on Foreign Affairs will make things pretty lively for Sir Charles Tupper in connection with the latter's charges that the Illinois statesman is trying to hand Canada over to the United States. He has been advised to rise to a point of personal privilege.

MAY ASK SATISFACTION.

A Growl from Berlin Over France's Discourteous Conduct.

BERLIN, Feb. 27.—The Kolnische newspaper says, that while the French have a right to think of revenge they have no right to injure the feelings of the Kaiser and his mother by perpetrating scoundrels to insult her. Germans feel deeply the outrage to the person of the Emperor, have a right to expect that the French people and government will give ample satisfaction, and wipe out the stain on the honor of France by energetically calling to order the miserable wretches who insulted the ex-Empress.

The Frenchman Are Restless.

PARIS, Feb. 27.—There is unquestionably a feeling of anxiety on the part of the authorities lest some sudden disturbance may occur before the Empress Fredericka's departure. The Figaro publishes an article saying that the presence of the Empress is becoming embarrassing, and hopes she will not stay beyond to-day. The Empress relieved all anxiety by starting for England this afternoon.

Bismarck Gets a Pointer.

BERLIN, Feb. 27.—Emperor William has commanded Prince Bismarck, as a major in the army, to preserve silence on political affairs. He is pointed out in the ex-Chancellor that the order, sanctioned by Bismarck himself, whereby State ministers are prohibited from publishing comments on State affairs without the consent of the sovereign, and he instances from the famous trial of Von Arnim the support of the law. The Kaiser, it is said, also accuses Bismarck of inciting a quarrel with Russia.

A Mysterious Lady with Boulanger.

BRUSSELS, Feb. 27.—The Belgian government will expel Boulanger and his friends from the kingdom, upon any evidence that they are engaged in political intrigues. A mysterious lady has joined Boulanger in this city.

Parnell Men Chase the McCarthyites.

DUBLIN, Feb. 27.—The McCarthy faction of the Irish party were to hold a meeting in the Corn Exchange at Tralee, but the friends of Parnell attacked and dispersed the meeting and then passed a vote of confidence in Mr. Parnell.

Police Fight the Strikers.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—In the strike riots at Aberdeen, Scotland, the police repeatedly charged the dockers and their fellow strikers, and a number of heads were broken. Negotiations are going on with a view to settle the trouble.

Parnell to Appeal to America.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—Mr. Parnell intends to send a message to America, stating his position and appealing for financial assistance.

Y. M. C. A. Convention.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 27.—The 22d annual State convention of the Young Men's Christian Associations of New Jersey is in session in this city. The session will last until to-morrow evening. A great many prominent men are present and will make addresses.

Forger Mills Indicted.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Feb. 27.—George S. Mills, who forged the signature of Hotelkeeper O'Pray to a note for $150, which he discounted, was indicted and held in $1,200 bail for trial. Mills is said to have forged other notes in this vicinity.

GOV. HILL EXPLAINS.

He Will Take No Official Notice of Gov. Bulkeley's Communication.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 27.—A United Press reporter asked Gov. Hill if he intended to make any reply to Gov. Bulkeley's letter in the matter of the extradition of Farden.

"No," he replied, "I shall take no official notice of Mr. Bulkeley's communication. Mr. Bulkeley evidently regards his usurpation of the office of Governor as a joke. So Mr. Thayer, the recent Republican Governor of Nebraska, likewise thought it was a joke to retain possession of the office 10 days after his term had expired, but he had to surrender. There were many Republicans in 1876 who thought it was a joke to count out Samuel J. Tilden in the electoral vote of three States, and there are some who thought until last fall that it was a good joke to increase the Republican majority in the House of Representatives by arbitrarily ejecting eight or nine legally elected Democrats.

"The face of the returns in Connecticut show that Judge Morris has a clear majority over the other candidates and was legally elected. He has taken the oath of office and is not only Governor de jure but de facto. When requisition papers are presented to me I am, under the constitution and the laws, sole judge of their sufficiency. I could not consistently recognize a request for extradition signed by 'John Jones, Governor of Pennsylvania,' and I can no more consistently recognize such a request signed by 'Morgan G. Bulkeley, Governor of Connecticut,' who has no more title to the office of Governor of Connecticut than John Jones has to that of Governor of Pennsylvania. There is no disposition on my part that New York should be made a place of refuge for Connecticut criminals, but even that hardship will not compel me to recognize a usurper. If Mr. Bulkeley is so apprehensive about the criminals leaving his State he can easily prevent it by getting out of the office which he illegally assumes to hold."

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The net surplus to-day in the Treasury at Washington is $18,000,000.

Job Cooper, a wealthy farmer of Pittsfield, Del., was found dead in the swamps near his home.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—Preparatory services to-night at Trinity Reformed church at 8 o'clock.

—It is difficult to tell who are the most delighted with the new store—the ladies or Peck.

—An account of Bill Aten's appearance at the Y. M. C. A. rooms last evening, is crowded out of this issue.

—There will be no young men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. rooms Sunday afternoon, owing to the mass-meeting to be held at Music Hall.

—The latest novelty out to please the small boy, is a muslin kite called the "fin." No tail is used in flying. This, and a large line of other spring goods, may be seen at Harper's, 75 Park avenue.

—Hatfield will not play with the Crescent League ball team, this season, and it is rumored that Martin has not been signed, either. The former will play second base for the West Ends of Somerville.

—United Tea and Coffee Grower's Association are offering more checks with their tea and baking powder than any other tea store in the State; also will redeem checks for cash, groceries, or presents. Read their advertisement today.

—Residents in the vicinity of the Evona station were awakened about two o'clock this morning by the screams of somebody out in the cold world near by. Investigation discovered a well-known citizen of the vicinity vigorously kicking a telegraph pole and shouting, "I'm freezing to death!" As the boys say, he had a skate on.

—Weak or weary women are very prone in these days to turn to all sorts of patent "tonics" and "bitters" for a respite from languor, loss of appetite, etc. These doses may serve the purpose for a time but at the expense of the stomach in the end. One tablespoonful of the A. R. Tudor rye whiskey before each meal permanently tones the system and builds up the strength. The whiskey is warranted ten years old, and almost as mild as milk.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Abram B. Dunlap has gone South for a long trip and has taken his fishing pole with him.

Mrs. Jasper G. Cadmus has returned to this city after a short visit at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Martin Wooden, of Brooklyn.

The Rev. Asa Reed Dilts of this city, was one of the entertaining speakers at the eleventh anniversary of the Y. P. W. A., of the First Baptist church, Somerville, Monday evening.

A large number of schoolmates and friends were present, last evening, and took part in celebrating the fourteenth anniversary of the birth of Master John H. VanWinkle, at his home on Duer street.

The Seventh-Day Baptist church people held a sociable at the home of Dr. T. H. Tomlinson, LaGrande avenue, Wednesday evening. The event was a very enjoyable one, and was attended by a large number of people.

Ernest R. Ackerman proved himself last night the only consistent member of what has been termed the "Little 5," of the Council. On Dec. 1, before election, THE PRESS said of him: "Often and often the third ward has elected a representative to serve the people, who has served only those who sent him and has voted only as they ruled. But Ernest R. Ackerman is a different sort of a man."

Should Gov. Abbett decide to appoint Hon. Fred. C. Marsh Prosecutor of Union county to succeed the present able incumbent, he will do that which will please and gratify a host of the popular Senator's friends in the county. The magnificent majority Mr. Marsh received last Fall for State Senator evidenced his popularity, while his capability for the office is not to be questioned. It is understood that the Governor is a warm friend of the Senator, and if he desires the office of Prosecutor he is not unlikely to receive it.

HYMENEAL.

Morley—Bell.

A quiet home wedding took place, Wednesday, at eight o'clock in the evening, at the home of the bride, 79 West Ninety-first street, New York city. The contracting parties were Albert N. Morley, Jr., of Brooklyn, and Miss Minnie C. Bell, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Bell, and granddaughter of Mrs. Cornelius Bolce of this city.

The bride was becomingly attired in her mother's wedding dress of heavy white silk and duchess lace. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Ketcham. The bride was given away by her uncle, Joseph B. Coward. The best man was J. McEwen, of Brooklyn.

Among those present were Albert N. Morley and family, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Coward and family, Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Cook and family, Mr. and Mrs. George Underhill, the Misses Clark and Miss Bolce, of this city, the Misses Smith, of Newark, and Mr. Wilcox, of Elizabeth, Miss Spencer, Miss Dunham, Miss Bonnell, Mrs. Barnes and others of New York city. The young couple received many handsome presents.

THE TROLLEY'S ALL RIGHT.

Ex-Councilman Serrell, the Most Extensive Solicitor of Patents in the Country, Knows so and Says So.

The following in relation to the trolley system of propelling street cars by electricity, will be of interest to every reader of THE PRESS in view of the possibility that one of the companies applying for a street railway franchise in this city may propose to use such motive power.

The writer of the communication is ex-Councilman L. W. Serrell, the best-known and most experienced of patent-solicitors in this country. He knows all there is to know of the matter he writes of, and coming from him no one will doubt a word he says.

There are today 169 cities throughout the land that have been through the experience Plainfield seems now actively entering upon, and that is the proper consideration of public safety and convenience when the "deadly trolley system" is brought before the public attention as a means of rapid transit, and to the thinking citizen of our beautiful city perhaps a word about some of these experiences would be of benefit in considering the problem from a home standpoint.

In all of the cities referred to, some of the best citizens who have had the interest of the city and citizens at heart, have, after careful consideration and study, come to the belief that the electric railway was what was needed to give life and development to their city; heretofore unknown.

In each and all of these cities the indignant cry of the uninformed citizen about the deadly and powerful electric current used to propel the heavy cars, the unsightliness of the overhead structure, and the danger to human life, have been almost insurmountable obstacles to overcome. These people felt the same as the people in Plainfield feel now, their indignation had been in good faith, and what they did they considered to be for the best good of the city, but the word progress means onward, and amidst much opposition electric railways have been put in, until today there are 267 roads either in operation or under course of construction, operating 2,550 miles of track and over 3,100 motor cars. [Here the writer quotes letters from the Mayors of Nashville, Tenn., Louisville, Ky., Denver, Col., Akron, Ohio, Scranton, Pa., and Dayton, Ohio, approving the system.]

These letters are unanimous in saying that, 1st, Great opposition was experienced on account of the supposed dangers and unsightliness of the trolley line. 2d, That this was overcome and the electric road is giving great satisfaction, and the people would not do without it. 3rd, That no apprehension is felt as to its being dangerous.

As to its being dangerous to life, the electric railway systems of to-day are operated with a standard pressure of 500 volts. I have frequently taken the full amount of current used to operate 15 and 20 car roads without any injurious effects, and I am willing to take the full amount needed to operate a road of 1,000 cars. I would not feel it any more than that needed to operate one car. Every sensible man will admit that if the electric railway could be operated by an underground conductor or storage battery, it would be better than the overhead system, but neither has been accomplished as yet, although hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent in endeavoring to develop these systems so that they will operate successfully. The storage battery is as yet ideal, and has never been anything but an experiment. It is like the maiden of 24 Summers, the years roll on and she still remains 24 Summers. So with the storage battery the years have rolled on and yet it has not advanced perceptibly from its original conception. It has been tried in many places and everywhere found wanting. I have talked with street railway men from Illinois to Maine, who have been through the storage battery experiment, and the only thing I ever heard any of them say in its favor was "that as a gravity road for running down hill it was a great success." For present consideration and for some time to come, it is out of the question to consider either the conduit or story batterd systems. If Plainfield is to have a street railway, it must either use horses or the overhead trolley system, the cable system being more dangerous and costing nearly $200,000 per mile.

A small "guard wire" is placed above the trolley wire, to keep the telephone and electric light wires from coming in contact with the trolley wire, in case they break when heavily loaded with ice or snow. The whole system is protected by the lightning arresters, and an electric car is as safe a place as there is in a thunderstorm. The rails are connected together for the current to return to the power station and it is impossible for a man or a horse to receive shock by stepping on the rails when proper ground connections are made with the earth by means of coke wells or iron bars driven vertically in the ground and connected with the rails. The current comes out over a trolley wire, and enters the motors through the trolley arm on top of the car, causing them to revolve, and enters the rails through the wheels, and thus returns to the power station. The electric cars when running at twenty miles an hour can be stopped in from twenty to thirty feet. The same overhead trolley system is used by the Westinghouse, Thompson-Houston, Sprague, and other systems, the only difference is in the construction of motors. Only the new improved slow speed electric motors should be allowed in Plainfield, as they are "noiseless." The other motors make a great deal of noise, which is very unpleasant.

The overhead system is now built through some of the finest avenues in the world. Euclid avenue, Cleveland, for instance. The United States Senate, after investigating the overhead system, authorized its construction in Washington, D. C., and thus it has been in every city where the citizens gave time to its careful consideration. The tracks laid in the streets, if the right kind of rail be used and properly laid, will be no disfigurement and will be no menace to carriages. Since electric cars have come to be so extensively used, and new tracks were required to carry the increased weight of the cars, the old tram rail is no longer used. The only form of rail that should be permitted in our macadam street is the "T" rail, laid with a single row of paving blocks on each side, paved flush with the top of the rail, the inner edge of the stone being chipped away to allow the passage of the flange of the car wheel; over this road bed carriages can drive without wrenching the wheels.

LEMUEL W. SERRELL.

A Surprise Reception.

Miss Ida B. Manning, who has been spending a few days in this city with her uncle, B. F. Moore, was very much surprised upon returning to her home in Newark, Monday evening, to find it in the possession of her many friends who had assembled to celebrate her birthday. It was a most enjoyable affair. During the evening Miss Manning was presented with a handsome gold ring, the gift of her mother, and also a number of beautiful floral pieces and other presents. Supper was served at midnight after which dancing was resumed until three o'clock in the morning.

AFTER SUPPER.

Among those present were the Misses Kitty and Louisa Mockridge of Montclair, Miss Lizzie Connet of Washington, D. C., Miss Tillie Terry of Plainfield, Miss Annie Bradley, Miss Ella Stager, Miss Agnes Greenfield, Miss Clara Manning, Miss Joe Shepherd, Miss Annie Hulbert, Miss Amy Bendel, Miss Lottie Garretson, Miss Maria Lynch, Mrs. J. Ming, Mrs. Berry of Elizabeth, Mr. and Mrs. J. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Crawley, J. Stradling and J. Bruse of Elizabeth, Joe Stahl, Philip Windesheimer, Wm. Halsey Day of Bloomfield, Herbert Gardiner, Louis Goldberg, J. Ming, Louis Bourgeotte, Carl Gullberg of Jersey City, Fred Griggs, Harry Gardiner, Edward Patterson, C. Lynch, W. Hassinger, Frank Patterson, David Patterson and many others.

Plainfield and Somerville, Tie Again.

(From The Unionist-Gazette.)

A pool tournament between members of the Crescent League of Plainfield and members of the Bachelor Club of this place was played in the latter's rooms last Thursday evening. There were three players to a side, and the game was continuous pool, the side first securing 100 balls to be declared the winner.

In the first game Messrs. Small, Barcalow and C. VanArsdale were pitted against the Crescent team, and were vanquished by a score of 100 to 94. In the second game Messrs. Vredenburgh, Barcalow and Hoffman composed the Bachelors' team, and the game was brought to an end at the score of 83 to 80 in favor of the Bachelors. The visitors were compelled to leave in order to catch their train. The Crescent team were Messrs. Charles A. Reed, Charles Lyman, and another whose name we were unable to learn.

Possibly a Jersey Chapter Too.

Among the ladies who met at Sherry's, New York city, Washington's Birthday, to organize a New York Chapter of The Daughters of the Revolution, appears the name of Mrs. Charlotte Louise Lawrence of Westfield. Mrs. Lawrence is a great-granddaughter of Brigade-Major Abner Morgan, who led a batallion of infantry at the storming of Quebec on the memorable night of December 31, 1775, he having enlisted in the regiment of Massachusetts sworn in "for during the war" at Watertown, Mass., at the "Lexington Alarm" June 19, 1775. Mrs. Lawrence, with such blood in her veins, may be expected to proceed to organize a New Jersey Chapter of this admirable organization.

Hear Dr. Lewis, To-morrow!

Although not fully recovered from a temporary illness, Dr. Lewis expects to preach to-morrow morning upon: "The right of Christians to be heard in the municipal affairs of Plainfield."

Every one who has once used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup invariably resorts to it again for colds, etc.

"When vice prevails and impious men bear sway";
When cuts, sprains, bruises torment all the day;
Then ease from pain—from care and hurt are sent
By great Salvation Oil, the standard liniment.

Ladies, clean your kid gloves with Mather's glove cleaner; for sale only by Mrs. J. C. Dyer, 38 West Front street. All the latest novelties of the season in fine Millinery. Correct styles.

"THE ELKWOOD" LICENSED.

WATSON'S AND CROWLEY'S APPLICATIONS THE ONLY ONES REFUSED.

Councilman Ackerman Steadfastly Against the Entire Liquor Traffic, and Councilmen Moffett, Roberts, Smith and Spangenberg Unitedly for "All or None"—Other Councilmen Varying—Mr. Schenck Makes a Speech, and President Smith Says "Call the Roll"—The Vote 6 to 5—The Water Supply Company Going Ahead with the Work of Construction—The Water-Works to be Ready July 1, Maybe.

Sixteen liquor licenses were granted by the Common Council last night, and among them, as had been expected, despite the public protest, was one to Joseph B. Miller to keep a saloon at "The Elkwood," on West Second street. Two license applications were refused—those of Michael F. Watson and Daniel Crowley.

All of the Councilmen were present at the meeting, and a full vote was polled on each individual case.

Before any action was taken, however, the Council listened to another list of protests, in addition to what had already been presented at the previous session.

PROTESTS AND REMONSTRANCES.

The first communication was from Wm. Boe, John Bodine and Levi C. Kline, a committee representing Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., urging the Council not to grant a license to Joseph B. Miller to keep a saloon at No. 10 West Second street, as such a saloon would be a constant menace to the lodge members congregating in the building, would blight manhood, and would wreck the happiness of families.

David W. Pond and a number of other property-owners of Grant avenue and vicinity protested against granting either a wholesale or a retail license to Michael F. Watson at South Second street and Grant avenue.

From the Consistory and congregation of the Trinity Reformed church was read a protest against licensing "The Elkwood." The reasons given were the same that were indorsed by the Ministers' Association and published in THE PRESS. The signers said that they voiced the sentiments of the entire five hundred people of the church as against the voice of a few.

Another protest against licensing "The Elkwood" was received from the property-owners of the neighborhood, all owning real estate within 500 feet of the building, and holding that the opening of a saloon there would be an injury to the neighborhood.

From L. V. F. Randolph, J. K. Myers, George Lissignolo, Leo Daft, and other citizens of similar prominence, came a remonstrance against granting any license in the Pond Machine Tool Works neighborhood.

Against licensing "The Elkwood" Central Lodge, A. O. U. W., protested, through its Recorder, Lewis R. Blackford. This is another society which meets in the same building.

The Women's Temperance Aid Society entered a protest against any continuance of licensing the liquor traffic whatever, and urged that no consistent church member could honestly vote for the saloon.

Isaac L. Miller spoke against two applications from a legal point of view. He remonstrated against licensing John E. Beerbower's City Hotel because the name of Patrick Sheridan appeared among the signatures of the applicants, and he as executor of the estate had no right to sign the application. Against Fred Caspar's petition he protested because the Plainfield Building and Loan Association, one of the signers, was not in the eye of the law a citizen and was not incorporated for the purpose of signing license applications.

From the two church mass-meetings a protest twenty-seven feet long and containing six hundred signatures was received. It spoke against all license in general but against granting license to "The Elkwood" and against granting license to saloons in the Pond Machine Tool Works neighborhood in particular.

Mr. Moffett sarcastically inquired, with a touch of a sneer in his tone, if the petitioners said anything against "The Albion." Clerk Coward said no.

All of the protests were filed.

THE LICENSE COMMITTEE REPORT.

For the License Committee, Councilman Ginna reported that all the license applications had been examined, and while the right of some signers seemed to rest on pretty flimsy grounds the Committee would report all applications as conforming to the ordinances. With Isaac L. Miller the Committee had had doubts about Messrs. Beerbower's and Caspar's signers, but as the Building Loan Association had signed applications previously, and as executor Sheridan on examination seemed to have a right to sign, the Committee let both pass.

Then the vote on each license was taken, as follows:

THE VOTE.

WALLACE V. MILLER, hotel, 48-54 West Front street.

Ayes—Councilmen Gallup, Hetfield, Moffett, Roberts, Smith, Spangenberg, —6.

Noes—Councilmen Ackerman, Ginna, Johnston, Rushmore, See—5.

Granted.

And the crowd in the lobby laughed.

CHARLES BOCK, saloon, 15-17 East Second street.

Ayes—Councilmen Gallup, Hetfield, Johnston, Moffett, Roberts, Smith, Spangenberg—7.

Noes—Councilman Ackerman, Ginna, Rushmore, See—4.

Granted.

DANIEL CROWLEY, saloon, 173 South Second street.

Ayes—Councilmen Hetfield, Moffett, Roberts, Smith, Spangenberg—5.

Noes—Councilmen Ackerman, Gallup, Ginna, Johnston, Rushmore, See—6.

Not granted.

And Councilman Hetfield changed his vote to no.

THE J. B. MILLER CASE.

JOSEPH B. MILLER, saloon, "The Elkwood," 10 West Second street.

Before a vote was ordered, Councilman Ginna spoke as follows:

"In view of the very strong opposition of the entire city against this application, and in view of the strong opposition of the Trinity Reformed church in particular, I move that we extend to the pastor, the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, who is present, the privilege of the floor, to express his objections against the application."

The motion was unanimously carried.

MR. SCHENCK'S SPEECH.

Mr. Schenck thanked the Council for its courtesy, and made a brief and earnest appeal. He said:

"Representing the Trinity Reformed church, with its membership of five hundred people, I protest against licensing this place because it will be hurtful to us the Christian church. It is only seventy-five feet away from our house of worship, and the larger part of our congregation pass it whenever they go to the house of God. It will injure our property, which to-day is worth $30,000. It will injure our work. We have a large number of young men interested in our church, and we entreat you not to throw a stone of stumbling in their way. In this building are nearly or more than 1,000 men who climb the stairs to their lodges, and you surely cannot afford to place so near to them that which will surely attract and entice them and possibly lead to their ruin. Our protest is re-enforced by these same societies, but our appeal is especially for the Christian church in the name of God, of Jesus Christ, of the Holy Ghost. We entreat you to take the side of righteousness, of sobriety, of the Christian church. There is also the additional protest of the immediate property-owners, all living within 500 feet, who say that their property will be injured by the proposed saloon. Hear also their cry, and heed our prayer: we entreat you not to grant this license."

"The Clerk will call the roll"—said President Smith.—And this was the vote:

Ayes—Councilmen Gallup, Hetfield, Moffett, Roberts, Smith and Spangenberg—6.

Noes—Councilmen Ackerman, Ginna, Johnston, Rushmore, See—5.

Granted.

MICHAEL F. WATSON, wholesale saloon South Second street and Grant avenue.

Ayes—Councilmen Hetfield, Moffett, Roberts, Smith, Spangenberg—5.

Noes—Councilmen Ackerman, Gallup, Ginna, Johnston, Rushmore, See—6.

Not Granted.

And Councilman Hetfield changed his vote to no.

FRANK LINKE, wholesale saloon, 39 West Front street.

Councilman Ginna said:

"I am opposed to all these wholesale licenses"—he said.—"They seem to me to be mere subterfuges. They are an injustice to those taking out regular retail licenses. I think all here will agree with me in the belief that the wholesale dealers will retail if they get a chance. To license wholesale dealers is to cheat the city out of $450 in each case. Let them apply in the regular way, for a retail license, and pay the maximum fee."

Councilman Moffett inquired if Mr. Ginna had heard of Linke's violating the law.

Councilman Ginna replied that he knew of no especial violation, but that there was no call for wholesale dealing in a little town like this. It was only a method of avoiding payment of the proper fee.

Councilman Hetfield interposed the information that a wholesale saloon was as much a necessity as a retail one. Retailers can't sell at wholesale;—he said—and wholesalers can't sell at retail. Regarding Linke's place, individually, the police reported that it was kept respectably, and that everyone could see in from the street at all times.

Ayes—Councilmen Gallup, Hetfield, Johnston, Moffett, Roberts, Smith and Spangenberg—7.

Noes—Councilmen Ackerman, Ginna, Rushmore, See—4.

Granted.

This disposed of all the license applications, and a noticeable exodus of the crowd in the lobby promptly followed. The license question was all that especially interested them.

WATER-WORKS BOB UP AGAIN.

But one other interesting and important matter was given attention. The Water Committee reported that three communications had been received in response to their advertisement for bids to construct and operate water-works and sewerage. One of these was from J. M. Lowe, another from G. M. Dorrance. Both stated that they were ready to begin the work of construction whenever the Council should say the word. Mr. Lowe's bid was not read in detail. Mr. Dorrance announced a renewal of the offer of some time ago, agreeing to furnish water for fire protection free, and water to domestic consumers as in the old contract with the Plainfield Water-Works Company.

THE WATER SUPPLY COMPANY GOING AHEAD.

The third communication was as follows:

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—In response to the resolution passed by your Honorable body on the second instant, calling for proposals to supply the City of Plainfield with water, and a sewer system, The Plainfield Water Supply Company begs leave to submit the following statement, and proposition.

Our Company was created by an act of the Legislature approved on the second of April 1869, granting the right to construct and operate water works in and for Plainfield and vicinity, with the usual powers and franchises required by water companies. A few months ago our Company acquired the property at Netherwood upon which twenty driven wells had been sunk, and the erection of a pumping station commenced. We have recently purchased adjoining land, and now own a tract 1,000 feet long and 200 feet wide, lying between the railroad and North avenue. Contracts for completing the pumping station; for the erection of a stand pipe; and for all the machinery required have been awarded, and that part of the work will be completed by the first of April next.

The stand pipe and boilers are being furnished by Tippett & Wood, the pumping machinery by Worthington, and the mains and pipes by the Warren Foundry and Machine Company. The work is being done under the supervision of Charles B. Brush, Civil Engineer. The object of the Company is to secure nothing but first-class material and workmanship.

The pipe lines throughout the City, as projected by the Company are shown on a small map herewith submitted, and will be extended at any time if desired, through any other streets in the City where the annual income, along such extensions, will amount to ten cents a foot. The sizes and location of the mains and pipes are of course subject to such changes as further consideration may suggest. By the first of April our Company will be prepared to begin laying mains and pipes, and will be ready to furnish water to consumers by the first day of July next. The quality of water is excellent, and the supply abundant.

Heretofore the construction of the works has proceeded on the property of the Company; but during the progress of the work in the public streets our Company will be pleased to confer with your Honorable body, through committee or otherwise, and comply with such reasonable regulations as may be adopted to protect the public interests. It is to the interest of the Company, and it is the wish of its directors, to establish and maintain just and friendly relations with the city.

The Company is willing to furnish to the city two hundred and fifty hydrants, to be located at such points along its pipe lines or extensions as your Honorable body may indicate, for fifteen dollars a year each; and will supply private consumers with water on the terms set out in a schedule approved by the Common Council of your city, in December, 1889, with two or three unimportant changes to make the rates more uniform, and will enter into a contract on these terms, or as they may be modified by conference and agreement, for a period of ten years.

As to the question of sewerage, we can only say that the gentlemen connected with our Company are unfamiliar with the subject; but fully recognizing its importance to the city, and its advantages to the Company, would be glad to promote the project in any practicable way.

Respectfully submitted,

THE PLAINFIELD WATER SUPPLY CO.,
By Frank Bergen, President.

All of these were referred back to the Water Committee, to be reported on at the next meeting.

Two Children Terribly Scalded.

Sadie, age 9, and Ferdie, age 7, daughter and son of George R. Rockafellow of 103 West Front street, were terribly scalded at eleven o'clock this morning.

They were standing beside a kitchen stove when one of the legs gave way, the stove tipped to one side, and a boiler full of hot water was emptied over on them. The scalding deluge raised great blisters on the legs and bodies of the two children, and though Dr. Probasco was summoned and did all in his power to relieve their pain they suffer greatly.

Rhode Island's Bribery Bill.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 27.—The Bribery bill that was passed by the House a year ago and defeated in the Senate has been enacted again. A lively debate occurred over an amendment striking out the provision permitting a bribe taker to escape prosecution by turning State's evidence. It was struck out.

Miss Florence Birch Acquitted.

The objections that were made to its erection in the National Cemetery by many army people were withdrawn, and it will stand on the plot just south of the Reynolds statue, and be tween it and the National Cemetery monument.

Buffalo Bill's Mission.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Buffalo Bill is here trying to induce Congress to pay the friendly Indians who obeyed the military order to come into Pine Ridge during the recent Indian war, and who sustained losses of property by doing so. He says this must be done or we will have another war in the spring.

Electrocution in Connecticut.

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 27.—In the House Mr. Tuttle of East Haven introduced a bill providing that criminals, convicted of capital crimes, shall be electrocuted. The bill will probably be passed as soon as the Legislature begins to do business.

AFTER DUE CONSIDERATION.

The Modern Way of Advertising for a Servant-Girl.

"Well," said Mr. Marter, "I suppose we might as well write out that advertisement for to-morrow's paper. You say you want a German girl?"

"Yes," said Mrs Marter; "I've tried nearly every other kind, and I'm sick and tired of them."

"All right; German girl. Experienced?"

"Yes; say 'experienced,' for goodness' sake!"

"Must be a good cook, eh?"

"Yes; we mustn't have a poor cook again. What messes Cora has been giving us lately!"

"Good laundress?"

"Yes."

"Fond of children?"

"Oh, yes; don't leave that out."

"I've got it down. Want to say any thing about size of family?"

"You might as well say 'in a family of six.'"

"Family of six. All right. References, of course?"

"Yes, indeed!"

"Would you say any thing about wages?"

"We ought to get a good girl for fifteen dollars. Yes; I'd say fifteen dollars."

"'Wanted—In a family of six persons, an experienced German girl for general housework. Must be good cook and laundress, fond of children, and have unexceptionable references. Wages, $15.' How's that?"

COMPOSING THE "AD."

"That's good; only—"

"Yes?"

"It's just the time girls are in demand now, and perhaps—perhaps we'd better leave it a little more open, don't you know? Suppose we make it 'German preferred'"

"All right, I'll change it. Any thing else?"

"I was thinking."

"Well?"

"I wonder if we'd better say any thing about the number in the family?"

"I'll leave that out. Think of any thing else?"

"It's so hard to get good girls—and, really, I think some of the newly arrived ones are better—"

"I'll cross off 'experienced.' Will it do now?"

"Mrs. Hunter says it's just impossible to get a real good girl now; they've been picked up so fast. She says they ask sixteen, eighteen, some of them twenty dollars, and—"

"Suppose we leave the wages till they call?"

"I think we'd better; and Mrs. Hunter says that even then they can't do every thing nicely. You could have your shirts and collars done up at the laundry, I suppose?"

"Of course, I could."

"And so far as cooking is concerned, I'll have to do a little more in the kitchen, myself, I think, when there's any thing I'm particular about. Of course, the girl must be a plain cook, at least; but—"

"All right. Shall we let that stand about the children?"

"I don't know but we'd better leave that till they come. How does it read now?"

"'Wanted—A girl for general housework.'"

"That—that isn't very—er—attractive, is it?"

"It's bald."

This is what they finally fixed up for the paper:

"Wanted—To assist in the housework of a small, private family, a neat girl. Any nationality. Liberal wages will be paid. Please call, or give address on postal card stating hour when can be seen."—Puck.

TOLD IN RHYME.

A sleigh-bell jingle,
I thought "my queen" I'd call her, but
I had not a word discover
That I would give the world to be
The fair Diantha's lover.
Until, at last, I vowed no more
Sir Faintheart I'd be playing,
And so I asked the maid if she
Would go with me a-sleighing.
To my great joy she answered: "Yes,"
And straightway did we mingle
With a fast-speeding throng whose mirth
Chimed with the sleigh bell's jingle.
Jingle, jingle, jingle, jingle,
Tingle, tingle, tingle, tingle,
Jingle, jingle, jingle, jingle,
Ting! tang! tang!

Her eyes shone bright, around her brow
Some tiny ringlets clustered,
And, as we left the city, I
Enough of courage mustered
To say, with wildly-throbbing heart:
To-day Love I'm obeying;
He sent me to your door to ask
You, dear, to go a-sleighing.
And how he bids me tell you that
I'm tired of being single—"
And so am I," she archly said,
And how the bells did jingle,
Jingle, jingle, jingle, jingle,
Tingle, tingle, tingle, tingle,
Jingle, jingle, jingle, jingle,
Ting! tang! tang! tang!
—Margaret Eytinge, in Detroit Free Press.

The Brook's Song.

Through all the drifted snows
That fill the woodland nook,
In lisping music flows
The dark, unlilied brook.

While winding swift along
Upon its icy way,
Its song is but the song
It sang in rosy May.

Ah! happy brook, to sing,
While winter days depart,
The melody of spring
That rippled in its heart!
—R. K. Munkittrick, in Harper's Weekly.

Her Perfect Lover.

"I had a lover once," she sighed;
"Yes, just before I married you,
Who listened when I spoke and tried
To answer all my questions, too.

"So courteous and so kind—so good,
He'd never think a man could be
An thoughtless and, indeed, as rude
As you too often are to me.

"The jewel of my love once won,
He used to swear, could ne'er grow dim;
He would not dream that any one
Could whistle when I spoke to him!

"If he had faults he kept them hid.
I should have married him? Yes; true.
And that's exactly what I did.
My perfect lover, sir, was—you!"
—Madeline S. Bridges, in Judge

The Very Latest.

To rightly mold a pleasing lay,

Window-Pane Pictures.

From eve till dawn, the long night through Cold winter's elfin band
Such pictures drew
As never grew
Beneath the touch of human hand.
In dawn's dim light they faintly gleamed
On frozen panes, and glimpses seemed
To give of fairy land.

The boughs of great old trees were bent
With silver shoes, and forth was sent
A frosty light from distant height,
Where glist'ring spires appeared to sight
And far-off castle-wall.

Now here at hand, like a silver strand,
Hanging in mid-air fairily,
A drawbridge spanned the chasm grand,
Gleaming before us stirily.

A stream flowed down the mountain's side,
And cast a silvery spray,
Then dashing on with leap and slide,
With graceful bound and easy glide
It reached the bowlders gray,
And in deep gorges swept away.

Now o'er the cold, gray landscape came
A wavering light, a pale rose tinge
That touched the leaves and mosses' fringe,
Then slowly grew to ruby flame
Setting the distant peaks aglow,
Melting from frozen heights their snow.

So fairy-land now fades away,
And we may watch in vain,
Our frostiwade pictures melt from sight—
The drops roll down the pane.

In Token of the Love You Gave.

In token of the love you gave,
The faith, the trust, reposed in me,
When our young hearts were glad and free,
I plant these flowers upon your grave!

The world is far too poor to give
A value like it look away;
I nevermore a joyous day,
Since you are gone, shall know or live.
—T. Tibs, Fortune, in Springfield Republican

A Modest Meditation.

I wonder sometimes what I'd do
If all the world were mine;
If I should be beneficent,
And bounteous and benign.
Of course it seems now that I should Completely fill the bill,
But when "I can't" becomes "I could,"
"Would" isn't always "will."

Of course to rule the world would be
The dizziest kind of fun;
The simple sense of boundless power
Would please most anyone;
But I am not so sure that I
Should do it well at all;
The world, you see, is rather big
And man is rather small.

I'd make mistakes, I'm very sure,
And stir up lots of fuss,
And pretty soon the world would get
Into an awful muss.
So, while I'd like to have the power
To make things hum and sizz,
I rather think the universe
Is better as it is.
—Somerville Journal.

Our Baby.

A king in a kingdom
That's truly his own,
Our baby holds absolute sway;
And if he's not served
When his wants are made known
A rumpus is raised right away.

Then every one runs,
From grandma to nurse,
The kingdom is thrown in a whirl;
He has swallowed a button,
Or perhaps something worse;
The jewel of his mamma's sweet pearl!

We bow to his reign
In meekness and love,
As subjects both loyal and true,
He's little, but my,
How he makes us all move
When he raises a hullabaloo.
—Texas Siftings.

JACK'S FAIR SWINDLER.

How Beauty Robbed an Innocent of a Neat Sum.

IT WAS commencement day at Union College, and the little town of Schenectady had for the time thrown off its accustomed lethargy. Jack Hammond, a graduate, was sauntering along toward his hotel when he saw the figure of a man ahead stealing along in the dark corners. The figure was slight and graceful, the hair short and prettily curled, the hands and feet small and dainty.

"That's no man," said Jack to himself. "Here's a chance for a lark. I'll speak to her."

A few rapid steps brought him beside the figure, where the falsity of the dainty mustache was plainly detectable.

"Good-evening," said Jack, boldly.

The figure shrank away.

"Don't run," he continued, "because that wouldn't be manly, and when a girl attempts to masquerade she should perfect herself in her part."

"You have penetrated my disguise," said the girl, "and now that you know I am a woman you will, I am sure, treat me courteously."

"But you will allow me to escort you home?" pleaded Jack.

"Please, sir, let me pass."

"It is for your own good I make the request," argued Jack. "Your disguise is so thin that anybody can see through it. You will certainly be followed and insulted without an escort."

"I had supposed that my disguise was perfect," said the girl, "but since you prove that I am mistaken, I will accept your kind offer of protection. I am stopping at the Star Hotel."

The hotel mentioned by the fair masquerader was a respectable, quiet establishment. On the way to it neither spoke a word; and upon entering, the girl led the way into a small reception room opening from the ladies' hall. She dropped gracefully into a chair, and Jack also seated himself in another.

"You doubtless wonder why I am dressed in this disguise?" said the musical voice.

"I do, certainly," asserted Jack.

"You have, possibly, prevented me from getting into serious difficulty, for I foolishly thought my disguise impenetrable. I am very grateful for your kindness and will, under pledge of secrecy, explain my motives."

"I promise," said Jack, unhesitatingly.

"I fear I shall bore you; but you will, I am sure, excuse it. Do you know Harry Greenhall, of the freshman class?"

"By sight, not personally."

"That is my brother, and the only son of my widowed mother. To say that Harry is the dearest object on earth to me is using mild words to express my love for him. Imagine my grief, then, to hear that he is getting wild and dissipated. I refused to believe it, but could not rest until I knew the truth. I resolved to come here myself—we live in Chicago—and see for myself. Fearing, however, that Harry would see me, I disguised myself as you see me now, never dreaming but my sex was completely hidden. You have proved that I am mistaken, and have saved me from shame and exposure, for which I can not sufficiently thank you."

Here the beautiful girl gave her hand, in token of thankfulness, and Jack's pulses bounded at the gentle pressure.

"The gratitude is mine," he exclaimed; "for it has given me the pleasure of your—or, at least—"

"And I hope," said she, kindly com-

"DON'T RUN — THAT WOULDN'T BE MANLY."

ing to rescue him from his jumble, "that my unlady-like costume has not lowered me in your estimation."

Jack assured her very warmly to the contrary; and then the conversation turned upon the brother, about whom the girl seemed so solicitous.

"What am I to do?" she said. "My first plan has sadly failed."

"I will do any thing to aid you," said Jack, gallantly. "I will myself ascertain the facts regarding your brother, and report to you here to-morrow night. In the meantime, you can seclude yourself. In what character are you known in the hotel?"

"As Julia Greenhall, simply. I only donned my male attire to-night, intending to watch for Harry in some of the haunts which he is said to frequent."

"Very well. Expect me to-morrow evening. Good-night."

"Good-night, sir; and many, many thanks for your kindness."

Again her soft hand pressed his, and her smile made his heart flutter.

Jack went away convinced that he had just parted with the most beautiful creature in the whole world.

"So intelligent and winning," he mused; "and so devoted to her escapade of a brother. What a love that would be to win! I never thought much of woman's constancy or depth of affection, but here is certainly a convincing case to the contrary."

Jack devoted the whole of the next day to prying into the affairs of Harry Greenhall. He made inquiries of those who knew him, and by night had acquired all possible details regarding that young gentleman's "daily walk and conversation."

At an early hour he repaired to the hotel and sent up his card to Miss Greenhall. She was in, of course, and he shortly stood before her. If she had captivated him before she enthralled him now. A becoming toilet enhanced her remarkable beauty a hundredfold, and as she rose to meet her visitor and clasped his hand so warmly, and looked into his face so trustfully, his heart was entirely at her mercy.

"I am so glad to see you," she said, sweetly, as they sat down near each other; "I am so anxious to hear about Harry, and it has been so lonesome here all alone by myself. Have you learned any thing?"

"Yes," replied Jack; "but not any thing that need alarm you. Your brother's vices are not of an alarming kind, being confined to billiards and occasional mild sprees. I was introduced to him yesterday, and was pleased with his frank and winning manner."

"Thank you for saying so," exclaimed Julia. "I am so fond and proud of him, that it is music to me to hear you praise him. But it grieves me to hear that he is a bit dissipated."

"Never fear for him," was Jack's assurance; "he has too good sense to let drink get the better of him."

The evening passed rapidly, to Jack at least, and the clock struck eleven before he was aware of the lateness of the hour.

"I fear I have bored you," he said, as he rose hastily to go. "The time has passed so pleasantly that I had no idea it was so late."

HE PLACED THE NOTES IN HIS POCKET-BOOK.

"Nor I," said Julia.

"When do you return?"

"Immediately, for I do not wish Harry to know that I have played the spy upon him, even for his own good."

"Is there nothing more I can do for you?"

"No; at least—well, yes," hesitated Julia. "You see, I expected to stay here several weeks, and so provided myself with money enough for any contingency. I shall not need it now that my stay is so short, and I dislike to carry it with me unless obliged to do so. Won't you please take it and send it to me at home in a draft, or something of that kind?"

Taking from her pocket a roll of bank notes, she handed them to Jack.

"What is the amount?" he asked.

"Seven hundred and eighty dollars," she replied, writing her address upon a card.

He placed the notes in his already well-filled pocket-book.

"My roll looks insignificant beside yours," she said, laughingly.

"That's because yours is in higher notes," explained Jack. "My roll really contains nearly one hundred dollars less than yours. When do you go home?"

"By the ten o'clock train to-morrow. I should die of ennui if cooped up longer in this room. I do so long for a breath of fresh air."

"You shall have it if you will. We shall have ample time for an early drive in the morning, and you need not fear that your brother will see you, for the hour and the direction we may take will both preclude it."

The fair one consented, and Jack bade her good-night. Going home, he placed her money carefully in a drawer and went to bed to dream about her.

At the appointed hour next morning he drove up to the hotel. Julia was all ready and looking as charming as ever. She greeted him with the sweetest of smiles and the coyest of hand-pressures and they drove away out of the city in high spirits.

Jack was deeper than ever in the meshes of sudden love. His arm crept around the waist of his lovely companion and he drew her to his breast. She demurred with a pretty pout, and when he begged for a kiss made him promise to be content with one. He took a dozen, and talked more nonsense in an hour than he had ever supposed himself capable of doing in a week.

Julia's trunks had already been sent to the station, which they reached just in time for the train. Good-byes were said, promises of correspondence made, and Julia was whirled away.

Jack went to his room, feeling quite lonely. As he removed his coat, he felt for his pocket-book.

It was gone.

In its place he found a delicately-scented note.

"Beauty has again won," it said, "and innocence has lost. Harry Greenhall may have a sister for aught I know, but I am not she. Console yourself with the idea that I have swindled shrewder men than you."

"Why, she must be a fool!" exclaimed the thunderstruck dude. "Haven't I got her seven hundred dollars?"

He nervously took the roll from the drawer and examined the notes.

They were all counterfeits.—N. Y. Evening World.

NEAT LITTLE SANCTUARY.

A Country Church That Can Be Built for About Three Thousand Dollars.

This pretty church can be built of frame on a rubble stone foundation at an expense of about three thousand dollars. It is in good proportion and has a tower 65 feet high that is arranged for a bell or an observatory, which is reached by stairs from the hall.

The chancel is built in a heptagon shape, making a very pretty effect and a good finish for the exterior. The auditorium is 30x45 feet with a chancel 15x30 feet.

To one side directly across from the hall there is a vestry 12x12 feet and a library 12x12 feet. The fire-place in auditorium will be of stone and brick with a breast 8 feet.

—Floor Plan.—

The hall is 12x12 feet and the vestibule 6x12 feet. This church is arranged for a furnace.

KILLS AT FIVE MILES.

Tremendous Efficiency of the New Driggs-Schroeder Gun.

Inside the walls of the Colt factory at Hartford, Conn., has recently been completed and tested the first of the Driggs-Schroeder rapid-fire guns which the Government has purchased for use in the army. By "rapid fire" it is not meant that the new gun will send bullets with the rapidity of the famous Gatling gun, but it will send them of much larger size and with a rapidity heretofore unequaled in such projectiles. The Driggs-Schroeder gun fires projectiles weighing from one to eight pounds.

The first gun of this type to be completed and to enjoy protection and ownership by the United States Government is a six-pounder, that is, it sends a six-pound projectile a distance of at least five miles. The projectile is cone-shaped and is made of hardened steel, and so great is its velocity when fired from the gun that it will perforate a six-inch steel plate at one mile without flattening or otherwise damaging itself. Although the new gun weighs 848 pounds, so skillfully is it mounted and balanced that the merest touch of a finger sets it revolving about its axis. In this way the horizontal aim is secured. High or low range is only a matter of the gentlest touch on the breech in a vertical plane. All this is so simple that a gunner can fire the piece in all four points of the compass just as quickly—and perhaps more accurately—than he could fire a self-cocking revolver in the same direction. A six-pound projectile can be sent whirring toward the north, and immediately another can be sent toward the south, long before the first has reached its destination.

The mechanism of the gun proper is as simple as that of the mounting apparatus. The firing is effected by means of a trigger no larger than that of an ordinary revolver. There are two extractors, each working independently of the other, so that if one becomes disabled the empty case will be safely and surely ejected by the other. The mechanical parts of the gun are completely covered by a steel hand, so that it is impossible for dirt to get into the breech opening. The gun was invented by Lieutenant W. H. Driggs, of the United States navy, who, with Lieutenant Seaton Schroeder, patented his invention and resigned from the service in order to devote himself to its manufacture.—N. Y. Times.

A PECULIAR CLAIM.

One of the Dangers of Advertising Houses to Let.

The case of Noble vs. Yates, tried by Mr. Justice Charles and a jury recently, should be noticed by house owners and intending tenants. It was an action against a house owner by a would-be tenant for damages sustained through being injured when looking over a house which it was proposed to take. The jury found a verdict for the defendant. There seems, however, to be no doubt that if a person goes into a house which is to be let, and falls, as the phrase is, into "a trap," that the owner of the house would be liable for damages, as, for instance, if a piece of an apparently sound flooring were to give way. On the other hand, people who go over houses must be careful. If they have been guilty of contributory negligence, they can not, of course, recover damages. The moral seems to be that each party must be careful, but in some respects the chief care should be that of the landlord, who must have no missing steps and similar "traps," which are so conducive to accidents.—Builder

A POSTAL SUBSIDY

Hot Contest in the House Over the Shipping Bill.

SCENES OF GREAT EXCITEMENT.

The Substitute for the Senate Bill Passed After Twelve Hours' Debate.

The Postmaster-General to Make Contracts With American Shippers—The Senate Takes Up the Pure Food Bill. Correspondence With Brazil Sent to the Senate—Immigration Bill Passed.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The Steamship Subsidy bill had an experience without precedent in the House. It was defeated, reconsidered, passed, and recommitted all in one session, amid scenes of continuous excitement. On the preliminary test vote the the advocates of the House substitute for the Senate Subsidy bill had it all their own way.

They voted down Fithian's Free Ship amendment by 173 to 117. When the question came up on the third reading and engrossment of the House bill 15 Republicans voted with the Democrats against the bill and three Democrats voted in its favor.

Mr. Cannon of Illinois moved that the bill be recommitted to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, with instructions so that committee to report back forthwith a bill—similar to the Senate bill on the same subject—to provide for ocean mail service between the United States and foreign ports. This bill is identical with the substitute which Mr. Candler of Massachusetts desired to offer, except that it eliminates the free ship clause of the latter measure.

After much discussion the Senate bill, as amended, was passed—yeas 140, nays 120. Mr. Farquhar moved that a conference be ordered.

The Postal Subsidy Bill.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The substitute for the Senate Postal Subsidy bill passed by the House last night, merely authorizes the Postmaster-General to contract for not less than five nor more than ten years with American citizens for carrying mails on American steamships between the United States and foreign ports (the Dominion of Canada excepted) to subserve and promote the postal and commercial interests of the United States, the mail service to be distributed equally among the ports of the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf of Mexico, and the vessels contracted with to be of American construction and officered by American citizens.

WORK IN THE SENATE.

The Pure Food Bill Made the Unfinished Business.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The Senate by a vote of 40 to 14 agreed to take up the Pure Food bill. This makes it the unfinished business.

The President's message vetoing the bill to establish the record and pension office of the War Department was submitted and referred.

Senator Plumb reported the Postoffice Appropriation bill from the Committee on Appropriations. The aggregate of the bill is increased $25,000.

Mr. Sherman stated that he was authorized by the Committee on Foreign Relations to say that in view of the state of public business, the Nicaragua Canal bill would not be pressed any further at this time.

The President sent to the Senate copies of the Brazilian reciprocity treaty and all correspondence relating thereto.

THE IMMIGRATION BILL.

Provisions of the Measure that Has Just Passed the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The Immigration bill passed by the Senate provides for the exclusion from admission into the United States of all insane persons, paupers, or persons likely to become paupers, persons suffering from loathsome or contagious disease, persons convicted of crimes involving immoral turpitude, polygamists and contract laborers.

It is provided that persons convicted of political offenses shall not be excluded notwithstanding the offense may be designated as a felony, etc., involving moral turpitude, by the laws of the country from which the offenders come.

The present contract labor law is amended with a view to making it more binding, but ministers, professional men, professors in colleges, etc., are excluded from the provisions of the contract labor act.

MR. HUSTON'S RESIGNATION.

It is Believed that His Successor Will Be Appointed This Afternoon.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—It is generally accepted here, as a fact, that United States Treasurer Huston has resigned and that J. A. Lemcke, will be appointed as his successor. None of the parties interested will authorize any statement on the subject and the truth of the rumors cannot be either officially denied or affirmed. It is thought, however, that Mr. Lemcke's name for United States Treasurer will be sent to the Senate today. He is in the city.

The reasons assigned for Mr. Huston's resignation are both political and social dissatisfaction with the administration in that he and his family were not properly recognized in either respect.

Tariff Questions Answered.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Assistant Secretary Spaulding has informed Representative Burton that all foreign material imported for use in the construction of international bridges not actually used on the shore of the United States is exempt from duty, but the entry and payment of duty are required on all articles actually imported and used on United States territory.

MOLLY MAGUIRE SCARE.

Mr. [illegible] Superintendent of Mines of Workmen.

SCRANTON, Pa., Feb. 28.—Priceburg, three miles from this city, is excited over a report that two well-known mine foremen have received visits and ominous letters from Molly Maguires or White Caps. William Leitenhan, a docking boss was called upon about 3 o'clock in the afternoon by either a stranger or a man very cleverly disguised.

He was asked if he was a docking boss for John Jermyn. He answered that he was. The stranger then informed him that he (the stranger) was a member of a White Cap band, and they insisted that Mr. Leitenhan surrender his position at once. Should he fail to do so a dire penalty would be inflicted.

Mr. Leitenhan refuses to continue in the position of docking boss. The authorities have made a thorough search for the stranger, but have been unable to find him.

Walter Jermyn, superintendent of the mine, who is a son of John Jermyn, the millionaire, and Mr. Gillgallon, the outside foreman, are in receipt of letters warning them to give up their positions.

These letters bear the well-known seal of the Molly Maguires, whose reign of terror in this region is still well remembered. The notes of warning contain crudely drawn coffins and skulls and cross bones.

WILL GOV. ABBETT REFUSE?

A Colored Preacher in New Jersey Wanted by Connecticut Police.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Feb. 28.—A negro, who says he is the Rev. James M. Bohrer, has been arrested here on the belief that he is a swindler, known as Dr. Charles Lewis, who is wanted by the New Haven, Conn., authorities for fleecing a family out of $193 in that city.

When arrested he showed a Baptist minister's certificate of ordination. Afterward he tore up the certificate, and also four bogus checks for $1,000 each, payable on the Boston National Bank. The checks were dated Kingston, Jamaica.

He had a book entitled "The Art of Writing Love Letters."

This dispatch has been received from Chief Bolnan of the New Haven police: "Cannot get requisition. The victims will reach Elizabeth to-night. Hold him. If possible, until their arrival. Prisoner is an old offender and has done time in State prison."

The question arises whether the Connecticut authorities can obtain the extradition of Bohrer. It is the general belief that Governor Abbett will do as Governor Hill did and refuse to recognize any requisition that may be issued by Governor Bulkeley.

Sullivan Nearly Causes a Riot.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 28.—The Harrison-Sullivan Company reached here yesterday, and last night the Opera House was packed from the pit to the gallery and at 9 o'clock Duncan B. Harrison appeared on the stage and announced that Mr. Sullivan was unable to appear and that there would be no performance, Sullivan had been drunk all day, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he could be kept in his room at the hotel. A riot was almost precipitated at the box office when angry patrons demanded their money.

Cannot Secure Orators.

CHICAGO, Feb. 28.—Elaborate preparations have been made for the Sherman and Porter memorial services at the Auditorium to-morrow, but the local committee is finding great difficulty in securing speakers. General Alger R. F. Butler, ex-Secretary Fairchild, ex-Gov. Foraker and Gov. Fifer have all declined, and so have all the speakers of local reputation save the Rev. Dr. Bolton. The services are under the auspices of the Grand Army and Sons of Veterans.

Death of Edward R. Hanckel.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 28.—The death Thursday at Tarpon Springs, Fla., of Edward R. Hanckel, manager of the advertising department of the Pennsylvania railroad, was not a surprise. Mr. Hanckel had been in ill-health for some time, and in December last visited Florida in the hope of gaining new strength. He was 30 years of age, and leaves a widow and three children. His remains will be interred at Charlottesville, Va.

Banker Sistare Held for Trial.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Banker William H. M. Sistare, who is charged by Richard Hecksher of Philadelphia with the embezzlement of $33,000 worth of the second mortgage bonds of the Wabash railroad was held for trial by Justice Hogan in the Tombs Police Court. Bail was fixed at $2,500, which was furnished. In the civil action now pending, from which this case arose, the prisoner is held in $3,000 bail.

Yuma Almost Wiped Out.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 28.—The railroad officials have received dispatches from Yuma stating that every building in town except the Southern Pacific Hotel and the penitentiary were destroyed by the flood. The rivers there rose 33 feet above low water mark. The water dropped 17 inches in an hour this morning, and the Yuma people are feeling less [illegible]

AFRAID OF POISON

Anna Dickinson Drank of the Dregs of Poverty.

SHE DREADED THE POORHOUSE.

It Was This Fear That Dethroned the Reason of the Once Gifted Woman.

Her Expenses to the Asylum Paid by the Poor Board—The Superintendent Says Her Physical Condition is Very Bad—She Was Too Proud to Make Known Her Impoverished Condition.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 28.—"Poor Anna Dickinson!" are the words on everybody's lips to-day. Her condition is a most pitiable one. It has been ascertained that she drank of the dregs of poverty. For a year past she has been destitute. She dreaded the poorhouse, and it was this fear that dethroned her reason. When it came to removing her to the Danville Asylum the Poor Board of West Pittston had to defray her expenses.

She was waited upon by a reporter, accompanied by Superintendent Shultz, during the morning. Dr. Shultz asked her how she rested last night.

"How did you rest?" was the sarcastic reply. "Take me out of here," she continued. "This is a conspiracy gotten up by enemies; I know what their object is; they want to poison me."

The doctor would allow no further conversation with the lady. He said:

"The patient needs rest and good food more than anything else. Her physical condition is very bad. In fact, I believe if her body was built up her mental condition would be all right. The superintendent said that when the lady was brought to the institution Thursday she was inclined to be violent, but she ate well. Yesterday morning she was in a laughing mood.

Dr. Schultz further said it will be weeks before he can give an opinion as to the woman's condition. She may be cured in a short time and may never be cured.

Miss Dickinson was so proud that she would not make known her impoverished condition. Had she done so help would have forthcoming from all parts of the Union.

At one time her banker says her credit was good for $100,000. Her theatrical venture almost ruined her.

BLAIR GOES TO CHINA.

The President Nominates the New Hampshire Senator for Minister.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The President sent to the Senate the nomination of Henry W. Blair of New Hampshire to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to China.

As soon as it became known that Mr. Blair had been nominated Senators began to gather around his chair to offer congratulations. For half an hour the hand shaking went on, to the mystification of the interested occupants of the galleries, who did not understand the meaning of the levee.

HENRY W. BLAIR.

The Senate shortly after went into secret session and confirmed the nomination by a unanimous vote.

Henry W. Blair was born at Campton, a small village in Belknap County, N. H., Dec. 6, 1834. He received only a common school education, and after reading law with William Leverett, a distinguished local practitioner, was admitted to the bar in May, 1859, and began practice at Plymouth.

His first official position was that of Prosecuting Attorney of Grafton County, N. H., in 1860. He held that position till after President Lincoln's second call for troops, when he enlisted in the army as lieutenant-colonel of the Fifteenth New Hampshire Volunteers, in which position he served till the end of the war.

Col. Blair returned to the practice of law in Plymouth after peace had been declared and was elected to the New Hampshire House of Representatives and to the State Senate two years later. He was chosen as a Republican to the Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth Congresses, and declined nomination for a third term, being succeeded by Evarts W. Farr, who died during his second term.

Colonel Blair was elected United States Senator to succeed Charles H. Bell, and took his seat June 20, 1879. He was re-elected in 1885, and was defeated for renomination last month by Dr. J. H. Gallinger.

Senator Blair will be chiefly remembered by his urgent advocacy of the bill for Federal aid to education in the Southern States, which has been twice passed by the Senate, but defeated in the House, once by vote and once by nonaction.

He has been chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor of the Senate. He is a fine orator, has a very genial manner and is a poor man in the matter of worldly goods.

Canada's Exports to the United States.

OTTAWA, Feb. 28.—The trade and navigation returns for 1890 have been issued. The exports were $97,749,147 and the imports $128,858,241. The imports increased last year by $7,500,000 and the exports increased about the same. The balance of trade against Canada was $31,109,092. Canada's exports to the United States were $40,000,000 and imports $52,000,000.

Fireman Killed and Train Hands Injured.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 28.—A Lehigh Valley Railroad train ran into a local freight train at Black Rock station last night. The fireman on the Lehigh train was killed and the other train hands badly injured.

Republican League Convention.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—The Executive Committee of the Republican League of the United States to-day issued the official call for the fourth annual convention of the league. The convention is to be held in Cincinnati April 21.

A Jury Secured in the Hennessy Case.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 28.—After many days of labor a jury was secured in the assassination case to-day. The examination will begin immediately.

ALONG THE HUDSON.

The Flood Has Abated a Little, but Traffic is Still Delayed.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 28.—The flood has abated a little, but all railroad traffic is yet delayed. On the Central trains came in from three to six hours late during the morning, and left at convenient rather than on schedule time. The express trains come up the Hudson River road to Hudson, go thence to Chatham and on to this city over the Boston & Albany tracks.

At Ziegler Island, opposite Coeymans, a tenement house owned by the Knickerbocker Ice Company was carried away, and the family were compelled to seek a place of safety during the night on high ground. They were rescued with much difficulty. The boarding house at Schodack belonging to the same company was wrecked. In the stable are 40 head of horses, which are liable to be drowned. The gorge at Stuyvesant is still firm.

The water in the river has fallen several feet between Fonda and Schenectady. The bridge on the Central across the Caroga creek between Fort Plain and St. Johnsville has been carried away.

DESTRUCTIVE LANDSLIDE.

Two Houses Wrecked, But No Loss of Life Occurred.

BARRE, Vt., Feb. 28.—A huge landslide occurred here during the afternoon on the land occupied by the Goddard Seminary. Thousands of tons of stones, trees and earth swept down upon the dwellings clustered about the seminary. Many houses were badly damaged.

William McDonald's residence was moved eleven feet from its foundation, and the cellar was completely filled with debris.

The lower story of Martin Reilly's tenement house was almost entirely wrecked.

People living at a distance of ten miles or more heard the noise of the slide as of distant thunder, and distinctly felt the trembling of the earth.

He Remembered the Poor.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 28.—Dr. Chase Wiggins' will has been probated. It leaves $16,500 to relatives and institutions, while the residue of the estate is to be the nucleus of a fund of $500,000 to be extended in erecting tenements to be rented by laboring people in Providence. He also provides that a portion of the income from these buildings shall be used in paying an additional number of school teachers in the city schools.

The Baccarat Scandal.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The attorneys for Sir William Gordon Cumming in the baccarat scandal matter have refused a proposal that the defence to submit the facts to three gentlemen of well-known standing and honor, who should have full power of settlement by trial before them in order to avoid delay. The reply stated that the trial must be before a jury, and that there shall be no unnecessary delay.

The Very Rev. Dean Kelly Dead.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 28.—The Very Rev. Dean John A. Kelly, second Vicar General of the diocese of Trenton, died during the morning at the Catholic Church in South Amboy. He was born in Brooklyn March 24, 1830, and was ordained to the priesthood in 1854. He was one of the pioneer priests of New Jersey. Bishop O'Farrell was with him when he died.

Dime Museum Enterprise.

HAZLETON, Pa., Feb. 28.—The four recovered miners are getting along fairly well, and if they have no setback will soon recover. An enterprising dime museum manager from New York had been here for the past two days to secure the four men. When he found how weak they were he secured four Hungarians and left with them last night, and will exhibit them as the four fortunate men.

Ten Hours a Day's Work.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Feb. 28.—E. I. Wood, foreman for George M. Hoyt & Son, was fined $50 here for allowing women and children to work more than ten hours a day. This was a test case, and similar action will now be brought against manufacturers throughout the State who have been guilty of the same offense.

Secretary Foster Refused Admittance.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Secretary Foster on his return from the Cabinet meeting was refused admittance to the Treasury Department. A friend with him explained to the watchman that the gentlemen with him was the Secretary of the Treasury and he was admitted.

IT MAY HASTEN WAR

Indignation at Berlin Over the Paris Incident.

CHANCELLOR CAPRIVI'S ACTION.

An Order Sent to the Governor of Alsace Lorraine About Passport Regulations.

The Empress Frederick Received in England With Cheers—Why an Immense Crowd She Dines With the Queen Friday Russian Jews Fleeing to America Slaughtered Like Sheep by Cossacks.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The recent international episode has aroused half the animosity which has been called forth by the visit of the ex-Empress Frederick to Paris, and the refusal of the French artists to take part in the Berlin exhibition.

The treatment of the Empress in Paris has caused a very bitter feeling in Berlin court circles, and the feeling against France is deeper than it has been in many years. This is exactly what was predicted in France as likely to happen when the Kaiser permitted an intimation to go out of his own intention to visit Paris. It was then stated by well-informed French authority that a German Imperial visit would be more likely to hasten than to prevent a European war.

It is said that the Kaiser has resolved to demand satisfaction from the French government for the annoyances and hostility to which his mother has been subjected in Paris. The latest advices from Paris show that feeling runs very high in that city, and it may yet be dangerous for that government to offer even the semblance of an apology.

Chancellor Caprivi is said to have directed the Governor of Alsace-Lorraine not to relax in the slightest passport regulations on the frontier.

The general tone of the French press is mild, but the German papers take a serious view of the situation and declare that the Paris incident will bring the necessity of a struggle nearer. Vienna papers attribute the agitation in Paris to Russian designs. The Russian press generally disapproves of the action of Empress Frederick in prolonging her visit to Paris, and thereby giving an excuse to men like Deroulede to raise the patriotic cry against her. The Queen, however, has been deeply stirred by her daughter's situation.

The French Sentiment Unchanged.

PARIS, Feb. 28.—The Temps, commenting on the visit of the Empress, says that, however the policy of Germany toward France may have varied, the spirit of the French nation has been unchanged. The incidents of the visit do not preclude relations of perfect courtesy between the two governments, nor are those incidents likely to disturb the relaxation of the European situation due to the stimination of Bismarck and Crispi.

The Empress' Reception in England.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The Empress Frederick was met in London by the German Ambassador, Count Hatzfeldt, and the Prince and Princess of Battenburg. The Prince and Princess escorted her to Windsor, where a guard of honor met and escorted her to the castle. The streets were thronged.

To-day the Queen gave a banquet in honor of the Empress. Count Hatzfeldt and Admiral Goltz were present.

SPEARED BY COSSACKS.

Russian Jews Rounded Up and Murdered by the Czar's Soldiers.

BERLIN, Feb. 28.—The scheme to smuggle Russian Jews by the wholesale out of that empire for emigration to the United States has already resulted in bloodshed.

The Russian authorities have been keeping a close watch for some time on the frontier of Prussian Silesia, and the Russian side of the boundary is patrolled by bodies of Cossacks on the lookout for any who may try to leave Russia without permission.

A force of Cossacks on the watch opposite the town of Myslowitz, in Prussian Silesia, discovered 300 emigrants crossing the frontier. Several of them had already got within the Prussian jurisdiction, and were, therefore, safe from the Cossacks; but the large majority were still on the Russian side of the line when the half savage cavalry of the Czar came dashing down upon them.

The emigrants, thus brought to a halt on the threshold of deliverance, refused to obey the order to turn back, and, using any weapon at hand, made a desperate resistance. The Cossacks speared them without mercy and trampled them under their horses, killing quite a number before the remainder yielded and allowed themselves to be driven back into Russia.

The struggle was witnessed by many people on the German side of the line, and they shouted their sympathy for the emigrants and their denunciation of the Cossacks, but did not dare to otherwise interfere. The few who got across to Germany were hospitably entertained at Myslowitz. All the emigrants were bound for America.

Boulanger Closely Watched.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—General Boulanger is being closely watched at Brussels both by the Belgian government and by agents of the French police. It is known that he has been exchanging constant telegrams with friends in Paris. A dispatch from Paris says that the government regards Boulanger merely as a tool of the Count of Paris, and that the general's income is supposed to come from that source. Nothing serious is thought of his visit to Brussels, except that he might cause some mischief or slight attempt at rioting.

Harrington Wins His Suit.

DUBLIN, Feb. 28.—The suit of Timothy Harrington, Member of Parliament, against the Insuppressible charges about the handling of League funds, resulted to-day in a verdict of £5 damages against the defendant.

Miners' Heads Broken.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—There was some rioting in Aberdeen during the day growing out of the strike in the shipping trade. The police charged the mob repeatedly, and a number of heads were broken.

Animal Quarantine Stations.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Secretary Rusk has designated Morristown, N. Y., and Island Pond, Vermont, animal quarantine stations for the inspection of meat, cattle, etc., which may be imported from Canada.

They Accept the Pennsylvania's Offer.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 28.—The limited concessions of the Pensylvania Company to their men have been accepted by the men. A committee of four waited on General Manager Wood of the Pennsylvania Company and informed him verbally of the fact. The men have received concessions in almost everything they wished, except an increase of salary.

The Tramp Actress Ahead of Time.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 28.—Miss Zoe Gaynor, the female pedestrian and actress, who is walking from San Francisco to New York, reached this city this morning and proceeded on her journey via the New York Central tracks. She is now 191 miles ahead of time.

Took an Overdose of Laudanum.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 28.—Chas. Szen, a civil engineer, who was employed on State public works at one time, died last night at his home in this city from an overdose of laudanum, which drug he used to relieve rheumatic pains.

Trouble Between Trade Unions.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—On Monday every bricklayer in this city in connection with the bricklayers' international union will refuse to work with members of local union No. 7. The trouble is caused by the refusal of No. 7 to pay a heavy strike assessment.

The Bench Show a Success.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—The bench show, which has been in progress in this city during the past week, closed last night. It was the most successful exhibition ever given by the Westminster Kennel Club.

An Escaped Criminal Recaptured.

EASTON, Pa., Feb. 28.—Robert Kurtz, who escaped from jail here while serving six years for murder, was re-captured early in the morning at the home of his wife at Johnsville, Northampton county.

Bank Wreckers Found Guilty.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 28.—George F. Work and James S. Dungan, the wreckers of the Bank of America were found guilty of the charge of re-hypothecating the securities of the bank.

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. Force, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. Demarest, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—Admitedly the leading store—Peck's.

—A meeting will be held in the W. C. T. U. rooms this evening at 7:45 o'clock.

—The woman's union prayer meeting will be held at Vincent chapel Monday at 3:30.

—Sherwin's special sale of shoes, etc., at cut prices, will be continued two weeks longer, until Saturday, March 14.

—Call at THE PRESS office and get a blank petition to have the freight house removed, and fill it full of your friends' signatures.

—A fine line of baby carriages of surprisingly high style and low price, is offered at Fairchild's, 21 and 23 East Front street.

—THE PRESS publishes to-day reports of the Y. M. C. A. reception, the old folks' concert, and other interesting matters, which were crowded out of yesterday's issue.

—The people of this city are warned against two disreputable girls of this city who are soliciting help for "the Hines family." The police have the names of the girls and will probably find them in a day or two. In the meantime this warning will protect the people from being imposed on.

—In another column is published the views of a storage-system man. THE PRESS intends to give all sides of every question that interests or affects the people. However, the community may still be assured that the trolley system for Plainfield's coming street-railway, is the only practicable and satisfactory substitute for horses.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Secretary Miner, of the Boys' Club, has taken a party of the best of his boys to New York, to-day, as a reward of merit. They will visit the Eden Musee.

Counselor John H. Jackson, Class of '71, was among the prominent guests at the Rutgers College Alumni banquet at Delmonico's, New York, last night.

John H. Staats, formerly proprietor of the City Hotel of Plainfield, has, with his son, of the Sheridan House, Elizabeth, leased the Merchants' Hotel on Cortlandt street, New York.

Among the most prominent speakers and workers at the State Young Men's Christian Association Convention at Trenton, are W. D. Murray, J. H. Manning, and the Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut, of this city.

"The voice of The Six mightier than the voice of the multitude. Public sentiment disregarded and defied. Its results and retributions." That will be the subject of the Rev. Mr. Schenck's sermon, to-morrow evening.

John F. Wilson, of North Plainfield, was one of the coal barons who dined at Morello's, New York city, Thursday evening, and toasted the cold weather. The occasion was the celebrating of the predicted cold snap by the "Retail Coal Exchange of the City of New York."

The "Elkwood."

On account of the extensive alterations being made in the "Elkwood," formerly known as Amphion Hall, on West Second street, it is impossible to open this coming popular hotel on the 2d of March, as announced. A large force of workmen are engaged in fitting up the premises, which when completed will be of a first-class order. The opening of the "Elkwood" is announced in another column to occur on Monday, March 16, when proprietor J. B. Miller will be pleased to see any of his numerous friends. The "Elkwood" is to be conducted as a first-class hotel on the European plan and not as a saloon as has been reported. Mr. Miller has successfully and satisfactorily conducted the well-known Laing's Hotel in this city for the past eleven years, which is sufficient guarantee that the "Elkwood" will be conducted on first-class principles. J. B. Miller severs all connection with Laing's Hotel after March 1.

The Location of the Washington Park Home Club.

Days after it has appeared in THE PRESS, a Plainfield paper republishes from the Newark News the item from these columns concerning the formation of the Washington Park Home Club. But the Newark paper adds that the location is "near the First Baptist church."

The site of the new club house will be on Washington avenue, just at the left as you step off the bridge into North Plainfield. The porter's lodge of the Roome homestead now stands on the lot secured by the club.

A Wedding.

Mary A. Clark, of Scotch Plains, and Lewis C. Ackerson, of Hazlet, were married at the residence of the bride's parents in Scotch Plains, by the Rev. J. H. Parks, Tuesday, Feb. 17. The bride is a sister of Mrs. Peter M. Smith, who resides between Bound Brook and New Market. The presents were numerous and costly. The couple spent their honeymoon in Washington.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

Ladies, clean your kid gloves with Mather's glove cleaner; for sale only by Mrs. J. C. Dyer, 38 West Front street. All the latest novelties of the season in fine Millinery. Correct styles.

"BILL" ATEN PICKED THE BANJO.

And Other Entertainers Made the Reception a Very Happy Event.

(Contributed.)

The extreme severity of the weather and the attractions presented elsewhere, Thursday night, did not prevent a large and decidedly enthusiastic audience assembling at the too limited rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association to see "Bill" Aten draw a train of melody out of a banjo, entirely without the aid of a locomotive. The entertainment repaid those who braved the storm, and each number was applauded to the echo.

After a number of college songs had been sung, in a most acceptable manner, Henry S. Phillips recited "Ostler Joe" without over-doing it—which is saying a great deal for his taste and judgment. What may be done with the harmonicon was next demonstrated by James L. Dudley, who delighted the boys by a capital rendering of many popular airs, and was many times recalled.

When Mr. Aten marched in at the head of his musical crew, composed of his daughter, Miss Nellie, Miss Louise Leese, Geo. Henry and Bishop Volk, the older portion of the audience joined the boys in a rousing welcome which was fairly earned by the first selection, led by Mr. Aten himself, showing great precision and technical mastery of the instruments; at its conclusion the five performers endeavored to retire, but there was evidently nothing for it but compliance with the recall, and a duet, by Mr. Aten and Bishop Volk, was given in excellent time and tune; indeed, it may fairly be said that the banjo is rarely handled with better taste.

Mr. Aten gave a very interesting account of his twelve years' experience as an engineer on the fastest trains on the road, and Mr. Dudley again gave some of his harmonicon airs with increasing vim, and was followed by the Aten quintette, who outdid their former efforts and would hardly have escaped before midnight had not the younger portion of the audience detected preparations for refreshments, which cooled their musical enthusiasm long enough to enable the performers to retire. After the coffee and other good things had been served and Mr. Aten and his confreres had given a number of duets and solos in the conversation room—all of which were capitally rendered—the audience departed in a very pleasant frame of mind, leaving one or two of the older heads to reflect that this is an excellent way of counteracting the many evil influences to be found elsewhere in happy, moral Plainfield; and as the officers of the Y. M. C. A. evidently know how to make much of the limited facilities at their command, one of the best and most practical way of showing earnestness in the war on the saloons is to increase the facilities of this worthy association and give these men an opportunity to do more of this eminently practical and attractive evening work.

Moral:—make up the sum required to begin the Y. M. C. A. building without delay.

Evangelist Mills at Westfield.

The Rev. B. Fay Mills will arrive at Westfield, Saturday, March 14, to begin evangelistic services. Meetings will be held on that date as follows: 2:45 P. M. women's meeting in the M. E. church. 3:30 P. M., meeting led by Mr. Mills in the M. E. church. 7:45 P. M., meeting led by Mr. Mills in the Presbyterian church.

Woman's prayer meeting 45 minutes before the afternoon meeting while Mr. Mills is at Westfield, to be held in the place where Mr. Mills holds his afternoon meeting.

Men's daily prayer meeting 7:20 to 8:20 A. M., in Temperance Hall, commencing Thursday, March 12.

Services for March 16, 17, 18 and 19 to be arranged by Mr. Mills and pastors.

Wilson Says It Isn't So.

Edward Wilson and Mary Staats, the alleged elopers, have both returned to their homes in this city. Wilson is again living with his wife, and Mrs. Staats with her husband. Wilson says that the story of Mrs. Wilson, Abram Staats, and the neighbors, that he and Mrs. Staats ran away together, is untrue. He admits having seen Mary in Brooklyn during their absence from this city, but denies altogether the charges that Abram and Louise have made against him. He lays especial stress on the denial that he is the father of Mrs. Staats's youngest child.

A Modern Columbus.

Bill Nye says of Columbus: "Living at a time when many things were still in an undiscovered state, the horizon was filled with golden opportunities, and people who wanted anything discovered would bring it to him rather than take it elsewhere." Remember this example, and whenever you wish to discover what is the matter with your watch or clock, take it to Collier's, 3 Park avenue, where the Columbus of that branch of discovery always has his A 1 scrutinizer adjusted for action.

—To-morrow is the third Sunday in Lent.

The proprietors of Hires' Cough Cure certainly do not let their light shine under a bushel. They know they have a good thing, and they know they are bound to let the world know it. They believe in printers' ink, and printers' ink believes in Hires' Cough Cure.

Still Peddling Ancient History.

He testified under oath at Somerville that he was a "journalist", and boasted before the Court that never would he publish ancient history in his paper. Yet up to last Thursday he had only begun to hear of what was old news a dozen years ago, and published a startling tale, made glaringly prominent with big "scare" heads and double leaded type, of a "great fire" at "Primrose's Hotel", "on the mountain top near Bound Brook", where "a man, horses and cattle were burned to death."

Although the fire took place—as near as old inhabitants can remember—from fourteen to eighteen years ago, he had not yet been able to discover the name of the man who was killed, but contented himself with giving him a fictitious name next day.

One man—a stranger in town—drank in the story. His family and friends live in the neighborhood where the fire was reported to have occurred, and, as yet ignorant of the unreliability and irresponsibility of the obscure sheet, he at once worked himself into a great state of mind and rushed in great alarm homeward, fearing that his own family might have suffered. Now he appreciates the lack of confidence felt by others towards the "journalist's" sheet.

If you don't see it in THE PRESS it isn't so, and if you see it in THE PRESS you see it for the first time.

A Schumann Morning.

The pupils of Miss Julia Ketcham, and their friends, enjoyed a thoroughly entertaining affair at her home, today. It was a morning musicale entirely devoted to the works of Robert Schumann.

The programme was preceded by a review of the life and works of the great composer, by Miss Blair. It was highly interesting and instructive, reflecting much credit upon the speaker because of the depths of research and appreciation it displayed. Miss Ketcham's singing was the principal feature of the programme, and the singing of "The Gypsies" by a sextette, also deserves special commendation. The improvement evidenced by every pupil, was a subject of universal remark by all who had ever heard them before. All sang with unusual taste and unexpected intelligence. The complete programme was:

1810—Robert Schumann—1856.

The Life of Schumann	Miss Blair
Piano (a) Frightening (b) Why?	Miss Ketcham
Evening Song	Miss Dewey
The Two Grenadiers	Mr. Edsall
I Murmur Not	Miss Glen

The Boston Association team has been ordered to report for duty on March 10, when the team will start on a Southern tour.

Four deaths have occurred during the week in the town of Johnsonburg, Pa., from smallpox. The inhabitants are reported as fleeing from the town.

Stuart Robinson denied at Memphis, Tennessee, the rumor that he was engaged to Miss Waldron of his company. He said she was young enough to be his grandchild.

The Sheriff of Monroe County, Pa., has received a telegram from the State of Washington to the effect that William Brooks, one of the murderers of Theodore Brookhead at the Delaware Water Gap in 1868, had been captured.

Pretty Miss Ella Tice, a young woman of good family, living in Williamsbridge, N. Y., has become the wife of James Randolph, a negro coachman. The Rev. Mr. Lamb, a Baptist minister in that place, performed the ceremony.

The bill to accept the provisions of the Benjamin Thompson will, leaving $400,000 to the State of New Hampshire for establishing an agricultural college, was passed by the State Senate. The House has already adopted it.

Rev. Jeremiah O'Connor, S. J., pastor of St. Lawrence's Church in New York city, died during the morning at his residence on Park avenue of pneumonia, contracted while aiding the injured in the Harlem tunnel disaster.

During the fetes next week in Rome celebrating the Pope's coronation it is said that he will receive members of the Sacred College, but will not refer to political questions, as he desires to first observe the course of the new Ministry.

James G. Fogarty, the well-known baseball player, is lying at the point of death in Philadelphia. On Sunday he was stricken with hemorrhage of the lungs, and the attacks have followed each other daily. Fogarty is very weak, and may die at any moment.

By the strike of the weavers at Dobson's plush mills at Philadelphia, Pa., because of the refusal of the firm to grant them a 15 per cent. increase in wages, unless a speedy settlement is made, over one thousand hands will be thrown out of employment.

The coroner's verdict in the case of "Carroty Nell," the last victim of "Jack the Ripper" in London, is "murder by some person or persons unknown." This does not affect the case of the prisoner Sadler, who is still in custody pending further investigations by the police.

The Casino Opera House in Middletown, N. Y., was destroyed by fire shortly after midnight. It was occupied in part as an armory by the Twenty-fourth Separate Company, State National Guard, which loses all its uniforms and accoutrements. The loss is $25,000. The Russell House adjoining was badly damaged.

FRENCH OUT OF THE WAY.

He Did Not Meet Miss Smith on Her Arrival at Boston.

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—Miss Helen Smith arrived in Boston last night from New York. J. N. Merrill, her affianced husband, who came all the way from London to thrash Harry French, Helen's former lover and alleged husband, was with her. The latter stepped from the train lightly and glanced nervously around, as if half expecting some one. The some one he expected was Harry French.

Mr. Merrill had been telegraphed by some of his Boston friends to be on the lookout. Moreover the interesting particulars had been furnished him that Harry was somewhere in the vicinity of six feet three inches and an athlete, but Harry was not there, and Mr. Merrill breathed a little easier as he was directed to the Smith carriage, which was in waiting, and rapidly driven off in the direction of West Roxbury.

Miss Smith appeared in no way distressed as she received the embrace of her father, who met her at the depot. She gracefully eluded a couple of newspaper reporters who tried to interview her, leaving her male escorts to pronounce an emphatic denial to all who dared approach.

A friend induced me to try Salvation Oil for my rheumatic foot. I used it and the rheumatism is entirely gone. JOHN H. ANDERSON, Baltimore, Md.

Positive and unsolicited testimony from every section confirms every claim made for the wonderful efficacy of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Price 25c.

A REPLY TO MR. SERRELL.

An Expert on the Storage System Insists it is Practicable, Economical and the Most Serviceable.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Referring to the statement by Mr. Serrell, in your paper of last evening so strongly in favor of the trolley system of electric street cars, and so strongly prejudiced against the storage battery system, I would say:

The storage battery system was in operation in New York city, was carefully recorded, as to cost and service, and proved to be cheap for maintenance beyond what had ever been claimed for it; and capable of a better service than a trolley system can ever be made to reach.

The writer of this was employed to be present at a test on behalf of "the Pullman party" who were investigating the system. The car could be run off the track and run on again by its own motor power; was stopped on the very shortest curve in the city, and started again; was run at 25 miles per hour through the tunnel, and at 2 miles per hour in another locality.

In cases of fire, the cars can be manipulated to go around the obstruction, or to "carry by." There was not any fault with what the cars could be made to do, or the cost of propelling them.

The question naturally arises why then were the cars taken off, and their use abandoned? Because the persons who were operating the same were sued for infringing patent rights by their use.

The chief reason why the 267 roads, which Mr. Serrell says are using, or preparing to use the trolley, do not use the storage system is, that they do not own it.

The quotations from Mayors, who are owners in the trolley system, cuts but a small figure.

The sanction of the United States Senate of the New York avenue electric road in Washington, is offset by their sanction of the storage system. They did not debar either.

When the temporary litigation is over as to certain patent rights, relating to storage matters, there will be a different condition in electric street car matters.

The dangers and defects of the trolley system will sell the storage system when the technical troubles are settled.

The trolley system cost the city of Boston six millions of dollars in one fire.

The trolley system has proved more dangerous to life, during thunder showers, than any talked of system—dangers that the lightning arresters and other make-shifts cannot remove.

Plainfield had better hear the evidence on both sides before it finally acts.

Thirty Colored Baptists to be Immersed.

The Emmanuel Baptist church of this city, of which the Rev. J. W. Mitchell, is pastor, has been favored with a special out-pouring of the Holy Spirit. About the beginning of this month Mr. Mitchell commenced a series of meetings which has continued throughout the month. The outcome of earnest Christian efforts attended by divine blessing is as follows: By conversion, 35 reclaimed, and others who have united with Mr. Mitchell's church make a total of 50 accessions.

The members of the Emmanuel Baptist church are very much elated over the success which has attended their first efforts to win souls to Christ. Mr. Mitchell having obtained the consent of the officials of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, will to-morrow afternoon baptize about 30 hopeful converts in that church at 3:30 o'clock. At 7:45 in the evening at Cutter's Hall, 25 West Front street he will give the hand of fellowship to about fifty, which will be followed by celebration of the Lord's Supper.

Mr. Douglass of Plainfield Took the Cake.

Mrs. Emma Jackson's sociable in Bound Brook Hall Thursday evening proved to be the event of the season among colored population. At 9:30 the grand march was announced, and was led by Wm. H. Douglass and wife, of Plainfield. It was an intricate affair, and was one of the best marches ever witnessed in town. In the march were guests from Plainfield, Somerville, Newark, Elizabeth and Roselle, about 100 in all, which number would have been doubled but for the stormy weather.

Refreshments were served in the hall at midnight. The stage was reserved for white visitors and was crowded. O'Reilly, of Plainfield, who furnished the music, on behalf of Mrs. Jackson, presented Mr. Douglass with a handsomely frosted cake as a token of appreciation for his valuable services rendered. Mr. Douglass responded testifying to the high esteem in which he held Mrs. Jackson and complimenting her on the success of her grand sociable. The costumes worn were very beautiful.

The Good Women Will Wait on the Governor.

Delegations of women from different parts of the State of New Jersey propose waiting on Gov. Abbett, on Tuesday, March 3, to emphasize by their presence, the protests signed by thousands of women, soon to be presented to the Legislature, urging that there be no legislation to change the existing laws in reference to the sale of intoxicating liquors, and to legalize pool selling and gambling. The delegation from Plainfield will leave Plainfield for Trenton on Tuesday, March 3, by the 9:43 A. M. train.

The women of this city who are interested in this movement are earnestly asked to join this delegation.

AULD FOLKES GIVE A CONCERT.

George and Martha Washington Unite With Dunellen Talent in a Charming Social Event.

An old folks' concert was given Thursday evening in the First Presbyterian church of Dunellen. Notwithstanding the severity of the storm over one hundred were in attendance. George and Martha Washington were first to appear before the audience—he in regimental costume, she handsomely attired in lavender silk, with a most becoming cap. The order of seating was after the custom of the "old singin' skewl" in the form of a semicircle, the men on one side, the women on the other. The order of the programme was as follows:

"Auld Lang Syne," which was sung with great enthusiasm by the entire chorus; "Strike the Cymbal," consisting of spirited solos, trios and choruses; "Ye Aulden Time Song," sung by six little old people; solo, "When the dew begins to fall," by Sister Jerusha; song, "Old Folks at Home"; speakin' by Sister Sophia, "Counting Eggs"; "Grandma's Advice", by one of the little old people, accompanied by piano and two banjos; "auld time instruments," played by nine of the "auld folkes"; "Yankee Doodle," sung by Uncle Sam, who entered from the rear of the church, with carpet-bag and umbrella; "Reuben and Rachel," Quaker and Quakeress; solo, by Brother Jacob, "If the waters would speak as they flow"; "Jeddiah is so bashful!" Anne Elizabeth, and her bashful Jeddie; "The Calash," by Old Grandmother, which, including her seeming great age and the assumed squeak in her voice, was very creditably rendered; solo, by Brother Luther, "The Diver," "Cousin Jedediah," solo, by Old Grandmother; quartette by Brothers Luther and Israel and Sisters Rachel and Susan Jane, the whole skewl joining in the chorus; "Blessing," a chorus.

This ended the delightful programme.

At intervals the tin dipper was passed by bashful Jeddie. Susan Jane snuffed the candles, and after putting one of them out was reproved by Grandmother. The stage was decorated in old-time style. The various performers, all of whom acquitted themselves splendidly, were as follows: Miss Blanche Marlow, handsomely dressed in white satin and lace; Miss Maggie Swackhammer, as Martha Washington; Miss Sallie Gray, as Dorthy Ann; Miss May Harold, as Sister Phebe; Miss Fannie Humpston, as Rachel; Miss Mabel Burniston, as Anne Elizabeth; Miss Ella Boice, as An Old Maid; Mrs. Hetfield, as Old Grandmother; Miss Louise Apgar, as Sister Sophia; Miss Maude Benton, as Sister Jerusha; Mr. Titsworth, as Leader; W. J. Hamilton, Jr., as George Washington; Wm. Earle, as Brother Jacob; George Craig, as Grandfather; Robert Craig, as Old-Fashioned Dude; Mr. Teel, as Brother Luther; Benjamin Carpenter, as Yankee Doodle; George Taylor, as Can't tell what; Wm. Terry, as Gentleman of olden time; Robt. Carpenter, as Bashful Jeddie; Mrs. Carpenter, pianist; Wm. Terry, Robt. Carpenter, banjoists; Wm. Carpenter, triangle. Little Old People: Masters Clarence Marlow, Charles Coriell and Wm. Carpenter; Misses Emma Marlow, Bessie Benton, Edith Boice and Janie Churchill.

Owing to the decrease of attendance by the storm, and by request, the concert will be repeated next Tuesday evening, March 3, at 7:45.

Flag Raising by the School.

[From The Bound Brook Chronicle.]

For the past week the children of Dunellen have been very busy collecting money for a flag and pole to be raised at the new school house with appropriate exercises on February 23. The scholars and their many friends assembled at the school about noon, accompanied by the Dunellen Fife and Drum Corps. The exercises were presided over by the Rev. L. E. Livermore, and opened with a prayer, followed by patriotic songs and recitations by the pupils. A reading by Miss Meta Walters and a recitation by Master Tommy Thomas deserve favorable mention.

The flag was presented in behalf of the patrons of the school by Mr. T. L. Thomas, one of the trustees, and was received by Mr. R. J. Swackhammer, President of the Board of Education. Addresses were then made by the Rev. Mr. Cubberly and the Rev. L. E. Livermore, of New Market. The exercises being then concluded, they all marched into the yard, and the flag was raised, to the stirring music of the fife and drum corps, after which they repaired to the school house where a bountiful collation was served.

Billy Rice Will be Here Monday.

At Music Hall, Monday evening, Cleveland's Minstrels will appear again. Mr. Cleveland has gathered together from the minstrel field its most conspicuous products. There was a time when either Willis P. Sweatman or Billy Rice in a minstrel company was enough to ensure success, but Mr. Cleveland this season has made a constellation of all these minstrel stars and has supplemented their brilliancy with many other lights. In addition to the above is Sugimoto's troupe of Japanese performers, whom Cleveland brought to this country from Japan by special permit from the Mikado. They are the acknowledged superiors of all others in feats of daring and skill on the high wire, the balancing ladders, sword walking, fencing, and their repertoire of acrobatic and balancing feats is as varied and wonderful as the imagination can depict.

Grace church, to-morrow, early celebration at 7:30 A. M. Morning prayer, litany, sermon and Holy Communion at 10:30. Children's service at 3:30 P. M. Lenten services to be continued. Sermon on Thursday night by the Rev. M. Pearse of South Amboy.

Services in the Park Avenue Baptist church to-morrow will include preaching by the pastor, the Rev. Asa Reed Dilts, at 10:30 A. M., on the subject, "The Second Coming of Christ." Sunday-school will meet at 2:30 P. M. All are welcome, and seats are free.

At the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Clinton avenue, the Rev. Dr. Taylor rector, the services to-morrow (third Sunday in Lent), will be: morning prayer, sermon and Holy Communion at 11 o'clock. Sunday-school at 3 o'clock. The week-day services will be on Wednesday and Friday at 4 o'clock P. M.

At the Congregational church, West Seventh street, the Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor, there will be morning service to-morrow at 10:30. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered. Sunday-school will meet at 2:45 P. M. The hour of the Christian Endeavor consecration meeting is 4:20 P. M.

At the Warren Union Mission the following services will be held to-morrow: Sunday-school at 2:30, song service at 7:30, devotional exercises at 8 P. M., conducted by H. Raymond Mungér. Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor meeting will be held Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. All are welcome to these services.

At the Methodist Episcopal Church to-morrow the probationers will meet the pastor in Vincent chapel at 9:30 A. M. At 10:30 A. M. the sacraments will be administered, and new members received. Sunday-school will meet at 2:30 P. M., and the Epworth League at 6:45 P. M. Evening sermon by the pastor at 7:30. Subject—"Who is responsible for lost souls?"

To-morrow at the First Baptist church the following services will be held: 9:30 A. M., prayer meeting of special interest; 10:30 A. M., preaching by the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes; 2:30 P. M., Sunday-school service, enjoyable for the young and old; 7:30 P. M., evening service, for one hour only. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend these services. Seats are provided to accommodate strangers.

In the Trinity Reformed church, to-morrow, services will be held as follows: At 10:30 A. M., the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be celebrated. Sabbath-school at 2:30. In the evening at 7:30 the pastor, the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, will preach. Subject: "The voice of the six mightier than the voice of the multitude. Public sentiment disregarded and defied. Its results and retributions!"

At the Church of the Holy Cross, the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, rector, will preach to-morrow. The Sunday-school will meet at 9:45 A. M. There will be morning prayer and sermon at 11 A. M., and even song at 4:30 P. M. There will be services every afternoon during the week at 4 P. M., with the exception of Wednesday. On Wednesday Holy Communion will be celebrated at 10 A. M., and on Friday evening there will be service at 7:30.

WITH Ely's Cream Balm a child can be treated without pain and with perfect safety. It cures catarrh, hay fever and colds in the head. It is easily applied into the nostrils and gives immediate relief. Price 50 cents.

MY CATARRH was very bad. For thirty years I have been troubled with it—have tried a number of remedies without relief. A druggist advised Ely's Cream Balm. I have used only one bottle and I can say I feel like a new man. I make this voluntary statement that others may know of the Balm.—J. W. Mathewson, lawyer, Pawtucket, R. I.

A Truce in the Senatorial Contest.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 28.—A truce has been arranged until Tuesday in the Senatorial contest and many of the members of the Legislature have left for their homes. On the 131st ballot the 80 members present did not answer when their names were called and the Speaker announced that no votes had been cast.

Fifteen Men Burned by Molten Metal.

POTTSTOWN, Pa., Feb. 28.—Fifteen men were painfully burned at the Pottstown Iron Works by an explosion of gas, which threw the molten metal from the converter over the men in a shower. George Townlier and Charles Rutter were the most severely burned, and their condition is considered serious.

Cold Weather Down South.

CLINTON, La., Feb. 28.—The thermometer registered 36 degrees above zero at an early hour this morning. Ice formed and the ground was frozen. Much damage will result to fruit trees. It is clear and cold and another frost is likely to occur in the early hours of to-morrow morning.

Acquitted of Murder.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 28.—Joseph Fisher, who has been on trial here for several days for the killing of Edward Shanley at Sea Breeze, a summer resort near here, last June, has been acquitted.

OF A SCIENTIFIC NATURE.

THERE are more believers in astrology than the world at large has any idea of. Most of those who entertain faith in this occult science are people of intellect, learning and, not infrequently, culture.

GEORGE D. BURTON, the New Hampshire man who devised the "palace animal car," has been made an honorary correspondent of the Parisian Academy of Sciences and given a gold medal of honor.

ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE, the eminent English scientist, has received the first Darwin medal from the Royal Society "for his independent origination of the theory of the origin of species of natural selection."

THE period of "a generation" has been lengthened; it used to be thirty years and was later increased to thirty-four; now, a scientist says, the average term of human life has increased in the last fifty years from thirty-four to forty-two years.

EELS contain as much poison as vipers, according to an Italian scientist; after careful investigation, he finds that an eel weighing four pounds possesses enough venom to kill ten men; when the fish is cooked, however, the poison loses its power.

OXYGEN is the most abundant of all the elements. It composes at least one-third of the earth, one-fifth of the atmosphere and eight-ninths by weight of all the water on the globe. It is also a very important constituent of all minerals, animals and vegetables.

A NEW maregraphical observatory for the study of the tides has been built a short distance east of Marseilles. The instrument traces the curves of rise and fall in the tide by means of a diamond point on a traveling band of paper coated with black varnish. The point is actuated by a float which rides with the sea.

PROF. JOSEPH MOORE reports that an entire skeleton of Casteroides ohioensis, or beaver of the days of the mastodon, has been found in Randolph County, Ind., a few miles east of Winchester. The bones indicated an entire length of the animal of five feet nine inches, and that its gnawing powers were commensurate with its size.

IT was recently maintained before the Paris Academy that shortness of sight was a defect incident to civilization, or to an artificial condition of life. An examination of the eyes of wild animals shows that those captured after the age of six or eight months remain long-sighted, while those captured earlier or born in captivity are near-sighted.

SENATORIAL PARAGRAPHS.

SENATOR JOSEPH M. CAREY, of the new State of Wyoming, is physically the largest man in the United States Senate.

SENATOR DAVIS, of Minnesota, used to be a telegraph operator, and was one of the first four men to read telegraphy by sound.

GEORGE GRAHAM VEST is the first Senator in Missouri, since the days of Thomas Benton, to be honored with a third term.

SENATOR SQUIRE, of Washington, is rich enough to spend $250 a day and sensible enough to be content with a dollar dinner.

SENATOR GORMAN was once a base-ballist and knew how to howl at an umpire in a seven-story-and-French-roofed style of gentle reminder.

IT is said of Senator Teller that he is a man of such careless and indifferent appetite that he doesn't care whether he has a five-course and remove dinner or a free lunch of pickled tripe.

SENATOR PIERCE, of North Dakota, was once a newspaper man, and was connected with the Chicago News. In those days he was accounted a good story teller and a connoisseur in dinners.

SENATOR PLUMB is fond of mince pie, but he doesn't like to eat it with a fork. His way of dispatching it is to take a wedge of it up in one hand while he employs the other toying with his watch-chain.

DR. J. H. GALLINGER, who has been nominated for United States Senator from New Hampshire, was a compositor on the Cincinnati Gazette twenty-five years ago and studied medicine in the intervals of his labors at the case.

SOME one who has studied the gestures of the United States Senators thus describes Mr. Allison: "He uses the uplifted finger, in the Douglas style, spanks one hand with the other by way of emphasis and then picks up a book and punches it significantly while talking at some one on the other side."

VICE-PRESIDENT MORTON has a smooth-shaven face, his eyes are blue and his nose Roman. His mouth is large and firm. When he presides over the deliberations of the Senate he always wears a black frock coat that is buttoned up tightly. His cravat is dark and his collar high. His manners are precise and somewhat formal.

RECENT INVENTIONS.

A MAN living in Quenemo, Kan., has patented a method for "taking care of boots."

A NEW typewriter, under the "point" system, produces writings which the blind can read.

A NATIONAL association of inventors is talked about as one means of celebrating the opening second century of the American patent system.

A MACHINE, said to be a marvel of lightness and ingenuity, has recently been built in Australia, for experiments in flying through the air. It is propelled by an engine fed with compressed air.

A SOUTHERN farmer has produced from cotton stalks a fabric suitable for bagging, which may rival jute. The problem which the inventor successfully solved was how to separate cheaply the material from the woody fiber.

A STEEL clip, to facilitate the pulling on or taking off of rubber overshoes, has been invented. It is inserted in the upper part of the heel, and opens or closes the shoe, as may be required. A ring which is connected with the clip serves to pull the shoe on or off.

Ring the Curfew Bell!

The curfew bell was no myth.

It was a summons to the people to put out the fires, stop all labor and retire to sleep. It was a summons, also, which none dare disobey, for heavy penalties followed disobedience.

O, for a curfew bell at the present day!

A bell whose ringing tones should summon us to rest from work!

To rest from fret, worry, strain, push, bustle and excitement!

To rest from the wear and tear of nerve, the exhaustion of brain and intellect!

To rest from the intense, mad rush which hurries us on in the weakening, wearying, nerve-tearing, brain-destroying struggles of life.

Do you know what this means?

You professional and business men, how severe is the tension of constant and unremitting strain of thought and mind, is plainly evidenced in your weakened nerves, your trembling on excitement, your sleepless, restless nights, and utterly relaxed nervous condition after mental exertion.

You clerks and mechanics, who work all day, and yet to whom the day is not long enough in which to work, how weak you grow, how pale, lifeless, spiritless you become, how dull and tire headed, how disgusted with your work which so tires you in the doing.

You women, sales-girls, and you who are confined in mills and factories, how heavy is your drudgery, how wearing upon your life, how enervating to your feelings, how exhausting to your strength, how blighting to your beauty! You are often nervous, generally weak, and always tired.

Alas no curfew bell can call a halt in the world's work, but a warning voice can direct how best to overcome the nervous and physical weaknesses which such work entails. You who would be strong in nerve and brain, who would gain physical and mental strength to continue your work successfully, use as the vital restorative, the brain and nerve tonic, the giver of renewed life and vigor, that greatest of all medicines, Dr. Greene's Nervura. Nothing on earth will so quickly and surely restore your strength, and it is conceded by all to be the best spring remedy in existence. It is a purely vegetable and perfectly harmless remedy, and will be found at all druggists for $1 per bottle.

A Warning Stroke of the Bell.

From constant worry over business matters, I suffered from the loss of sleep, and become so nervous that I was entirely unfitted for my business, and was compelled to give up. In fact, I feared insanity. Seeing Dr. Greene's Nervura spoken of so highly, I obtained a bottle and began its use. The effect was almost magical. I could again sleep, mental composure, appetite and strength returned. Six bottles of this remedy cured me, and I have remained well to this date. I have recommended Dr. Greene's Nervura to many of my friends and neighbors, and have yet to learn of a failure to obtain good results.

S. W. NOURSE, Hudson, Mass.

Dr. Greene, of 35 West Fourteenth St., New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled.

N. B. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write Dr. Greene about your case, and a carefully considered letter, fully explaining your disease and giving you a perfect understanding of all its symptoms will be returned, free of charge.

RELIGIOUS MATTERS.

HELP ME TO TRUST AND LOVE.

Father, whate'er of earthly bliss Thou givest me,
Broken and mixed with pain though it may be,
Help me to trust and give to Thee
The praise.

If, in the brightness of my future untried years,
Thou hold'st for me bitter, heart-wrung, tears,
Help me to trust to Thee my fears
In love.

Set it aright, my wandering, careless heart;
When into stranger ways it would depart;
Help me to trust Thee as Thou art,
Dear Lord!

Thus in the upward climbing of life's rugged hill,
When Heaven's sweet breath, my soul shall thrill,
Help me to trust and love Thee still In death.

—Louise D. Mitchell, in Christian at Work.

THE FAMILY CROAKER.

Unlike the Hoarse-Voiced Little Creatures, They Succeed in Making People Miserable.

Down in the damp hollows by the water courses in the growing mildness of the early spring evenings, and during the summer months, are the dark-skinned, brown-throated, hoarse-voiced little creatures who croak and croak and only croak continually.

Not that they are unhappy; far from it. There always seems an undercurrent of real content and gratulation in the decided grating of their unmusical utterances. They doubtless have lain dormant for months, and certainly have been silent all through the long, dark evening of fall and winter, and there is something jubilant in the unvarying refrain, when in the lengthening twilight they lift up their voices in steady, persistent, united croaking. Very decorous they are, and considerate as to the time chosen for their harsh concert. The birds have stopped twittering and the more melodious sounds in nature have ceased, when the croakers begin their monotonous night-song. To human ears it is a welcome sound, the precursor of longer, brighter days. And the louder and more voluminous the chorus, the nearer the promise of fair sunshine, blossoms and flowers. So much for the little beings who form the natural, legitimate croakers of the animal kingdom.

Away up amongst the higher order of created beings, is another species of croakers, but there is nothing to offset or counterbalance the depressing influence of their discordant utterances. They are not creatures of the night, lifting up involuntary plaints when more pleasing sounds are hushed, and closed doors and windows might shut out their tiresome moans, but in broad daylight, under nearly all circumstances, they fall into the old, unfortunate, disheartening strain. A croaker in the family is, without being aware of it, generally the member dreaded by all. Children are very quick to understand who it is will throw cold water over every little cherished scheme, seeing harm or danger in the most innocent sport; will predict evil, and throw out a thousand ominous hints concerning the probable outcome of anticipated pleasure. The tendency increases astonishingly, until the croaker is unconscious of the hold the habit has acquired, and how much a fixed trait it has become. This is the almost inevitable result of two mischievous faults; that of habitually looking on the dark side of things, and of regarding the affairs of life with a suspicious instead of a trustful eye. It has an exasperating effect upon others. A dozen times a day a strong inclination arises to exclaim impatiently: "Well, don't croak! Whatever happens, don't croak!"

It is a lame excuse to say the fault is owing to an unhappy disposition or that experiences have tended to make one apprehensive and given to forebodings. What if all the members of the household were similarly affected, and because of physical unsoundness or weak nerves indulged a disposition to see every thing in a blue light, and to croak despondingly—how long could they live together? Echo seems to fling back a prompt "not long!" If any good could come of the gruesome habit, it would be difficult, but unlike the peaceful denizens of the puddle and the stream, who sound out their gratification that spring has come and unloosed the fettered springs of water, the household croaker only utters discordant and suspicious words, revealing a deplorable lack of faith in fellow beings and wise Creator of all. With too many of these unfortunates, there is a mistaken, unwholesome fondness for brooding over whatever there has been of pain and uneasiness in the past. There comes to be a melancholy satisfaction in dwelling on the disappointments and slights and wounds that were far better covered up, and, if possible, forgotten.

The greatest sin of it all is the ingratitude involved. For a constant habit of pondering on the ills of life crowds out thankfulness from the heart, and drives away both recognition and appreciation of the countless blessings on every hand, while the influence on others is only trying and injurious. From the cradle up, the stern, important lesson should be duly impressed, that strength and patience are needful in order to pass comfortably or successfully through life. Bravery is soon conquered by complaint. Courage and weak bodies can not travel long in company. The past should be sacredly but hopefully linked with the present, its mistakes to serve as warnings, but neither its errors or its sorrows to be dwelt upon with morbid regret. It is always on, and on for the wayfarer. No laurels are likely to be flung from the past into the present. The goal, the rewards, the crown, are all ahead, and the watchword is continually press onward!—Christian at Work.

THE CHEERFUL MAN.

How He Gets His Wrongs Redressed, and Makes the Best of Life.

Does any one wrong the cheerful man? He quickly sets about getting his wrong redressed in what has been described as the best way—namely, by forgetting all about it. Also, he very frequently reminds himself that our happiness depends upon the treatment of what we have, and not of what we have not. And of what he has, he takes care, as far as in him lies; instead of neglecting it in foolish and useless longings after what he has not, and so, presently, it may be, like the dog in the fable, losing the substance while following the shadow. Moreover, he apparently never expects things to go altogether smoothly in this up-and-down world; and often as he stumbles or falls, and quickly picks himself up again, he merrily quotes:

A slip—a knock—slow progress here—
And there a cheerful run;
'Tis zig-zag now, and then a jump,
And so the work is done.

"Cheerfulness," says Mr. Smiles in his "Self-Help," "gives elasticity to the spirit. Specters fly before it; difficulties cause no despair, for they are encountered with hope; and the mind acquires that happy disposition to improve opportunities which rarely fails of success." And the cheerful man thinks, with the same author, "that we make the best of life, or we may make the worst of it, and that it depends very much upon ourselves whether we extract joy or misery from it." And then the children. We may not pass over unnoticed the affection which they invariably display for the cheerful man, and the innocence they repose in him. From him they fear no frowns, no harsh rebuke. "Poor little ones," he says, "God knows how soon they will have cares to fret them; he can not wish us to come between them and their little happiness now."—Interior.

OUR PHYSICAL ORGANISM.

Can We Stand the Test of Answering for the Use of Every Talent.

I want to call your attention to a fact which may not have been rightly considered by but few men, and that is the fact that we must be brought into judgment for the employment of our physical organism. Shoulder, brain, hand, foot—we must answer in judgment for the use we have made of them. Have they been used for the elevation of society or for its depression? In proportion as our arm is strong and our step elastic will our account at last be intensified. We must give to God an account for the right use of this physical organism. Invalids have comparatively little to account for, perhaps. They could not lift twenty pounds. They could not walk half a mile without sitting down to rest. I have said to myself, how shall I account to God in judgment for the use of a body which never knew one moment of real sickness? Rising up in judgment, standing beside the men and women who had only little physical energy in a conflagration of religious enthusiasm how we will feel abashed. Oh, men of the strong arm and the stout heart, what use are you making of your physical forces? Will you be able to stand the test of that day when we must answer for the use of every talent, whether it were a physical energy or a mental acumen or a spiritual power?—Talmage, in N. Y. Observer.

WISE SAYINGS.

—Praying without faith is like shooting without a bullet; it makes a noise, but does no execution.—Christian Union.

—It ought to be a comforting thought to the Christian that with every passing day he is nearer to Heaven.—United Presbyterian.

—Cheerful, active labor is a blessing. An old philosopher says: "The firefly only shines when on the wing; so it is with the mind; when once we rest we darken."—Standard.

—Grace does not come to the heart as we set a cask at the corner of the house to catch the rain in the shower. It is a pulley fastened to the throne of God which we pull, bringing down the blessing.—Talmage, in N. Y. Observer.

—The very elixir of life is often distilled from tears. We look up tremulously to thank the Creator, not for this experience or that, but for all experience, the whole sum of suffering and of joy; for not an iota of it is worthless, it leads us closer to Him, and gives us that knowledge of Divine things which is the sum of all wisdom.—Christian Register.

—Unavailing regret, cherished sorrow and remorse are, next to sin, the greatest hindrances to usefulness. Nay, to brood continually over a sin or sorrow until ambition is unwinged and noble purpose shorn of their strength is itself sin. The Divine Father's will concerning His children is manifestly that they shall be useful and happy. Whatever interferes with this purpose is wrong.—Cumberland Presbyterian.

—The self-denial which is commanded in the Scriptures is always our truest self-interest. We are sure in the end to gain more by practicing it than by not doing so. The improper indulgence which one refuses to himself may at the time involve a trial and struggle; but the discipline and command over his lower passions gained thereby will more than pay for the trial, however severe it may be.—N. Y. Independent.

—The great historian, Dean Milman, once said: "I should rather go to the judgment loaded with errors of Nestorius than with the sins of Cyril." Every right-minded Christian will indorse this diction. Heterodox opinions are an evil to be avoided, but they are not even to be mentioned in the same breath with a bad life. No man was ever lost for failing to dot the i's and cross the t's in his creed. It is wrong conduct that brings upon us the Divine condemnation.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

—Humility is, perhaps, developed more generally in the estimate of our influence than in any other thing. We may think of ourselves more highly than we ought to think in many respects; and when we consider our example and words we may be altogether blind as to their effect on others. "No one is so weak or so humble as not to have weight on some mind; to modify opinions or influence conduct." Each day our speech and actions tell on other lives.—Christian Inquirer.

THE WOMAN OF FASHION.

She Must Wear Skirts That Sweep the Muddy Streets.

The Shop Windows Reveal Glimpses of the Early Spring Fashions—Violets and Grays Are to Be the Favorite Colors—Charming Toques.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

The prettiest dress of the season was seen at Daly's on the first night of "School for Scandal." It was of light gray lady's cloth, trimmed with velvet and satin of the same tint. A small satin toque bordered with velvet and adorned with two American Beauty roses was fastened to the hair by means of a cut silver hat pin, giving the appearance of a diamond-headed ornament. A tiny muff of lace and gray satin was suspended around the neck by a silver chain.

It is a signed, sealed and settled fact that the woman of fashion must sweep the streets with her skirts. The Paris modistes have signed their names to paragraphs embodying this fashion. Our own dressmakers have sealed the decree by following it to the letter and the woman of fashion has put on the sweeping skirt and worn it on the public thoroughfares—and that settles it.

Yet one constitutional on any of the much frequented streets dulls the beauty of the lower two inches of the skirt, fags out the skirt braid and causes the facing to hang in rags. A few neat and ingenious women have overcome the difficulty by binding the gown with velvet and facing it with oil cloth, which can be obtained for such purposes. This arrangement greatly lessens the otherwise attendant slovenliness.

Glimpses of early spring goods are already to be seen in the show windows. The spring styles are not fully revealed to the expectant world of women, but mysterious peeps are permitted to the watchers who await them each season as eagerly and impatiently as the small boy watches for the curtain to go up at the show.

The shop windows, as now seen, are but the preludes to what is to come later—the orchestra that announces that it is nearly time for the real display of the season.

If one might note any special characteristic of the materials displayed, it would be the peculiarity of tint. Decided shades are used scarcely at all. In their places are mezzo-tints and hues combining such variety of color as to be scarcely describable.

There are dozens of shades of purple, lavender, violet and heliotrope which vary in many grades so slightly that one is at a loss how to describe them. The element of pink is also combined so as to make it but a step from the lavender and that step such a small one as to be not discernible to any but professional eyes.

All the semi-mourning colors are extremely fashionable, and particularly the violets and light grays. So great is the demand for all articles of dress in these colors that manufacturers have been compelled to supply gloves, hosiery, shoes, silk underwear, corsets and even underskirts in varying tints of violet and gray. Delicate, undecided hues, rather than pronounced colors, are the favorites.

A certain pretty gray cloth dress has oxydized silver trimmings. Another, of silver cloth, is trimmed with silver galon. And a whitish silver is treated with a deep pearl fringe.

It is again coming the fashion to wear bodices of different color and material from the skirt. The black net dresses that have been favorites for the past two seasons are to be worn, but with thick silk or even cloth waists in place of the lace. Pipings or bands of the silk are placed around the skirt in rows. For very young girls, gilt braid is used and is repeated upon the bodice and jacket.

Sleeves are worn almost uncomfortably long. They must extend certainly over the wrist, and, preferably, down to the knuckles. They are full at the shoulder and down to the elbow where they become close fitting for the remainder of the length.

Long sleeves are worn with evening toilets if the bodice is cut square or pointed. But if the shoulders are exposed, then the arms must also be bare. This fashion is a boon to those not richly gifted in figure, as it gives them abundant opportunity to conceal their thinness of build without being conspicuous in dress. Many of these very long-sleeved dresses are seen upon the stage. And, as all modistes know, the stage sets the fashions for the fashionable world.

Trains have become narrower. They consist of little more than a plait at the back of the dress and are cut so as to appear very narrow until rounded at the end, where they have a rather broad sweep. Street dresses have all a slight train, or are, at least, cut to touch the street when walking.

Jewelled trimmings and jewelled fringes are much worn and are suitable upon all gowns, whether for the street or house. This is the direct result of the Egyptian Cleopatra craze that is upon us; and for which Bernhardt openly declares that she has been saving jewels and metals for years. Properly handled, these metals are extremely effective in fringes, passementerie and ornaments, but a real artist must place and select them, or the effect is garish, grotesque and bizarre. Narrow edges of silver or gilt braiding are placed at the top of fur bands that border the dress skirt. A girdle of the same material accompanies this and falls low on the waist. On the jacket are silver or gilt clasps and a narrow braiding of the same metal edges the Medici collar. Galon is made to form ornaments for the toque and delicate metal braiding borders the band of fur that goes around the hat.

These fur and feather hat bands are quite narrow, and are set so low upon the hat that they appear to rest upon the hair. Blondes can produce a pretty effect by bordering the hat with dark fur, which seems to rest like a crown upon the fair locks. With equal effect brunettes take advantage of the present style to edge their hats with white astrakhan, mindful of the beauty of the white fur against their own dark coils.

So accommodating are these toques in shape that they may be adapted to any head and any style of hair dressing. In many cases where individual peculiarities exist, the milliner actually measures the head of her customer and fashions the hat to suit. The fur band with which it is to be trimmed is always placed next the hair and prettily contrasted before being put upon the hat.

NEW STYLES IN HAIRDRESSING.

For a wedding that is to take place very soon, the following are among the gowns ordered:

An evening dress of white crepe de Chine, trimmed with strings of pearls and pearl embroidery. There is a broche train. The sleeves are prettily opened from the shoulders and caught in two places with pearl clasps. A long pearl girdle hangs at the side.

The wedding gown is of ivory Duchess satin, trimmed with chiffon and point lace. Orange blossoms are embroidered from the shoulders down to the front of the pointed bodice. White ostrich feather trimming extends around the front and sides of the foot of the skirt. The court train is entirely unadorned and is nearly four yards in length measuring from the waist.

There is a traveling gown in electric blue cloth, trimmed with gold and blue passementerie. A band of beaver edges the neck and revers of the bodice, and also borders the dress skirt. Velvet forms the material for the bodice, cuffs, collar and band around the skirt above the beaver.

As the bride elect is to marry an amateur sportsman, a dress has been ordered for tramps over fields in muddy and all kinds of weather. It is not a sportswoman's dress precisely, but will do very nicely for honeymoon expeditions. It is of thick, soft, brown tweed. A box-plaited skirt extends nearly to the ankles. Underneath are knickerbockers, and leggings buttoning to the knee to meet the former. A plain, brown cloth waist is worn and, over it, a zouave jacket, double-breasted, with high sleeves. With this goes a little toreador hat, with brown silk pom pons. Musquetaire gloves of tan color, stitched with black, are worn beneath white linen cuffs.

The Proper Thing.

He—Darling, suppose I should be killed in a railroad accident, and that you should be there; suppose my crushed and mangled body should be brought out and placed before you. What would you do?

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

Two Bottles Cured Her. 6

CARROLL, IA., July, 1889.

I was suffering 10 years from shocks in my head, so much so, that at times I didn't expect to recover. I took medicines from many doctors, but didn't get any relief until I took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, the second dose relieved me and 2 bottles cured me. S. W. PECK.

Spent a Small Fortune.

124 Mahony City, Schuylkill Co., Pa., May, '90.

My son, who is now sixteen years old, had epileptic fits for about four years. I spent a small fortune for doctors and medicine to get him cured, but to no avail, until his took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic. It is a year now, since he is perfectly cured, has not had the symptoms of a spell since. I am therefore very thankful for this medicine, and recommend it to all sufferers.
